SINCE it was impossible that the Wisdom of God could die, and that which could not die could not rise from the dead, He took to Himself Flesh Which could die, that That Whose nature it was to die might die, and rise again. Neither was it possible that the resurrection of the dead should come otherwise than by man, "for since by man came death, by Man came also the resurrection of the dead." (1 Cor. xv. 21.) Man He rose since Man He died, the Manhood quickened but the Godhead Quickener. Man then, as touching the Flesh; God now, over all things. For now we know Christ no longer after the Flesh, but we owe it to the Flesh that we know Him as "become the First-fruits of them that slept" (1 Cor. xv. 23) "and the First-begotten of the dead" (Apoc. i. 5.)

Fourth Responsory.

Bless ye God, &c., (p. 379.)

Fifth Lesson.

THE first-fruits are of the same kind and nature as the other fruits, and they are brought as an offering to God[2] to win His blessing on the in-gathering, an holy offering made on behalf of all, and as it were the homage[3] of restored nature. Christ then is the First-fruits of them that sleep. But is He the First-fruits of only His own loved ones that fall asleep in Him, and lie as it were untouched by death, wrapt in a sweet slumber? Or is He the First-fruits of all the dead? But "as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." (1 Cor. xv. 22.) So that, as in Adam were the first-fruits of the death wherein all die, even so in Christ were the first-fruits of the resurrection, wherein all rise again. But let no man be hopeless, neither let it be a grief to the righteous to remember that to rise again will be common to all men, when he looketh for that day wherein the harvest of his life will nobly realise itself. All shall rise again, "but," as saith the Apostle (23,) "every man in his own order." The harvest of God's mercy will be for all, but in reward one man shall differ from another.

Fifth Responsory.

With my whole heart, &c., (p. 379.)

Sixth Lesson.

I TELL you how grievous an outrage against God it is not to believe in the resurrection. If we shall not rise again, then did Christ die in vain, "then is Christ not risen" (13.) For if [if He rose at all], He rose for us, and if He had not us to rise for, then He is plainly not risen. In Him the world, in Him the heavens, in Him the earth rose again. For there shall be "a new heaven, and a new earth" (Apoc. xxi. 1.) For Himself He needed not to rise Whom the bands of death held not. For although He died as Man, yet was He free in the netherworld itself. Wouldest thou hear how free? "I am as a man that hath no strength, free among the dead" (Ps. lxxxvii. 6.) O how free! Who was able to take up his life again at will (John x. 18), even as it is written that He said: "Destroy this Temple, and in three days I will raise it up" (John ii. 19.) O how free! Who descended into hell only to redeem others therefrom.

[1] Lev. xi. 44.

[2] In some places the persons performing the Rogation Procession carry nosegays. Is this the offering alluded to?

[3] Liba, lit., the sacrificial cakes.

Sixth Responsory.

Sing us a song, &c., (p. 379.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xvi. 23.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Amen, Amen, I say unto you: Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in My Name, He will give it you. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (102*nd Tract on John.*)

We have now to consider these words of the Lord: "Amen, Amen, I say unto you: Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in My Name, He will give it you." It hath already been said in the earlier part of this discourse of the Lord, for the sake of some who ask the Father in Christ's Name and receive not, that whatsoever is asked, which tendeth not to salvation, is not asked in the Name of the Saviour. By the words: "In My Name"—we must not understand the vocalization of letters and syllables, but the meaning of what is said, the honest and true meaning.

Seventh Responsory.

I will sing, &c., (p. 379.)

Eighth Lesson.

THEREFORE, whosoever thinketh of Christ as he ought not to think of the Only Son of God, such an one doth not ask anything in Christ's Name, although he do actually utter letters and syllables to that effect, because by these sounds he meaneth not the Real Christ, but a fancied being who hath no existence except in the speaker's imagination. But on the other hand, whosoever thinketh of Christ as he ought to think, the same asketh in Christ's Name, and receiveth, provided only it be nothing against his own everlasting salvation: but if it is good for him to receive, he receiveth. Some things are not given at once, but kept over till a more fitting season. Such is the true interpretation of the words: "He will give it you" — namely, that those things will be given which are good for them to ask. All the Saints also are heard when they ask for themselves, but not necessarily when they ask for their friends, or their enemies, or others, even as it is written, not simply: "He will give it" — but: "He will give it you."

Eighth Responsory.

It is a good thing, &c., (p. 380.)

Ninth Lesson.

"HITHERTO," saith the Lord, "have ye asked nothing in My Name: ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full." This their joy, whereof He saith that it shall be full, is to be understood not of fleshly but of spiritual joy: and when that joy is so great that it can be increased no more, then shall it without doubt be full. Whatsoever therefore we ask for the fulfilling of this joy, (that is, if we thereby mean grace, if we ask for that life which is the really blessed one,) that is a thing which it is meet to ask in Christ's Name. If we ask anything else than this, we ask nothing, although we do actually ask something, because all things are nothing in comparison with this.

LAUDS.

Chapter. (James i. 22.)

MY beloved brethren, be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves: for if any be an hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass; for he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was.

Hymn and Verse and Answer as on Low Sunday, (p. 358.)

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Hitherto have ye asked nothing in My Name: * ask, and ye shall receive. Alleluia.

Prayer.

O GOD, from Whom all good things do come, grant to us Thy humble servants that by Thy holy inspiration we may think those things that be good, and by Thy merciful guiding may perform the same. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

The same Prayer till the Feast of the Ascension, except at Lauds, Terce, Sext, and None on Monday.

Chapter at Terce from Lauds.

Chapter at Sext. (James i. 25.)

BUT whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed.

Chapter at None. (James i. 27.)

PURE religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.

VESPERS.

Chapter from Lauds.
Hymn and Verse and Answer as on Saturday before Low Sunday, (p. 356.)

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Ask, and ye shall receive, * that your joy may be full: for the Father Himself loveth you, because ye have loved Me, and have believed in Me. Alleluia.

Rogation Monday.

Second Day, whereon are made Supplications.

If a Simple Feast fall on this day it is only commemorated: if a Feast of Nine Lessons, the Office is of it, with the Homily for the Week-day as the last Lesson, and a Commemoration of the same at Lauds only.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xi. 5.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Which of you shall have a friend, and shall go unto him at midnight, and say unto him; Friend, lend me three loaves. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. vii on Luke xi.)

We gather from this commandment, among other things, that we ought to pray, not only by day, but also by night. Thou seest how that he which arose at midnight to ask three loaves of his friend, and endured in supplication, was not disappointed of that which he sought. Of what are these three loaves a figure, but of that our Mysterious Bread Which cometh down from heaven? Thou seest that if thou lovest the Lord thy God, thou mayest win His bounty, not only for thyself, but for others likewise. And who can deserve more to be called our "Friend" than He Which gave His Own Body for us?

First Responsory.

Let now the redeemed, &c., (p. 380.)

Second Lesson.

FROM this Friend it was that David asked bread at midnight, and received it, as he saith: "At midnight I rise to give thanks unto Thee." (Ps. cxviii. 62.) Even thus did he obtain those loaves [of spiritual nourishment] which he still setteth before us for our refreshment. How he asked it, we know from that he saith: "Every night wash I my bed." (Ps. vi. 7.) He knew that there was no fear of waking Him Who sleepeth not. (Ps. cxx. 3.) Therefore let us keep in mind the things which are written for our learning, and be instant in prayer both by day and by night, to ask pardon of our sins.

Second Responsory.

O sing, &c., (p. 380,) omitting the last Verse and Answer.

Third Lesson.

IF David, who was such a Saint, and whose time was so taken up by the cares of a kingdom, praised the Lord seven times a day, (Ps. cxviii. 164,) and was always present with godly zeal at the morning and evening sacrifice, what ought we to do, (who have so much the more need to pray, as the weakness of our body and mind doth so much oftener make us to fall,) that we, wearied with this pilgrimage, and worn out by the gradual waning of our earthly day, and the changes of life, that we, I say, may not be starved of that life-giving Bread Which strengtheneth man's heart? The Lord teacheth us to be watchful, all of us, and that, not at midnight only, but alway. "And if He shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so—blessed are those servants whom the Lord, when He cometh, shall find watching." (Luke xii. 37.)

Third Responsory. (Instead of the Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.")

I will declare, &c., (p. 378.)

LAUDS.

Antiphons and Psalms as on Sunday.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Ask, and ye shall receive: * seek, and ye shall find: knock, and it shall be opened unto you. Alleluia.

Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that we who in our tribulation are yet of good cheer because of Thy loving-kindness, may find Thee mighty to save from all dangers. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

The same Prayer at Terce, Sext, and None.

On this day there is a [1] Procession of supplication, followed by a special Mass. All persons bound to recite the Office, and who are not present at the Procession, are bound to recite the Litany after Lauds. This cannot be done before midnight between Sunday and Monday.

VESPERS.

These Vespers may be of a Feast. If so, no Commemoration is made of the Week-day, but if they are Semidouble or Simple, the Cross is commemorated as usual.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The Father Himself loveth you, * because ye have loved Me, and have believed in Me. Alleluia.

Rogation Tuesday.

Third Day, whereon are made Supplications.

If a Feast, even Simple, fall on this day, it is observed, and the Week-day is not commemorated.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Peter (iv. 1.)

FORASMUCH, then, as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind; for he that suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin, that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God. For the time past sufficeth to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries. Wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of riot; whose talk is alway blasphemy; who shall give account to Him That is ready to judge the quick and the dead. For, for this cause was the Gospel preached also to them that are dead,[2] that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit. But the end of all things is at hand.

First Responsory.

Bless ye God, &c., (p. 379.)

Second Lesson.

BE ye therefore sober and watch unto prayer. But, above all things, have constant charity among yourselves, for charity covereth a multitude of sins. Use hospitality one to another without grudging. As every man hath received grace, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God. If any man speak, let him speak as the words of God; if any man minister, let him do it as of the ability which God giveth; that God in all things may be glorified through JESUS Christ, to Whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

[1] The object of the Procession and Mass on these three days seems to be to implore a blessing upon the fruits of the earth, and in rural places the Procession goes through the fields.

[2] I.e., by our Lord, when He descended into hell.

Second Responsory.

With my whole heart, &c., (p. 379,) with this addition:

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. O let me not wander from Thy commandments! Alleluia, Alleluia.

Third Lesson.

BELOVED, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is trying you,[1] as though some strange thing happened unto you: but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings, that, when His glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy. If ye be reproached for the Name of Christ, happy are ye, forasmuch as the honour, the glory, and the power of God, yea, and His Spirit also, do then rest upon you. But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evil doer, or as a luster after other men's goods. But if he suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed: but let him glorify God in that name. For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Christ ought to have suffered, * and to have risen again from the dead. Alleluia.

On this day also there is a Procession of Supplication, followed by a special Mass, and all persons bound to recite the Office, and who are not present at the Procession, are bound to recite the Litany after Laudes.

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. I came forth from the Father, * and am come into the world: again I leave the world, and go to the Father. Alleluia.

Rogation Wednesday. Eve of the Ascension.

Fourth Day, whereon are made Supplications. The same is the Eve of the Ascension.

If a Simple Feast fall on this day, it is only commemorated: if a Feast of Nine Lessons, the Office is of it, with the Homily of the Eve as the last Lesson, and a Commemoration of the same at Lauds only.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xvii. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS lifted up His Eyes to heaven, and spake these words: Father, the hour is come; glorify Thy Son. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (104*th Tract on John.*)

Our Lord, the Only-begotten and coeternal Son of the Father, was able, if need were, in and from the form of a servant, to pray in silence; but He thus manifested Himself in prayer, remembering that He is our Teacher. Thus He made known unto us the prayer which He made for us: since He was so great a Master that, not only His discourse to them, but His prayer to the Father for them, is an up-building to His disciples. And if it was so for them who were there to hear, truly it is so for us also for whose instruction it hath been written down.

First Responsory.

I will sing, &c., (p. 379.)

Second Lesson.

WHEREFORE, by these words: "Father, the hour is come; glorify Thy Son"—He showeth that all time, and all whatsoever He doth, or alloweth to be done, and the season wherein He will do or allow it, is alike ordained of Him Who is Himself not subject to time. Yea, all things which were then to come, or are yet to come now, have the reason why they should be, in the Wisdom of God, Which is Itself independent of all time.

"The hour is come." We must not believe that that hour was brought on by the march of destiny, but was by ordination of God. No stars decreed irresistibly that the time was come for Christ to suffer—God forbid that the revolutions of His planets should force death on Him Who made them.

Second Responsory.

It is a good thing, &c., (p. 380.)

Third Lesson.

SOME think that the glorification of the Son by the Father was that "He spared Him not, but delivered Him up for us all." (Rom. viii. 32.) But if we say that He was glorified by suffering, how much more shall we say that He was glorified by rising again? While He suffered, His humbleness was more manifested than His glory, as witnesseth the Apostle, where he saith: "He humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross"—then he addeth touching His glorification: "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a Name which is above every name, that at the Name of JESUS every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that our Lord JESUS Christ is in the glory of God the Father." (Phil. ii. 8—11.) This is the glorification of our Lord JESUS Christ, that glorification whose first rays dawned on the Resurrection morning.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Father, the hour is come; glorify Thy Son * with the glory which I had with Thee before the world was. Alleluia.

At the beginning of the Martyrology, is said,

On the morrow our Lord JESUS Christ ascended up into heaven from the Mount of Olives.

On this day also there is a Procession of Supplication, followed by a special Mass, and all persons bound to recite the Office, and who are not present at the Procession, are bound to recite the Litany after Lauds.

Vespers are of the Feast.

[1] Persecution.

Ascension Day, called also Holy Thursday.

The Ascension of the Lord.

Double of the First Class with an Octave.

All as on Sundays, except the following:

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, Hymn, and Prayer from Lauds.

Last Psalm.

Psalm CXVI.

O praise the LORD, &c., (p. 105.)

Verse. [1] God is gone up with a shout—Alleluia.
Answer. And the LORD with the sound of a trumpet—Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [2] Father, I have manifested Thy Name unto the men which Thou gavest Me: * but now I pray for them, not for the world, because I come to Thee. Alleluia.

COMPLINE.

The last verse of the Hymn is said thus:

JESU, victorious Lord, to Thee,
On Thy return to heaven,
With Father, Spirit—One and Three,
Eternal praise be given. Amen.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Alleluia. The Lord Christ hath ascended up into heaven. * O come let us worship Him! Alleluia.

Hymn.[3]

O THOU Eternal King Most High!
Who didst the world redeem;
And, conquering death and hell, receive
A dignity supreme—

Thou, through the starry orbs, this day,
Didst to Thy throne ascend;
Thenceforth to reign in sovereign power,
And glory without end.

There, seated in Thy Majesty,
To Thee submissive bow
The heaven of heavens, the earth beneath,
The realms of hell below.

With trembling there the Angels see
The changed estate of men;
The flesh which sinned by Flesh redeemed;
Man in the Godhead reign.

There, waiting for Thy faithful souls,
Be Thou to us, O Lord!
Our joy of joys while here we stay,
In heaven our great reward.

Renew our strength; our sins forgive;
Our miseries efface;
And lift our souls aloft to Thee,
By Thy celestial grace.

So when Thou shinest on the clouds,
With Thine angelic train,
May we be saved from deadly doom,
And our lost crowns regain.

To Christ returning gloriously
With victory to heaven,
Praise, with the Father, evermore,
And Holy Ghost, be given. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. O God, Thou hast set Thy glory above * the heavens. Alleluia.

Psalm VIII.

O LORD, our Ruler, &c., (p. 4.)

Second Antiphon. The LORD is in His holy Temple: * the LORD'S [throne] is in heaven. Alleluia.

Psalm X.

In the LORD put I my trust, &c., (p. 5.)

Third Antiphon. His going forth is from the end of the heaven, * and His circuit unto the ends of it. Alleluia.

Psalm XVIII.

The heavens declare, &c., (p. 10.)

Verse. God is gone up with a shout—Alleluia.
Answer. And the LORD with the sound of a trumpet—Alleluia.

First Lesson, "Here beginneth the book, &c.," (Acts i. 1,) as on Monday after Low Sunday, (p. 359,) as far as the words, "not many days hence."

First Responsory.

[4] Being seen of them forty days after that He had suffered, and speaking of the kingdom of God—Alleluia. And while they beheld, He was taken up, and a cloud received Him out of their sight. Alleluia.
Verse. And, eating together with them, He commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the Promise of the Father.
Answer. And while they beheld, He

Second Lesson, "They therefore that were come together, &c.," in the First Lesson of Monday after Low Sunday, to the end, and the Second Lesson as far as the words, "received Him out of their sight."

Second Responsory.

The Lord hath set His beauty above the stars; His loveliness is in the clouds of heaven, and His Name endureth for ever. Alleluia.

Verse. [1] His going forth is from the end of the heaven, and His circuit unto the ends of it.

Answer. His loveliness is in the clouds of heaven, and His Name endureth for ever. Alleluia.

Third Lesson, "And while they looked up, &c.," in the Second Lesson of Monday after Low Sunday to the end.

Third Responsory.

[2] Be Thou exalted, O Lord—Alleluia—in Thine Own strength—Alleluia.

Verse. O God, Thou hast set Thy glory above the heavens.

Answer. In Thine Own strength—Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. In Thine Own strength—Alleluia.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Be Thou exalted, O Lord, * in Thine Own strength; we will sing and praise [Thy power.] Alleluia.

Psalm XX.

The King shall joy, &c., (p. 10.)

Second Antiphon. I will extol Thee, O LORD, * for Thou hast lifted Me up. Alleluia.

Psalm XXIX.

I will extol, &c., (p. 42.)

Psalm XLVI.

O clap your hands, &c., (p. 55.)

Verse. [3] When Christ ascended up on high—Alleluia.

Answer. He led captivity captive—Alleluia.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Leo [the Great.] (1st on the Lord's Ascension.)

AFTER the blessed and glorious Resurrection of our Lord JESUS Christ, wherein the Divine Power raised up in three days the true Temple of God Which the iniquity of the Jews had destroyed (John ii. 19,) God was pleased to ordain, by His Most Sacred Will, and in His Providence for our instruction and the profit of our souls, a season of forty days; which season, dearly beloved brethren, doth end on this day. During that season the bodily Presence of the Lord still lingered on earth, that the reality of the fact of His having risen again from the dead might be armed with all needful proofs. The death of Christ had troubled the hearts of many of His disciples; their thoughts were sad when they remembered His agony upon the Cross, His giving up of the Ghost, and the laying in the grave of His lifeless Body, and a sort of hesitation had begun to weigh on them.

Fourth Responsory.

[4] My time is come that I should return unto Him That sent Me, saith the Lord. Be not sorrowful, neither let your heart be troubled. I pray the Father for you, that He may keep you. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. If I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you: when I am ascended, I will send Him unto you.

Answer. I pray the Father for you, that He may keep you. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Fifth Lesson.

HENCE the most blessed Apostles, and all the disciples, who had been fearful at the finishing on the Cross, and doubtful of the trustworthiness of the rising again, were so strengthened by the clear demonstration of the fact, that, when they saw the Lord going up into the heights of heaven, they sorrowed not, nay, they were even filled with great joy. And, in all verity, it was a great and unspeakable cause for joy to see the Manhood, in the presence of that holy multitude of believers, exalted above all creatures even heavenly, rising above the ranks of the angelic armies, and speeding Its glorious way to where the most noble of the Archangels lie far behind, to rest no lower than that place where high above all principality and power, It taketh Its seat at the right hand of the Eternal Father, Sharer of His throne, and Partaker of His glory, and still of the very man's nature which the Son hath taken upon Him.

Fifth Responsory.

[5] Let not your heart be troubled; I go unto the Father, and when I am taken from you, I will send unto you—Alleluia—the Spirit of truth; and your heart shall rejoice. Alleluia.

Verse. I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter.

Answer. The Spirit of truth; and your heart shall rejoice. Alleluia.

Sixth Lesson.

THEREFORE, dearly beloved brethren, let us also rejoice with worthy joy, for the Ascension of Christ is exaltation for us, and whither the glory of the Head of the Church is passed in, thither is the hope of the body of the Church called on to follow. Let us rejoice with exceeding great joy, and give God glad thanks. This day is not only the possession of Paradise made sure unto us, but in the Person of our Head we are actually begun to enter into the heavenly mansions above. Through the unspeakable goodness of Christ we have gained more than ever we lost by the envy of the devil. We, whom our venomous enemy thrust from our first happy home,—we, being made of one body with the Son of God, have by Him been given a place at the right hand of the Father; with Whom He liveth and reigneth, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Psalm CII.

Bless the LORD, O my soul, &c., (p. 91.)

Verse. [2] I ascend unto My Father and your Father—Alleluia.

Answer. To My God and your God—Alleluia.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark (xvi. 14.)

AT that time: JESUS appeared unto the eleven disciples as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart: because they believed not them which had seen Him after He was risen. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (29th on the Gospels.)

I may be allowed to say that the disciples' slowness to believe that the Lord had indeed risen from the dead, was not so much their weakness as our strength. In consequence of their doubts, the fact of the Resurrection was demonstrated by many infallible proofs. These proofs we read and acknowledge. What then assureth our faith, if not their doubt? For my part, I put my trust in Thomas, who doubted long, much more than in Mary Magdalene, who believed at once. Through his doubting, he came actually to handle the holes of the Wounds, and thereby closed up any wound of doubt in our hearts.

Seventh Responsory.

[3] I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you for ever, even the Spirit of truth—Alleluia.

Verse. For if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send Him unto you.

Answer. That He may abide with you for ever, even the Spirit of truth—Alleluia.

Eighth Lesson.

TO confirm to our minds the trustworthiness of the fact that our Lord did indeed rise again from the dead, it is well for us to remark one of the statements of Luke (Acts i. 4.)—"Eating together with them, He commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem"—and a little afterward: "While they beheld, He was taken up, and a cloud received Him out of their sight." Consider these words, note well these mysteries. After "eating together with them—He was taken up." He ate and ascended: that the fact of His eating might show the reality of the Body in Which He went up. But Mark telleth us that before the Lord ascended into heaven He upbraided His disciples with their unbelief and hardness of heart. From this I know not what we should gather, but that the Lord then upbraided His disciples, from whom He was about to be parted in the body, to the end that the words which He spoke unto them as He left them might be the deeper imprinted on their hearts.

Eighth Responsory.

[4] Thou makest the clouds Thy chariot, O Lord, Thou walkest upon the wings of the wind. Alleluia.

Verse. Thou art clothed with honour and majesty, covering Thyself with light as with a garment!

Answer. Thou walkest upon the wings of the wind. Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Thou walkest upon the wings of the wind. Alleluia.

Ninth Lesson.

WHEN, then, He had rebuked the hardness of their heart, what command did He give them? Let us hear. "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature." Was the Holy Gospel, then, my brethren, to be preached to things insensate, or to brute beasts, that the Lord said to His disciples: "Preach the Gospel to every creature"? Nay; but by the words "every creature" we must understand man, in whom are combined qualities of all creatures. Being he hath in common with stones, life in common with trees, feeling in common with beasts, understanding in common with angels. If, then, man hath something in common with every creature, man is to a certain extent every creature. The Gospel, then, if it be preached to man only, is preached to every creature.

Hymn.[3]

O THOU pure Light of souls that love!
True joy of every human breast!
Sower of life's immortal seed!
Our Maker, and Redeemer blest!

What wondrous pity Thee o'ercame
To make our guilty load Thine own,
And, sinless, suffer death and shame,
For our transgressions to atone!

Thou, bursting Hades open wide,
Didst all the captive souls unchain;
And thence to Thy dread Father's side
With glorious pomp ascend again.

O still may pity Thee compel
To heal the wounds of which we die;
And take us in Thy light to dwell,
Who for Thy blissful Presence sigh.

Be Thou our Guide; be Thou our Goal;
Be Thou our Pathway to the skies;
Our Joy when sorrow fills the soul;
In death our everlasting prize. Amen.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the [1] Second Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Peter (i. 1.)

SIMON Peter, a servant and an Apostle of JESUS Christ, to them that have obtained like faith with us, through the righteousness of our God and Saviour JESUS Christ. Grace and peace be multiplied unto you, through the knowledge of God and of Christ JESUS our Lord, according as His Divine Power hath given unto us all things that pertain to life and godliness, through the knowledge of Him That hath called us by His Own glory and strength; through Whom are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these ye might be made partakers of the Divine Nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust.

Second Lesson.

AND beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they shall make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord JESUS Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and gropeth, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins.

Third Lesson.

WHEREFORE the rather, brethren, give diligence by good works to make your calling and election sure: for while ye do these things, ye shall never sin. For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour JESUS Christ. Wherefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though ye know them and be established in the present truth. But I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up, by putting you in remembrance: knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord JESUS Christ hath showed me.[2] Moreover, I will endeavour that ye may be able after my decease to have these things always in remembrance.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Leo [the Great.] (2nd for the Lord's Ascension.)

DEARLY beloved brethren, that mysterious thing, our salvation, which the Maker of the universe thought worth purchasing with His Own Precious Blood, was aimed at by Him, in the dispensation of His humility, from the hour wherein He was born as touching the flesh, till the moment when, at the end of the Passion, He cried on the Cross: "It is finished." Although from under the form of a servant many marks of His Godhead shone forth, yet, as a whole, the work of those three-and-thirty years was to manifest the verity of the Manhood Which the Son of God had taken into Himself. But when the suffering was all over, and the bands of death were broken, (that death which had lost all his power by seeking to bind Him Who knew no sin,) then was weakness changed into strength, mortality into immortality, insult into that glory which the Lord JESUS Christ, on so many occasions, made manifest by so many and infallible proofs, until the day came when that triumphant procession of victory, which He had led from the realms of shattered death, followed Him with unimaginable pomp into the heavens.

Fifth Lesson.

ON the solemn Feast of the Passover the cause of our joy was that Christ was risen again. This day we rejoice because that He is ascended up into heaven. We call to mind and justly celebrate that day whereon our lowly nature was, in the Person of Christ, borne up high above all the heavenly armies, above all the circles of Angels, beyond the heights of all the Powers, even to where Christ is sitting on the right hand of the Father. Our foundations are laid, and our house is built upon this succession of the works of God; and His grace is made more wonderful by this, that, though the visible Object of worship is removed from among men, the faith of the Church doth not grow weak, nor her hope wavering, nor her love cold.

[1] "This letter," says Abp. Kenrick, "appears to have been written to the same persons to whom the former was addressed." (III. 1.) "It was written probably a short time before the completion of his course by martyrdom." (I. 14.)

[2] I.e., by crucifixion. John xxi. 18, 19.

Sixth Lesson.

IT is the back-bone of a strong mind and the eye of a trusty soul, to believe unhesitatingly that which is not seen with the bodily eyes, and to centre all love where there can be no experimental knowledge. This it is which is the only thing we can have of godliness; for how could a man be justified through faith, if the saving objects were objects of sight? There was a man who would not believe in the Resurrection of Christ until he had examined by sight, and touched the marks of the Passion in the Divine Body, and the Lord said to him: "Because thou hast seen Me, thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed." (John xx. 29.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark (xvi. 14.)

AT that time: JESUS appeared unto the eleven disciples as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart; because they believed not them which had seen Him after He was risen. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Same as before.)

"He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Perchance some man will say within himself: "I have already believed, and therefore I shall be saved." Thou hast well said, if thou showest thy faith by thy works. He only hath a true faith whose life doth not give the lie to his confession. Hence it is that Paul saith, touching some who were falsely faithful: "They profess that they know God; but in works they deny Him." (Tit. i. 16.) And John likewise saith: "He that saith, I know Him; and keepeth not His commandments, is a liar." (I. ii. 4.)

Eighth Lesson.

SINCE, then, it so standeth, it is to our lives we must look for proof of the reality of our faith. Then only are we truly Christ's faithful people when our works are the fulfilment of our profession. The day whereon we were baptized we bound ourselves to renounce all the works of the old enemy, and all his pomps. Therefore let every one of you now turn his inward eye upon his own behaviour, and if, since his baptism, he hath kept that promise which he made before it, let him know that he is in very truth one of Christ's faithful ones; and let him rejoice.

Ninth Lesson.

BUT if he hath utterly broken his promise, if he hath fallen away to work iniquity, and to lust after the pomps of the world, let us see if he now knoweth how to weep over his backsliding. By the merciful Judge that man is not punished as a perjurer who in the end telleth the truth, even though he hath first lied. Because Almighty God doth, in His tender kindness, so receive our contrition, that, in His judgment, He declareth us not guilty of that which we have done amiss.

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Peter (iii. 1.)

THIS Second Epistle, beloved, I now write unto you; in both which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance, that ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the Holy Prophets, and of the commandment of us the Apostles of the Lord and Saviour, knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days, in deceit, scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying: "Where is the promise of His coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." For this they willingly are ignorant of, that by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth formed from the water and by the water; whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished. But the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment, and perdition of ungodly men.

Second Lesson.

BUT, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. The Lord is not slack concerning His promise, as some men count [Him:] but is long-suffering for your sake, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance. The day of the Lord will come as a thief; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great crash, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein, shall be burned up. Seeing, then, that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be, in holy conversation and godliness, looking for, and hasting unto the coming of the day of the Lord, wherein the heavens, being on fire, shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat? Nevertheless, we, according to His promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

Third Lesson.

WHEREFORE, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of Him in peace, without spot, and blameless.

And account that the long-suffering of our Lord is salvation: even as our beloved brother Paul also, according to the wisdom given unto him, hath written unto you, as also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, (as they do also the other Scriptures,) unto their own destruction. Ye, therefore, brethren, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the foolish, fall from your own stedfastness. But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour JESUS Christ. To Him be glory, both now and for ever. Amen.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Leo [the Great.] (2nd on the Ascension.)

AND so the seen Presence of our Redeemer in the Body was changed for an unseen Presence in the Sacraments, and hearing was given to the Church in place of seeing, that her faith, rightly so called, might be the more victorious and stedfast; and that teaching, which the hearts of all her children are called on to hear, is a teaching enlightened by rays from heaven. This faith, strengthened by the Ascension of the Lord, and established by the gift of the Holy Ghost, neither bonds, nor imprisonment, nor exile, nor famine, nor fire, nor savage beasts, nor those forms of death, fine-wrought in cruelty, wherein they that persecute us are well skilled, have been able to scare. For this faith there have striven throughout the whole world, even unto the out-pouring of their blood, not men only, but women also, not little lads only, but tender maidens. This is the faith which hath cast out devils, healed diseases, raised the dead.

Fifth Lesson.

HENCE even the blessed Apostles themselves, who had been comforted by so many miracles and taught by so many discourses, were sickened by the horrors of their Lord's Passion, and received but doubtfully the assurance of His Resurrection, till after the Lord's Ascension; and then fared on so bravely, that all that had been fearful to them before became joyful then. The reason was that they had lifted up all their mind to think of the Godhead of Him Who sitteth at the right hand of the Father. They asked no longer for a seen Presence, when their spiritual eye had caught the fact that, even as, when He had come down to earth, He had not left His Father, so now that He was gone up into heaven, He had not left His disciples. So then it was, dearly beloved brethren, that the Son of man more excellently and more sacredly revealed Himself as the Son of God, when He had withdrawn Himself again into that glory which He had with the Father before the world was. In some unspeakable way He began to be more present, as touching His Godhead, when He removed Himself farther from us, as touching His Manhood.

Sixth Lesson.

THEN it was that a better instructed faith began intellectually to approach the idea of a Son equal to the Father, and no longer to need to handle in Christ the bodily Matter, Which is of a nature as touching which He is inferior to the Father; since, Its nature still remaining in the glorified Body, the faith of believers was summoned to that place where the Only-Begotten Son, Who is equal to the Father, is felt, not by the application of a bodily hand, but by the effort of a spiritual-minded intellect. Hence it was that after His Resurrection, when Mary Magdalene, (in whom was there represented the Person of the whole Church,) wished to handle the Lord, He said: "Touch Me not; for I am not yet ascended to My Father"—that is: 'I will no more that thy nearness to Me should be a nearness of body to Body, nor that thine experience of Me should henceforward be one proceeding from fleshly experiment—for that, I appoint thee an higher world, I make ready for thee a nobler form of it than this—after that I have ascended to My Father, a time will come when thou shalt indeed touch Me, but after a manner more perfect, more real than this, even a time when thou shalt lay hold on that which thou touchest not now, and believe that which thou seest not now.'

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark (xvi. 14.)

AT that time: JESUS appeared unto the eleven disciples as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart: because they believed not them which had seen Him after He was risen. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Same as before.)

"And these signs shall follow them that believe: In My Name they shall cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." My brethren, these signs do not follow us. Do we, then, not believe? Nay. The truth is, these things were needful when the Church was young. That she might grow by the increase of the faithful, she needed to be nourished with miracles. Even so we, when we plant a young tree, continually water and tend it till we see that it hath taken firm root in the earth: but when once it hath taken firm root, it can grow of itself. Hence, Paul saith of tongues: "Tongues are for a sign, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not." (1 Cor. xiv. 22.)

Eighth Lesson.

WE have a deeper matter of thought touching these signs and mighty works. It is the work of the holy Church to do every day spiritually that which the Apostles then did carnally. When her Priests, armed with the power of exorcism, lay their hands upon believers, and command evil spirits to dwell no longer in their souls, what is it they do but cast out devils? When Christ's faithful people themselves give up the language of their old life, and speak the wonderful works of God, the glory and power of their Maker, telling of them with all their strength, what is it they do then but speak with new tongues? When either the one or the other doth by his exhortation charm the wickedness out of his neighbour's heart, what is it he doth but take up serpents?

Ninth Lesson.

WHEN they hear the voice of temptation inviting to deadly sin, but are not drawn thereby to work iniquity, do they not then drink a deadly thing, and it doth not hurt them? As often as they see their neighbour fainting in well-doing, and run to help him with all their might, so that their ensample braceth the feeble life of the waverer, what do they but lay hands on the sick and they recover? And indeed, such miracles as these are the greatest miracles, which are spiritual; the greatest, for they bring health, not to the dying body, but to the immortal soul.

Sunday after Ascension Day.

The Lord's Day within the Octave of the Ascension.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

If the Saturday should have been the Feast of St John before the Latin Gate, and the following Lessons consequently read on it, on Sunday morning are read those of Monday, which day will itself be occupied by the Feast of St Michael on Mount Gargano, with special Lessons.

Lessons from 1 John i. 1, as on Dec. 27, (p. 161,) with the following added at the end of the Third:

Hereby know we that we are in Him, He that saith he abideth in Him, ought himself also so to walk, even as He walked.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (2nd on the Ascension.)

DEARLY beloved brethren, our Saviour is gone up from us into heaven, but let us not be troubled on earth. Let only our heart be there with Him, and we shall have peace here. Let us in heart thither ascend with Christ in the mean while, and when that glad day which He hath promised cometh, our body will follow. But we must know, my brethren, that there are some things that cannot ascend with Christ—pride cannot, nor covetousness, nor brutishness: no one of our diseases can ascend thither where our Healer is. And, therefore, if we would follow our Healer, we must needs leave our diseases and sins behind us. All such things tie us down, as it were, with bands, and hamper us in the meshes of a net of sins; but, with God's help, we will say with the Psalmist: "Let us break their bands asunder," (ii. 3,) that we may be able honestly to say to the Lord: "Thou hast loosed my bonds; I will offer to Thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving," (cxv. 16, 17.)

Fifth Lesson.

THE Resurrection of the Lord is our hope; the Ascension of the Lord is our glorification. To-day we keep the solemn holiday of the Ascension. If, therefore, our keeping of this holiday is to be a right, faithful, earnest, holy, godly keeping, we must in mind likewise ascend, and lift up our hearts unto the Lord. When we ascend we must not be high-minded, nor flatter ourselves with our good works, as though they were our own. We must lift up our hearts unto the Lord. When man's heart is lifted up, but not unto the Lord, such lifting-up is pride; to lift up the heart unto the Lord, is to make the Most High our Refuge. Behold, my brethren, a great wonder. God is high, but if thou art lifted up He fleeth from thee, whereas, if thou humblest thyself, He cometh down to thee. Wherefore? "The LORD is high, yet hath He respect unto the lowly: but the proud He knoweth from afar." (Ps. cxxxvii. 6.) To the lowly He hath respect, that He may raise them up; the proud He knoweth from afar, that He may thrust them down.

Sixth Lesson.

CHRIST arose again, to give us hope that this mortal will yet put on immortality: He hath assured against an hopeless death, and against the thought that death endeth life. We were troubled, even as touching the soul; but Christ, arising from the grave, hath assured to us the resurrection of the body also. Believe therefore, that thou mayest be made pure. First it behoveth thee to believe, if by faith thou wouldest in the end worthily see God. And wouldest thou see God? Give ear to His own words: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." (Matth. v. 8.) Think first, then, how to purify thine heart; take from it whatsoever thou seest in it which displeaseth God.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xv. 26.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: when the Comforter is come, Whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, Which proceedeth from the Father, He shall testify of Me. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (92nd Tract on John.)

The Lord JESUS, in that discourse which He addressed to His disciples after the Last Supper, when He was on the very eve of the Passion, when He was, as it were, about to go away and leave them as touching His bodily Presence, albeit as touching His spiritual Presence He is with us alway even unto the end of the world, (Matth. xxviii. 20,) in that discourse He exhorted them to bear patiently the persecution of wicked men, of whom He speaketh as "the world:" out of the which world, nevertheless, He saith that He hath chosen even His disciples themselves, (xv. 19,) that they might know that it was by the grace of God that they were what they were, (1 Cor. xv. 10,) whereas it was by their own sins that they had been what they had been.

Eighth Lesson.

"IF they have persecuted Me, they will also persecute you." Here He clearly pointeth to the Jews, the persecutors both of Himself and of His disciples, so that we see that they which persecute His holy ones are as much citizens of the world of damnation as they which persecuted Himself. He saith: "They know not Him That sent Me," (21,) and yet again, (24,) "They have hated both Me and My Father," (xv. 24,) that is to say, both the Sender and the Sent,—the meaning of which words we have already treated in other discourses—and with that He cometh to the words: "That the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law: They hated Me without a cause."

Eighth Responsory.

[1]For if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send Him unto you: and when He is come, He will guide you into all truth—Alleluia.

Verse. For He shall not speak of Himself; but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall He speak: and He will show you things to come.

Answer. And when He is come, He will guide you into all truth. Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And when He is come, He will guide you into all truth. Alleluia.

Ninth Lesson.

THEN saith the Lord, as though in continuation: "But when the Comforter is come, Whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, Which proceedeth from the Father, He shall testify of Me. And ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with Me from the beginning." What connection hath this with the words: "Now have they both seen and hated both Me and My Father; but that the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law: They hated Me without a cause?" Is it that when the Comforter is come, even the Spirit of truth, He will confound by irrefragable testimony them who have both seen and hated both God the Son and God the Father? Yea, indeed, some there were who had seen and still hated, whom the testimony of the Comforter converted to the faith which worketh by love.

Chapter from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [2]These things have I told you, * that, when the time shall come, ye may remember that I told you of them. Alleluia.

Commemoration of the Ascension as yesterday evening.

Monday within the Octave of the Ascension.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Epistle of the Blessed Apostle John (iii. 1.)

BEHOLD, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called, and should be, the sons of God! Therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew Him not. Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be. We know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him: for we shall see Him as He is. And every man that hath this hope in Him purifieth himself, even as He is pure. Whosoever committeth sin doth iniquity, and iniquity is sin. And ye know that He was manifested to take away our sins; and in Him is no sin. Whosoever abideth in Him sinneth not; and whosoever sinneth, hath not seen Him, neither known Him.

[1] John xvi. 7, 13.

[2] John xvi. 4.

Second Lesson.

LITTLE children, let no man deceive you. He that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as He is Righteous. He that committeth sin, is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that He might destroy the works of the devil. Whosoever is born of God, doth not commit sin; for His seed remaineth in him; and he cannot sin, because he is born of God. In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil. Whosoever doeth not righteousness, is not of God; neither he that loveth not his brother. For this is the message that ye heard from the beginning, that ye should love one another. Not as Cain, who was of that wicked one, and slew his brother. And wherefore slew he him? Because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous.

Third Lesson.

MARVEL not, my brethren, if the world hate you. We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not, abideth in death. Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer. And ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him. Hereby perceive we the love of God, because He laid down His life for us; and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren. Whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels [of compassion] from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (On the Ascension, tom. 3.)

WHEN Christ went up into heaven, He offered unto the Father the First-fruits of our nature, and the Father marvelled at the offering, seeing the Majesty of the Priest and the Spotlessness of the oblation. He received the Sacrifice into His Own hands, He made It to sit upon His Throne, nay, more, He gave It a place at His Own Right Hand. Let us ask what nature was His Who heard the words: "Sit Thou at My right hand," (Ps. cix. 1,)—what nature was His to Whom God said: "Be Thou Partaker of My Throne?" It was the same nature as was his who heard the sentence: "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." (Gen. iii. 19.)

Fifth Lesson.

IT was not enough of glory for Him to be exalted above the heavens, nor to be ranked with angels; but He was exalted above the heavens, He went up above the Cherubim, He ascended beyond the Seraphim, neither found He His rank beneath the Throne of the Lord of lords. Behold how high the heaven is above the earth, and the earth above hell, how high above the heaven is the heaven of heavens, how high above the heaven of heavens the Angels, above the Angels the Higher Powers, and above the Higher Powers the Throne of the Lord. Above all these hath One of our nature been exalted, so that man, which had fallen so low that there was no farther fall for him, is now in place so high, that there is thence no ascending.

Sixth Lesson.

PAUL also, dwelling on this, saith: "He That descended is the Same also That ascended up far above all heavens," even as he had said: "Now, that He ascended, what is it but that He also descended first into the lower parts of the earth." (Eph. iv. 9, 10.) Learn hence Who it was That ascended, and with what nature He was exalted. And with this thought I wish to bring my sermon to an end. From the thought of that glorified Manhood let us learn with amazement what the goodness of God is; that goodness which hath crowned with an honour, higher than which is none, and a glory, greater than which is none, a Person Sharer of our nature, even That Person Which this day hath taken the place which is His of right, above all things other than Himself. This day Angels and Archangels beheld our nature upon the Throne of the Lord, refulgent with eternal glory.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark (xvi. 14.)

AT that time: JESUS appeared unto the eleven disciples as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart: because they believed not them which had seen Him after He was risen. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Same as before.)

"So then, after the Lord JESUS had spoken unto them, He was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God." We learn in the Old Testament, (4 Kings ii.,) that Elijah was taken up into heaven. But this word "heaven" may mean either the terrestrial atmosphere, or the space external to the sphere of this planet.[1] Of these the atmosphere closely surrounds the earth, and we call the birds "the fowls of the heaven," because we see them fly therein. It was only up into this that Elijah was taken, that he might be carried off suddenly into some part of the earth, to us unknown, and there live in profound peace of body and soul, until the end of the world, when he will return and pay the debt of nature. For him, therefore, death waiteth, but is not escaped. But our Redeemer made it not to wait for Him, but conquered it, and by rising again shattered it, and by His Ascension showed forth the glory of His Again-rising.

Eighth Lesson.

WE must mark also, how that Elijah was taken up in a chariot, as though to show plainly that for a mere man some outward help was needful. This help was given to him by Angels, as plainly appeareth, since it was impossible for one whom a weak nature yet weighed down earthward, to fly up even into the atmosphere. But of our Redeemer we read not that He was borne up in a chariot, or by Angels, since He by Whom all things were made, clearly rose above all things by

---

[1] The words here rendered "terrestrial atmosphere" and "space external to the sphere of this planet" are "aër" and "æther."

His Own Power. He returned unto Him with Whom He was, and whither He returned, there He abode, for albeit as touching His Manhood He ascended up into heaven, yet, as touching His Godhead, He still comprehended both heaven and earth.

Ninth Lesson.

BUT as the sale of Joseph by his brethren was a type of the sale of Christ, so were the translations of Enoch and Elijah types of His Ascension. The Lord therefore had had forerunners and witnesses of His Ascension, the one before the Law, the other under the Law, that Himself might one day come, Who was able indeed to pass into the heavens. Hence also there is some difference to be observed in the manner wherein each was translated. Enoch was seen no more, (Gen. v. 24,) for God took him; Elijah was carried up by a whirlwind into heaven; He That came after them was not taken up, nor carried up, but went up through space by His Own Power.

Tuesday within the Octave of the Ascension.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Epistle of the Blessed Apostle John (iv. 1.)

BELOVED, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits, whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world. Hereby is known the Spirit of God; every spirit that confesseth that JESUS Christ is come in the flesh, is of God; and every spirit that leaveth hold on[1] JESUS is not of God, and this is Antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come, and even now already is it in the world. Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome him,[2] because greater is He That is in you, than he that is in the world. They are of the world; therefore speak they of the world, and the world heareth them. We are of God. He that knoweth God, heareth us; he that is not of God, heareth not us. Hereby know we the Spirit of truth and the spirit of error.

Second Lesson.

BELOVED, let us love one another, for love is of God. And every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is love. In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent His Only-begotten Son into the world, that we might live through Him. Herein is love: not that we loved God; but that He first loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins. Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another. No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and His love is perfected in us. Hereby know we that we dwell in Him, and He in us, because He hath given us of His Spirit. And we have seen and do testify, that the Father sent His Son to be the Saviour of the world.

Third Lesson.

WHOSOEVER shall confess that JESUS is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God. And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him. Herein is the love of God with us made perfect, that we may have boldness in the day of judgment, because as He is, so are we in this world. There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear, because fear hath torment. He that feareth, is not made perfect in love. Let us therefore love God, because God first loved us. If a man say, I love God; and hateth his brother, he is a liar. For he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God, Whom he hath not seen? And this commandment have we from God; that he who loveth God, love his brother also.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Maximus, Bishop [of Turin.] (43*rd*, 2*nd on Pentecost.*)

MY holy brethren,[3] ye remember that I have likened the Saviour to that eagle, touching which it is written in the Book of Psalms, (cii. 5,) "Thy youth is renewed like the eagle's." There are many points of likeness. The eagle riseth above ground, wingeth his way aloft, and mounteth skyward: even so did the Saviour rise from the depth of the grave, mount up unto the exalted mansions of Paradise, and enter the heights of heaven. The eagle leaveth below him the foul mists of earth, flieth above, and drinketh in health from a purer air; even so did the Lord leave below Him the filthy slough of sinners on earth, and rejoice Himself with the honesty of a purer life, when He soared again into His Own holy home.

Fifth Lesson.

IN all ways, therefore, is the Saviour aptly likened to an eagle. But what can we make of this, that the eagle is a bird of prey, oft-times a plunderer? Even in this he is like to the Saviour. He bore off His prey, when He carried off from the jaws of hell to heaven the Manhood Which He had swooped to take to Himself, yea, when He led captive to an higher home him whom He had delivered from the mastership of another lord, namely the devil,—even as it is written in the Prophet, (Ps. lxvii. 19,) "Thou hast ascended on high, Thou hast led captivity captive, Thou hast received gifts among men."

Sixth Lesson.

"THOU hast ascended on high, Thou hast led captivity captive." O how nobly doth the Prophet paint the Triumph of the Lord! We hear how that of old time, when kings marched in triumph, the procession of prisoners walked before the chariot of their conqueror. Lo, the Lord entereth the heavens, not after, but amid a most glorious band of captives. That band are not led before His chariot, but themselves bear up their Saviour. In some mystic sense, when the Son of God bore to heaven the Son of man, captivity both led and was led.

---

[1] Solvit—perhaps by explaining Him away as a phantom without any real body, as did the Phantasiast heretics. The Greek, however, is—"confesseth not."

[2] I.e., Antichrist, or, his spirit.

[3] Sanctitas vestra.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark (xvi. 14.)

AT that time: JESUS appeared unto the eleven disciples as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart; because they believed not them which had seen Him after He was risen. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Same as before.)

We must ponder the meaning of these words of Mark,—"He sat on the right hand of God," and how that Stephen said, (Acts vii. 56,) "Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God." Wherefore doth Mark say that He sat, whereas Stephen testifieth that he saw Him standing? But ye know, my brethren, that to sit is for him that judgeth, to stand, for him that fighteth, or helpeth.

Eighth Lesson.

SINCE, therefore, our Redeemer is ascended up into heaven, and even now is Judge of all, beside that at the end of the world He will so come, therefore doth Mark say that He sitteth where He hath gone up, because we look for Him, after that His glorious Ascension, that He will come again at the end to be our Judge. But Stephen, while yet he was in the throes of the battle, saw Him That was helping him standing. Stephen on earth was overcoming the unbelief of his persecutors, but it was the grace of Him That is in heaven that fought in him all the while.

Ninth Lesson.

"AND they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following." What are we to see in this, what are we to remember, but that obedience followed commandment, and signs obedience? But now, since, by the will of God, we have lightly run over our reading from the Gospel, it remaineth that we should say somewhat by way of reflection on this great Festival.

Wednesday within the Octave of the Ascension.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Second Epistle of the Blessed Apostle John (1.)

THE Elder unto the Lady Eklekté,[1] and her children, whom I love in the truth; and not I only, but also all they that have known the truth, for the truth's sake, which dwelleth in us, and shall be with us for ever. Grace be with you, mercy, and peace, from God the Father, and from Christ JESUS, the Son of the Father, in truth and love. I rejoiced greatly that I found of thy children walking in truth, as we have received a commandment from the Father. And now I beseech thee, Lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another.

Second Lesson.

AND this is love, that we walk after His commandments. For this is the commandment, that, as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it; for many deceivers are entered into the world who confess not that JESUS Christ is come in the flesh: this is a deceiver and an Antichrist. Look to yourselves, that ye lose not those things which ye have wrought, but that ye receive a full reward. Whoso draweth back, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God: he that abideth in the doctrine, he hath both the Father and the Son.

Third Lesson.

IF there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him 'God speed.' For he that biddeth him 'God speed' is partaker of his evil deeds. Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with paper and ink: for I hope to be with you, and speak face to face, that your joy may be full. The children of thy sister Eklekté greet thee.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Gregory, Bishop [of Nyssa.][2] Discourse on the Lord's Ascension.)

THE very thought of this day's Festival is great enough in itself, but the Prophet David hath much inflamed our joyful enthusiasm by the Psalms. This noble Prophet hath, as it were, gone out of himself, as though the body were a weight duller than his spirit could bear; he joineth company with the Powers of heaven, and telleth what they said when they went with the Lord heavenward, and cried in tones of command to those Angels who work on earth, and by whose heralding the Birth of the Incarnate One had been proclaimed—"Lift up your gates, O ye princes, and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors, and the King of glory shall come in." (Ps. xxiii. 7, 9.)

Fifth Lesson.

HE, Who containeth all things, is everywhere, but for the sake of them which receive Him, He is pleased to make Himself a local Presence which hath bounds. Not only did He become a Man among men, but when conversing among Angels, He alloweth that title also to be given Him.

[1] I.e., Elect. Divers opinions have been maintained regarding the two sister ladies, both called Eklekté, mentioned in this Epistle, of which the three commonest are—(1.) That this was their proper name. (2.) That it is a title used by the Apostle, who wished to suppress their names as well as his own, possibly from prudential motives. (3.) That they are allegorical designations of Churches, e.g., Corinth and Ephesus.

[2] Younger brother of St Basil the Great. Elected Bishop of Nyssa in A.D. 372; banished by the Arians, but recalled in 378; died about 400; has a clause in the Martyrology on March 9.

The gatekeepers therefore ask : "Who is this King of glory ?" and it is answered them that He is "The LORD, strong and mighty, the LORD, mighty in battle," the Lord, Whose work it had been to fight him who held mankind in bondage, and to "destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil" (Heb. ii. 14)—that now that dark enemy was trampled down, and man had had won for him freedom and peace.

Sixth Lesson.

THE keepers run to the gates, and bid the doors unfold, that the Lord may enter in, to take again the glory which He had there among them before. But when they see Him, clad in the likeness of sinful flesh, (Rom. viii. 3,) they know Him not, even Him Who is red in His apparel, because that He hath trodden Alone the winepress of human pain, and the blood is sprinked upon His garments, (Isa. lxiii. 2, 3.) Therefore they cry again to their fellows that bear Him company : "Who is this King of glory ?" And they answer them no more : "The LORD, strong and mighty, the LORD mighty in battle" but "The LORD of hosts"—the Lord, Whose Own are become the kingdoms of the world (xi. 15, Apoc.) the Lord, Who hath made Himself the Head of all things (Eph. iv. 15,) the Lord, Who hath made all things new (Apoc. xxi. 5.) "He is the King of glory !"

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark (xvi. 14.)

AT that time : JESUS appeared unto the eleven disciples as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart ; because they believed not them which had seen Him after He was risen. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Same as before.)

The first question we have to ask is why we read that Angels appeared at the time of the Birth of the Lord, but we read not that they appeared in white apparel ; whereas, when the Lord ascended into heaven, it is written that the angels which appeared were clad in white. "While they beheld, He was taken up, and a cloud received Him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven, as He went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel," (Acts i. 9, 10.) White raiment is an outward sign of solemn inward joy. That the occasion of God-made-Man entering into heaven was a great Festival for Angels, is the reason which we see why angels are specially named as robed in white at His Ascension, and not at His Birth. At the Birth of the Lord the Godhead was manifested veiled under the form of a servant, but at His Ascension the Manhood was seen exalted ; and white vestments are more apt to exaltation than humiliation.

Eighth Lesson.

THEREFORE were the angels bound to appear in white apparel at the Ascension ; at His Birth He Who thought it not robbery to be equal with God, was seen in the form in which He had humbled Himself ; at His Ascension the Manhood Which He had taken into God was seen glorified. Again, dearly beloved brethren, we must remember to-day, how that Christ hath "blotted out the hand-writing that was against us," (Col. ii. 14,) and reversed the sentence which doomed us to corruption. That same nature to which it was said, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return," (Gen. iii. 19,) that same nature is His Who hath this day ascended up into heaven. It is because of this up-lifting of our flesh that blessed Job, by a figure, calleth the Lord a bird. The Jews could not understand the Mystery of the Ascension, and in view of this their unbelief, blessed Job said mystically : "He knew not the path of the bird," (xxviii. 7.) [1]

Ninth Lesson.

THE name of a bird is well given to the Lord, Who bodily soared up into heaven. And the path of that Bird knoweth no man, who believeth not in the Ascension into heaven. It is of this glorious occasion that the Psalmist saith : "Who hast set Thy glory above the heavens," (viii. 2,) and again : "God is gone up with a shout, and the LORD with the sound of a trumpet," (xlvi. 6.) And yet again he saith : "Thou hast ascended on high, Thou hast led captivity captive," (lxvii. 19.) "When Christ ascended up on high, He led captivity captive," (Eph. iv. 8,) because by His Own incorruptibility He swallowed up our corruptibility. "He gave gifts unto men," because by sending the Spirit from above, He gave "to one, the word of wisdom ; to another, the word of knowledge ; to another, the working of miracles ; to another, the gifts of healing ; to another, divers kinds of tongues ; to another, the interpretation of tongues," (1 Cor. xii. 8—10.)

Vespers are the same as the First Vespers of the Feast. Double.

Octave of the Ascension.

Double.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson as on the Thursday in the Third Week after the Epiphany, p. 216, and the Second down to the words "—gifts unto men."

Second Lesson. Continuation of the foregoing, down to the words in the Third Lesson "— lie in wait to deceive."

Third Lesson.

BUT, working the truth in love, may we grow up into Him in all things, Which is the Head, even Christ : from Whom the whole body, fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love. This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk not as the Gentiles walk, in the vanity of their mind, having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart ; who, being past hope, have given themselves over unto lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness with greediness. But ye have not so learned Christ, if so be that ye have heard Him, and have been taught by Him.

[1] St Gregory seems to have been misled by the identity of the Nominative and Genitive of the Latin word "avis." The Hebrew is : "There is a path which no bird of prey knoweth."

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (3rd on the Ascension, 176*th on the Season.*)

DEARLY beloved brethren, all the wonderful works which our Lord JESUS Christ did in this world, under the weakness of our nature, are profitable for us; when He exalted His Manhood above the stars, He showed that heaven may open for a believer; and while He, the Conqueror of death, went up into the heavenly mansions, He showed to him that overcometh, whither he also may follow. Therefore, the ascension of the Lord is the seal of the Catholic Faith, which assureth in us the hope of the gift which is yet to come to us, from a miracle whereof we already feel the fruits. Thus let every one that is faithful, having already received so much, learn to hope for that which is promised, on the ground of that which he knoweth to have been given, and hold the goodness of God in times which have been, and times which now are, as a sure pledge of the same in times to come.

Fifth Lesson.

AN earthly Body, then, is now lifted up above the heights of heaven: the Bones, Which but a little while before had lain within the narrow walls of the grave, have made their entry among the angelic hosts; human nature hath been given a place in the lap of immortality; and therefore the Apostle whose account we have heard read, saith: "When He had spoken these things, while they beheld, He was taken up." (Acts i. 9.) While thou hearest these words, "taken up," thou must understand thereby the ministry of the angelic army: whereby this Festival revealeth to us the Mystery of Him Who is both God and Man. United in One Person, we see in Him Who lifted up, Divine Power, and in Him Who was lifted up, very Man.

Sixth Lesson.

THEREFORE are utterly to be loathed those pestiferous teachings of Eastern falsehood, those brand-new inventions of ungodliness[1] which dare to assert that He Who in One Person is both Son of God and Son of Man, hath but one nature. On the one hand, if a man say that Christ is not Partaker of the Divine nature, he hath denied the glory of his Maker; on the other, he who saith that the Manhood is not of the nature of man, hath denied the mercy of his Saviour. As touching these points, it is well-nigh impossible for an Arian to believe that the Gospel writers are any better than liars, since they distinctly assert in some places that the Son of God is equal, and, in others, that He is inferior, to the Father. Farther, if a man be given over to this soul-slaying delusion of believing that our Saviour hath only one nature, he must of necessity admit either that it was only God, or that it was only man who was crucified. But it was not so. If He had been of no nature but the Divine, He could not have suffered, and if He had been of no nature but the human, He could not have conquered death.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark (xvi. 14.)

AT that time: JESUS appeared unto the eleven disciples as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart; because they believed not them which had seen Him after He was risen. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Same as before.)

The Prophet Habakkuk also hath spoken of the glory of Christ's Ascension in the words: "The sun was lifted up on high, and the moon stood still in her habitation," (iii. 10, 11.) [2] Who is here signified by the Sun, if not the Saviour? or by the Moon, if not the Church? Until the Lord was withdrawn from her sight, (that is, by His Ascension,) His Holy Church was pale before the hostile glare of the world, but after He was ascended, she waxed stronger, and distinctly shed forth the beams of that faith which had hitherto dwelt hiddenly in her. "The sun was lifted up, and the moon stood still in her habitation;" when the Lord was gone away into heaven, His holy Church waxed stronger in her enlightening power.

Eighth Lesson.

HENCE it is that Solomon hath put into the mouth of the (same) Church the words: "Behold, He cometh! leaping upon the mountains, skipping upon the hills!" (Cant. ii. 8.)[3] These hills are his lofty and noble achievements. "Behold, He cometh! leaping upon the mountains!" When He came to redeem us, He came, if I may so say, in leaps. My dearly beloved brethren, would you know what His leaps were? From heaven he leapt into the womb of the Virgin, from the womb into the manger, from the manger on to the Cross, from the Cross into the grave, and from the grave up to heaven. Lo, how the Truth made manifest in the Flesh did leap for our sakes, that He might draw us to run after Him; for this end did He "rejoice, as a strong man to run a race," (Ps. xviii. 6,) that we might passionately say: "Draw us after Thee; we will run after the savour of Thine ointments." (Cant. i. 3.)

Ninth Lesson.

THEREFORE, dearly beloved brethren, it behoveth us in heart and mind thither to ascend, where we believe Him to have already ascended bodily. Let us fly earthly lusts: for us, who have a Father in heaven, let nothing be sweet below! And very much must we keep in our minds this thought, that He Which ascended up in peace, will return in dreadful Majesty; and will require from us with justice an account of our keeping of those commandments which He gave us in mercy. Let no man therefore reckon lightly this season which is given unto us that we may repent ourselves, nor be reckless touching the state of his soul; our Redeemer will be all the sterner, when He cometh to judgment, as He hath been wondrously long-suffering before.

[2] As this passage stands in the Hebrew original, in the authorised Latin version used by the Church, and in the Roman Breviary itself (Lauds for Friday, p. 88), it is "the deep uttered his voice, he lifted up his hands" (i.e., waves) "on high. The sun and moon stood still in their habitation, &c., &c."

[3] Remember that the Bride is here comparing her Lover to a gazelle or roe.

At Vespers no Commemoration is made of the next day's Office.[1]

On the two next days the Office is said as within the Octave of the Ascension, except the Lessons which are assigned to each day, the Eighth Responsory, the Antiphons at the Song of Zacharias and at the Song of the Blessed Virgin, and the Prayer, which are taken from the Sunday within the Octave of the Ascension—i.e., the preceding Sunday.

The Prayers at Prime and Compline are omitted.

Should a Feast of Nine Lessons fall on the morrow—Friday, the Office will be of that Feast with a Commemoration of the Friday, unless the Feast be a Double of the First or Second Class, in which case the Commemoration is omitted.

Friday after the Octave of the Ascension.

Sixth Day.

If a Double or Semidouble Feast fall on this day, the Office is of it, with a Commemoration of the Week-day, unless the said Feast be a greater Double or higher.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Third Epistle of the Blessed Apostle John[2] (I.)

THE Elder unto the well-beloved Gaius, whom I love in the truth. Beloved, I pray that in all things thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth. I rejoiced greatly when the brethren came, and testified of the truth that is in thee, even as thou walkest in the truth. I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth.

Second Lesson.

BELOVED, thou doest faithfully whatsoever thou doest to the brethren, and to strangers, which have borne witness of thy charity before the Church; whom if thou bring forward on their journey after a godly sort, thou shalt do well: because that for His Name's sake they went forth, taking nothing of the Gentiles. We therefore ought to receive such, that we may be fellow-helpers to the truth. I would perchance have written to the Church; but Diotrephes, who loveth to have the pre-eminence among them, receiveth us not. Wherefore, if I come, I will rebuke his deeds which he doeth, prating against us with malicious words: and, not content therewith, neither doth he himself receive the brethren, and forbiddeth them that do, and casteth them out of the Church.

Third Lesson.

BELOVED, follow not that which is evil, but that which is good. He that doeth good, is of God: he that doeth evil hath not seen God. Demetrius hath good report of all men, and of the truth itself; yea, and we also bear record, and thou knowest that our record is true. I had many things to write unto thee: but I would not with ink and pen write unto thee. But I trust I shall shortly see thee, and we shall speak face to face. Peace be to thee. The friends salute thee. Greet the friends by name.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Same as before.)

DEARLY beloved brethren, if the Flesh wherein our Saviour trampled down the devil had not been of our nature, He would indeed have exercised Himself, but he would not have conquered for us. If the Body wherein He rose from the grave had not been of our nature, His Resurrection would not have affected our state. Whoso asserteth this, that Christ hath but one nature, he doth not understand why Christ took Flesh upon Him, he confoundeth the order, and maketh void the benefit of the Incarnation. If the Flesh wherein our Healer came was not sharer in human nature, then all that by His Birth He took from man would have been degradation. O may such dangerous dreams be far from our thoughts! What He took is ours, what He gave is His. I testify that the first Adam, who fell, and the second Adam, Who rose from the dead, are both of the same human nature that I am of. I testify that What lay in the grave, and What ascended into heaven, is of the same human nature that I am of.

Fifth Lesson.

IT was therefore just because His Body was of our nature, that Christ's Death hath quickened us, His Resurrection raised us up, His Ascension sanctified us. It was just because His Body was of our nature, that His Presence in the heavenly kingdoms is a pledge that we also shall one day be there. Let us therefore strive, dearly beloved brethren, since the Lord hath on this day gone up on high in a Body of our nature, ourselves, as far as we can, to ascend thither in hope, to follow Him with our heart. Let us ascend to Him in love, and speed keeping pace with love, even by our very sins and passions. If every one of us would strive to get above them, and accustom himself to tread on them, he might make of even them a stepping-stone to mount to higher things. Such things lift us up if they are underneath us.

Sixth Lesson.

WE make our vices a ladder, if we tread them down. With the Author of goodness there ascended no spite; with the Son of the Virgin, no lust or sensuality. I say vices do not follow to heaven the Father of perfection, sin the Holy One of God, neither weakness nor disease the Divine Healer. If therefore we would enter into the kingdom of that Healer, we must first take heed to our sores. We must so order and guard in us the mutual relations of our soul and body, that the soul, the nobler part of man, may not be dragged down to hell by her grovelling companion, but may rather, being herself of a nature more glorious, bear with her to heaven at the last a sanctified body, by the help of Him Who liveth and reigneth for ever and ever. Amen.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xv. 25.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: When the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, Which proceedeth from the Father, He shall testify of Me. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (92*nd Tract on John.*)

Upon the day of Pentecost the Holy Ghost came down upon a congregation of an hundred and twenty men, among whom were all the Apostles. These men, after they had been filled with the Spirit, began to speak with the tongues of all nations, and many of the bystanders, amazed at the marvel, when they saw in the discourse of Peter, how great and how Divine a witness was borne to the fact that the Christ, Whom they had murdered, and Whom they reckoned among the dead, had risen again and was alive, many of these bystanders were pricked in their heart (Acts ii. 37) and were converted. They received pardon from that noble Blood, Which they had so sacrilegiously and so brutally shed, seeing that that Blood had redeemed even Its Own out-pourers.

Eighth Lesson.

THE Blood of Christ "Which is shed for many for the remission of sins" (Math. xxvi. 28) was so effectually shed, that It could remit even the very sin that shed It. Toward this looked the Lord when He said: "They hated Me without a cause; but when the Comforter is come, Whom I will send unto you from the Father, He shall testify of Me." This was as though He had said: They have hated Me and slain Me while they see Me, but when they shall see Me no more, the Comforter shall bear such testimony of Me, as will compel them to believe in Me. "And ye also," saith He, "shall bear witness, because ye have been with Me from the beginning,"—the Holy Ghost shall bear witness, and ye also shall bear witness. "Because ye have been with Me from the beginning," ye are able to speak that ye do know, (John iii. 11,) which ye do not now, while as yet the fulness of the Spirit is not come upon you.

Eighth Responsory.

For if I go not away, &c., (p. 396.)

Ninth Lesson.

"HE shall testify of Me; and ye also shall bear witness" when "the love of God is shed abroad in" your "hearts by the Holy Ghost Which" shall be "given unto" you, (Rom. v. 5,) and maketh you not ashamed to lift up your testimony. This love had not been so shed abroad in Peter's heart when he was frightened by the questioning of the maid-servant, and could not bear witness to the truth, but brake his promise, and was driven by strong fear to deny Christ thrice. "There is no" such "fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear." Before the Passion of the Lord, Peter's slavish fear was questioned by a bondwoman; but after the Resurrection of the Lord, his free love was asked by the very Prince of freedom, (John xxi. 15—17;) and therefore the first questioning shook him, but under the second he was at peace: at the first he denied Him Whom he had loved; at the second he loved Him Whom he had denied. But, even so, his love was weak and narrow, until the Holy Ghost had strengthened and widened it.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Catholic Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Jude[1] (1.)

JUDE, the servant of JESUS Christ, and brother of James, to them that are beloved in God the Father and preserved in JESUS Christ, and called. Mercy unto you, and peace, and love be multiplied. Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of your common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and to exhort you that you should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the Saints. For there are certain men crept in unawares, (who were before of old ordained to this condemnation,) ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Sovereign and our Lord JESUS Christ.

Second Lesson.

I WILL therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, how that JESUS,[2] having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not: and the Angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, He hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day. Even as Sodom and Gomorrha, and the cities about them, in like manner giving themselves over to uncleanness and going after strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire. Likewise also, these defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities.

[1] The cousin of the Lord. Oct. 28.

[2] The accepted Greek and the Sinaitic MS. read "the Lord." Abp. Kenrick says, "the Apostle ascribes to JESUS Christ the deliverance of the Israëlites, and the punishment of the unbelieving murmurers."

Third Lesson.

YET Michaël the Archangel, when, contending with the devil, he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him the judgment of his blasphemy, but said: The Lord rebuke thee.[1] But these speak evil of those things which they know not: but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves. Woe unto them, for they have gone the way of Cain, and run greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Korah. These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you without fear, feeding themselves; clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees which wither, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots; raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Treatise upon the Creed, addressed to Catechumens by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Bk. iv. ch. I. tom. 9.)

YE are yet the unborn offspring of a great Mother. Our Holy Mother the Church hath by the most sacred sign of the Cross[2] received you into her womb, and from thence she is now just about to bring you forth, as she hath already brought forth your brethren, with thrills of spiritual joy. But until, through the washing of regeneration, she bringeth you forth into true light, she feedeth you in her womb with such food as becometh your condition, and in gladness matureth her children for the glad moment of her delivery. This Mother is not stricken by the doom of Eve, to bring forth children in sorrow, (Gen. iii. 16,) and they themselves oftenertimes weeping than laughing. Rather doth your spiritual Mother annul the sentence of your earthly; Eve, by disobedience, endowed her offspring with death; the Church, by obedience, giveth them newness of life. All the mystic prayers and ceremonies which have been and are still being performed over you by the ministry of the servants of God, exorcisms, prayers, spiritual songs, onbreathings, haircloth, prostrations, baring of the feet, the dread which ye feel, albeit so safe, —all these things, I say unto you, are the nourishment which ye are drawing from your Mother while yet ye are in her womb, that at the baptismal birth she may be able to present you strong and laughing babes unto Christ.

Fifth Lesson.

YE have also received the Creed, which is the shield of the travailing Mother against the venom of the dragon. In the Apocalypse of the Apostle John (xii. 4) it is written: "And the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as soon as it was born." That this dragon is the devil ye all know. Ye know likewise that by the woman is signified the Virgin Mary, who, herself a Virgin, bore our Virgin Head, and who is revealed unto us as a type of the Holy Church, in that, even as Mary, though she bore a Son, remained a Virgin, so the Church doth in all times give birth to all her members, and yet is ever presented a chaste virgin to Christ. (2 Cor. xi. 2.) I have undertaken, with the help of the Lord, to expound every clause of the Creed, that I may bring home to your understandings what each containeth. Your hearts are ready, for the enemy hath been shut out of your hearts.

Sixth Lesson.

YE have made profession of renouncing the enemy. At the moment of that profession it was not before men only, but in the presence of God and His Angels that ye said: "I do renounce him." Renounce him, not only in your words, but in your ways; not only with your voices, but with your lives; not only with your lips, but in your works. Know ye well that the wrestling which ye have undertaken is a strife with an enemy who is subtle, and old, and patient: now that ye have once renounced him, let him never again find in you his works; never again give him the right to bring you into bondage. O Christian! thou wilt be caught and exposed, if thou dost one thing and professest another; if thou art faithful in name, and makest it to be evident by thy works that thou hast broken the faith pledged by this promise; if some while thou goest into a church to pray, and anon to the shows to join in applauding obscene representations. What hast thou to do any more with the pomps of the devil, which thou hast renounced?

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xiv. 15.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: If ye love Me, keep My commandments. And I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (74th and 75th Tracts on John.)

By these words of the Lord—"I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter"—He doth imply that Himself is a Comforter. The Greek word used, namely "Paraklétos," signifieth also an Advocate, and is used in that sense where it is written: "We have an Advocate —Parakléton—with the Father, JESUS Christ the Righteous." (1 John ii. 1.)

"Even the Spirit of truth, Whom the world cannot receive," "because," as we read elsewhere (Rom. viii. 7) "the carnal mind is enmity against

[1] The Targum of Jonathan ben Uzziel mentions the presence of St Michaël at the death of Moses, and the Midrash Rabbah has a great quantity of tradition regarding that event, the presence of St Michaël at it, and the mutual hostility of him and Sammael, "the wickedest of the Satans," on the occasion, but the present translator has not succeeded in discovering the precise legend quoted by St Jude. Cf. Zech. iii. 2.

[2] Remember that this discourse is supposed to be addressed about midnight to the Catechumens who are to be baptized the ensuing afternoon. The last stage of initiation before actual baptism had taken place; they had heard the Creed for the first time. The allusions to ceremonies will be explained by reading the Offices of Baptism.

God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can it be"—as we may say plainly: nothing can make unrighteousness righteous. By "the world," in this place, we must understand the lovers of the world, a love which cometh not of the Father. And therefore it is that this love of the world, which we strive to lessen and to destroy in ourselves, is contrary to "the love of God, which is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." (Rom. v. 5.)

Eighth Lesson.

"THE Spirit of truth; Whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him"—for to love the world is to lack those spiritual eyes, which are able to see Him Who is invisible, the Holy Ghost.

"But ye know Him," saith the Lord to His disciples, "for He shall dwell with you, and shall be in you." He will be in them to dwell in them, not dwell in them to be in them: for one must first be in a place before one dwell there. But lest the Apostles should think that the words, "He shall dwell with you," signified that He should visibly abide with them for a while, as do guests in the houses of men, the Lord saith in explanation: "He shall be in you."

Eighth Responsory.

For if I go not away, &c., (p. 396.)

Ninth Lesson.

THEREFORE is He seen That is invisible. If He were not in us we could have in us no knowledge of Him: but He is seen in us, as we see our conscience. We see the faces of other men, but we cannot see our own; but of consciences we see none save that within ourselves. But our conscience is never elsewhere but within us; whereas the Holy Ghost may be without us, as well as within us. He is given to be within us, and, unless He be within us, we can neither see nor know Him, either within or without us.

Then, after that He had promised the Holy Ghost, the Lord, lest they should deem that He was to give them that other Comforter instead of Himself, and that He Himself was to be no longer with them, said also: "I will not leave you orphans; I will come to you." Therefore, although the Son of God hath made us by adoption sons of His Own Father, and hath willed that the Same Who is His Father by nature should be our Father by grace, nevertheless, He showeth that Himself hath toward us a love as of a Father, where He saith: "I will not leave you orphans."

COME, Holy Ghost, Creator, come,
From Thy bright heavenly throne!
Come, take possession of our souls,
And make them all Thine Own!

Thou Who art called the Paraclete,
Best Gift of God above,
The Living Spring, the Living Fire,
Sweet Unction, and True Love!

Thou Who art seven-fold in Thy grace,
Finger of God's right Hand,
His Promise, teaching little ones
To speak and understand!

O guide our minds with Thy blest light—
With love our hearts inflame—
And with Thy strength which ne'er decays
Confirm our mortal frame.

Far from us drive our hellish foe—
True peace unto us bring—
And through all perils guide us safe
Beneath Thy sacred wing.

Through Thee may we the Father know—
Through Thee the Eternal Son—
And Thee the Spirit of them Both—
Thrice-blessèd Three in One.

All glory to the Father be,
And to the Risen Son;
The same to Thee, O Paraclete,
While endless Ages run. Amen.

Hymn.[6]

ABOVE the starry spheres
To where He was before
Christ had gone up, soon from on high
The Father's Gift to pour;

And now had fully come,
On mystic circle borne
Of seven times seven revolving days,
The Pentecostal morn:

When, as the Apostles knelt
At the third hour in prayer,
A sudden rushing sound proclaimed
The God of glory near.

Forthwith a tongue of fire
Alights on every brow;
Each breast receives the Father's Light,
The Word's enkindling glow.

The Holy Ghost on all
Is mightily outpoured;
Who straight in divers tongues declare
The wonders of the Lord.

While strangers of all climes
Flock round from far and near,
And with amazement, each at once
Their native accents hear.

But, faithless still, the Jews
Deny the hand Divine;
And madly jeer the Saints of Christ,
As drunk with new-made wine.

Till Peter in the midst
Stood up, and spake aloud;
And their perfidious falsity
By Joel's witness showed.

Praise to the Father be!
Praise to the Son Who rose!
Praise to the Holy Paraclete!
While age on ages flows. Amen.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xiv. 23.)

AT that time: Jesus said unto His disciples: If a man love Me, He will keep My word, and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (30*th on the Gospels.*)

Dearly beloved brethren, our best way will be to run briefly through the words which have been read from the Holy Gospel, and thereafter rest for a while quietly gazing upon the solemn subject of this great Festival. This is the day whereon "suddenly there came a sound from heaven," and the Holy Ghost descended upon the Apostles, and, for fleshly minds, gave them minds wherein the love of God was shed abroad; and, while without "there appeared unto them cloven tongues, like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them," within, their hearts were enkindled. While they received the visible presence of God in the form of fire, the flames of His love enwrapped them. The Holy Ghost Himself is love; whence it is that John (I. iv. 8) saith: "God is love." Whosoever therefore loveth God with all his soul, already hath obtained Him Whom he loveth; for no man is able to love God, if He have not gained Him Whom he loveth.

First Responsory.

[1] When the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place—Alleluia—and suddenly there came a sound from heaven—Alleluia—as of a mighty rushing wind, and it filled all the house—Alleluia, Alleluia.

Answer. As of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house—Alleluia, Alleluia.

Second Blessing.

Second Lesson.

BUT, behold, now, if I shall ask any one of you whether he loveth God, he will answer with all boldness and quietness of spirit: "I do love him." But at the very beginning of this day's Lesson from the Gospel, ye have heard what the Truth saith: "If a man love Me, he will keep My word." The test, then, of love, is whether it is showed by works. Hence the same John hath said in his Epistle (I. iv. 20, v. 3:) "If a man say, I love God, and keepeth not His commandments, He is a liar." Then do we indeed love God, and keep His commandments, if we deny ourselves the gratification of our appetites. Whosoever still wandereth after unlawful desires, such an one plainly loveth not God, for he saith, Nay, to that which God willeth.

Second Responsory.

[3] They were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak, as the Holy Ghost gave them utterance, and the multitude came together, saying: Alleluia.
Verse. The Apostle spake in divers tongues the wonderful works of God.
Answer. And the multitude came together, saying: Alleluia.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. And the multitude came together, saying: Alleluia.

Third Blessing.

Third Lesson.

"AND My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him." O my dearly beloved brethren, think what a dignity is that, to have God abiding as a guest in our heart! Surely if some rich man or some powerful friend were to come into our house, we would hasten to have our whole house cleaned, lest, perchance, when he came in, he should see aught to displease his eye. So let him that would make his mind an abode for God, cleanse it from all the filth of works of iniquity. Lo, again, what saith the Truth? "We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him." There are some hearts whereunto God cometh, but maketh not His abode therein; with a certain pricking they feel His Presence, but in time of temptation they forget that which hath pricked them: and so they turn again to work unrighteousness, even as though they had never repented.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

Hymn.[2]

ROUND roll the weeks our hearts to greet,
With blissful joy returning;
For lo! the Holy Paraclete
On twelve[3] bright brows sits burning:
With quivering flame He lights on each,
In fashion like a tongue, to teach
That eloquent they are of speech,
Their hearts with true love yearning.

While with all tongues they speak to all,
The nations deem them maddened;
And drunk with wine the Prophets call,
Whom God's good Spirit gladdened;
A marvel this—in mystery done—
The holy Paschal-tide[4] outrun,
By numbers told whose reckoning won
Remission for the saddened.[5]

O God most holy, Thee we pray
With reverent brow low bending,
Grant us the Spirit's gifts to-day,—
The gifts from heaven descending;
And since Thy grace hath deigned to bide
Within our breasts once sanctified,
Deign, Lord, to cast our sins aside,
Henceforth calm seasons sending.

To God the Father, laud and praise,
Praise to the Son be given;
Praise to the Spirit of all grace,
The Fount of graces seven—
As was of old, all worlds before,
Is now, and shall be evermore,
When time and change are spent and o'er,—

Chapter. (Acts ii. 11.)

JEWS also, and Proselytes, Cretes and Arabians, we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God.

[1] Dan. iii. 77, 79. An allusion to the Baptisms on the Eve.

[2] Hymn generally ascribed to St Hilary of Poictiers (died A.D. 369); translation by the Rev. W. J. Blew.

[3] Paraclitus illapsus est Apostolis. The apparently pointed omission of any mention of the Blessed Virgin, the brethren of the Lord, and others who were present, (Acts i. 14, 15; ii. 1,) is to be ascribed, not to the original poet, but to some modern recensor. The original text, (as preserved in the Monastic Breviary,) reads: "Paraclitus effulsit in discipulos."

[4] Paschæ peracto tempore. By this must be here understood, not what we call Paschaltide, but the days of the "numbering of the Omer," by which the Feast of Pentecost (or Weeks) is reckoned from that of the Passover. (Lev. xxiii. 15, 16; Deut. xvi. 9, 10.)

[5] Lege fit remissio. The allusion is very obscure, but is perhaps to the fact that the year of Jubilee was attained by the same calculation, viz., 7×7+1, as the day of Pentecost.

[6] Acts ii. 4.

[7] John xx. 22, 23.

Short Responsory.

They were all filled with the Holy Ghost—Alleluia, Alleluia.

Answer. They were all filled with the Holy Ghost—Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. And began to speak.

Answer. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. They were all filled with the Holy Ghost—Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. The Apostle spake in divers tongues—Alleluia.

Answer. The wonderful works of God—Alleluia.

SECOND VESPERS.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (iii. 16.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto Nicodemus: God so loved the world that He gave His Only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (12th Tract on John.)

The Physician cometh that, as far as in him lieth, he may heal the sick man. He is his own destroyer who will not keep the commandments of the Physician. Into the world came the Saviour. Why is He called the Saviour of the world but because He came "into the world not to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved"? If thou willest not be saved through Him, thou wilt be condemned of thyself. And why say I that thou wilt be condemned? Because it is written: "He that believeth in Him is not condemned." What then canst thou hope that He will say of "him that believeth not," but that He will be condemned? And indeed He doth say farther: "He that believeth not is condemned already." He is condemned already, though the condemnation be not yet openly pronounced.

First Responsory.

[1] Henceforth I call you not servants, but I have called you My friends: because ye have known all things, whatsoever I have done among you. Alleluia. Receive ye the Holy Ghost, Who is your Comforter within you: the Same is He Whom the Father will send unto you. Alleluia.

Verse. Ye are My friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you.

Answer. Receive ye the Holy Ghost Who is your Comforter within you: the Same is He Whom the Father will send unto you. Alleluia.

Second Lesson.

HE is condemned already, for "the Lord knoweth them that are His." (2 Tim. ii. 19.) He knoweth them for whom is laid up the crown, and likewise them that are reserved unto the fire. His eye seeth in the field of the world the distinction of the wheat and of the straw, of the grain and of the tares. "He that believeth not is condemned already." And why? "Because he hath not believed in the Name of the Only-begotten Son of God. And this is the condemnation; that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil." "Because their deeds were evil;" but, my brethren, is there one man of whom God findeth that his works are good? No, not one. God findeth all works to be [in themselves] bad. How then do we hear that some there be who do truth, and come to the light? For these words come anon: "But he that doeth truth, cometh to the light."

Second Responsory.

The Holy Ghost, Which proceedeth from the Throne, entered unseen into the hearts of the Apostles, with a new token of sanctification, even that all manner of tongues should spring to their lips. Alleluia.

Verse. The fire of God fell, not to burn them, but to enlighten them, and gave them gifts of grace.

Answer. That all manner of tongues should spring to their lips. Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. That all manner of tongues should spring to their lips. Alleluia.

Third Lesson.

BUT the Lord saith [of such as these, who are condemned already, because they believe not in Him]: "They loved darkness rather than light." And here He maketh the great point [of difference between such, and them that do the truth.] There are many who have loved their sins: there are many who have confessed their sins; and he that confesseth and denounceth his sin, is working already with God. God denounceth thy sins, and if thou denounce them likewise, then dost thou join thyself with God in His act. The man and the sinner are two different things. God made the man, and the man made the sinner. Put away thy work, and God will save His. Thou art behoven to hate in thyself thine own work, and to love God's work. When thine own works begin to displease thee, then is it that thou beginnest to do well, because thou denouncest thine own evil works. The first thing to do, if thou wouldest do good works, is to acknowledge thine evil ones.

LAUDS.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. God so loved the world that He gave His Only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life. Alleluia.

Prayer throughout the day.

O GOD, Who didst give Thine Holy Spirit unto Thine Apostles, grant unto Thy people the effectual fruit of their godly supplications, and as Thou hast given them faith, give them also peace. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Same Holy Ghost, One God, world without end. Amen.

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [1] If a Man love Me, he will keep My word: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him. Alleluia.

MATTINS.

Verse. The Comforter, Who is the Holy Ghost—Alleluia.
Answer. He shall teach you all things—Alleluia.

Absolution. May His loving-kindness, &c.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (x. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto the Pharisees: Amen, amen, I say unto you, he that entereth not by the door into the sheep-fold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber: but he that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (45th Tract on John.)

In the words of the Gospel which are this day read, the Lord hath spoken unto us in similitudes, touching His flock, and the Door whereby entry is made into their fold. The Pagans therefore may say, "We live good lives," but if they enter not in by the Door, what doth that profit them whereof they make their boast? A good life is profitable to a man if it lead unto life everlasting, but if he is not to have life everlasting, what shall his good life profit him? Neither indeed can it be truly said that they live good lives, who are either so blinded as not to know, or so puffed up as to despise, the end of a good life. And no man can have a true and certain hope of life everlasting, unless he know the true Life, Which is Christ, and enter in by that Door into the sheepfold.

First Responsory.

There appeared unto the Apostles cloven tongues, like as of fire—Alleluia.
Answer. And the Holy Ghost sat upon each of them—Alleluia, Alleluia.
Verse. And they began to speak with other tongues, as the Holy Ghost gave them utterance.
Answer. And the Holy Ghost sat upon each of them. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Second Lesson.

THERE are many such, who try to persuade men to live good lives but not to be Christians. These are they who would fain "climb up some other way," "for to kill and to destroy," and are not as the Good Shepherd, Who is come to keep and to save. There have been philosophers who have treated many subtle questions of right and wrong, who have been the authors of many distinctions and definitions, who have completed many exceedingly clever arguments, who have filled many books, and have proclaimed their own wisdom with braying trumpets. These dared to say to men: "Follow us; embrace our school of thought, and you will find therein the secret of an happy life." But these were not of them who enter in by the Door; they came not but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy.

Second Responsory.

The Apostles spake in divers tongues the wonderful works of God; as the Holy Ghost gave them utterance—Alleluia.
Verse. They were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak—
Answer. As the Holy Ghost gave them utterance. Alleluia.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. As the Holy Ghost gave them utterance. Alleluia.

Third Lesson.

TOUCHING these, what shall I say? Behold, the Pharisees themselves read of Christ, and therefore talked of Christ; they looked for His coming, and when He came, they knew Him not. They boasted that they themselves were among the Seers, that is, of the wise ones, and they denied Christ, and entered not in by the Door. Therefore they, if they led away any, led them away only to kill and to destroy, not to free them. So much for them.

Now let us see if all they who boast the name of Christian enter in by the Door.

Some there are, and their number cannot be reckoned, who not only boast that they themselves are among the Seers, but would fain appear as though their hearts were enlightened by Christ—but they are heretics.

LAUDS.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. [2] I am the Door, saith the Lord; by Me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall find pasture. Alleluia.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (vi. 44.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto the multitudes of the Jews: No man can come to Me, except the Father, Which hath sent me, draw him. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (26*th Tract on John.*)

Think not that thou art drawn against thy will: the soul is drawn, not willingly only, but lovingly. Neither must we be afraid lest men who are great weighers of words, and very far from understanding the things of God, should catch us up upon this Gospel doctrine of the Holy Scriptures, and should say to us: How can my faith be willing if I am drawn? I answer: Thou art not drawn as touching thy will, but by pleasure. And, now, what is being drawn by pleasure? "Delight thyself in the LORD, and He shall give thee the desires of thine heart." (Ps. xxxvi. 4.) There is pleasure in that heart to which the Bread That came down from heaven is sweet. The poet is allowed to say—but pleasure, which so draweth, is not a necessity, not a bond, but a delight; how much more strongly, may we say, that men are drawn to Christ, who delight in truth, who delight in blessedness, who delight in righteousness, who delight in life everlasting, since truth, and blessedness, and righteousness, and everlasting life are all to be found in Christ? Or have the bodily senses pleasure, and the spiritual senses none? If the spiritual senses have no pleasures, wherefore is it written: "And the children of men shall put their trust under the shadow of Thy wings. They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of Thy house, and Thou shalt make them drink of the river of Thy pleasures. For with Thee is the fountain of life, and in Thy light shall we see light." (Ps. xxxv. 8.)

> "His special pleasure draweth each,"

First Responsory.

The Lord taught them good judgment and knowledge—Alleluia. He established in them the grace of His Spirit, and filled their hearts with understanding. Alleluia.

Verse. For with a sudden sound the Holy Ghost came upon them,—

Answer. And filled their hearts with understanding. Alleluia.

Second Lesson.

GIVE me a lover, and he will catch my meaning; give me a longer, give me an hungerer, give me a wanderer in this desert, athirst and gasping for the fountains of the eternal Fatherland; give me such an one, and he will catch my meaning. If I talk to some cold creature, he will not. Such cold creatures were they of whom it is written: "The Jews then murmured at Him because He said, I am the Bread Which came down from heaven. And they said: Is not this JESUS the son of Joseph, whose father and Mother we know? How is it then that He saith, I came down from heaven? JESUS therefore answered and said unto them: Murmur not among yourselves. No man can come to Me, except the Father, Which hath sent Me, draw him." (41-44.) But wherefore speaketh Christ of them whom the Father draweth, since He Himself draweth? Why was it His will to say: "No man can come to Me except the Father draw him"? If we are to be drawn, let us be drawn by Him to Whom one that loved much said: "Draw me, we will run after the savour of Thy good ointments." (Cant. i. 4.) But let us consider, my brethren, what He meant, and understand it as well as we can. The Father draweth to the Son them who believe in the Son, because they are persuaded that He hath God to His Father. God the Father begetteth to Himself a co-equal Son; and whosoever is persuaded, and realiseth unto himself by faith, and thinketh, that He in Whom he believeth is equal to the Father, him the Father is drawing unto the Son.

Second Responsory.

[2] Go ye unto all the world and preach the Gospel—Alleluia. He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved. Alleluia, Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. In My Name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents.

Answer. He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved. Alleluia, Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved. Alleluia, Alleluia, Alleluia.

Third Lesson.

ARIUS, who believed that the Son was made, was not one of them whom the Father draweth; since whosoever believeth not that the Father is a Father by the begetting of a co-equal Son, such an one knoweth not the Father. What sayest thou, O Arius? What sayest thou, O thou heretic? What is thy profession? What is Christ? "He is not," saith

---

[1] John xiv. 27.

[2] Mark xvi. 15, 16, 17.

Arius, "Himself Very God." Then, O Arius, the Father hath not drawn thee; thou hast not understood His dignity as a Father, to Whom thou deniest His Son. Thou dost deny the existence of the Son of God, the Father draweth thee not, and thou art not drawn to the Son, since the Son of whom thou speakest is another son, [existing only in thine imagination,] and not the really existent Son. Photinus said: "Christ is a mere man, and not God at all." He who uttered those words was not one of them whom the Father draweth. But whom hath the Father drawn? The Father drew him who said: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." (Matth. xvi. 16, 17.) Show a sheep a green bough, and thou drawest him. Let a boy see some nuts, and he is drawn by them. As they run, they are drawn, drawn by taste, drawn without bodily hurt, drawn by a line bound to their heart. If, then, among earthly things, such as be sweet and pleasant draw such as love them, as soon as they see them, so that it is truth to say,

> "His special pleasure draweth each,"

doth not that Christ, Whom the Father hath revealed, draw? What stronger object of love can a soul have than the Truth?

LAUDS.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. [1] I am the Living Bread * Which came down from heaven, saith the Lord. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Prayer throughout the day.

O LORD, we beseech Thee that the Comforter, Which proceedeth from Thee, may enlighten our minds, and lead us into all truth, even as Thy Son hath promised unto us. Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Same Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [1] I am the Living Bread Which came down from heaven: * if any man eat of this Bread, he shall live for ever; and the Bread that I will give is My Flesh, Which I will give for the life of the world. Alleluia.

Thursday.

Fifth Day within the Octave of Pentecost.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (ix. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS called His twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. vi. on Luke ix.)

We learn from the commandments of the Gospel what manner of men they ought to be who preach the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. "Take nothing for your journey; neither staves nor scrip, neither bread, neither money." Thus let the Apostle, destitute of earthly help, and panoplied in faith, deem himself able to do all the more, as he needeth all the less. Such as please may also put upon these words a spiritual interpretation; in that a man may be said to lay aside the encumbrances of the body, not only by abdicating power, and casting away riches, but also by denying the very body itself its pleasures. The first general commandment given to the Apostles touching their manners was to be bringers of peace, (Matth. x. 13,) and to be no gadders about, but keepers of the laws of guests. To wander from house to house, and to abuse the rights of hospitality, are things alien to a preacher of the kingdom of heaven.

First Responsory.

The fire of God fell, not to burn them, but to enlighten them; not to devour them, but to illuminate them: and found the hearts of the disciples clean vessels. And He gave them gifts of His grace. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. He found them one in love, and the out-poured grace of the Godhead shone through them.

Answer. And He gave them gifts of His grace. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Second Lesson.

BUT as the kindness of hospitality is to be met with courtesy, so also is it said: "Whosoever will not receive you, when ye go out of that city, shake off the very dust from your feet, for a testimony against them." Hereby is it taught that hospitality doth meet with a good reward, since not only do we bring peace to such as receive us, but also, if they be shadowed by some earthly vanities, these defects are taken away, where enter the feet of them that bear the glad tidings of Apostolic preachment. It is well written in Matthew (x. 11.)—"Into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, inquire who in it is worthy; and there abide till ye go thence"—thus avoiding any possible need of going from house to house. But no such selection is commanded to him that giveth hospitality, lest his hospitality itself should be lessened, while he picketh his guests.

Second Responsory.

The Holy Ghost filled all the house where the Apostles were; and there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak in divers tongues as the Holy Spirit gave them utterance. Alleluia, Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. When the disciples were all with one accord in one place, for fear of the Jews, suddenly there came a sound from heaven upon them.

Answer. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak in divers tongues as the Holy Spirit gave them utterance. Alleluia, Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

[1] John vi. 51.

Answer. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak in divers tongues, as the Holy Spirit gave them utterance. Alleluia, Alleluia, Alleluia.

Third Lesson.

THIS passage, taken according to the plain meaning, is a sacred commandment touching the religious duty of hospitality, but its heavenly words likewise hint at a mystery. When the house is chosen, it is asked if the master thereof be worthy. Let us see if this be not perchance a figure of the Church, and her Master, Christ. What worthier house can the Apostolic preacher enter, than the Holy Church? Or what host is more to be preferred before all others, than Christ, Whose use it is to wash the feet of His guests? yea, Who suffereth not that any whom He receiveth into His house should dwell there with foul feet, but, defiled as they are by their former wanderings, doth vouchsafe to change them into new and clean livers. He Alone is He, from Whose house no man ought ever to go forth, nor change His roof for any other shelter, for unto Him it is well said: "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life, and we believe." (John vi. 68, 69.)

LAUDS.

MATTINS.

Verse. The Comforter, Which is the Holy Ghost—Alleluia.

Answer. He shall teach you all things—Alleluia.

Absolution. May the loving-kindness, &c.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (v. 17.)

AT that time: It came to pass on a certain day, as JESUS sat and taught, that there were Pharisees, and Doctors of the law sitting by, which were come out of every town in Galilee, and Judæa and Jerusalem: and the power of the Lord was present to heal them. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. v. on Luke v.)

["And, behold, men brought in a bed a man which was taken with a palsy."] The healing of this paralytic was not idle, nor its fruits limited to himself. The Lord healed him, or ever he could ask, not because of the entreaties of others, but for example's sake. He gave a pattern to be followed, and sought not the intercession of prayer. In the presence of the Pharisees and doctors of the law, which were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judæa, and Jerusalem, many sick folk were healed, but among them is specially described the healing of this paralytic. First of all, as we have before said, every sick man ought to engage his friends to offer up prayers for his recovery, that so the tottering framework of this our life, and the distorted feet of our works, may be righted by the healing power of the word from heaven.

First Responsory.

[2] Ye have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you; that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. As My Father hath sent Me, even so send I you.

Answer. That ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Second Lesson.

THERE ought therefore to be advisers, who should rouse up the minds of the sick to higher things, since when the body becometh languid with sickness, the mind is apt to follow its example. With the help of such friends he can be brought and laid on the ground before the Feet of JESUS, and seem worthy of a glance from the Lord; for the Lord looketh upon such as lie lowly before Him,—"for He hath regarded the lowliness of His handmaiden" (Luke ii. 48.)

"And when He saw their faith, He said unto him: Man, thy sins are forgiven thee." Great is the Lord, Who, for the sake of some, forgiveth the sins of others: Who trieth some, and pardoneth the wanderings of others. Why should thine equal, O man, avail not with thee, if a slave have won power to intercede, and right to obtain, with God?

Second Responsory.

The Spirit of the Lord filleth the world, and That Which containeth all things hath knowledge of the voice. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. [3] For [Wisdom] is the worker of all things, having all power, overseeing all things.

Answer. And That Which containeth all things hath knowledge of the voice. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And That Which containeth all things hath knowledge of the voice. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Third Lesson.

O THOU that judgest, learn to forgive; thou that art sick, to pray. If thou doubt of the pardon of thy sins, because of their grievousness, get thee to the Church, that she may pray for thee, and that the Lord, accepting her countenance, may grant to her petitions what He refuses to thine. And although we are bound to accept this history as one of fact, and to believe that the body of the paralytic was healed; yet remember thou also his inward cure, unto whom his sins were forgiven. The Jews said: "Who can forgive sins but God alone?" And in these words they confessed the Godhead of Him Who forgave the sins of the paralytic, and themselves condemned their own unbelief in Him Whose work they acknowledged, but Whose Person they denied.

O be Thou near us when we wake;
And at the break of day,
With Thy blest touch arouse the soul,
Her meed of praise to pay.

To God the Father glory be,
And Sole, Eternal Son;
And glory, Holy Ghost, to Thee,
While endless ages run. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Be present, O One Almighty God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

Psalm VIII.

O LORD, our Ruler, &c., (p. 4.)

Second Antiphon. We acknowledge that Thou art One in Being, and Three in Persons.

Psalm XVIII.

The heavens declare, &c., (p. 10.)

Third Antiphon. We testify that Thy Being, Thy Life, and Thine Understanding are One and eternally unchangeable.

Psalm XXIII.

The earth is the LORD'S, &c., (p. 26.)

Verse. Bless we the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost.
Answer. Let us praise and exalt Him above all for ever.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Isaiah (vi. 1.)

IN the year that King Uzziah died, I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and His train filled the temple. Above it stood the [4] Seraphim; each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly. And one cried unto another, and said: Holy, Holy, Holy, is the LORD God of hosts; the whole earth is full of His glory. And the posts of the door moved at the voice of him that cried, and the house was filled with smoke.

First Responsory.

I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and the whole earth was full of His glory, and His train filled the temple.
Verse. Above it stood the Seraphim: each one had six wings.
Answer. And His train filled the temple.

[2] 1 Kings (Sam.) iii. 9.

[3] The original is taken, with alterations, from two Ambrosian hymns; translation by the Rev. E. Caswall.

[4] Or "burning ones."

Second Lesson.

THEN said I: Woe is me, for I am silent, because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips, and mine eyes have seen the King, the LORD of hosts. Then flew one of the Seraphim unto me, having a live coal in his hand, which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar. And he laid it upon my mouth, and said: Lo, this hath touched thy lips, and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged. Also I heard the voice of the Lord saying: Whom shall I send? and who will go for us? Then said I: Here am I; send me.

Second Responsory.

[1] Blessed be the LORD God of hosts, Who only doeth wondrous things. And blessed be His glorious Name for ever.

Verse. And let the whole earth be filled with His glory. Amen. Amen.

Answer. And blessed be His glorious Name for ever.

Third Lesson.

AND He said: Go, and tell this people: Hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not. Make the heart of this people dull, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes; lest haply they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them. Then said I: Lord, how long? And He answered: Until the cities be wasted without inhabitant, and the houses without man, and the land be utterly desolate: and the LORD shall remove man far away, and that which is left in the midst of the land shall increase.

Third Responsory.

[2] Let God, even our own God, bless us; let God bless us. And let all the ends of the earth fear Him.

Verse. God be merciful unto us, and bless us.

Answer. And let all the ends of the earth fear Him.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And let all the ends of the earth fear Him.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Upon Thee do we call, Thee do we praise, Thee do we worship, O Blessed Trinity!

Psalm XLVI.

O clap your hands, &c., (p. 55.)

Second Antiphon. Thou art our Hope, Thou art our Salvation, Thou art our glory, O Blessed Trinity!

Psalm XLVII.

Great is the LORD, &c., (p. 55.)

Third Antiphon. Be Thou our Deliverer, our Saviour, our Life-giver, O Blessed Trinity!

Psalm LXXI.

Give the King, &c., (p. 72.)

Verse. [3] Blessed art Thou, O Lord, in the firmament of heaven.

Answer. And above all to be praised and glorified for ever.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book on the Faith, addressed to Peter by St Fulgentius, Bishop [of Ruspa.] (Found in the Works of Augustine, tom. 3.)

THE Faith which the holy Patriarchs and Prophets received from God before His Son was made Flesh, the Faith which the holy Apostles heard from the Lord Himself when Present in the Flesh, the Faith which the same Apostles learnt by the teaching of the Holy Ghost not only to preach by word of mouth, but also to leave behind them in their writings for the healthful instruction of all that should come after, that Faith teacheth that the Trinity, that is to say, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, is but ONE GOD. But we could not truly call the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost a Trinity, if One and the Selfsame Person were named Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

Fourth Responsory.

[4] Who is so great a God as our God? Thou art the God that doest wonders.

Verse. Thou hast declared Thy strength among the people; Thou hast with Thine arm redeemed Thy people.

Answer. Thou art the God that doest wonders.

Fifth Lesson.

FOR if as the Being of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost is One Being, so were there but One Person, then were it untrue to say that God is a Trinity. On the other hand, if, as the Persons of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost are distinguished One from Another by that which is proper to Each, so were They diverse by difference of nature, then were it untrue to say that God is ONE. But since concerning the nature of the One True God, Who is a Trinity, it is the Truth to say that God is ONE, and the Truth to say that God is a Trinity, therefore the True God is a Trinity in Persons, and an Unity in nature.

Fifth Responsory.

To Thee be praise, to Thee be glory, to Thee be thanksgiving for ever and ever, O Blessed Trinity!

Verse. [5] And blessed is Thy glorious and Holy Name, and to be praised and exalted above all for ever.

Answer. O Blessed Trinity!

Sixth Lesson.

THROUGH this Oneness of nature All That the Father is is in the Son and the Holy Ghost, All That the Son is is in the Father and the Holy Ghost, and All That the Holy Ghost is is in the Father and the Son. Of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, None is without Other, None is before Other, None is Greater than Other, None is Mightier than Other. The Father, as touching the One Divine Nature, is neither before nor greater than the Son and the Holy Ghost: neither is it possible that the Eternity and Infinity of the Son, whether as before or greater, should be before or greater than the Eternity and Infinity of the Spirit.

[2] Ps. lxvi. 8, 2.

[3] Dan. iii. 56.

[4] Ps. lxxvi. 14-16.

[5] Dan. iii. 52.

Sixth Responsory.

[1] Great is the LORD, and greatly to be praised, and His Wisdom is unsearchable.

Verse. [2] Great is our Lord, and of great power, and His understanding is infinite.

Answer. And His Wisdom is unsearchable.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And His Wisdom is unsearchable.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The Father is Love; the Son is Grace; the Holy Ghost is Communion.[3] Blessed be the Trinity.

Psalm XCV.

O sing unto the Lord, &c., (p. 85.)

Second Antiphon. The Father is Truth; the Son is Truth; the Holy Ghost is Truth. Blessed be the Trinity.

Psalm XCVI.

The LORD reigneth, &c., (p. 85.)

Third Antiphon. The Being of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, is ONE. Blessed be the Trinity.

Psalm XCVII.

O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 89.)

Verse. [4] By the Word of the LORD were the heavens made.

Answer. And all the host of them by the Breath of His mouth.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxviii. 18.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth. Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. And so on.

Homily by St Gregory of Nazianzus, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (Treatise on the Faith.)

There is no Catholic but knoweth that the Father is a Very Father, the Son a Very Son, and the Holy Ghost a Very Holy Ghost, even as the Lord Himself saith unto His Apostles: "Go ye and baptize all nations in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." This is that Perfect Trinity Who is but ONE BEING, and of Whom therefore we testify that His Substance is ONE. For we make no division in God, as divisions are made in bodies, but we testify, that, according to the power of the Divine Nature, Which standeth not in matter, the Persons named have a real existence, and that GOD is ONE.

Seventh Responsory.

Bless we the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Let us praise and exalt Him above all for ever.

Verse. [5] Blessed art Thou, O Lord, in the firmament of heaven, and above all to be praised and glorified for ever.

Answer. Let us praise and exalt Him above all for ever.

Eighth Lesson.

WE do not say, as some have dreamt, that the Begetting of the Son of GOD is an outgrowing from one part to another part: neither do we say that He is the Word in the sense of a mere sound uttered by a voice, but we do believe that these three Names and the Persons meant by them are all of only One Being, One Majesty, and One Power. And therefore we testify that God is ONE, because this ONE-ness of His Majesty forbiddeth that we should use the Plural form of speech and say, "Gods." It is Catholic language to say, "Father and Son," but we cannot and must not say that the Father and the Son are two gods. And that, not because the Son of God is not by Himself God—yea, He is Very God of Very God—but because we know that the Son of God is not from elsewhere, but from the One Father Himself, and therefore we say that God is ONE. This is the doctrine which Prophets and Apostles have delivered; this is the doctrine which the Lord Himself taught when He said, "I and the Father are ONE," (John x. 30,) that is, He meant, as touching the ONE Divine Being, but as touching Persons, We are distinct.

Eighth Responsory.

[6] One Seraph cried unto another—Holy, Holy, Holy is the LORD God of hosts: the whole earth is full of His glory.

Verse. [7] There are Three That bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these Three are One.

Answer. Holy, Holy, Holy is the LORD God of hosts:—

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. The whole earth is full of His glory.

Ninth Lesson. (Homily for the First Sunday after Pentecost.)

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (vi. 36.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Be ye merciful, as your Father also is merciful. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (15th Sermon on Matthew, Words of the Lord.)

[1] Ps. xlvii. 2.

[2] Ps. cxlvi. 5.

[3] Communicatio. The distinctive property of the Holy Ghost, according to the Greek Fathers, is to be the Sanctifying Power of the Father and the Son, the substantial Gift whereby we are made "partakers of the Divine Nature."

[4] Ps. xxxii. 6.

[5] Dan. iii. 56.

[6] Isa. vi. 3.

[7] 1 John v. 7.

There are two works of mercy which free us, and which the Lord Himself hath briefly named in the Gospel—"Forgive, and ye shall be forgiven: give, and it shall be given unto you." "Forgive, and ye shall be forgiven"—such is the promise of pardon. "Give, and it shall be given unto you"—such is the promise of favour. As touching forgiveness; thou hast trespasses which thou wouldest fain have forgiven, and them which have trespassed against thee, whom thou canst forgive. As touching favour, there are beggars that beg from thee, and thou art a beggar to God. When we pray, we are all beggars to God, standing at the door of the Great Householder, yea, falling down on our knees, and beseeching Him to give us somewhat; and that somewhat is God Himself. What doth a beggar ask of thee? Bread. And what dost thou ask of God but that Christ Who saith: "I am the Living Bread Which came down from heaven?" If ye will be forgiven, forgive ye. If ye will be pardoned, pardon ye. If ye will receive, "give, and it shall be given unto you."

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon.[1]

1. Holy, Holy, Holy! * Lord God Almighty!
Early in the morning our song shall rise to Thee!
Holy, Holy, Holy! Merciful and Mighty!
God in Three Persons, Blessed Trinity!

Second Antiphon.

2. Holy, Holy, Holy! * All the Saints adore Thee,
Casting down their golden crowns around the glassy sea;
Cherubim and Seraphim falling down before Thee,
Which wert, and art, and evermore shall be.

Third Antiphon.

3. Holy, Holy, Holy! * though the darkness hide Thee,
Though the eye of sinful man Thy glory may not see,
Only Thou art Holy: there is none beside Thee
Perfect in power, in love, in purity!

Fourth Antiphon.

4. Holy, Holy, Holy! * Lord God Almighty!
All Thy works shall praise Thy Name, in earth, and sky, and sea!
Holy, Holy, Holy! Merciful and Mighty,
God in Three Persons, Blessed Trinity!

Fifth Antiphon. [2] Of Him, and through Him, and to Him, are all things; * to Whom be glory for ever.

Chapter. (Rom. xi. 33.)

O THE depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are His judgments, and His ways past finding out!

Hymn.[3]

O THOU Who dost all nature sway,
Dread Trinity in Unity!
Accept the trembling praise we pay
To Thy Eternal Majesty!

The star that heralds in the morn
Is fading in the skies;
The darkness melts;—O Thou True Light,
Once more on us arise!

To God the Father glory be;
And Sole Eternal Son;
All Glory, Holy Ghost, to Thee,
While endless ages run. Amen.

Verse. Bless we the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Let us praise and exalt Him above all for ever.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Blessed be the Holy One, the Maker and Lord of all things! Blessed be the Holy and Undivided Trinity, now and always, and unto unending ages of ages.

Prayer throughout the day.

ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, Who hast given unto Thy servants grace by the confession of a true faith to acknowledge the glory of the Eternal Trinity, and in the power of the Divine Majesty to worship the Unity; we beseech Thee that Thou wouldest keep us steadfast in this faith, and evermore defend us from all adversities. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

The following Commemoration is made of the First Sunday after Pentecost.

Antiphon. [4] Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful—saith the Lord.

Verse. The LORD reigneth; He is clothed with majesty.

Answer. The LORD is clothed with strength, and has girded Himself with power.

Let us pray.

O GOD, the Strength of all them that put their trust in Thee, mercifully accept our prayers, and because through the weakness of our mortal nature we can do no good thing without Thee, grant us the help of Thy grace, that in keeping of Thy commandments we may please Thee, both in will and deed. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

[1] The first four Antiphons are Doxologies to the Most Holy Trinity in verse, being apparently the last verses of Hymns. They are in different measures, of no literary merit, and almost quite the same in sense, and the translator has ventured to represent them by the above four homogeneous Doxologies by Bp. Heber, constituting his Hymn for Trinity Sunday. For a literal translation, see Appendix.

Answer. By the Word of the LORD were the heavens made.

Verse. Blessed be the Name of the LORD.

Answer. From henceforth, now, and for ever.

SECOND VESPERS.

All the same as First Vespers, except the following:

Verse. Blessed art Thou, O Lord, in the firmament of heaven.

Answer. And to be praised and glorified for ever.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. With all our heart and with all our voice do we acknowledge Thee, praise Thee, and bless Thee, O God the Father the Unbegotten, O God the Only-Begotten Son, O God the Holy Ghost the Comforter, One Holy and Undivided Trinity! To Thee be glory for ever!

The following is the Commemoration of the First Sunday after Pentecost.

Antiphon. [1] Judge not, that ye be not judged: for with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged, saith the Lord.

Verse. Let my prayer, O Lord, be set forth.

Answer. As incense before Thee.

Prayer as at the Commemoration of Lauds.

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the First Book of Kings (Samuel) (i. 1-3.)

[2] NOW there was a certain man of Ramathaim-Zophim, of Mount Ephraim, and his name was Elkanah, the son of Jeroham, the son of Elihu, the son of Tohu, the son of Zuph, an Ephrathite; and he had two wives; the name of the one was Hannah, and the name of the other Peninnah. And Peninnah had children, but Hannah had no children. And this man went up out of his city on the appointed days, to worship, and to sacrifice unto the LORD of hosts in Shiloh. And the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, the Priests of the LORD, were there.

First Responsory.

[3] Prepare your hearts unto the LORD, and serve Him Only; and He will deliver you out of the hand of your enemies.

Verse. Return unto Him with all your hearts, and put away the strange gods from among you.

Answer. And He will deliver you out of the hand of your enemies.

Second Lesson. (4-8.)

AND when the time was that Elkanah offered, he gave to Peninnah his wife, and to all her sons and her daughters, portions; but unto Hannah he gave one portion, sorrowing, for he loved Hannah. But the LORD had shut up her womb. Her adversary also provoked her sore, and made her fret, even unto reviling her, because that the LORD had shut up her womb: and as she did so year by year, when the time came and they went up unto the Temple of the LORD, so she provoked her. Therefore she wept and did not eat. Then said Elkanah her husband unto her: Hannah, why weepest thou, and why eatest thou not? and why is thy heart grieved? Am not I better to thee than ten sons?

Second Responsory.

God, Which heareth all, even He sent His Angel, and took me from keeping my father's sheep, and anointed me with the oil of His mercy.

Verse. [4] The LORD That delivered me out of the mouth of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear,

[1] Matth. vii. 1, 2.

[2] The course of the Sacred History is here resumed, after a gap covering many centuries, probably over three from the colonization of Palestine. (The history of the omitted period is contained in the Pentateuch and the Books of Joshua and Judges.) The four Books of Kings contain the history from the birth of Samuel (about B.C. 1170) to the capture of Jerusalem by the Babylonians (about B.C. 588.) Who composed these Books is unknown.

[3] 1 Kings (Sam.) vii. 3.

[4] 1 Kings (Sam.) xvii. 37.

Answer. And anointed me with the oil of His mercy.

Third Lesson. (9-11.)

SO Hannah rose up after she had eaten in Shiloh, and after she had drunk. Now Eli the PRIEST sat upon a seat before the door-posts of the Temple of the LORD. And Hannah was in bitterness of soul, and prayed unto the LORD, and wept sore; and she vowed a vow, and said: O LORD of hosts, if Thou wilt indeed look upon the affliction of Thine handmaid, and remember me, and not forget Thine handmaid, but wilt give unto Thine handmaid a man-child, then I will give him unto the LORD all the days of his life, and there shall no razor come upon his head.

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered me out of the mouth of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear—He will deliver me out of the hand of mine enemies.

Verse. [1] God hath sent forth His mercy and His truth, and delivered my soul from among the lion's whelps.

Answer. He will deliver me out of the hand of mine enemies.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. He will deliver me out of the hand of mine enemies.

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (i. 12-18.)

AND it came to pass, as she continued praying before the LORD, that Eli marked her mouth. Now, Hannah, she spake in her heart, and only her lips moved, but her voice was not heard. Therefore Eli thought she had been drunken, and said unto her: How long wilt thou be drunken? Cease for a while to soak thyself with wine. And Hannah answered and said: No, my lord; for I am a woman exceeding sorrowful; I have drunk neither wine nor strong drink, but have poured out my soul before the LORD. Count not thine handmaid for a daughter of Belial;[2] for out of the abundance of my complaint and grief have I spoken hitherto. Then Eli said unto her: Go in peace; and the God of Israël grant thee thy petition that thou hast asked of Him. And she said: Let thine handmaid find grace in thy sight.

First Responsory.

[3] Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands. Because the hand of the Lord was with him, he smote the Philistine, and took away the reproach from Israël.

Verse. Is not this David? Did they not sing one to another of him in dances, saying: Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands?

Answer. Because the hand of the Lord was with him, he smote the Philistine, and took away the reproach from Israël.

Second Lesson. (18-22.)

SO the woman went her way, and did eat, and her countenance was no more sad. And they rose up in the morning early, and worshipped before the LORD; and returned and came to their house in Ramah. And Elkanah knew Hannah his wife, and the LORD remembered her. Wherefore it came to pass, when the time was come about, that Hannah conceived, and bare a son, and called his name Samuel,[4] because she had asked him of the LORD. And the man Elkanah and all his house went up to offer unto the LORD the solemn sacrifice, and his vow, but Hannah went not up; for she said unto her husband: I will not go up until the child be weaned, and then I will bring him, that he may appear before the LORD, and there abide for ever.

Second Responsory.

[5] Ye mountains of Gilboa, let there be no dew, neither let there be rain upon you—for there are the mighty of Israël fallen!

Verse. All ye mountains that stand round about, the Lord look upon you! but let Him pass by Gilboa!

Answer. For there are the mighty of Israël fallen!

Third Lesson. (23-28.)

AND Elkanah her husband said unto her: Do what seemeth thee good, and tarry until thou have weaned him, and I pray that the LORD may fulfil His word. So the woman abode and gave her son suck until she weaned him. And when she had weaned him, she took him up with her, with three bullocks, and three measures of flour, and a bottle of wine, and brought him unto the house of the LORD in Shiloh. And the child was young. And they slew a bullock, and brought the child to Eli. And Hannah said: O, my lord; as thy soul liveth, my lord; I am the woman that stood by thee here, praying unto the LORD. For this child I prayed, and the LORD hath given me my petition which I asked of Him. Therefore also I have lent him to the LORD for all the days wherein he shall be lent unto the LORD. And they worshipped the LORD there.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD: I took thee[6] out of thy father's house, and appointed thee to be ruler over My people, over Israël. And I was with thee whithersoever thou wentest, to establish thy kingdom for ever.

Verse. And I have made thee a great name, like unto the name of the great men that are in the earth; and have caused thee to rest from all thine enemies.

Answer. And I was with thee

Answer. And I was with thee whithersoever thou wentest, to establish thy kingdom for ever.

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (ii. 12-14.)

NOW the sons of Eli were sons of Belial; they knew not the LORD, nor the Priests' duty toward the people: but, when any man offered sacrifice, the Priest's servant came while the flesh was in seething, with a flesh-hook of three teeth in his hand; and he struck it into the pan, or kettle, or cauldron, or pot; all that the flesh-hook brought up, the Priest took for himself. So they did unto all Israël that came unto Shiloh.[1]

First Responsory.

My sins are many, yea, they are more in number than the sands of the sea; I am not worthy to look up toward heaven because of the multitude of my iniquities; for I have provoked Thee to anger, and done evil in Thy sight.

Verse. [2] For I acknowledge my transgression, and my sin is ever before me, for against Thee only have I sinned,—

Answer. And done evil in Thy sight.

Second Lesson. (15-17.)

ALSO before they burnt the fat,[3] the Priest's servant came, and said to the man that sacrificed: Give me flesh to cook for the Priest; for I will not have cooked flesh of thee, but raw. And he that sacrificed said unto him: Let the fat first be burnt this day, as the custom is; and then take as much as thy soul desireth. Then he answered and said unto him: Nay, but thou shalt give it me now, and if not, I will take it by force. Wherefore the sin of the young men was very great before the LORD, for they made men to abhor the offering of the LORD.

Second Responsory.[4]

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened unto the prayer of Thy servant, that I might build a temple unto Thy Name, O God of Israël, bless Thou, and hallow this house for ever!

Verse. O Lord, Who keepest covenant with Thy servants that walk before Thee in all their heart.

Answer. O God of Israël, bless Thou, and hallow this house for ever!

Third Lesson. (18-21.)

BUT Samuel ministered before the LORD, being a child, girded with a linen ephod.[5] Moreover, his mother made him a little coat, and brought it to him from year to year, when she came up with her husband to offer the solemn sacrifice. And Eli blessed Elkanah and his wife, and said unto him: The LORD give thee seed of this woman, for the loan which thou hast lent to the LORD. And they went unto their own home. The LORD therefore visited Hannah, and she conceived, and bare three sons and two daughters: and the child Samuel grew before the LORD.

Third Responsory.[6]

Hearken, O LORD, unto the cry and to the prayer which Thy servant prayeth before Thee to-day, that Thine eyes may be open and Thine ears attent toward this house day and night.

Verse. Look down from Thine high and holy place, O LORD, even from heaven Thy dwelling,—

Answer. Toward this house, day and night.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Toward this house day and night.

At the beginning of the Martyrology is said,—

The morrow is the Feast of the Most Holy Body of Christ.

The next day, being Thursday, is kept the Feast of Corpus Christi, a Double of the First Class. It cannot be displaced. If a Feast of a Doctor of the Church or of the rank of Greater Double or higher fall on the same day, it is transferred to the first unoccupied day after the Octave of Corpus Christi. Any other Feast so falling is left unnoticed. The Vespers on Wednesday evening are the First Vespers of Corpus Christi.

Feast of Corpus Christi.

Feast of the Body of Christ.[1]

Double of the First Class.

All as on Sundays except the following.

Note. When this Office is used as a Votive Office out of Paschal-time, the word "Alleluia" is omitted wherever it is here given in brackets, [ ], but when so used within Paschal-time the aforesaid word is inserted whenever given thus, "* P. T. Alleluia," in addition to the others. The further changes required in the Votive Office are given in a Note at the end.[2]

FIRST VESPERS.

Chapter and Prayer from Lauds.

First Antiphon. [3] Christ the Lord, being made an High Priest for ever * after the order of Melchisedec, hath offered bread and wine. * P. T. Alleluia.

Second Antiphon. He hath made His wonderful works to be remembered; * the LORD is [gracious and] full of compassion. He hath given meat unto them that fear Him. * P. T. Alleluia.

Third Antiphon. I will take the cup of salvation, * and offer the sacrifice of thanksgiving. * P. T. Alleluia.

Psalm CXV.

I believed, therefore have I spoken, &c., (p. 105.)

Fourth Antiphon. Let the children of the Church be like olive-plants * round about the table of the Lord. * P. T. Alleluia.

Psalm CXXVII.

Blessed is every one, &c., (p. 108.)

Fifth Antiphon. The Lord, That maketh peace in the borders of the Church, * filleth her with the finest of the wheat. * P. T. Alleluia.

Psalm CXLVII.

Praise the LORD, O Jerusalem, &c., (p. 114.)

Hymn.[4]

OF the glorious Body telling,
O my tongue, Its mystery sing;
And the Blood, all price excelling,
Which for this world's ransoming
In a noble womb once dwelling
He shed forth, the Gentiles' King.

Given for us, for us descending
Of a Virgin to proceed,
Man with man in converse blending
Scattered He the Gospel seed:
Till His sojourn drew to ending
Which He closed in wondrous deed.

At the Last Great Supper seated,
Circled by His brethren's band,
All the Law required, completed,
In the Feast its statutes planned,
To the twelve Himself He meted
For their Food, with His own Hand.

Word made Flesh, by word He maketh
Very bread His Flesh to be;
Man for wine Christ's Blood partaketh;
And if senses fail to see,
Faith alone the true heart waketh
To behold the Mystery.

Therefore, we, before It bending,
This great Sacrament adore:
Types and shadows have their ending
In the new rite evermore:
Faith, our outward sense amending,
Maketh good defects before.

Honour, laud, and praise addressing
To the Father and the Son,
Might ascribe we, virtue, blessing,
And eternal benison:
Holy Ghost, from Both progressing,
Equal laud to Thee be done. Amen.

Verse. [5] Thou didst send them from heaven—[Alleluia.]

Answer. Bread able to content every man's delight—[Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [6] O Lord, how kindly is Thy Spirit! * even Thine, Whose sustenance declared Thy sweetness unto Thy children when Thou didst send them from heaven bread tempering itself to every man's liking, O Thou, Who hast filled the hungry with good things, and the rich, that are proud in the imagination of their hearts, Thou hast sent empty away. * [P. T. Alleluia.]

At Compline and every other Office throughout the Feast and Octave the last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation, excepting only the three Hymns proper to the Feast.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. O come, and let us
worship Christ,
Of all the nations Lord,*
Who doth, to them that feed on Him,
The Bread of Life afford.
* P. T. Alleluia.

[1] I.e., as really present in the Most Holy Sacrament of the Altar.

[2] As to the omission and addition of the Alleluia in the Votive Office the divergence of the authorities consulted by the translator causes him some uneasiness. In this translation the sense of the majority is followed.

Hymn.[1]

LET old things pass away;
Let all be fresh and bright;
And welcome we with hearts renewed
This Feast of new delight.

Upon this hallowed eve,
Christ with His brethren ate,
Obedient to the olden Law,
The Pasch before Him set.

Which done,—Himself entire,
The True Incarnate God,
Alike on each, alike on all,
His sacred Hands bestowed.

He gave His Flesh; He gave
His Precious Blood; and said:
"Receive and drink ye all of This
For your salvation shed."

Thus did the Lord appoint
This Sacrifice sublime,
And made His Priests the ministers
Through all the bounds of time.

Farewell to types! henceforth
We feed on Angels' Food;
The slave—O, wonder!—eats the Flesh
Of his Incarnate God!

O Blessed Three in One!
Visit our hearts, we pray,
And lead us on through Thine own paths
To Thy eternal day. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time only one Antiphon, namely the First, is said at each Nocturn.

First Antiphon. The Lord brought forth His fruit in the season of His death, * even that fruit whereof if any man eat, he shall live for ever.[2] * P. T. Alleluia.

Psalm I.

Blessed is the man, &c., (p. 2.)

Second Antiphon. His faithful ones which are increased by the fruit of His corn and His wine * do lay them down in peace and sleep in Christ.

Psalm IV.

When I called, &c., (p. 116.)

Third Antiphon. [3] Us, being many, hath the Lord made one body, * for we are all partakers of that one cup, which is not the communion of the blood of bulls, but of God Himself.

Psalm XV.

Preserve me, O Lord, &c., (p. 7.)

Verse. [4] He gave them of the bread of heaven—[Alleluia.]
Answer. Man did eat Angels' bread—[Alleluia.]

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Paul to the Corinthians (xi. 20.)

WHEN ye come together, therefore, into one place, this is not to eat the Lord's Supper. For every one taketh before his own supper to eat, and one is hungry, and another is drunken. What! have ye not houses to eat and to drink in? or despise ye the Church of God, and shame them that have not? What shall I say to you? Do I praise you? In this I praise you not.

First Responsory.

[5] The whole assembly of the children of Israël shall kill the lamb toward the evening of the Passover. And they shall eat the flesh, and unleavened bread. * P. T. Alleluia.
Verse. [6] Even Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us; therefore let us keep the feast with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.
Answer. And they shall eat the flesh, and unleavened bread. * P. T. Alleluia.

Second Lesson.

FOR I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you, That the Lord JESUS, the same night in which He was betrayed, took bread; and, when He had given thanks, He brake it, and said: Take, eat: This is My Body, Which shall be given for you; this do in remembrance of Me. After the same manner also He took the cup, when He had supped, saying: This Cup is the New Testament in My Blood. This do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of Me. For as often as ye eat this Bread, and drink this Cup, ye do show the Lord's death till He come.

Second Responsory.

[7] Ye shall eat flesh, and shall be filled with bread. * This is the bread which the LORD hath given you to eat. * P. T. Alleluia.
Verse. [8] Moses gave you not that Bread from heaven, but My Father giveth you the true Bread from heaven.
Answer. This is the bread which the LORD hath given you to eat. * P. T. Alleluia.

Third Lesson.

WHEREFORE, whosoever shall eat this Bread, or drink the Cup of the Lord, unworthily, shall be guilty of the Body and Blood of the Lord. But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that Bread, and drink of that Cup. For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's Body. For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep. For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged. But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world.

Third Responsory.

[9] Elijah looked, and, behold, there was a cake baken on the coals at his head, and he arose, and did eat and drink; and went in the strength of that meat [forty days and forty nights] unto the mount of God. * P. T. Alleluia.
Verse. [10] If any man eat of this Bread, he shall live for ever.
Answer. And went in the strength of that meat [forty days and forty nights] unto the mount of God. * P. T. Alleluia.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. And went in the strength of that meat [forty days and forty nights] unto the mount of God. * P. T. Alleluia.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The Lord remember our offering, * and accept our burnt-sacrifice. * P. T. Alleluia.

Psalm XIX.

The LORD hear thee, &c., (p. 10.)

Second Antiphon. The Lord prepareth His Table before us * in the presence of our enemies.

Psalm XXII.

The LORD is my Shepherd, &c., (p. 26.)

Third Antiphon. Let them that keep holiday around the table of the Lord * make the voice of joy and praise to be heard [in the house of God.]

Psalm XLI.

As the hart panteth, &c., (p. 53.)

Verse. [1] He fed them with the finest of the wheat—[Alleluia.]
Answer. And with honey out of the Rock did He satisfy them—[Alleluia.]

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Thomas of Aquino.[2] (17th or 57th of his Opuscula, or Lesser Works.)

THE immeasurable benefits, which the goodness of God hath bestowed on Christian people, have conferred on them also a dignity beyond all price. "For what nation is there so great, who hath gods so nigh unto them, as the LORD, our God, is" unto us? (Deut. iv. 7.) The Only-begotten Son of God, being pleased to make us "partakers of the Divine nature," (2 Pet. i. 4,) took our nature upon Him, being Himself made Man that He might make men gods. And all, as much of ours as He took, He applied to our salvation. On the Altar of the Cross He offered up His Body to God the Father as a sacrifice for our reconciliation; He shed His Blood as the price whereby He redeemeth us from wretchedness and bondage, and the washing whereby He cleanseth us from all sin. And for a noble and abiding memorial of that so great work of His goodness, He hath left unto His faithful ones the Same His very Body for Meat, and the Same His very Blood for Drink, to be fed upon under the appearance of bread and wine.

Fourth Responsory.

[3] As they were eating, JESUS took bread, and blest it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said: Take, eat; this is My Body. * P. T. Alleluia.
Verse. [4] The men of my tabernacle said: O that we had of his flesh! we cannot be satisfied.
Answer. Take, eat; this is My Body. * P. T. Alleluia.

Fifth Lesson.

O HOW precious a thing then, how marvellous, how health-giving, how furnished with all dainties, is the Supper [of the Lord!] Than His Supper can anything be more precious? Therein there is put before us for meat, not, as of old time, the flesh of bulls and of goats, but Christ Himself, our very God. Than this Sacrament can anything be more marvellous? Therein it cometh to pass that bread and wine are bread and wine no more, but in the stead thereof there is the Body and there is the Blood of Christ;[5] that is to say, Christ Himself, Perfect God and Perfect Man, Christ Himself is there, under the appearance of a little bread and wine. His faithful ones eat Him, but He is not mangled; nay, when [the veil which shroudeth Him in] this Sacrament is broken, in each broken piece thereof remaineth whole Christ Himself, Perfect God and Perfect Man. All that the senses can reach in this Sacrament, [look, taste, feel, smell, and the like, all these] abide of bread and wine, but the Thing is not bread and wine. And thus room is left for faith; Christ Who hath a Form That can be seen, is here taken and received not only unseen, but seeming to be bread and wine, and the senses, which judge by the wonted look, are warranted against error.

Fifth Responsory.

[6] JESUS took the cup, after supper, saying: This cup is the New Testament in My Blood. This do in remembrance of Me. * P. T. Alleluia.
Verse. My soul hath them [7] still in remembrance, and is humbled in me.
Answer. This do in remembrance of Me. * P. T. Alleluia.

Sixth Lesson.

THAN this Sacrament can anything be more health-giving? Thereby are sins purged away, strength renewed, and the soul fed upon the fatness of spiritual gifts. This Supper is offered up in the Church both for the quick and dead; it was ordained to the health of all, all get the good of it. Than this Sacrament can anything be more furnished with dainties? The glorious sweetness thereof is of a truth such that no man can fully tell it. Therein ghostly comfort is sucked from its very well-head. Therein a memorial is made of that exceeding great love which Christ showed in time of His sufferings. It was in order that the boundless goodness of that His great love might be driven home into the hearts of His faithful ones, that when He had celebrated the Passover with His disciples, and the last Supper was ended, the Lord "JESUS, knowing that His hour was come that He should depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved His own which were in the world, He loved them unto the end," (John xiii. 1,)—and instituted this Sacrament, —— this Sacrament, the everlasting forth-"showing of His death until He come" again, (1 Cor. xi. 26,) —— this Sacrament, the embodied fulfilment of all the ancient types and figures, —— this Sacrament, the greatest miracle which He ever wrought, and the one mighty joy of them that now have sorrow, till He shall come again, and their heart shall rejoice, and their joy no man take from them. (John xvi. 22.)

Sixth Responsory.

[1] I am that Bread of life. Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead. This is the Bread Which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

Verse. I am the living Bread Which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this Bread, he shall live for ever.

Answer. This is the Bread Which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. This is the Bread Which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. I will go unto the Altar of God; * I will feed on Christ, Which is the Renewer of my youth. * P. T. Alleluia.

Psalm XLII.

Judge me, O God, &c., (p. 59.)

Second Antiphon. The Lord hath fed us * with the finest of the wheat, and with honey out of the Rock[2] hath He satisfied us.

Psalm LXXX.

Sing aloud unto God, &c., (p. 80.)

Third Antiphon. It is at Thine Altar, O Lord, * that we do feed on Christ, for Whom our heart and our flesh crieth out.

Psalm LXXXIII.

How lovely are Thy tabernacles, &c., (p. 81.)

Verse. [3] Thou bringest forth food out of the earth! [Alleluia.]

Answer. And wine that maketh glad the heart of man. [Alleluia.]

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (vi. 56.)

At that time: JESUS said unto the multitudes of the Jews: My Flesh is meat indeed, and My Blood is drink indeed. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (26*th Tract on John.*)

By use of meat and drink men would fain that "they shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more," (Apoc. vii. 16,) and yet there is but one Meat and one Drink, Which doth work in them that feed thereon that "this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal put on immortality," (1 Cor. xv. 53,)—namely communion with that general assembly[4] and Church of God's holy children, who are "kept in perfect peace," (Isa. xxvi. 3,) and are "all one," (John xvii. 11,) fully and utterly. And therefore it is, as men of God before our time have taken it, that our Lord JESUS Christ hath set before us His Body and His Blood in the likeness of things which, from being many, are reduced into one. In one loaf are many grains of corn, and one cup of wine the juice of many grapes. And now He giveth us to know how that which He spake cometh to pass, and how indeed "this Man can give us His Flesh to eat," and His Blood to drink.

Seventh Responsory.

[5] He that eateth My Flesh and drinketh My Blood, dwelleth in Me, and I in him. * P. T. Alleluia.

Verse. [6] What nation is there so great, who hath gods so nigh unto them, as the LORD our God is to us?

Answer. Dwelleth in Me, and I in him. * P. T. Alleluia.

Eighth Lesson.

"He that eateth My Flesh, and drinketh My Blood, dwelleth in Me, and I in him." To dwell in Christ, therefore, and to have Him dwelling in us, is to "eat of that Bread and drink of that cup," (1 Cor. xi. 28,) and he which dwelleth not in Christ, and in whom Christ dwelleth not, without all doubt doth not spiritually eat His Flesh nor drink His Blood, although he do carnally and visibly press the Sacrament with his teeth; but, contrariwise, he "eateth and drinketh damnation to himself," because he dareth to draw nigh filthy to that secret and holy thing of Christ, whereunto none draweth nigh worthily, save he which is pure, even he which is of them concerning whom it is said:—"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God. (Matth. v. 8.)

Eighth Responsory.

[7] As the living Father hath sent Me, and I live by the Father, so he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me. * P. T. Alleluia.

Verse. [8] With the bread of life and understanding hath the Lord fed him.

Answer. So he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me. * P. T. Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. So he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me. * P. T. Alleluia.

Ninth Lesson.

"As the living Father hath sent Me, and I live by the Father, so he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me." This is as though He said:—The Father hath sent Me into the world (John x. 36,) and I have emptied Myself [and taken upon Me the form of a servant, and being found in fashion as a man], (Phil. ii. 7, 8.) I have My life from the Father, as One That is greater than I. (John xiv. 28.) He that eateth Me, even he, by thereby taking part in Me, shall live by Me. It is as having humbled Myself (Phil. ii. 8) that I live by the Father, but he that eateth Me, him will I raise up, (John vi. 55,) and so he shall live by Me. It is said:—"I live by the Father;" that is to say, He is of the Father, not the Father of

Fifth Antiphon. [5] To him that overcometh will I give of the hidden manna, * and will give him a new name. [Alleluia.]

Chapter. (1 Cor. xi. 23.)

BRETHREN, I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you, that the Lord JESUS, the same night in which He was betrayed, took bread, and, when He had given thanks, He brake it, and said: Take, eat; this is My Body, Which shall be given for you: this do in remembrance of Me.

Hymn.[6]

THE Word of God proceeding forth,
Yet leaving not the Father's side,
And going to His work on earth,
Had reached at length life's eventide.

By a disciple to be given
To rivals for His Blood athirst;
Himself, the very Bread of heaven,
He gave to His disciples first.

He gave Himself in either kind;
His Precious Flesh; His Precious Blood;
Of flesh and blood is man combined,
And He of man would be the Food.

In Birth, man's Fellow-man was He;
His Meat, while sitting at the Board;
He died, his Ransomer to be;
He reigns, to be his Great Reward.

O Saving Victim, slain to bless!
Who openest heaven's bright gates to all!
The attacks of many a foe oppress;
Give strength in strife, and help in fall.

To God, the Three in One, ascend
All thanks and praise for evermore;
He grant the life that shall not end,
Upon the heavenly country's shore.
Amen.

Verse. He maketh peace in thy borders. [Alleluia.]

Answer. And filleth thee with the finest of wheat. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. [7] I am the living Bread Which came down from heaven: * if any man eat of this Bread he shall live for ever. [Alleluia.]

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who under a wonderful Sacrament hast left unto us whereby to show forth thy Suffering Death, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, so reverently to handle the Sacred Mysteries of Thy Body and Thy Blood that we may alway feel within ourselves the fruit of Thy Redeeming Work. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Friday.

Sixth Day, within the Octave of the Feast of the Body of Christ.

All as on the Feast except that the Antiphons are not doubled and the following

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (ii. 27.)

AND there came a man of God unto Eli, and said unto him: Thus saith the LORD: Did not I plainly appear unto the house of thy father, when they were in Egypt, in Pharaoh's house? And I chose him out of all the tribes of Israël to be My Priest, to go up unto Mine Altar, and to burn incense unto Me, and to wear an ephod before Me. And I gave unto the house of thy father all the offerings made by fire of the children of Israël. Wherefore kick ye at My sacrifice, and at Mine offerings which I have commanded, that they should be offered in My habitation? And honourest thy sons above Me, to make yourselves fat with the chiefest of all the offerings of Israël, My people?

Second Lesson.

WHEREFORE, the LORD God of Israël saith: I said indeed that thy house, and the house of thy father should minister before Me for ever. But now the LORD saith: Be it far from Me; for them that honour Me, I will honour; and they that despise Me shall be lightly esteemed. Behold, the days come that I will cut off thine arm, and the arm of thy father's house, that there shall not be an old man in thine house. And thou shalt see thine enemy in My habitation, and in all the wealth [which God shall give] Israël; and there shall not be an old man in thine house for ever. Nevertheless, I will not utterly cut off every man of thine from Mine altar; lest thine eyes fail, and thy soul faint: but great part of thine house shall die when they come to man's estate.

[1] 1 Cor. xi. 26.
[2] Rom. viii. 18.

Third Lesson.

AND this shall be a sign unto thee, that shall come upon thy two sons, on Hophni and Phinehas: In one day they shall die both of them. And I will raise Me up a faithful Priest, that shall do according to that which is in Mine heart and in My mind: and I will build him a sure house: and he shall walk before Mine Anointed for ever. And it shall come to pass that every one that is left in thine house shall come and crouch to him for a piece of silver and a morsel of bread, and shall say: Put me, I pray thee, into one of the Priest's offices, that I may eat a piece of bread.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Thomas of Aquino. (Lesser works, 57.)

IT serveth well therefore to the edifying of the faithful to make memorial of the institution of this so health-giving and so wonderful a Sacrament, that we may worship the unspeakable way by the which the Divine Presence in-dwelleth in this Sacrament, Which we see, and may praise the power of God whereby in this Sacrament are wrought so many wonders, yea, and also give God some of those thanks which we owe unto Him for this so health-giving gift of His loving-kindness. It is true that on the Day of the Supper of the Lord,[1] on which day we know it to have been that He ordained this Sacrament, at the solemn celebration of the Mass, the memory of the instituting thereof is more particularly mentioned, but all the rest of the Services on that day deal chiefly with Christ Suffering, to worshipping of Whom the Church doth at that season give all her mind.

Fifth Lesson.

BUT, that the congregation of Christ's faithful people might celebrate with an whole Festal Office all to itself the institution of this so great Sacrament, Urban IV., Bishop of Rome, being touched with love toward this said Sacrament, hath made a godly ordinance that the memory of the said institution should be celebrated by all the faithful upon the Fifth Day of the week, next after the Eighth Day of Pentecost. From one end of the year to the other we use this Sacrament to our souls' health, and we more particularly celebrate the institution thereof at that season wherein the Holy Ghost taught the hearts of the disciples to acknowledge the mysteries thereof, for then it was, as we read, that "they continued steadfastly in [the Apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in] breaking of Bread, [and in prayers."] (Acts ii. 42.)

Sixth Lesson.

AND, moreover, to the end that on the aforesaid Thursday, and the seven days next following, the memory of this health-giving Institution might be the more honourably celebrated, and the Feast thereby be held in more excellent worship, the above-named Bishop of Rome, after the manner of the doles which in Cathedral Churches are given to such as come to the singing or saying of the Canonical Hours by night and day, hath out of his Apostolic bounty granted spiritual rewards[2] to all such as in their own persons are present in the Church at the divers Canonical Hours during all this Festival, thereby to stir up the faithful to come to the keeping of this great Feast in greater eagerness and numbers.

THIRD NOCTURN.

(Read in the Votive Office in January and February.)

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (vi. 56.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto the multitudes of the Jews: My Flesh is meat indeed and My Blood is drink indeed. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (17th Tract on John.)

We have heard from the Gospel the words of the Lord which follow [those that formed the subject of my] earlier discourse. To your ears and understandings we owe a discourse on these also, and to-day it becometh very well, for it is upon that Body of the Lord, Which He professeth Himself that He "will give for the life of the world," "that a man may eat thereof and not die." He hath made manifest how He giveth, and What is His Gift, where He saith: "He that eateth My Flesh and drinketh My Blood, dwelleth in Me and I in him." The sign to show whether a man hath or hath not eaten that Flesh and drunk that Blood, is whether or not he dwelleth in Christ and Christ in him, whether or not he is a guest of Christ and Christ of his, whether or not he so cleaveth unto Christ, that Christ be not parted from him.

Eighth Lesson.

THIS hath He taught, and warned us, by words of deep meaning, to be in His Body as members whose Head is He, eating His Flesh, and cleaving alway to His Oneness. "Many of His disciples when they had heard this . . . . went back, and walked no more with Him"—for they understood not by "Flesh" any flesh other than such as they themselves were made of. The Apostle saith, (and very true it is): "To be carnally minded is death." (Rom. viii. 6.) The Lord giveth us His Flesh to eat, and to understand it carnally is death. Where He saith: "Whoso eateth My Flesh . . . . hath eternal life"—we must not understand this His Flesh carnally, as did they of whom it is written: "Many of His disciples" — (not His enemies) — "when they heard this, said: This is an hard saying—who can hear it?"

---

[1] Maundy Thursday.

[2] See these and other Indulgences in the Raccolta, p. 110.

Ninth Lesson.

IF His disciples took His words for an hard saying, how did His enemies take them? And, nevertheless, thus it behoved to speak them if all men were not to understand them. A Divine mystery ought to make us thoughtful, not to repel us; and yet, when the Lord JESUS Christ spoke thus in mystery, many of His disciples went back and walked no more with Him. They believed not that He was speaking of some great thing, and darkly announcing in these words a bounty. They understood but as they pleased, even after the manner of men, that JESUS was able, or that JESUS meant, to give that Flesh wherewith the Word is clothed on, as it were, in slices, to them that believe on Him. And they said: "This is an hard saying—who can hear it?"

Saturday.

The Sabbath within the Octave of the Feast of the Body of Christ.

All as on the Feast-day, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (iii. 1.)

AND the child Samuel ministered unto the Lord before Eli. And the word of the LORD was precious in those days; there was no open vision. And it came to pass on a certain day, when Eli was laid down in his place, and his eyes began to wax dim, that he could not see: ere the lamp of God went out, Samuel was laid down to sleep in the temple of the LORD, where the Ark of God was. And the LORD called Samuel. And he answered: Here am I. And he ran unto Eli, and said: Here am I, for thou calledst me. And he said: I called not; go back and sleep. And he went and slept. And the LORD called yet again: Samuel. And Samuel arose, and went to Eli, and said: Here am I, for thou didst call me. And he answered: I called not, my son; go back and sleep. Now Samuel did not yet know the LORD, neither was the word of the LORD yet revealed unto him.

Second Lesson.

AND the LORD called Samuel again, the third time. And he arose, and went to Eli, and said: Here am I, for thou didst call me. And Eli perceived that the LORD had called the child, and he said unto Samuel: Go, and sleep; and it shall be, if He call thee, that thou shalt say: Speak, LORD; for Thy servant heareth. So Samuel went, and slept in his place. And the LORD came, and stood, and called, as at other times: Samuel, Samuel. Then Samuel answered: Speak, [[1] Lord,] for Thy servant heareth. And the LORD said to Samuel: Behold, I will do a thing in Israël, at which both the ears of every one that heareth it shall tingle. In that day I will perform against Eli all things which I have spoken concerning his house: when I begin, I will also make an end.

Third Lesson. ([2] v. 15.)

AND Samuel slept until the morning, and opened the doors of the house of the LORD. And Samuel feared to show Eli the vision. Then Eli called Samuel, and said: Samuel, my son, and he answered and said: Here am I. And he said: What is the thing that [[3] the Lord] hath said unto thee? I pray thee, hide it not from me. God do so to thee, and more also, if thou hide anything from me of all the things that He said unto thee. And Samuel told him every whit, and hid nothing from him. And he said: It is the LORD; let Him do what seemeth Him good. And Samuel grew, and the LORD was with him, and did let none of his words fall to the ground. And all Israël, from Dan even to Beer-sheba, knew that Samuel was established a Prophet of the LORD.

SECOND NOCTURN.

(Read in the Votive Office in January and February.)

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (61*st Homily to the people of Antioch.*)

DEARLY beloved brethren, it behoveth us to learn the miracle of the Mysteries—what the Gift is, and why It was given, and what is the use thereof. "We, being many, are one body," saith [the Apostle Paul, (1 Cor. x. 17,) and again]—"We are members of His Body, of His Flesh, and of His Bones." (Eph. v. 30.) Only the initiated [4] will now understand what I say. That this union may take place, not by love only, but verily and indeed, we ought to mingle our own with His Flesh. And this is done by eating that Food Which He hath given unto us, being fain to manifest that exceeding great love which He beareth to us-ward. To this end He hath mingled Himself with us, and infused His Body into our bodies, that we may be one together, like as the limbs of a man and his head are all of one body. Such union do they long for that love much.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN we come back from that Table we ought to be like so many lions breathing fire, dreadful to the devil. Our thoughts ought to be concentrated on our Great Head and the love which He showeth us. Many fathers and mothers there are who give their children to others to nurse, but I, saith the Lord to His children, I am not so, but I feed you with Mine Own Flesh, and join Myself to you, fain that ye all should be sons of noble blood now, and giving you a noble hope of that which ye shall be hereafter. I was content to become your Brother, I for your sakes have taken unto Me Flesh, and Blood, and that Flesh and Blood wherein I am become your Brother, the Same give I in turn unto you.

[1] Not in the Hebrew.

[2] The omitted verses (13 and 14) are: "For I have told him that I will judge his house for ever, for the iniquity which he knoweth; because his sons made themselves vile, and he restrained them not. And therefore I have sworn unto the house of Eli, that the iniquity of Eli's house shall not be purged with sacrifice nor offering for ever."

[3] Not in the Hebrew.

[4] I.e., the baptised, the Church's doctrine on the Eucharist being concealed from the catechumens.

Sixth Lesson.

LET us then, dearly beloved brethren, take good heed to ourselves, as unto the holders of so great mercies, and when any foul word springeth to our lips, or we feel anger taking possession of us, or the sting of any other sinful passion, let us call to mind of What we have been counted worthy, and let that remembrance still the unruly motion. As often as we take that Body, as often as we taste that Blood, let us think how that we feed on Him Who is sitting on high, adored of Angels, at the right hand of the Eternal Power. Ah me, how many a way is open to us whereby we may be saved! He hath made us His—He hath given His Body to us—and we still are not turned away from evil!

THIRD NOCTURN.

(Read in the Votive Office in March and April.)

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (vi. 56.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto the multitudes of the Jews: My Flesh is meat indeed and My Blood is drink indeed. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (27th Tract on John.)

I have said, my brethren, that what the Lord hath set before us, in eating of His Flesh and drinking of His Blood, is that we should dwell in Him, and He in us. We dwell in Him when we are His members, and He dwelleth in us when we are His temple. But the bond whereby we are made His members is oneness; and what is the cause of oneness but love? And love of God, whence is it? Ask the Apostle. "The love of God," saith he, "is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost. Which is given unto us." (Rom. v. 5.)

Eighth Lesson.

SO "it is the spirit that quickeneth." It is the spirit that maketh lively the limbs, nor is the quickening power of the spirit shed through any limbs but such as remain in union with the body whose the spirit is. The spirit that thou hast in thee, O man, and whereby thou art a man, doth that spirit shed life through any limb cut off from thy flesh? By "spirit," I mean soul. The soul quickeneth no limb but such as remain attached to the body. Cut one off, and the soul quickeneth it no more, for it is separate from the oneness of thy body.

Ninth Lesson.

THESE things I say, that we may love oneness and dread division. In sooth, there is nothing which a Christian ought so much to dread, as to be cut off from the Body of Christ. If he be cut off from the Body of Christ, he is no longer a member of Christ, and the Spirit of Christ no longer quickeneth him. "Now, if any man," saith the Apostle, "have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." (Rom. viii. 9.)

"It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life."

"Spirit and life"—what meaneth this? It is to be taken spiritually. Hast thou taken it spiritually? Then the words the Lord spake, unto thee they are spirit and they are life. Hast thou taken it carnally? Then the words of the Lord are still indeed spirit and life—but not for thee.

VESPERS.

Verse. He fed them with the finest of the wheat. Alleluia.

Answer. And with honey out of the rock did He satisfy them. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The child Samuel ministered unto God * before Eli, and the word of the Lord was precious in his sight.

A Commemoration is made of the Octave, from the Second Vespers of the Feast.

Second Sunday after Pentecost.

The Lord's Day within the Octave of the Body of Christ.

Semidouble.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (iv. 1.)

AND it came to pass in those days that the Philistines gathered themselves together to battle. And Israël went out against the Philistines to battle, and pitched beside the Stone-of-help.[1] And the Philistines came to Aphek, and put themselves in array against Israël. And when they joined battle, Israël fled before the Philistines, and there were smitten in the field in that battle about four thousand men. And when the people were come into the camp, the elders of Israël said: Wherefore hath the LORD smitten us to-day before the Philistines? Let us fetch the Ark of the covenant of the LORD out of Shiloh unto us, that, when it cometh among us, it may save us out of the hand of our enemies.

Second Lesson.

SO the people sent to Shiloh and took from thence the Ark of the covenant of the LORD of hosts, Which dwelleth between the Cherubim:[2] and the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were with the Ark of the covenant of God. And when the Ark of the covenant of the LORD came into the camp, all Israël shouted with a great shout, so that the earth rang again. And when the Philistines heard the noise of the shout, they said: What meaneth the noise of this great shout in the camp of the Hebrews? And they understood that the Ark of the LORD was come into the camp.

[1] Viz., near the place where was afterwards erected a "standing stone" so named, between Mizpeh and Shen. See vii. 1-12.

[2] An allusion, if not a reference, to the two figures of these creatures, made of wood plated with gold, which were on the top of the ark, overshadowing the mercy-seat with their wings. See Exod. xxv. 10-22.

Third Lesson.

AND the Philistines were afraid, for they said: God is come into the camp. And they groaned and said: Woe unto us! for there hath not been such a shouting yesterday or the day before. Woe unto us! who shall deliver us out of the hand of these mighty gods? These are the gods that smote the Egyptians with all the plagues in the wilderness. Be strong, and quit yourselves like men, O ye Philistines! that ye be not servants unto the Hebrews, as they have been to you: quit yourselves like men, and fight. And the Philistines fought, and Israël was smitten, and they fled every man into his tent; and there was a very great slaughter, for there fell of Israël thirty thousand footmen. And the Ark of God was taken: and the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were slain.[1]

SECOND NOCTURN.

(Read in the Votive Office in March and April.)

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (60*th Homily to the people of Antioch.*)

THE Word saith: "This is My Body." This we confess, and believe, and, with spiritual eyes, do see. Christ hath not left unto us Himself in such form as that we can see, hear, touch, smell, or taste Him; and yet hath He left Himself unto us in things which we can see, hear, touch, smell, and taste, and which all men may understand. Thus also is it in baptism; by mean of water, which men perceive outwardly, is given unto them a gift which they can grasp only inwardly, that is, a new birth. If we had no bodies, then would these things be given us without any outward and visible signs, but since we are here made up of souls and bodies, there are given unto our souls gifts which they can grasp, in outward signs which our bodies may perceive. How many there be which say: I would that I could see His comely presence, His Face, His garments, even His shoes! Behold, thou dost see and touch Him, yea, thou dost feed upon Him. And wouldest thou behold His raiment? Lo, He hath given unto thee not only to behold it, but to feed upon it, and handle it, and take it into thyself.

Fifth Lesson.

TO this table of the Lord let none dare to draw near with squeamishness or carelessness. Let all be fiery, all hot, all roused. To the Jews it was commanded touching the Paschal lamb, (Exod. xii. 11): "And thus shall ye eat it; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand; and ye shall eat it in haste; it is the LORD'S Passover." But thou needest to be more watchful than they. They were just about to travel from Egypt to Palestine, and therefore they bore the guise of travellers; but the journey that lieth before thee is from earth to heaven. And therefore it behoveth thee in all things to be on thy guard, for the punishment of him that eateth or drinketh unworthily is no light one (1 Cor. xi. 27.) Bethink thee how thou art indignant against him which betrayed, and them that crucified the Lord; and look to it well that thou also be not "Guilty of the Body and Blood of the Lord." As for them, they slew His Most Holy Body; but thou, after all that He hath done for thee, dost thrust Him into thy polluted soul. For His love, it was not enough to be made Man, to be buffeted, and to be crucified; He hath also mingled Himself with us, by making us His Body, and that not by faith only, but verily and indeed.

Sixth Lesson.

CAN anything be purer than that man ought to be, who eateth of this great Sacrifice? Can sun-beam be clearer than that hand ought to be which breaketh this Flesh?—that mouth, which is filled with that spiritual fire?—that tongue, which is reddened by that Blood, awful exceedingly? That whereon the Angels quail to look, neither dare to gaze steadfastly upon It, because of the blinding glory that shineth therefrom, upon This we feed, with This we become one, and are made one body of Christ, and one flesh. "Who can utter the mighty acts of the LORD? who can show forth all His praise?" (Ps. cv. 2.) Where is the shepherd which feedeth his flock with his own blood? Nay, why should I say, shepherd? Many mothers there be, who after all the pains of travail, give their own little ones to strangers to nurse. But so would not He, but feedeth us with His Own Blood, and maketh us to grow up in His Own substance.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xiv. 16.)

AT that time: JESUS spake unto the Pharisees this parable: A certain man made a great supper, and bade many. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (36*th upon the Gospels.*)

Dearly beloved brethren, between the dainties of the body and the dainties of the mind there is this difference, that the dainties of the body, when we lack them, raise up a great hunger after them, and when we devour them, straightway our fulness worketh in us niceness. But about the dainties of the mind we are nice while as yet we lack them, and when we fill ourselves with them, then are we an-hungered after them, and the more, being an-hungered, we feed thereon, the more are we an-hungered thereafter. In the bodily dainties, the hunger is keener than the fulness, but in the spiritual the fulness is keener than the hunger. In the bodily, hunger gendereth fulness, and fulness niceness; in the spiritual, hunger indeed gendereth fulness, but fulness gendereth hunger.

[1] The narrative continues how that a man "with his clothes rent, and with earth upon his head," came and told Eli at Shiloh: "'Israël is fled before the Philistines—and there hath been also a great slaughter among the people—and thy two sons also, Hophni and Phinehas, are dead—and the Ark of God is taken.—' And . . . . when he made mention of the Ark of God, [Eli] fell from off his seat backward, by the side of the gate; and his neck brake, and he died."

Eighth Lesson.

SPIRITUAL dainties, in the very eating, do stir up the keenness of hunger in the mind which they fill, for, the more we taste their sweetness, the better we know how well they deserve to be loved; and, if we taste them not, we cannot love them, for we know not how sweet they be. And who can love that whereof he knoweth nothing? Hence saith the Psalmist: "O taste and see that the LORD is good," (Ps. xxxiii. 9,) that is, as it were, "If ye taste not, ye shall not see His goodness: but let your heart once taste the bread of life, and then indeed, having tasted and proved His sweetness, ye shall be able to love Him." But these were the dainties which man lost when he sinned in Eden, and when he had shut his own mouth against the sweet bread whereof if any man eat he shall live for ever, he forsook paradise.

Eighth Responsory.

[1] A certain man made a great supper, and sent his servant at supper-time to say to them that were bidden: Come, for all things are now ready.

Verse. [2] Come, eat of my bread, and drink of the wine which I have mingled for you.

Answer. For all things are now ready.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. For all things are now ready.

Ninth Lesson.

AND we that, from the first man, are born under the afflictions of this pilgrimage, are come into the world smitten with niceness; we know not what we ought to want, and the disease of our niceness groweth the worse, as our soul draweth itself the more away from that bread of sweetness. We are no longer an-hungered after inward dainties, since we have lost the use of feeding on them. And so in our niceness we starve, and the sickness of long famishing maketh prey of our health. We will not eat of that inward sweetness which is made ready for us, and being enamoured only of things outward we sink into the wretchedness of loving starvation.

LAUDS.

Chapter. (1 John iii. 13.)

MARVEL not, my brethren, if the world hate you. We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren.

Verse. He gave them of the bread of heaven—Alleluia.

Answer. Man did eat Angels' bread—Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. A certain man made a great supper, * and bade many; and sent his servant at supper-time to say to them that were bidden: Come, for all things are now ready.

Prayer throughout the day.

O LORD, Who never failest to help and govern them whom Thou dost bring up in Thy steadfast fear and love; keep us, we beseech Thee, under the protection of Thy good providence, and make us to have a perpetual fear and love of Thy Holy Name; through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration of Corpus Christi is made, taken from the Lauds of the Feast.

Chapter at the end of Prime. (1 John iii. 18.)

MY little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed, and in truth.

At Terce, Chapter from Lauds.

Chapter at Sext. (1 John iii. 16.)

HEREBY perceive we the love of God, because He laid down His life for us; and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.

Chapter at None as at the end of Prime.

VESPERS.

All as at the First Vespers of Corpus Christi, except the following.

Chapter and Prayer from Lauds.

Verse. He fed them with the finest of the wheat—Alleluia.

Answer. And with honey out of the rock did He satisfy them—Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Go out quickly into the streets * and lanes of the city, and compel the poor and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind, to come in: that my house may be full—Alleluia.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (v. 1.)

AND the Philistines took the Ark of God, and brought it from the Stone-of-help unto Ashdod. When the Philistines took the Ark of God, they brought it into the house of Dagon, and set it by Dagon.[3] And when they of Ashdod arose early on the morrow, behold, Dagon was fallen upon his face to the earth before the Ark of the LORD. And they took Dagon, and set him in his place again. And when they arose early on the morrow morning, behold, Dagon was fallen upon his face to the ground before the Ark of the LORD; and the head of Dagon, and both the palms of his hands were cut off upon the threshold; only the stump of Dagon was left to him.[1]

Second Lesson.

BUT the hand of the LORD was heavy upon them of Ashdod, and He destroyed them; and the farms and the fields in all that coast brake forth;[2] and mice were begotten; and there was confusion in the city, a great destruction. And when the men of Ashdod saw the plague, they said: The Ark of the God of Israël shall not abide with us, for His hand is sore upon us, and upon Dagon our god. They sent therefore, and gathered all the lords of the Philistines unto them, and said: What shall we do with the Ark of the God of Israël? And they of Gath answered: Let the Ark of the God of Israël be carried about unto Gath.

Third Lesson.

AND they carried the Ark of the God of Israël about thither. And it was so, that when they carried it about, the hand of the LORD was against every one of their cities with a very great destruction, and He smote the men of every city, both small and great. Therefore they sent the Ark of God to Ekron. And it came to pass, as the Ark of God came to Ekron, that the Ekronites cried out, saying: They have brought about the Ark of the God of Israël to us, to slay us and our people. So they sent and gathered together all the lords of the Philistines and said: Send away the Ark of the God of Israël, and let it go again to his own place, that it slay us not, and our people. For there was an horror of death in all the cities, and the hand of God was very heavy there.

SECOND NOCTURN.

(Read in the Votive Office in May and June.)

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (Continuation of the 60th Homily.)

IN this mysterious Sacrament Christ doth mingle Himself with all and each of His faithful ones. They are His children, and He nurseth them Himself, and giveth them not over unto another, herein again assuring us that the Flesh He hath taken unto Himself is ours. We then, who have been deemed meet to be treated with such love and such honour, let us be wakeful! See ye not how eagerly the sucklings seize on the breasts, how readily they fix their mouths on the paps? Let us, with like eagerness, draw nigh to that Table, and suck at that spiritual Cup. Yea, let us prize that gracious Food as the suckling doth its mother's breast, and hold it the great woe of life to be cut off from that Banquet. Here there are set before us no works of man's power; He That worked at that Last Supper, the Same worketh the same here still. As for us Priests, we hold the place of His ministers, but He Which halloweth and changeth is He. Hither let there draw nigh no Judas, nor covetous one—this is no Table for him. But he which is Christ's disciple, let him come; for the Lord saith: "I will keep the Passover with My disciples," (Matth. xxvi. 18.) This is that Passover Table, and it is all Christ's—what is wrought there is not some of it Christ's work, and some of it man's work, but it is all His work and not another's.

Fifth Lesson.

HITHER let there draw nigh none brutal, none cruel, none merciless; in good sooth, none unclean. I speak to all that take that Holy Communion, and to you also, O ye that do administer the same! To you now I turn my speech, to warn you with how great care that Gift is to be given. No slight vengeance is that which awaiteth you if ye admit for a partaker at the Lord's Table the sinner whose guiltiness ye know. At your hands will his blood be required. If a man be a General, a Governor, a crowned Monarch, yet if he come there unworthily, forbid him; thou hast greater power than he. To this end hath God exalted you to the honour ye hold, that ye may judge in such matters. This office is your dignity, this is your strength, this is all your crown, this, and not the going about in white robes and glittering vestments. And thou, O layman! when thou seest the Priest making the oblation, think not that He Which is then the real Worker is such a Priest as thou seest, but know of a surety that it is Christ's Hand Which is stretched out, albeit unseen by thee.

Sixth Lesson.

LET us hear, all of us, both Priests and laymen, let us hear What Food it is whereof we are made worthy—let us hear, I say, and let us quake. The Lord satisfieth us with His Own holy Flesh, setting Himself slain before us. What excuse therefore shall we have, if, being so fed as we are, we sin as we do? If, eating of the Lamb, we are still wolves? If, pastured as the sheep of the flock, we raven like lions? This mysterious Sacrament forbiddeth unto us not outrage only, but any the least enmity; it is the Mystery of peace. Upon the Jews God laid it to make year by year by solemn festivals a yearly commemoration of His mercies unto them, but upon thee to do this in remembrance of His love to thee, day by day. To this Table then let there draw nigh no Judas Iscariot, no Simon Magus. These men fell through covetousness; let us fly that bottomless pit.

THIRD NOCTURN.

(Read in the Votive Office in May and June.)

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (vi. 56.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto the multitudes of the Jews: My Flesh is meat indeed, and My Blood is drink indeed. And so on.

---

[1] Here it is added in the original: "Therefore neither the priest of Dagon, nor any that come into Dagon's house, tread on the threshold of Dagon in Ashdod unto this day."

[2] According to the present Hebrew text, which here differs much from the Latin, the meaning is that the inhabitants were seized with the disease called Hæmorrhoids.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (26th Tract on John.)

"This is the bread which cometh down from heaven," (v. 50.) By "this bread" the Lord here signifieth both the manna, and That Which we receive at the Altar of God. Both these are, as it were, Sacramental signs, differing indeed somewhat in their outward and visible part, but pointing to the Same Thing signified. Hear what the Apostle saith: "Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea, and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea, and did all eat the same spiritual meat." (1 Cor. x. 1-3.) This meat was the same spiritually but not really; they ate manna—we eat Something else. Spiritually they ate What we eat; but our fathers—not their fathers; unto whom we are like—not unto whom they are like. And it is added: "And did all drink the same Spiritual drink." They drank one thing, and we drank Another, the difference being in the outer show, the sameness in that the Same Thing is pointed to by both. And what was that Same Drink? "They drank of the spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ." Him did bread and rock alike signify. The Rock was a figure, but by the Word and in the Flesh there is the very Christ Himself. And how came they to drink of that rock? "Moses lift up his hand, and with his rod he smote the rock twice, and the water came out abundantly." (Num. xx. 11.) These two strokes of the rod upon the rock are a figure of the two beams whereof the Cross was made.

Eighth Lesson.

CHRIST'S faithful ones discern the Lord's Body while they remain watchful members of His Body. They remain members of His Body as long as they will to live according to His Spirit. The Spirit of Christ giveth life to nothing but the body of Christ. Now, my brethren, understand what I am going to say. Thou art a man, and hast a body and a spirit. By spirit I mean the soul, which causeth thee to be a man at all. Thou art a man, made up of soul and body. Thy spirit is unseen, thy body seen. Tell me, which of them is it which giveth animation to the other? Doth thy spirit derive animation from thy body, or thy body from thy spirit? Every one who liveth will answer—for if any one cannot answer this, I know not if he be alive. What will whosoever hath life answer? "Verily, it is my spirit which doth animate my body." Wilt thou then live by the Spirit of Christ? Be of the Body of Christ.

Ninth Lesson.

IS it not my spirit which doth animate my body? My spirit doth animate my body, and thy spirit doth animate thy body. The Body of Christ liveth not save by the Spirit of Christ. Hence it is that the Apostle Paul saith, touching this Bread: "We, being many, are one bread, and one body, for we are all partakers of that one Bread." (1 Cor. x. 17.) O what a Sacrament of love! O what a seal of union! O what a bond of charity! He that willeth to live hath here where to live, and whence to live. Let him come near, let him believe, let him enter into that Body, that he may be quickened. Let him not sever himself from the fit joining-together of all the members; let him not be as a mortifying limb, that must needs be cut off, nor a mis-shapen limb, a cause to blush. Let him be goodly, and useful, and healthy. Let him cleave unto the body; let him live by God to God; let him labour now on earth, that he may reign hereafter in heaven.

Tuesday.

Third Day within the Octave of the Feast of the Body of Christ.

Semidouble.

All as on the Feast except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (vi. 1.)

AND the Ark of the LORD was in the country of the Philistines seven months, and the Philistines called for the priests and the diviners, saying: What shall we do to the Ark of the LORD? Tell us wherewith we shall send it to his place. And they said: If ye send away the Ark of the God of Israël, send it not empty; but in any wise return Him a trespass-offering; then shall ye be healed, and it shall be known to you why His hand is not removed from you.[1]

Second Lesson.

WHEREFORE do ye harden your hearts, as the Egyptians and Pharaoh hardened their hearts? When he was smitten, did he not let the people go, and they departed? Now, therefore, take, and make a new cart, and two milch kine, on which there hath come no yoke; tie the kine to the cart, and shut up their calves at home. And take the Ark of the LORD, and lay it upon the cart, and put the jewels of gold, which ye return Him for a trespass-offering, in a coffer by the side thereof; and send it away that it may go. And see; if it goeth up by the way of his own coast to Beth-shemesh, then He hath done us this great evil; but if not, then we shall know that it is not His hand that smote us—it was a chance that happened to us. And the men did so.

Third Lesson.

AND the kine took the straight way to the way of Beth-shemesh, and went along the highway, lowing as they went, and turned not aside to the right hand nor to the left; and the lords of the Philistines went after them unto the border of Beth-shemesh. And they of Beth-shemesh were reaping their wheat-harvest in the valley; and they lifted up their eyes, and saw the Ark, and rejoiced to see it. And the cart came into the field of Joshua, a Beth-shemite, and stood there—where there was a great stone. And they clave the wood of the cart, and offered the kine upon it, a burnt-offering unto the LORD. And the Levites took down the Ark of God.

[1] The two next verses contain a recommendation to send with the Ark, as a trespass-offering, certain objects made of gold.

SECOND NOCTURN.

(Read in the Votive Office in July and August.)

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Letter written to Cæcilius by the Holy Martyr Cyprian, Bishop [of Carthage.] (Bk. ii. Ep. 3.)

IN the deed of the Priest Melchisedek we see a type of the Sacrament of the Lord's Sacrifice. For thus it is written in the writings of God:—"And Melchisedek King of Salem brought forth bread and wine: for he was the Priest of the Most High God: and he blessed" Abraham. (Gen. xiv. 18.) That Melchisedek was a type of Christ, the Holy Ghost Himself doth testify in the Psalms, where the First Person of the Holy Trinity, even the Father, is set before us as saying unto the Second Person, that is, the Son:—"Before the day-star have I begotten Thee. . . . Thou art a Priest for ever, after the order of Melchisedek." (cix. 3, 4.) And verily that sameness of order cometh of this sacrifice, and proceedeth from this, that Melchisedek was the Priest of the Most High God; that he offered bread and wine; and that he blessed Abraham.

Fifth Lesson.

WHAT Priest of the Most High God is there, more so than is our Lord JESUS Christ?—He Who hath made an offering unto God the Father, and the same offering that Melchisedek made, bread and wine, that is to say, His Own Flesh and His Own Blood. And, as touching Abraham, that ancient blessing was spoken likewise by fore-knowledge upon us. For if Abraham believed God and it was accounted to him for righteousness, verily, whosoever believeth God and liveth by faith, the same is found righteous, and is shown unto us that he is already blessed in faithful Abraham, and justified—as the Apostle Paul proveth, where he saith:—"Abraham believed God and it was accounted unto him for righteousness. Know ye therefore that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham. And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the Gospel unto Abraham, saying: In thee shall all nations be blessed." (Gal. iii. 6-8.)

Sixth Lesson.

IN Genesis, therefore, in order that the Priest Melchisedek might in due order pronounce the blessing upon Abraham, there was first offered a typical sacrifice, consisting of bread and wine. This was the offering which our Lord JESUS Christ completed and fulfilled, when He offered up bread and a cup of wine mingled [with water]. This fulfilment by Him Who came to fulfil (Matth. v. 17,) utterly satisfied the truth of the image which had gone before. The Holy Ghost doth by Solomon also clearly foreshadow, as it were in a parable, the Lord's Sacrifice, pointing to the victim slain, and the bread and the wine, and the Altar likewise, and the Apostles; as it is written:—"Wisdom hath builded her house, she hath hewn out her seven pillars; she hath killed her beasts, she hath mingled her wine, she hath also furnished her table. She hath sent forth her servants, she crieth upon the highest places of the city, saying: Whoso is simple, let him turn in hither unto me. As for them that want understanding, she saith to them. Come, eat of my bread, and drink of the wine which I have mingled for you." (Prov. ix. 1-5.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

(Read in the Votive Office in July and August.)

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (vi. 56.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto the multitudes of the Jews: My Flesh is meat indeed, and My Blood is drink indeed. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (26th Tract on John.)

"Not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead." Wherefore did they eat and die? Because they believed only that which they saw; and that which they saw not, they understood not. Therefore were they your fathers, because ye are like unto them. Doth this death, my brethren, mean that death which is outward and bodily? And do not we also die, who eat of that Bread Which cometh down from heaven? That death died they, and so shall we also, as far, as I have said, as is meant that death which is outward and bodily.

Eighth Lesson.

BUT the death whereof the Lord doth sound the alarm, the death that their fathers died, is another death than that which is outward and bodily. Moses ate manna, Aaron ate manna, Phinehas ate manna, many ate manna in whom the Lord was well pleased—and these are not dead. Wherefore? Because they understood spiritually that outward bread, spiritually hungered thereafter, spiritually tasted thereof, and spiritually were satisfied therewith. So also do we this day feed on a visible food, but the Sacrament is one thing, and the grace of the Sacrament is another.

Ninth Lesson.

O HOW many there be which receive at the Altar, and die, yea, die even in the very receiving! Whence the Apostle saith:—"[He that eateth and drinketh unworthily] eateth and drinketh damnation to himself." (1 Cor. xi. 29.) Is it not written:—"When JESUS had dipped the sop, he gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon, and after the sop Satan entered into him?" (John xiii. 26, 27.) And yet he took it. And when he had eaten it, the enemy entered in and possessed him. Not because what he ate was evil, but because he, being evil, dared to eat that which was good. Look to it well, then, brethren, that ye take spiritually the Bread Which cometh down from heaven. Bring innocency with you to the Altar. Though your sins be daily, let them not be deadly. Before ye draw near to the Altar, think well what it is that ye say:—

"Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us." "For, if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you" (Matth. vi. 14)—and ye may draw near boldly, for unto you It is Bread, and not poison.

Wednesday.

Fourth Day within the Octave of the Feast of the Body of Christ.

Semidouble.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (vi. 19.)

AND [the Lord][1] smote the men of Beth-shemesh, because they had looked into the Ark of the LORD, even He smote of the people three-score and ten men and fifty thousand of the people. And the people lamented, because the LORD had smitten many of the people with a great slaughter. And the men of Beth-shemesh said: Who is able to stand before this Holy LORD God? and to whom shall He go up from us? And they sent messengers to the inhabitants of Kirjath-jearim, saying: The Philistines have brought again the Ark of the LORD; come ye down, and fetch it up to you. (vii. 1.) And the men of Kirjath-jearim came, and fetched up the Ark of the LORD, and brought it into the house of Abinadab at Gibeah. And they sanctified Eleazar his son to keep the Ark of the LORD.

Second Lesson.

AND it came to pass that from the day that the Ark of the LORD came to abide in Kirjath-jearim, the time waxed long, until it was already the twentieth year that it had abode there. And all the house of Israël, lamented after the LORD. And Samuel spake unto all the house of Israël, saying: If ye do return unto the LORD with all your hearts, then put away the strange gods from among you, the Baalim and the Ashtaroth,[2] and prepare your hearts unto the LORD, and serve Him only; and He will deliver you out of the hand of the Philistines. Then the children of Israel did put away the Baalim and the Ashtaroth, and served the LORD only.

Third Lesson.

AND Samuel said: Gather all Israel to Mizpeh, and I will pray for you unto the LORD. And they gathered to Mizpeh, and drew water, and poured it out before the LORD, and fasted on that day, and said there: We have sinned against the LORD. And Samuel judged the children of Israël in Mizpeh. And when the Philistines heard that the children of Israël were gathered together to Mizpeh, the lords of the Philistines went up against Israël. And when the Children of Israël heard it, they were afraid of the Philistines. And they said to Samuel: Cease not to cry unto the LORD our God for us, that He will save us out of the hand of the Philistines.

SECOND NOCTURN.

(Read in the Votive Office in September and October.)

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book upon the Sacraments written by St Ambrose,[3] Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. iv. ch. 4.)

WHO invented the Sacraments but the Lord JESUS? The Sacraments came down from heaven, for all counsel is from heaven. Nevertheless, it was a great and wonderful work of God when He rained down manna upon His people, and the people laboured not, and yet were fed. Perchance, thou sayest: Here, it is my bread which is used. But that bread is bread only till the Sacramental words are spoken; at the Consecration, instead of bread, there cometh to be the Body of Christ. This therefore let us establish. How cometh it that that which was bread becometh the Body of Christ? Through the Consecration. And in what words and in Whose language doth the Consecration take place? In those of the Lord JESUS. All the other things which are said [in the Liturgy], the ascription of praise to God [in the Preface], the prayer for the people, for kings, and for others which formeth the first part [of the Canon, these are put in the mouth of the Priest.] But when that point is reached when this worshipful Sacrament is to be consecrated, then the Priest useth no more his own words, but Christ's.

Fifth Lesson.

IT is the word of Christ, therefore, which doth the needful work in this Sacrament. And what is the word of Christ? It is the word of Him at Whose bidding all things were made. The Lord commanded, and the heavens were created; the Lord commanded, and the earth was formed; the Lord commanded, and the seas were made; the Lord commanded, and all creatures sprang into being. Thou seest, then, how mightily-working a word is the word of Christ. If then the word of Christ hath such power that it can make that to be which hath never been, wherein doth it appear greater that it maketh one thing to be changed into Another? There was once no heaven; there was once no sea; there was once no earth. But hear him who saith:—"He spake, and it was done; He commanded, and it stood fast." (Ps. xxxii. 9.) If, then, I am to answer thee, I tell thee, that before the Consecration it is not the Body of Christ, but after the Consecration it is the Body of Christ, for Himself "hath spoken, and it is done; He hath commanded, and it standeth fast."

[1] I venture to substitute this for "He," for the sake of clearness. Latin: Percussit autem de viris, &c.

[2] I.e., shrines and images of Baal and Astarté—a couple of idols, respectively male and female, much in vogue in Syria. What they represented is not quite agreed. Gesenius thinks they were meant for the planets Jupiter and Venus, but Baal (that is, Lord) sometimes means the sun. The worship of the female deity, who was worshipped as reigning over lust, consisted mostly of acts of studied impurity almost incredible to Christian ears.

[3] Pseudo-Ambrose.

Sixth Lesson. (ch. 5.)

AND now I come back to my text. It is indeed a great and worshipful fact that manna was rained down upon the Jews; but, think thou, which was the more great and worshipful, the manna from heaven or the Body of Christ—the Body of that Same Christ by Whom the heavens were made? And, again; the fathers "did eat manna, and are dead; he that eateth of this Bread," (John vi. 58,) It is unto him "the remission of sins," (Matth. xxvi. 28,) and "he shall never die." (John xi. 26.) [1] Therefore it is not idly that, when thou art a-receiving, thou sayest:—"Amen"—testifying in thine heart that That Which thou art taking is the Body of Christ. The Priest saith unto thee:—"The Body of Christ!"—and thou answerest:—"Amen"—that is to say:—"It is true." What then thy tongue confesseth, let thine heart hold to.

THIRD NOCTURN.

(Read in the Votive Office in September and October.)

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (vi. 55.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto the multitudes of the Jews: My Flesh is meat indeed, and My Blood is drink indeed. And so on.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.][2] (Bk. viii. on the Trinity.)

When we speak concerning the things of God, we must not speak after the manner of men, nor after the manner of the world. Let us read those things which are written, and understand those things which we read; and then let us act as having a perfect faith. We shall speak but folly and godlessness if we speak concerning the natural truth of Christ in us, and have not learnt at Christ's School how we should speak. He Himself saith:—"My Flesh is meat indeed, and My Blood is drink indeed. He that eateth My Flesh and drinketh My Blood, dwelleth in Me, and I in him." There is here no room left for doubt as to What is His Flesh and what is His Blood.[3]

Eighth Lesson.

FOR now we know by the declaration of the Lord Himself and by [the teaching of] our Faith, the reality of His Flesh and Blood. And when we eat the One and drink the Other, They work effectually in us to make us dwell in Him and He in us. Is not this a reality? Surely it befalleth not them to find it true, who deny that Christ JESUS is Very God. He is in us by means of His Flesh, and we are in Him when that which we are is with Him in God. That we dwell in Him through that Sacrament wherein His Flesh and Blood are given unto us, He Himself doth testify, where He saith:—"Yet a little while, and the world seeth Me no more; but ye see Me; because I live ye shall live also. [At that day ye shall know that] I am in My Father, and ye in Me, and I in you." (John xiv. 19, 20.)

Ninth Lesson.

BUT that this union in us is a real one, He testifieth thus:—"He that eateth My Flesh and drinketh My Blood, dwelleth in Me, and I in him." For no one dwelleth in Him in whom He doth not dwell, since he which receiveth [the Body of Christ] hath but received that Flesh of [the same nature as] his own, which Christ hath taken into Himself. The mystery of this perfect union He had taught before, when He said:—"As the living Father hath sent Me, and I live by the Father, so, he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me." He therefore liveth by the Father, and, as He liveth by the Father, so shall we live by Him.

Vespers are the same as the First Vespers of the Feast.

If a Common Double Feast fall on this day it is only commemorated.

Thursday.

Octave of Corpus Christi.

The Eighth Day of the Feast of the Body of Christ.

Double.

All as on the Feast-day except the following.

SECOND NOCTURN.

(Read in the Votive Office in November and December.)

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of the Blessed Patriarch of Jerusalem, Cyril.[4] (Catechetical Lectures, 4.)

THE teaching of the blessed Paul seemeth of itself enough instruction for you concerning those Divine Mysteries, whereof, if ye be made worthy, ye become therein, so to speak, of one Body and of one Blood with Christ. Paul saith that our Lord JESUS Christ, "the same night in which He was betrayed, took bread; and, when He had given thanks, He brake it, and gave it unto His disciples, saying: Take, eat; this is My Body. . . . After the same manner also He took the cup," and gave thanks, "and said:"—Take this, and drink it; this is My Blood. Since therefore it is He Who hath definitely stated and said, touching that Bread: "This is My Body"—who will dare any longer to doubt that It is so? And since it is He again that hath absolutely affirmed and said, touching that cup: "This is My Blood"—who is he that will doubt any longer, or say that It is not His Blood?

Fifth Lesson.

AT the beginning of His ministry, at Cana in Galilee, the Lord turned water into wine, a thing which hath some qualities in common with blood; and shall we deem Him less worthy that we should believe Him, when He turneth wine into Blood? When He was bidden to that marriage wherein twain were made one flesh, He did the beginning of His miracles to the amazement of all men; and shall we less surely hold that He hath given us His Body and Blood to be our meat and drink, or take them with weaker faith that they are indeed His Body and His Blood? Under the appearance of bread He giveth unto us His Body, and, under the appearance of wine, His Blood: and when thou shalt come to receive, it is on the Body and Blood of Christ that thou wilt feed, being made a partaker of His Body and of His Blood. Thus indeed it is that we become Christ-bearers,[1] namely, by carrying about Christ in our bodies, when we receive His Body and Blood into our own frames. Thus, as the blessed Peter hath it, we are "partakers of the Divine nature." (2 Pet. i. 4.)

[1] The next words relate to the form of words used in administering the Holy Communion where and when the writer lived. The translator believes it to be the same still in use in Abyssinia.

[2] Jan. 4.

[3] De veritate carnis et sanguinis non relictus est ambigendi locus.

[4] Elected A.D. 350. Suffered much persecution from the Arians, and died March 18, 386.

Sixth Lesson.

CHRIST once said, in conversing with the Jews: "Except ye eat the Flesh of the Son of Man, and drink His Blood, ye have no life in you." (John vi. 53.) But they took not spiritually that which He said, and "from that time many of His disciples went back, and walked no more with Him." (66.) They thought that He had bidden them to eat flesh. The Old Testament also had Shew-bread, but this Old Testament bread was now to have an end. The bread of the New Testament is "the Bread Which cometh down from heaven" (50), the cup of the New Testament, the Cup of Salvation, that Bread and that Cup Which hallow both souls and bodies. Wherefore I will have thee to understand that the Bread and Wine whereunto thou art to come, are not mere common bread or mere common wine; for they are the Body and the Blood of Christ. Even if thy senses do indeed deny this fact, yet let faith make thee right sure of it. Judge not the Thing by the taste thereof, but let faith assure thee beyond all doubt thou art partaking of the Body and Blood of Christ.

THIRD NOCTURN.

(Read in the Votive Office in November and December.)

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (vi. 56.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto the multitudes of the Jews: My Flesh is meat indeed, and My Blood is drink indeed. And so on.

Homily by St Cyril, Pope [of Alexandria.] (Book iv. on John, ch. 17.)

"He that eateth My Flesh and drinketh My Blood," saith the Lord, "dwelleth in Me, and I in him." If a man take two pieces of wax and melt them, and pour the one into the other, they necessarily mingle; so also, he that receiveth the Body and Blood of the Lord doth become so joined with the Lord that he is to be found in Christ and Christ in him. Another comparison thou wilt find in Matthew. The Lord there saith: "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, [till the whole was leavened,]" (xiii. 33,) because, as Paul saith, "a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." (Gal. v. 9.) So also doth a little of this Blessing draw the whole man unto Itself, and fill him with Its grace: and thus doth Christ dwell in us, and we in Christ.

Eighth Lesson.

AS for ourselves, if we would win life everlasting; if we would that the Giver of immortality should dwell in us, let us run freely to receive this Blessing, and let us beware that the devil succeed not in laying a stumbling-block in our way, in the shape of a mistaken reverence. Thou rightly sayest, and we know well, how that it is written: "Whosoever shall eat this Bread and drink this Cup of the Lord unworthily . . . eateth and drinketh damnation to himself." (1 Cor. xi. 27, 29.) I therefore examine myself and find myself unworthy. And I ask thee, who citest these words to me, who shall ever be found worthy? When wilt thou be such an one as may be worthy to be offered to Christ? If by sin thou art unworthy, and thou ceasest not to sin, (for, as the Psalmist hath it,—"Who can understand his errors?"—Ps. xviii. 13,) then shalt thou for ever lack this means of life and sanctification.

Ninth Lesson.

WHEREFORE, I counsel thee to betake thee to godly thoughts, and to live carefully and holily, and so to receive that Blessing—a Blessing which, believe me, doth banish, not death only, but all diseases likewise. For when Christ dwelleth in us, He stilleth the law of death in our members, which warreth against the law of our mind, (Rom. vii. 23,) He giveth strength to godliness, He turneth to calm the turbulent surging of our mind, He cureth them which are sick, He raiseth up them which are fallen, and, like the Good Shepherd, Which giveth His life for the sheep, He prevaileth that the sheep perish not.

Friday.

Sixth Day.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (viii. 4.)

THEN all the elders of Israël gathered themselves together, and came to Samuel unto Rama. And they said unto him: Behold, thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways; make us a King to judge us like all the nations. The thing displeased Samuel, that they said: Give us a King to judge us. And Samuel prayed unto the LORD.

First Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Second Lesson.

AND the LORD said unto Samuel: Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee. For they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected Me, that I should not reign over them. According to all the works which they have done since the day that I brought them up out of Egypt, even unto this day; wherewith they have forsaken Me, and served other gods, so do they also unto thee. Now, therefore, hearken unto their voice; howbeit yet protest solemnly unto them, and show them the manner of the king that shall reign over them.

[1] Christiferi.

Second Responsory.

Ye mountains of Gilboa, &c., (p. 420.)

Third Lesson.

AND Samuel told all the words of the LORD unto the people that asked of him a king, and he said: This will be the manner of the king that shall reign over you: he will take your sons, and appoint them for his chariots, and to be his horsemen, and to run before his chariots, and he will appoint him captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, and will set them to ear his ground, and to reap his harvest, and to make his instruments of war, and his chariots; and he will take your daughters to be confectionaries, and to be cooks, and to be bakers; and he will take your fields, and your vineyards, and your olive-yards, even the best of them, and give them to his servants.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (ix. 1.)

[1] NOW there was a man of Benjamin, whose name was Kish, the son of Abiel, the son of Zeror, the son of Beehorath, the son of Aphiah, a Benjamite, a mighty man of power. And he had a son whose name was Saul, a choice young man and a goodly; and there was not among the children of Israël a goodlier person than he; from his shoulders and upward he was higher than any of the people. And the asses of Kish, Saul's father, were lost; and Kish said to Saul his son: Take now one of the servants with thee, and arise, go seek the asses. And they passed through Mount Ephraim, and passed through the land of Shalisha, but they found them not; then they passed through the land of Shalim, and there they were not: and he passed through the land of the Benjamites, but they found them not.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

AND when they were come to the land of Zuph Saul said to his servant that was with him: Come, and let us return; lest my father leave caring for the asses, and take thought for us. And he said unto him: Behold now, there is in this city a man of God, and he is an honourable man; all that he saith cometh surely to pass. Now, let us go thither; peradventure he can show us our way that we should go, to find that whereafter we are come. Then said Saul to his servant: But, behold, if we go, what shall we bring the man of God? for the bread is spent in our vessels, and we have not a basket nor aught beside, that we may bring it for a present unto the man of God. And the servant answered Saul again: Behold, I have here in my hand the fourth part of a shekel of silver; that let us give to the man of God, to tell us our way.

Second Responsory.

O LORD, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson. (14.)

AND they went up into the city. And when they were come into the city, behold, Samuel came out against them, for to go up to the high place. Now the LORD had told Samuel in his ear, a day before Saul came, saying: To-morrow, about this time, I will send thee a man out of the land of Benjamin, and thou shalt anoint him to be Captain over My people Israël, and he shall save My people out of the hand of the Philistines; for I have looked upon My people; because their cry is come unto Me. And when Samuel saw Saul, the LORD said unto him: Behold the man whom I spake to thee of; this same shall reign over My people.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

Prayer until Vespers as on Sunday last.

At the beginning of the Martyrology, is said,
The morrow is the Feast of the Most Sacred heart of JESUS.

Vespers are of the Feast.

Third Sunday after Pentecost.

Feast of the Most Sacred Heart of JESUS.

Double of the First Class.

All as on Sundays, except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Ps. cix. The Lord said, &c., (p. 100.)
Ps. cx. I will praise Thee, &c., (p. 100.)
Ps. cxv. I believed, &c., (p. 105.)
Ps. cxxvii. Blessed is every one, &c., (p. 108.)
Ps. cxlvii. Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem, &c., (p. 114.)

Hymn.[2]

JESUS! Creator of the world!
Of all mankind Redeemer blest!
True God of God, in Whom we see
The Father's Image clear expressed!

Thee, Saviour! love alone constrained
To make our mortal flesh Thine Own,
And, as a second Adam, come
For the first Adam to atone.

[1] The Lessons formerly (and in England still) read on Friday relate how the Israëlites came to Samuel demanding a king, and God commanded him to act according to their wishes.

[2] Author unknown; translation by the Rev. E. Caswall.

That self-same love which made the sky,
Which made the sea, and stars, and earth,
Took pity on our misery,
And broke the bondage of our birth.

O JESUS! In Thy Heart Divine
May that same love for ever glow!
For ever mercy to mankind
From that exhaustless Fountain flow!

For this Thy Sacred Heart was pierced,
And both with Blood and Water ran—
To cleanse us from the stains of guilt,
And be the hope and strength of man.

To God the Father, and the Son,
All praise, and power, and glory be,
With Thee, O Holy Comforter!
Henceforth through all eternity. Amen.

Verse. [1] I am come to send fire on the earth,

Answer. And what will I, if it be already kindled?

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [2] My heart hath looked for reproach and bitterness; and I looked for some to take pity on me, and there was none; and for comforters, and I found none.

Commemoration of the Sunday.

Antiphon. And all [Israël] from Dan even to Beersheba knew that Samuel was established a Prophet of the Lord.

Verse. Let the evening prayer ascend unto Thee, O Lord.

Answer. And let there descend upon us Thy mercy.

Prayer.

O GOD, the Protector of all them that trust in Thee, without Whom nothing is strong, nothing is Holy; increase and multiply upon us Thy mercy, that Thou being our ruler and guide, we may so pass through things temporal, that we finally lose not the things eternal. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Christ suffered for us, * O come, let us worship Him!

Hymn.

OF sin and love the Lord had died:—
Of sin, but not His own—
Of love, self-sprung, that drew Him down
For sinners to atone.

And sin, when in the last strong cry
Had passed His latest breath,
Still aimed the soldier's spear to pierce
His pulseless Heart in death.

Sin pierced Him, but His love called life
Out of the Streams sin wrung:
The Church, from out His Heart of love,
In Blood and Water sprung.

Where men would drown in sin, He set
That Church o'er sin's black tide—
An Ark of safety, Whose wide Door
Was opened in His Side.

Love gave those Streams from out His Heart
In sevenfold tide to flow,
Wherefrom our robes by faith and love
May whiter rise than snow.

O may we lay our sins aside—
Those sins that pierced His Heart—
And pray of Him new hearts of flesh,
Hearts Christ-like, to impart.

Grant it, O Father, Only Son,
And Spirit, God of grace,
To whom all worship shall be done,
In every time and place. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [3] What is man, that Thou shouldest magnify him? and that Thou shouldest set Thine Heart upon him?

Psalm VIII.

O LORD, our Ruler, &c., (p. 4.)

Second Antiphon. Let the meditation of my heart be acceptable in Thy sight for ever.

Psalm XVIII.

The heavens declare, (p. 10.)

Third Antiphon. Be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors, and the King of glory shall come in.

Psalm XXIII.

The earth is the LORD'S, &c., (p. 26.)

Verse. [4] LORD, Thou wilt ordain peace for us,—

Answer. For Thou hast also wrought all our works for us.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Isaiah (xii. 1.)

O LORD, I will praise Thee; though Thou wast angry with me, Thine anger is turned away, and Thou comfortedst me. Behold, God is my salvation; I will trust, and not be afraid; for the LORD is my strength and my song; He also is become my salvation. Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of the Saviour; and in that day shall ye say: Praise the LORD, and call upon His Name; [declare His doings among the people;] make mention that His Name is exalted. Sing unto the LORD, for He hath done excellent things; make ye this known in all the earth. Cry out and shout, thou inhabitant of Zion, for great is the Holy One of Israël in the midst of thee!

First Responsory.

[5] I am that Bread of life. Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead. This is the Bread Which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

Verse. I am the living Bread Which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this Bread, he shall live for ever.

Answer. This is the Bread Which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

Second Lesson. (xxvi. 1.)

IN that day shall this song be sung in the land of Judah. [6] Zion is our strong city, the Saviour will God appoint in her for walls and bulwarks. Open ye the gates, that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth may enter in. The former wandering is past: Thou shalt keep lasting peace, because our trust is stayed on Thee. Ye trust in the LORD for ever, in the LORD GOD mighty for ever. For He bringeth down them that dwell on high, the lofty city, He shall lay it low, He shall lay it low, even to the ground.

[2] Ps. lxviii. 21.

[3] Job vii. 17.

[4] Isa. xxvi. 12.

[5] John vi. 48-52.

[6] Zion, not in the Hebrew.

Second Responsory.

[1] Behold, when we shall see Him, He hath no form nor comeliness: there is no beauty in Him: this is He Which hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows; but He was wounded for our transgressions, and with His stripes we are healed.

Verse. Surely He hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows.

Answer. And with His stripes we are healed.

Third Lesson. (v. 7.)

THE way of the just is upright, the path wherein the just walketh is upright. Yea, in the way of Thy judgments, O LORD, have we waited for Thee; the desire of our soul is to Thy name, and to the remembrance of Thee. With my soul have I desired Thee in the night; yea, with mine inmost spirit will I seek Thee early. When Thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness.

Third Responsory.

[2] Blessed be the LORD God of hosts, Who only doeth wondrous things. And blessed be His glorious Name for ever.

Verse. And let the whole earth be filled with His glory. Amen. Amen.

Answer. And blessed be His glorious Name for ever.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And blessed be His glorious Name for ever.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. With gladness and rejoicing shall they be brought; they shall enter into the King's palace.

Psalm XLIV.

My heart is overflowing, &c., (p. 54.)

Second Antiphon. The Most High hath hallowed His Tabernacle.

Psalm XLV.

God is our refuge, &c., (p. 55.)

Third Antiphon. All they that dwell in thee are in gladness.

Psalm LXXXVI.

Her foundation, &c., (p. 82.)

Verse. Thine anger is turned away.

Answer. And Thou comfortedst me.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (3rd on the Lord's Passion.)

NOW that we have once reached the Heart of JESUS, that Heart of exceeding sweetness, and know how that "it is good for us to be here," (Matth. xvii. 4,) let us never again suffer ourselves to be torn away from Him concerning Whom it is written: "They that depart from Thee shall be written in the earth." (Jer. xvii. 13.) But what portion is theirs that draw nigh unto Thee, Thou Thyself, O Lord, dost tell us, for Thou hast said unto such: "Rejoice, because your names are written in heaven." (Luke x. 20.) Unto Thee therefore let us draw nigh — "we will be glad and rejoice in Thee" when "we remember Thine" Heart. (Cant. i. 3.) "Behold, how good and pleasant it is to dwell in" (Ps. cxxxii. 1) this Heart! Yea, let me cast away all things, all my thoughts, and all my feelings, let me cast them all away, and let me "cast all my care" (1 Pet. v. 7) upon the Heart of the Lord JESUS "and He shall sustain me." (Ps. liv. 23.)

Fourth Responsory.

[3] He that eateth My Flesh and drinketh My Blood, dwelleth in Me, and I in him. * P. T. Alleluia.

Verse. [4] What nation is there so great, who hath gods so nigh unto them, as the LORD our God is to us?

Answer. Dwelleth in Me, and I in him. * P. T. Alleluia.

Fifth Lesson.

TOWARD this Temple, toward this Holy of Holies, towards this Ark of the covenant, "will I worship and praise Thy Name" (Ps. cxxxvii. 2) saying with David: "Thy servant hath found in his heart to pray this prayer unto Thee" (2 Kings vii. 27.) And I have found the Heart of JESUS, the Heart of my King, my Brother, and my tender Friend. And am I not to worship? Yea, O JESUS most sweet, now that I have found this Heart, Which is both Thine and mine, I will worship Thee, O my God! And, O, do Thou graciously let my supplication enter into that Sanctuary of mercy! Draw me altogether into that Heart of Thine! O JESUS, in the Perfection of Thy beauty fairer than the children of men, wash Thou me "thoroughly from mine iniquity and cleanse me from my sin," (Ps. l. 4,) that, being made pure by Thee, I may be able to come unto Thee, Who art Thyself most Pure, and that I may be meet "to dwell in Thy" Heart "all the days of my life, to behold" (Ps. xxvi. 4) Thee, and to be strong to do Thy will.

Fifth Responsory.

[5] He hath been brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and while he was evil-entreated he opened not his mouth: he was delivered up to death, that he might quicken his people.

Verse. [6] He hath poured out his soul unto death, and he was numbered with the transgressors.

Answer. That he might quicken his people.

Sixth Lesson.

TO this end was Thy Side pierced, that we might find a wide entrance there. To this end was Thine Heart wounded, that we might be able to dwell in It and in Thee, "hidden in the secret of Thy presence from the troubling of men." (Ps. xxx. 21.) Nevertheless, It was pierced to this end also, that behind that Bodily Wound which we see, we may perceive that wound of love which is not bodily. And how could that love be more strikingly shown than it is by Him Who hath given, not His Body only, but His very Heart, to be pierced for us? The bodily wound showeth the spiritual. Who is there that would not love that wounded Heart? Who would not return love for love to Him That hath loved so well? Who would not embrace Him Who standeth so pure? While, therefore, we yet linger here in this body, let us love and love again Him Who hath first loved us, let us lay hold on that Wounded One, Wounded for us, Whose Hands and Feet, Whose Side and Heart, the wicked husbandmen have so pierced. (Matth. xxi. 35-39.) Let us stand waiting till He be pleased to constrain with the bond, and pierce with the spear, of His love, these hearts of ours that still are so hard and unrepentant. (So far St Bernard.)

[6] Isa. liii. 12.

The Supreme Pontiff Clement XIII., to the end that Christ's faithful people might in still more godly and earnest sort call to mind, and more readily drink in the fruits of, the wondrous love of Him Who suffered for us, Who laid down His life for the redemption of man, and who hath instituted the Sacrament of His Own Body and Blood for a continual showing-forth of His death, of which love His Most Sacred Heart is an embodiment, granted the prayer of certain Churches, which desired to observe a Festival in honour of the said Most Sacred Heart.

This Feast Pius IX. extended to the whole Church, and at length the Supreme Pontiff, Leo XIII., in accordance with the wishes of the whole Catholic world, raised it to the rank of a Double of the First Class.

Sixth Responsory.

[1] Great is the LORD, and greatly to be praised, and His Wisdom is unsearchable.

Verse. [2] Great is our Lord, and of great power, and His understanding is infinite.

Answer. And His Wisdom is unsearchable.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And His Wisdom is unsearchable.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Show forth His salvation from day to day.

Psalm XCV.

O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 85.)

Second Antiphon. Worship Him, all ye His Angels!—Zion heard, and was glad.

Psalm XCVI.

The LORD reigneth, &c., (p. 85.)

Third Antiphon. All the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God.

Psalm XCVII.

O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 89.)

Verse. [3] Out of Zion, the Perfection of beauty,—

Answer. Our God shall come manifestly.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xix. 31.)

AT that time: The Jews, because it was the Preparation, that the bodies should not remain upon the cross on the Sabbath-day (for that Sabbath was an high day) besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (120*th Tract on John.*)

"One of the soldiers with a spear pierced His Side, and forthwith came thereout Blood and Water." The Evangelist speaketh carefully. He saith not that He smote the Side, nor yet that he wounded It, nor yet anything else, but "pierced"—"pierced" It, to fling wide the entrance unto life, whence flow the Sacraments of the Church, those Sacraments without which there is no entrance unto the life which is life indeed. That Blood Which was shed there was shed for the remission of sins, that Water is the water that mantleth in the cup of salvation. Therein are we washed and thereof do we drink. Of this was it a type when it was said unto Noah: "The door of the ark shalt thou set in the side thereof . . . . and of every living thing of all flesh shalt thou bring into the ark . . . . to keep them alive." (Gen. vi. 16, 19.) A figure this of the Church.

Seventh Responsory.

[4] As the living Father hath sent Me, and I live by the Father, so he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me. * P. T. Alleluia.

Verse. [5] With the bread of life and understanding hath the Lord fed him.

Answer. So he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me. * P. T. Alleluia.

Eighth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Homilies of St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (84*th on John.*)

SEEST thou the power of the truth? The act of the Jews was a mean to the fulfilment of prophecy, whereby another truth was made manifest. "Then came the soldiers, and brake the legs of the first, and of the other, which was crucified with Him. But when they came to JESUS, and saw that He was dead already, they brake not His Legs; but one of the soldiers with a spear pierced His Side." Willing to do the Jews a pleasure, that man outraged his Redeemer even in death—vile and iniquitous willingness! But rest Thou still, O Thou Whom my soul loveth!—they thought to do it wickedly, but they did service to the truth. "For these things were done that the Scripture should be fulfilled: 'A bone of him shall not be broken'—and again another Scripture saith: 'They shall look on Him Whom they pierced.'" Nor was it done for this alone, but it was afterward a mean to faith for Thomas and them that were with him. And yet again another great mystery was here established, for: "forthwith came thereout Blood and Water." Nor idly nor perchance sprang forth that twofold fountain, for the Church, like her Great Head, "came by Water and Blood—not by Water only, but by Water and Blood." (1 John v. 6.)

Eighth Responsory.

Our Shepherd, even the Fountain of living waters, is gone from us; He passed away, and the sun was darkened. Our Saviour hath burst the gates and bars of death.

Verse. The bands of hell He hath utterly abolished, and hath done away the power of the devil.

Answer. Our Saviour hath burst the gates and bars of death.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Our Saviour hath burst the gates and bars of death.

Ninth Blessing.

May the Gospel's glorious word
Cleansing to our souls afford.

Ninth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xv. 1.)

AT that time: There drew near unto JESUS the publicans and sinners, for to hear Him. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (34*th on the Gospels.*)

Ye have heard, my brethren, from the Gospel which hath but now been read, how that the publicans and sinners drew near unto our Redeemer, and how that He received them, not only to converse, but also to eat with Him. And when the Pharisees and Scribes saw it, they murmured. From this learn ye, that true righteousness is merciful, and false righteousness is contemptuous, albeit that the righteous also oft-times feel moved with just indignation at sinners. But it is one thing to feel thus indignant through pride, and another to feel so through love of law. The righteous indeed look down upon sinners, and yet, as not despising them; they abandon them, and yet, as not without hope; they fight against them, and yet, as loving them all the while; for if they be behoven to chasten them grievously as touching the outer man, yet is it through charity which offereth sweetness to their inner man. In their hearts they prefer before themselves them whom they are correcting; they hold as better than themselves them whom they judge. And thus doing, they watch by carefulness over them, which are committed unto their charge, and, by lowly-mindedness, over themselves. On the other hand, they whose exaltation cometh of a false righteousness, look down upon their neighbour, but are softened by no mercy toward his misery, and are all the more sinful, because they perceive not that they themselves are sinners. Of such were those Pharisees who judged the Lord because He received sinners, and, in the dryness of their own heart, rebuked the very Fountain of mercy. They were sick of so desperate a sickness that they knew not of themselves that they were sick; but, that they might know that they were so, the Heavenly Physician applied to them His tender ointments, and, by means of a gracious parable, lanced the boil of their pride of heart.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. [1] Learn of Me, * for I am meek and lowly in Heart.

Second Antiphon. [2] I have sanctified this place, * that My Name may be there for ever, and Mine eyes, and Mine heart shall be there perpetually.

Third Antiphon. [3] And I said: Then have I cleansed my heart * in vain, and washed my hands in innocency, for all the day long have I been plagued.

Fourth Antiphon. [4] In the multitude of the sorrows * within my heart, Thy comforts delight my soul.

Fifth Antiphon. [5] Set me as a seal upon thine heart, * as a seal upon thine arm.

Chapter. (Isa. xii. 2, 3.)

BEHOLD, God is my salvation; I will trust, and not be afraid; for the LORD is my strength and my song; He also is become my salvation. Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of the Saviour.

Hymn.

JESUS! behind Thy Temple's Veil,
Hid in an ark of gold,
On stones engraven, lay the Law
Thy finger wrote of old.

But, in Thy Body's Temple new,
Thy Life-Blood's throbbing Shrine,
Held, upon Fleshly Tables graved,
The Law of love Divine.

And when that Heart in death was stilled,
Each Temple's Veil was riven:—
And lo! within Thy love's red Shrine
To us to look was given!

There make us gaze—and see the love
Which drew Thee, for our sake,—
O Great High Priest!—Thyself to God
A Sacrifice to make.

Thou, Saviour! cause that every soul
Which Thou hast loved so well,
May will within Thine opened Heart
In life and death to dwell.

Grant it, O Father, Only Son,
And Spirit, God of grace,
To Whom all worship shall be done
In every time and place. Amen.

Verse. [6] Surely He hath borne our griefs.

Answer. And carried our sorrows.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias.

[6] He was wounded for our transgressions. He was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon Him, and with His stripes we are healed.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O ALMIGHTY God, grant, we beseech Thee, that all we who do make our boast in the most Holy Heart of Thy well-beloved Son, and do tell of the wondrous works of His love to us-ward, may be blessed in knowing both what He hath wrought for us and also what He is able and willing to work in us. Through the Same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Verse. Let my prayer, O Lord, be set forth.

Answer. As incense before Thee.

Prayer as at Commemoration on Saturday evening.

The Offices for the Sundays and Week-days between this point and the Saturday evening before Advent Sunday are no longer, as heretofore, to be found in one place. The Proper Office of the Season occupies three sections, placed in the order of the Nocturns to which they belong. These sections are arranged to contain as follows:—

I. Lessons from the Books of Kings for every day for nine weeks, together with Lessons for the Second Nocturn of each of the nine Sundays, and Antiphons for the Song of the Blessed Virgin on each preceding Saturday evening. This section is begun on the Monday of the Third Week after Pentecost and continued till the Saturday preceding that Sunday which is nearest to the first day of the month of August. If there then remains any part of it unread that part is for that year entirely omitted.

II. The Lessons for the Ember-Days of September are Homilies on the Gospels, taken from the Venerable Bede, and St Gregory the Great; and in this translation, though not so in the original, there are inserted into this Section the complete offices of a few Festivals the observance of which is coextensive with that of the Roman Rite, and which are fixed on certain of the Sundays. On the Sunday nearest to the first day of the month of August is begun the Book of Proverbs, and this Section contains lessons for every day for five weeks in each of the months of August, September, October, and November, taken from Proverbs, Ecclesi-

Here also is to be found the Prayer for each Sunday, which Prayer is read from the Saturday evening preceding the Sunday to which it belongs till None on the Saturday following, except in special cases and in that of Festivals falling after the Sunday. To these are added, for convenience' sake, a reprint of such parts of the Offices for the four Sundays (the Third, Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth) after the Epiphany as may have been dropped owing to the earliness of Easter, and are now to be used for the Sundays which would otherwise be vacant between the 23rd after Pentecost and that next before Advent.

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (x. 17.)

AND Samuel called the people together unto the LORD to Mizpeh, and said unto the children of Israël: Thus saith the LORD God of Israël: I brought up Israël out of Egypt, and delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of all kings that oppressed you. And ye have this day rejected your God, Who Himself Alone saved you out of all your adversities and your tribulations, and ye have said unto Him: Nay, but set a king over us. Now therefore, present yourselves before the LORD by your tribes and by your families.

First Responsory.

Remember, O Lord, Thy covenant, and say unto the destroying Angel: Stay now thine hand, that the land be not utterly laid waste, and that thou destroy not every living soul.

Verse. [1] Even I it is that have sinned, and done evil indeed: but these sheep what have they done? Let Thine anger, I pray Thee, O LORD, be turned away from Thy people.

Answer. That the land be not utterly laid waste, and that Thou destroy not every living soul.

Second Lesson.

AND when Samuel had caused all the tribes of Israël to come near, the tribe of Benjamin was taken. And when he had caused the tribe of Benjamin to come near by their families, the family of Metri was taken. And Saul the son of Kish was taken. And when they sought him he could not be found. Therefore they enquired of the LORD further, if the man should yet come thither. And the LORD answered: Behold, he hath hid himself in the house. And they ran and fetched him thence: and when he stood among the people he was higher than any of the people from his shoulders and upward. And Samuel said to all the people: Ye see him whom the LORD hath chosen, that there is none like him among all the people. And all the people shouted and said: God save the King!

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

THEN Samuel told the people the manner of the kingdom, and wrote it in a book, and laid it up before the LORD; and Samuel sent all the people away, every man to his house. And Saul also went home to Gibeah; and there went with him a band of men whose hearts God had touched. But the children of Belial said: How shall this man save us? And they despised him and brought him no presents: but he made as though he heard it not.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (xii. 1.)

AND Samuel said unto all Israël: Behold, I have hearkened unto your voice in all that ye said unto me, and have made a king over you. And now, behold, the king walketh before you. And I am old and grayheaded; and behold my sons are with you. And I have walked before you from my childhood unto this day; behold, here I am. Witness against me before the LORD, and before His Anointed, whose ox have I taken, or whose ass have I taken? Whom have I defrauded, whom have I oppressed, or of whose hand have I received any bribe? And I will condemn myself this day, and will restore it you. And they said: Thou hast not defrauded us, nor oppressed us, neither hast thou taken aught of any man's hand. And he said unto them: The LORD is witness against you, and His Anointed is witness this day, that ye have not found aught in my hand. And they answered: He is witness.

First Responsory.

[2] Lord, when Thy people shall turn again to Thee, and shall pray unto Thee in this house, then hear Thou in heaven, O Lord, and deliver them out of the hand of their enemies.

Verse. If Thy people sin against Thee, and turn again, and repent, and come and pray unto Thee in this house.

Answer. Then hear Thou in heaven, O Lord, and deliver them out of the hand of their enemies.

Second Lesson.

AND Samuel said unto the people: It is the LORD That advanced Moses and Aaron, and That brought your fathers up out of the land of Egypt. Now therefore, stand still, that I may reason with you before the Lord, of all the merciful acts of the Lord, which He did to you and to your fathers. When Jacob was come into Egypt, and your fathers cried unto the Lord; then the Lord sent Moses and Aaron, and brought forth your fathers out of Egypt, and made them dwell in this place. And when they forgat the Lord their God, He sold them into the hand of Sisera, captain of the host of Hazor, and into the hand of the Philistines, and into the hand of the king of Moab, and they fought against them.

[1] 2 Kings (Sam.) xxiv. 17; 1 Par. (Chron.) xxi. 17.

[2] 3 (1) Kings viii. 33.

Second Responsory.

[1] And it came to pass when the Lord would take up Elijah into heaven by a whirlwind;—Elisha cried, and said: My father, my father, the chariot of Israël, and the horsemen thereof.

Verse. And as they still went on, and talked, behold, there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder, and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven.

Answer. Elisha cried, and said: My father, my father, the chariot of Israël, and the horsemen thereof.

Third Lesson.

AFTERWARD they cried unto the Lord, and said: We have sinned, because we have forsaken the Lord, and have served Baalim and Ashtaroth: but now deliver us out of the hand of our enemies, and we will serve Thee. And the Lord sent Jerubbaal,[2] and Bedan,[3] and Jephthah, and Samuel, and delivered you out of the hand of your enemies on every side, and ye dwelled safe. And when ye saw that Nahash, the king of the children of Ammon, came against you, ye said unto me: "Nay; but a king shall reign over us,"—when the Lord your God was your King. Now therefore, behold your king, whom ye have chosen, and whom ye have desired. Behold, the Lord hath set a king over you. If ye will fear the Lord, and serve Him, and obey His voice, and not rebel against the commandment of the Lord, then shall both ye, and also the king that reigneth over you, continue following the Lord your God.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the Lord: I took thee, &c., (p. 420.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (xiii. 1.)

SAUL reigned one year, and when he had reigned two years over Israël, Saul chose him three thousand men of Israël: whereof two thousand were with Saul in Michmash, and in mount Bethel, and a thousand were with Jonathan in Gibeah of Benjamin. And the rest of the people he sent every man to his tent. And Jonathan smote the garrison of the Philistines that was in Geba. And when the Philistines heard of it, Saul blew the trumpet throughout all the land, saying: Let the Hebrews hear. And all Israël heard say that Saul had smitten a garrison of the Philistines, and that Israël was raised against the Philistines. And the people were called together after Saul to Gilgal.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

AND the Philistines gathered themselves together to fight with Israël, thirty thousand chariots, and six thousand horsemen, and people as the sand which is on the sea-shore in multitude. And they came up and pitched in Michmash, eastward from Bethaven. When the men of Israël saw that they were in a strait, (for the people were distressed,) then the people did hide themselves in caves, and in thickets, and in rocks, and in caverns, and in cisterns. And some of the Hebrews went over Jordan to the land of Gad and Gilead. As for Saul, he was yet in Gilgal, and all the people followed him trembling. And he tarried seven days according to the set time that Samuel had appointed, but Samuel came not to Gilgal, and the people were scattered from him.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

AND Saul said: Bring hither a burnt-offering to me, and peace-offerings. And he offered the burnt-offering. And it came to pass that as soon as he had made an end of offering the burnt-offering, behold, Samuel came: and Saul went out to meet him, that he might salute him. And Samuel said unto him: What hast thou done? And Saul said: Because I saw that the people were scattered from me, and that thou camest not within the days appointed, and that the Philistines gathered themselves together at Michmash, therefore said I: The Philistines will come down now upon me to Gilgal, and I have not made supplication unto the Lord. I forced myself therefore, and offered a burnt-offering. And Samuel said to Saul: Thou hast done foolishly, thou hast not kept the commandment of the Lord thy God, which He commanded thee. For, now, if thou hadst not done it, the Lord would have established thy kingdom upon Israël for ever, but now thy kingdom shall not continue. The Lord hath sought Him a man after His own heart; and the Lord hath commanded him to be Captain over His people, because thou hast not kept that which the Lord commanded thee.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O Lord, &c., (p. 421.)

[1] 4 (2) Kings ii. 1, 12, 11.

[2] "Let-Baal-defend-himself"—a nickname of Gideon, from the remark made by his father to save him from the vengeance of the idolaters for hewing down their altar and cutting down their grove. (Judges vi. 32.) The true believers altered this into "Jerub-beshesh"—i.e., "Let-the-shameful-thing-defend-itself."

[3] This name occurs nowhere else, and appears most probably to indicate Samson under the name of Ben-Dan, or the Danite, contracted or corrupted into Bedan.

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (xiv. 6.)

AND Jonathan said to the young man that bare his armour: Come, and let us go over unto the garrison of these uncircumcised, it may be that the LORD will work for us; for there is no restraint to the LORD, to save by many or by few. And his armour-bearer said unto him: Do all that is in thine heart; turn thee where thou willest, and I will be with thee wherever thou wilt go. Then said Jonathan: Behold, we will pass over unto these men, and when we discover ourselves unto them, if they say thus, Tarry until we come to you, then we will stand still in our place, and will not go up unto them. But if they say thus, Come up unto us, then we will go up, for the LORD hath delivered them into our hand; and this shall be a sign unto us. And both of them discovered themselves unto the garrison of the Philistines, and the Philistines said: Behold, the Hebrews come forth out of the holes, where they had hid themselves.

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, &c., (p. 419.)

Second Lesson.

AND the men of the garrison spake unto Jonathan and his armour-bearer, and said: Come up to us, and we will show you a thing. And Jonathan said unto his armour-bearer: Let us go up, follow me; for the LORD hath delivered them into the hand of Israël. And Jonathan climbed up upon his hands and upon his feet, and his armour-bearer after him. And some fell before Jonathan, and some his armour-bearer slew after him. And that first slaughter which Jonathan and his armour-bearer made was about twenty men, within, as it were, an half acre of land, which a yoke of oxen might plough. And there was trembling in the host, in the field, and among all the people, the garrison and the spoilers, they also trembled and the earth quaked: so it was as a wonder from God.

Second Responsory.

God Which heareth, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson.

AND the watchmen of Saul in Gibeah of Benjamin looked, and, behold, the multitude was beaten and melted away. Then said Saul unto the people that were with him: Number now, and see who is gone from us. And when they had numbered, behold, Jonathan and his armour-bearer were not there. And Saul said unto Ahiah: Bring hither the Ark of God. (For the Ark of God was at that time with the children of Israël.) And it came to pass while Saul talked unto the Priest, that the noise that was in the host of the Philistines went on and increased. And Saul said unto the Priest: Withdraw thine hand. And Saul and all the people that were with him assembled themselves, and they came to the battle, and, behold, every man's sword was against his fellow, and there was a very great slaughter.

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered, &c., (p. 420.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (xv. 1.)

SAMUEL also said unto Saul: The LORD sent me to anoint thee to be king over His people Israël; now therefore, hearken thou unto the voice of the LORD. Thus saith the LORD of hosts: I remember that which Amalek did to Israël; how he laid wait for him in the way, when he came up from Egypt. Now therefore, go and smite Amalek, and utterly destroy all that they have; spare them not, and set not thine eyes upon any of their goods to desire them, but slay both man and woman, infant and suckling, ox and sheep, camel and ass.

First Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Second Lesson.

AND Saul gathered the people together and numbered them like sheep, two hundred thousand foot, and ten thousand men of Judah. And Saul came to a city of Amalek, and laid wait in the valley. And Saul said unto the Kenites: Go, depart, get you down from among the Amalekites, lest I destroy you with them. For ye showed kindness to all the children of Israël, when they came up out of Egypt. So the Kenites departed from among the Amalekites. And Saul smote the Amalekites from Havila until thou comest unto Shur, that is over against Egypt. And he took Agag the king of the Amalekites alive: and utterly destroyed all the people with the edge of the sword.

Second Responsory.

Ye mountains of Gilboa, &c., (p. 420.)

Third Lesson.

BUT Saul and the people spared Agag, and the best of the sheep and of the oxen, and of the garments, and of the rams, and all that was good, and would not utterly destroy them; but everything that was vile and refuse, that they destroyed utterly. Then came the word of the LORD unto Samuel, saying: It repenteth Me that I have set up Saul to be King, for he is turned back from following Me, and hath not performed My commandments. And it grieved Samuel, and he cried unto the LORD all night.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD: I took thee, &c., (p. 420.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (xvi. 1.)

AND the Lord said unto Samuel: How long wilt thou mourn for Saul, seeing that I have rejected him from reigning over Israël? Fill thine horn with oil and go, I will send thee to Jesse the Bethlehemite; for I have provided Me a king among his sons. And Samuel said: How can I go? For Saul will hear it, and kill me. And the LORD said: Take an heifer with thee, and say: I am come to sacrifice to the LORD. And call Jesse to the sacrifice, and I will show thee what thou shalt do, and thou shalt anoint unto Me him whom I name unto thee.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

AND Samuel did that which the LORD spake, and came to Bethlehem. And the elders of the town marvelled, and came to meet him, and said: Comest thou peaceably? And he said: Peaceably; I am come to sacrifice unto the LORD; sanctify yourselves, and come with me to the sacrifice. And he sanctified Jesse and his sons, and called them to the sacrifice. And it came to pass, when they were come, that he looked on Eliab, and said: Surely the LORD'S Anointed is before Him? But the LORD said unto Samuel: Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature, because I have refused him; for I judge not as man judgeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

THEN Jesse called Abinadab, and made him pass before Samuel. And he said: Neither hath the LORD chosen this. Then Jesse made Shamma to pass by, and he said: Neither hath the LORD chosen this. Again Jesse made seven of his sons to pass before Samuel, and Samuel said unto Jesse: The LORD hath not chosen these. And Samuel said unto Jesse: Are here all thy children? And he said: There remaineth yet the youngest, and he keepeth the sheep. And Samuel said unto Jesse: Send, and fetch him.[1]

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. So David prevailed * over the Philistine with a sling, and with a stone, in the name of the Lord.

Prayer of the succeeding Sunday.

The Offices for the Sundays and Week-days between this point and the Saturday evening before Advent Sunday are no longer, as heretofore, to be found in one place. The Proper Office of the Season occupies three sections, placed in the order of the Nocturns to which they belong. These sections are arranged to contain as follows:—

I. Lessons from the Books of Kings for every day for eight weeks, together with Lessons for the Second Nocturn of each of the nine Sundays, and Antiphons for the Song of the Blessed Virgin on each preceding Saturday evening. This Section is begun on the Third Sunday after Pentecost and continued till the Saturday preceding that Sunday which is nearest to the first day of the month of August. If there then remains any part of it unread that part is for that year entirely omitted.

II. On the Sunday nearest to the first day of the month of August is begun the Book of Proverbs, and this Section contains lessons for every day for five weeks in each of the months of August, September, October, and November, taken from Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus, Job, Tobit, Judith, Esther, 1st and 2nd Machabees, Ezekiel, Daniel, and the Minor Prophets. As the first Sunday of each month is reckoned to be that nearest to the first day of the same month, some of these weeks are always omitted. This Section contains likewise Lessons for the Second Nocturn of the Sundays, and Antiphons for the Song of the Blessed Virgin on each preceding Saturday evening, the first read being "Wisdom hath built, &c.," on the eve of the first Sunday of August. The Lessons for the Ember-Days of September are Homilies on the Gospels, taken from the Venerable Bede, and St Gregory the Great; and in this translation, though not so in the original, there are inserted into this Section the complete offices of a few Festivals the observance of which is coextensive with that of the Roman Rite, and which are fixed on certain of the Sundays.

III. Those parts of the Offices, for the Sundays from the Third to the Twenty-third Sunday after Pentecost, and for the Sunday next before Advent, which depend upon the Gospels for each of those Sundays respectively; that is to say, the Lessons for the Third Nocturn and the Antiphons for the Songs of Zacharias and of the Blessed Virgin Mary. Here also is to be found the Prayer for each Sunday, which Prayer is read from the Saturday evening preceding the Sunday to which it belongs till None on the Saturday following, except in special cases and in that of Festivals falling after the Sunday. To these are added, for convenience' sake, in this translation, though not in the original, a reprint of such parts of the Offices for the four Sundays (the Third, Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth) after the Epiphany as may have been dropped owing to the earliness of Easter, and are now to be used for the Sundays which would otherwise be vacant between the 23rd after Pentecost and that next before Advent.

[1] Verse 13. "Then Samuel took the horn of oil and anointed him (David) in the midst of his brethren, and the Spirit of the LORD came upon David from that day forward."

Fourth Sunday after Pentecost.

The Fourth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (xvii. 1.)

NOW the Philistines gathered together their armies to battle, and were gathered together at Shochoh, which belongeth to Judah, and pitched between Shochoh and Azekah, in the coast of the Dammim. And Saul and the men of Israël were gathered together, and came into the valley of the Oak, and set the battle in array against the Philistines. And the Philistines stood on a mountain on the one side, and Israël stood on a mountain on the other side, and there was a valley between them. And there went out of the camp of the Philistines one base-born, named Goliath of Gath, whose height was six cubits and a span: and he had an helmet of brass upon his head, and he was clothed with a coat of mail covered with scales of metal. And the weight of the coat was five thousand shekels of brass. And he had greaves of brass upon his legs, and a target of brass between his shoulders. And the staff of his spear was like a weaver's beam. And his spear's head weighed six hundred shekels of iron, and his armour-bearer went before him.

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, &c., (p. 419.)

Second Lesson.

AND he stood and cried unto the armies of Israël, and said unto them: Why are ye come out to set your battle in array? Am not I a Philistine, and ye servants of Saul? Choose you a man for you, and let him come down to me to single combat. If he be able to fight with me, and to kill me, then will we be your servants: but if I prevail against him and kill him, then shall ye be our servants and serve us. And the Philistine said: I defy the armies of Israël this day: give me a man that we may fight together. When Saul and all Israël heard those words of the Philistine, they were dismayed and greatly afraid.

Second Responsory.

God Which heareth, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson.

NOW David was the son of that aforesaid Ephrathite of Bethlehem-Judah, whose name was Jesse, who had eight sons, and was an old man in the days of Saul, and an elder among men. And his three eldest sons went and followed Saul to the battle; and the names of his three sons that went to the battle were Eliab the first-born, and next unto him Abinadab, and the third Shamma. And David was the youngest. And the three eldest followed Saul, but David went and returned from Saul, to feed his father's sheep at Bethlehem. And the Philistine drew near morning and evening, and presented himself forty days.

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered me, &c., (p. 420.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (197*th for the Season.*)

THE children of Israël faced their enemies for forty days. These forty days, by reason of the four Seasons of the year, and of the four Continents of the globe, are a figure of this present life, during which the Christian world ceaseth not to be arrayed in battle against the devil and his angels, as it were against Goliath and the army of the Philistines. Neither can they hope to overcome him, were it not for the true David, that is, Christ, with His staff, that is, with the Mystery of His Cross. For before Christ came, my dearly beloved brethren, the devil was at large. But when Christ came, He did to him what is written in the Gospel, where it is said: "How can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man?" Christ therefore came, and bound the devil.

Fourth Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 421.)

Fifth Lesson.

BUT some man will say: If he is bound, why is he still so powerful? It is quite true, my dearly beloved brethren, that he is very powerful; but his lordship is over the lukewarm and the careless, and such as fear not God in truth. He is chained up like a dog, and can only bite those who are such suicidal fools as to go within the length of his tether. Look you, my brethren, what a dolt a man must be who getteth himself bitten by a dog that is chained up. Let not the desires and lusts of the world draw thee within reach of him, and he will not be able to get at thee. He can bark, he can whine; but he can only bite those who are willing to be bitten. He assaileth us, not by violence, but by persuasion; he asketh, not seizeth, our consent.

Fifth Responsory.

Ye mountains of Gilboa, &c., (p. 421.)

Sixth Lesson.

DAVID, then, came, and found the Jewish people set in battle array against the devil; and since there was no one who dared to go to single combat, he, who was a type of Christ, sallied out to the battle, took his staff in his hand, and went forth against Goliath. In him was a shadow of a substance which is in Christ. Christ, the true David, when He went forth to fight against the spiritual Goliath, that is to say, against the devil, went forth bearing His Cross. Ye see, my brethren, in what part it was that David smote Goliath; it was upon that forehead whereon the Cross had never been traced. And as the staff of David was a figure of the Cross of Christ, so was the stone wherewith the giant was smitten a figure of the Lord Himself.

Sixth Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (xvii. 25.)

AND the men of Israël said: Have ye seen this man that is come up? Surely to defy Israël is he come up. And it shall be that the man who killeth him the king will enrich him with great riches, and will give him his daughter, and make his father's house free in Israël. And David spake to the men that stood by him, saying: What shall be done to the man that killeth this Philistine, and taketh away the reproach from Israël? For who is this uncircumcised Philistine, that he should defy the armies of the living God?

First Responsory.

Remember, &c., (p. 445.)

Second Lesson. (31.)

AND when the words were heard which David spake, they rehearsed them before Saul. [And he sent for him.] And, when he was brought before him, David said to Saul: Let no man's heart fail because of him: thy servant will go, and fight with this Philistine. And Saul said to David: Thou art not able to go against the Philistine, to fight with him; for thou art but a youth, and he a man of war from his youth.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

AND David said unto Saul: Thy servant kept his father's sheep, and there came a lion and a bear, and took a lamb out of the flock; and I went out after him and smote him, and delivered it out of his mouth: and when he arose against me, I caught him by his beard, and choked him, and slew him. Thy servant slew both the lion and the bear; and this uncircumcised Philistine shall be as one of them.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (xvii. 38.)

AND Saul armed David with his armour, and he put an helmet of brass upon his head; also he armed him with a coat of mail. And David girded his sword upon his armour, and he essayed to go, for he had not proved it. And David said unto Saul: I cannot go with these, for I have not proved them. And David put them off him, and he took his staff in his hand, and chose him five smooth stones out of the brook, and put them in a shepherd's bag which he had, and his sling was in his hand, and he drew near to the Philistine.

First Responsory.

Lord, when Thy people, &c., (p. 445.)

Second Lesson.

AND the Philistine came on and drew near unto David, and his armour-bearer went before him. And when the Philistine looked about, and saw David, he disdained him. For he was but a youth, ruddy, and of a fair countenance. And the Philistine said unto David: Am I a dog, that thou comest to me with staves? And the Philistine cursed David by his gods. And the Philistine said to David: Come to me, and I will give thy flesh unto the fowls of the air, and to the beasts of the field. Then said David to the Philistine: Thou comest to me with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield: but I come to thee in the name of the LORD of hosts, the God of the armies of Israël, whom thou hast defied this day. And the LORD will deliver thee into mine hand, and I will smite thee, and take thine head from thee: and I will give the carcases of the host of the Philistines this day unto the fowls of the air, and to the wild beasts of the earth, that all the earth may know that there is a God in Israël.

Second Responsory.

And it came to pass, &c., (p. 446.)

Third Lesson.

AND when the Philistine arose, and came, and drew nigh to meet David, David hasted, and ran toward the army, to meet the Philistine. And David put his hand in his bag, and took thence a stone, and slang it, and smote the Philistine in his forehead, that the stone sunk into his forehead, and he fell upon his face to the earth. So David prevailed over the Philistine with a sling and with a stone, and smote the Philistine, and slew him. But there was no sword in the hand of David; therefore David ran and stood upon the Philistine, and took his sword, and drew it out of the sheath thereof: and slew him, and cut off his head therewith.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (xviii. 6.)

AS David returned from the slaughter of the Philistine, the women came out of all the cities of Israel, singing and dancing, to meet

King Saul, with tabrets of joy and with instruments of music. And the women answered one another as they played, and said: Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands. And Saul was very wroth, and the saying displeased him, and he said: They have ascribed unto David ten thousands, and to me they have ascribed the thousands! And what can he have more, but the kingdom?

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

AND Saul eyed David from that day and forward. And it came to pass on the morrow that the evil spirit from God came upon Saul, and he prophesied in the midst of his house: and David played with his hand, as he did daily.[1] And there was a javelin in Saul's hand; and he cast it; for he thought to smite David even to the wall with it; and David avoided out of his presence the [first of the] two times. And Saul was afraid of David, because the LORD was with him, and was departed from Saul. Therefore Saul removed him from him, and made him his captain over a thousand: and he went out and came in before the people.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

AND David behaved himself wisely in all his ways, and the LORD was with him. Wherefore when Saul saw that he behaved himself very wisely, he was afraid of him. But all Israël and Judah loved David; because he went out and came in before them. And Saul said to David: Behold my elder daughter Merab, her will I give thee to wife; only be thou valiant, and fight the LORD'S battles. For Saul said in his heart: Let not mine hand be upon him, but let the hand of the Philistines be upon him.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (xix. 1.)

AND Saul spake to Jonathan his son, and to all his servants, that they should kill David. But Jonathan, Saul's son, delighted much in David. And Jonathan told David, saying: Saul my father seeketh to kill thee: now, therefore, I pray thee, take heed to thyself, until the morning, and abide in a secret place, and hide thyself. And I will go out, and stand beside my father, in the field where thou art, and I will commune with my father of thee; and what I see, that I will tell thee.

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, &c., (p. 419.)

Second Lesson.

AND Jonathan spake good of David unto Saul his father, and said unto him: Let not the King sin against his servant, against David; because he hath not sinned against thee, and because his works have been to thee-ward very good. For he did put his life in his hand, and slew the Philistine, and the LORD wrought a great salvation for all Israël: thou sawest it, and didst rejoice. Wherefore, then, wilt thou sin against innocent blood, to slay David without a cause? And Saul hearkened unto the voice of Jonathan, and sware: As the LORD liveth, he shall not be slain.

Second Responsory.

God Which heareth all, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson.

AND there was war again, and David went out and fought with the Philistines, and slew them with a great slaughter, and they fled from him. And the evil spirit from the LORD was upon Saul. And he sat in his house, with his javelin in his hand; and David played with his hand. And Saul sought to smite David even to the wall with the javelin, but David slipped away out of Saul's presence: and he smote the javelin into the wall, and David fled and escaped that night.

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered me, &c., (p. 420.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (xx. 1.)

AND David fled from Najoth[2] in Ramah, and came, and said before Jonathan: What have I done? What is mine iniquity, and what is my sin before thy father, that he seeketh my life? And he said unto him: God forbid, thou shalt not die; for my father will do nothing either great or small but he will first show it me; and why should my father hide this thing alone from me? It shall not be so.

First Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Second Lesson.

AND he sware moreover unto David. And David said: Thy father certainly knoweth that I have found grace in thine eyes, and he will say: Let not Jonathan know this, lest haply he be grieved. But truly, as the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, there is but, as it were, a step between me and death. Then said Jonathan unto David: Whatsoever thy soul desireth, I will even do it for thee.

[1] He was regularly employed to play the harp when Saul's mania came upon him, in order to lull the paroxysms. (xvi. 14-23.)

[2] A place where Samuel held a school of prophets, near Ramah, in the direction of Bethel, in the tribe of Benjamin, some six miles from Jerusalem. (So Dom Calmet.)

Second Responsory.

Ye mountains, &c., (p. 420.)

Third Lesson.

AND David said unto Jonathan: Behold, to-morrow is the New Moon, and I should not fail to sit with the King at meat; therefore let me go, that I may hide myself in the field unto the third day at even. If thy father at all miss me, then say: David earnestly asked leave of me, that he might run to Bethlehem his city, for there is a yearly sacrifice there for all the family. If he say thus: It is well:—thy servant shall have peace. But if he be very wroth, then be sure that evil is determined by him.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Kings (xxi. 1.)

THEN came David to Nob to Ahimelech the Priest; and Ahimelech was afraid at the meeting of David, and said unto him: Why art thou alone and no man with thee? And David said unto Ahimelech the Priest: The King hath commanded me a business, and hath said unto me: Let no man know anything of the business whereabout I send thee, and what I have commanded thee: and I have appointed my servants to such and such a place. Now, therefore, if thou hast anything under thine hand, give it me, even five loaves of bread, or what there is present.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

AND the Priest answered David, and said: There is no common bread under mine hand, but there is hallowed bread; if the young men have kept themselves at least from women? And David answered the Priest, and said unto him: Of a truth, women have been kept from us about these three days, since we came out, and the vessels of the young men are holy. And the bread is in a manner common, yea, though it were sanctified this day in the vessel. So the Priest gave him hallowed bread. For there was no bread there but the Shew-bread, that was taken from before the LORD, to put hot bread.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

NOW a certain man of the servants of Saul was there that day, in the tabernacle of the LORD, and his name was Doeg, an Edomite, the chiefest of the herdmen that belonged to Saul.[1] And David said unto Ahimelech: Is there not here under thine hand spear or sword? For I have neither brought my sword nor my weapons with me, because the king's business required haste. And the Priest said: The sword of Goliath the Philistine, whom thou slewest in the valley of the oak, behold, it is here, wrapped in a cloth, behind the Ephod; if thou wilt take that, take it. For there is none other save that here. And David said: There is none like that, give it me.[2]

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [3] Ye mountains of Gilboa, * let there be no dew, neither let there be rain upon you; for there the shield of the mighty is vilely cast away, the shield of Saul, as though he had not been anointed with oil. How are the mighty fallen in the midst of the battle! Jonathan is slain upon the high places: Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in their death they were not divided.

The Prayer is taken from the Lauds of the succeeding Sunday.

Fifth Sunday after Pentecost.

The Fifth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Second Book of Kings (i. 1.)

NOW it came to pass after the death of Saul, when David was returned from the slaughter of the Amalekites, and David had abode two days in Ziklag; it came even to pass on the third day, that, behold, a man came out of the camp of Saul, with his clothes rent, and earth upon his head. And when he came to David, he fell upon his face, and did obeïsance. And David said unto him: From whence comest thou? And he said unto him: Out of the camp of Israël am I escaped. And David said unto him: How went the matter? Tell me. And he answered: The people are fled from the battle, and many of the people also are fallen and dead: and Saul, and Jonathan his son, are dead also.

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, &c., (p. 419.)

---

[1] He went and gave Saul an account of the whole affair, which cost the lives of eighty of the clergy and their families. David on this occasion composed Psalm LI., "Why boastest thou thyself, thou tyrant, &c.," (p. 57.)

[2] Before passing to the Second Book of Kings, the reader, if he take any interest in the Sacred History, is strongly advised to read the tragic account of the last hours and death of Saul, as found in chapters xxviii. and xxxi.

[3] 2 Kings (Sam.) i. 21, 23.

Second Lesson.

AND David said unto the young man that told him: How knowest thou that Saul and Jonathan his son be dead? And the young man that told him said: As I happened by chance upon Mount Gilboa, behold, Saul leaned upon his spear: and, lo, the chariots and horsemen followed hard after him; and when he looked behind him, he saw me, and he called unto me. And I answered: Here am I. And he said unto me: Who art thou? And I answered him: I am an Amalekite. He said unto me again: Stand upon me, and slay me, for anguish is come upon me, because my life is yet whole in me. So I stood upon him and slew him: because I was sure that he could not live after he was fallen; and I took the crown that was upon his head, and the bracelet that was on his arm, and have brought them hither unto my lord.

Second Responsory.

God, Which heareth all, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson.

THEN David took hold of his clothes and rent them, and likewise all the men that were with him. And they mourned, and wept, and fasted until even, for Saul, and for Jonathan his son, and for the people of the LORD, and for the house of Israël, because they were fallen by the sword. And David said unto the young man that told him: Whence art thou? And he answered: I am the son of a stranger, an Amalekite. And David said unto him: How wast thou not afraid to stretch forth thine hand to destroy the LORD'S Anointed? And David called one of his young men, and said: Go near, and fall upon him. And he smote him that he died.[1]

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered, &c., (p. 420.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Moral [Reflections upon Job], written by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Bk. iv. ch. 3, 4.)

WHY was it that David, who rewarded no evil to them that did evil to him (Ps. vii. 5), when Saul and Jonathan had fallen in battle, cursed the mountains of Gilboa, saying: "Ye mountains of Gilboa, let there be no dew, neither let there be rain upon you, nor fields of offerings; for there the shield of the mighty is vilely cast away, the shield of Saul, as though he had not been anointed with oil"? Why was it that Jeremiah, when he saw that his preaching was thrown away upon his hearers, cursed and said: "Cursed be the man who brought tidings to my father, saying,—A man-child is born unto thee"? (xx. 15.)

Fourth Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Fifth Lesson.

WHAT had the mountains of Gilboa to do with the death of Saul, that they should be condemned to have dew fall on them no more, neither rain, but should wither away, barren of the green glory of the springtime? But this word "Gilboa" signifieth "bubbling fountain,"[2] and the death of Saul the Anointed of God is a type of the death of our Anointed Mediator. Thus we find in the mountains of Gilboa no unfit image of the proud hearts of the Jews, which had their spring in earthly desires, and took part in the death of the Anointed Saviour. And since among them their Anointed Monarch met His death, the dew of grace is upon them no more.

Fifth Responsory.

Ye mountains, &c., (p. 420.)

Sixth Lesson.

AND well is it said of them: "Let there be upon you no fields of offerings." The proud minds of the Hebrews bear yet no offering. Since the coming of their Redeemer, the most part of them remain still without belief in Him, and refuse to follow the promise of their ancient faith. The Holy Church hath borne for her first-born, holy unto the Lord, a multitude of the Gentiles, and will, but in the end of the world, embrace such Jews as she then shall find, and present them as the last gatherings of her harvest.

Sixth Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Kings (ii. 1.)

AND it came to pass after this, that David inquired of the LORD, saying: Shall I go up into any of the cities of Judah? And the LORD said unto him: Go up. And David said: Whither shall I go up? And He said: Unto Hebron. So David went up thither, and his two wives also, Ahinoam, the Jezreelitess, and Abigail, Nabal's wife, the Carmelite. And his men that were with him did David bring up, every man with his household; and they dwelt in the cities of Hebron. And the men of Judah came, and there they anointed David king over the house of Judah.

First Responsory.

Remember, O Lord, &c., (p. 445.)

---

[1] It was upon this occasion that David composed the fine poem beginning, "The beauty of Israël is slain," so often quoted in the Office, and which is to be found at length in 2 Kings (Sam.) i. 19-27.

[2] Taken by the derivation this is perhaps a shade more correct than the Latin "decursus," or down-flow.

Second Lesson.

AND they told David that the men of Jabesh-Gilead had buried[1] Saul. And David sent messengers to the men of Jabesh-Gilead, saying: Blessed be ye of the LORD, that ye have showed this kindness unto your lord, even unto Saul, and have buried him. And now, the LORD show kindness and truth unto you! And I also will requite you this kindness, because ye have done this thing. Therefore now let your hands be strengthened, and be ye valiant. For although your master Saul is dead, yet the house of Judah have anointed me king over them.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

BUT Abner, the son of Ner, Captain of Saul's host, took Ish-bosheth, the son of Saul, and brought him over to the army, and made him king over Gilead, and over the Ashurites, and over Jezreel, and over Ephraim, and over Benjamin, and over all Israël. Ish-bosheth, Saul's son, was forty years old when he began to reign over Israël, and he reigned two years. But the house of Judah alone followed David. And the time that David was King in Hebron, over the house of Judah, was seven years and six months.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Kings (iii. 6.)

AND it came to pass, while there was war between the house of Saul and the house of David, that Abner, the son of Ner, ruled the house of Saul. And Saul had a concubine whose name was Rizpah, the daughter of Aiah. And Ish-bosheth said to Abner: Wherefore hast thou gone in unto my father's concubine? Then was Abner very wroth for the words of Ish-bosheth, and said: Am I a dog's head, which, against Judah, do show kindness this day unto the house of Saul thy father, to his brethren, and to his friends, and have not delivered thee into the hand of David—that thou chargest me to-day with a fault concerning this woman? So do God to Abner, and more also, except, as the LORD hath sworn to David, so I do to him; to translate the kingdom from Saul, and to set up the throne of David over Israël and over Judah, from Dan even to Beersheba.

First Responsory.

Lord, when Thy people, &c., (p. 445.)

Second Lesson.

AND Abner sent messengers to David on his behalf, saying: Whose is the land? Saying also: Make thy league with me; and my hand shall be with thee, to bring about all Israël unto thee. And he said: Well — I will make a league with thee; but one thing I require of thee—that is, thou shalt not see my face except thou first bring Michal,[2] Saul's daughter. So shalt thou come and see me. And David sent messengers to Ish-bosheth, Saul's son, saying: Deliver to me my wife Michal, which I espoused to me for an hundred foreskins of the Philistines.[3] And Ish-bosheth sent and took her from her husband, even from Phaltiel, the son of Laish. And her husband went with her along, weeping behind her, to Bahurim; then said Abner unto him: Go, return. And he returned.

Second Responsory.

And it came to pass, &c., (p. 446.)

Third Lesson.

AND Abner had communication with the elders of Israël, saying: Ye sought for David not yesterday only to be King over you. Now, then, do it; for the LORD hath spoken of David, saying: By the hand of My servant David I will save My people Israël out of the hand of the Philistines, and out of the hand of all their enemies. And Abner also spake in the ears of Benjamin. And he went also to speak in the ears of David in Hebron all that seemed good to Israël, and that seemed good to the whole house of Benjamin. So Abner came to David to Hebron, and twenty men with him; and David made Abner, and the men that were with him, a feast. And Abner said unto David: I will arise, and will gather all Israël unto my lord the King.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Kings (iv. 5.)

AND the sons of Rimmon the Berothite, Rechab and Baanah, went, and came about the heat of the day to the house of Ish-bosheth; who lay on a bed at noon. And the maid-servant, that kept the door, was there winnowing grain, but she was asleep. And Rechab and Baanah his brother came into the house stealthily, as though they would have fetched ears of wheat, and they smote him in the groin, and escaped. For when they came into the house he lay asleep upon his bed in his bedchamber, and they smote him, and slew him, and took his head, and gat them away by the way of the desert all night. And they brought the head of Ish-bosheth unto David to Hebron, and said to the King: Behold the head of Ish-bosheth the son of Saul, thine enemy, which sought thy life.

---

[1] They burnt the body, which had been mutilated and gibbeted by the Philistines.

[2] Saul had given her to David for his first wife, and she had afterwards been taken from him by her family.

[3] 1 Kings (Sam.) xviii. 25-27.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

AND David answered Rechab and Baanah his brother, the sons of Rimmon the Berothite, and said unto them: As the LORD liveth, Who hath redeemed my soul out of all adversity, when one told me, saying, Saul is dead, thinking to have brought good tidings, I took hold of him and slew him in Ziklag; who thought that I would have given him a reward for his tidings. How much more now, when wicked men have slain an harmless person in his own house upon his bed, shall I not therefore require his blood of your hand, and take you away from the earth? And David commanded his young men, and they slew them; and cut off their hands and their feet and hanged them up over the pool in Hebron. But they took the head of Ish-bosheth, and buried it in the sepulchre of Abner in Hebron.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

THEN came all the tribes of Israël to David unto Hebron, saying: Behold, we are thy bone and thy flesh. Also in time past, when Saul was King over us, thou wast he that leddest out and broughtest in Israël; and the LORD said to thee: Thou shalt feed My people Israël, and thou shalt be a Captain over Israël. So all the elders of Israël came to the King to Hebron, and King David made a league with them in Hebron before the LORD; and they anointed David King over Israël. David was thirty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years. In Hebron he reigned over Judah seven years and six months; and in Jerusalem he reigned thirty and three years over all Israël and Judah. And the King and his men went to Jerusalem, unto the Jebusites, the inhabitants of the land; which spake unto David, saying: Except thou take away the blind and the lame thou shalt not come in hither—thinking: David cannot come in hither. Nevertheless David took the stronghold of Zion—the same is the city of David.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Kings (vi. 1.)

AGAIN, David gathered together all the chosen men of Israël, thirty thousand. And David arose, and went, with all the people that were with him of the men of Judah, to bring up the Ark of God, whereon is called the Name of the LORD of hosts, That sitteth between the Cherubim thereon. And they set the Ark of God upon a new cart, and brought it out of the house of Abinadab, that was in Gibeah. And Uzzah and Ahio, the sons of Abinadab, drove the new cart.

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, &c., (p. 419.)

Second Lesson.

AND they brought it out of the house of Abinadab, which was at Gibeah, accompanying the Ark of God, and Ahio went before the Ark. And David and all the house of Israël played before the LORD on all manner of instruments made of cypress-wood, even on harps, and on psalteries, and on timbrels, and on cornets, and on cymbals. And when they came to Nachon's threshing-floor, Uzzah put forth his hand to the Ark of God, and took hold of it, for the oxen stumbled and shook it. And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Uzzah, and He smote him there for his presumption; and there he died, by the Ark of God.

Second Responsory.

God Which heareth all, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson.

AND David was grieved because the LORD had smitten Uzzah, and the name of the place is called "The Smiting of Uzzah" to this day. And David was afraid of the LORD that day, and said: How shall the Ark of the LORD come to me? So David would not remove the Ark of the LORD unto him into the city of David; but David carried it aside into the house of Obed-edom the Gittite. And the Ark of the LORD continued in the house of Obed-edom the Gittite three months. And the LORD blessed Obed-edom and all his household. And it was told King David, saying: The LORD hath blessed Obed-edom and all that pertaineth unto him, because of the Ark of God. So David went, and brought up the Ark of God from the house of Obed-edom into the city of David, with gladness.

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered me, &c., (p. 420.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Kings (vii. 4.)

AND, behold, the word of the LORD came unto Nathan, saying: Go, and tell My servant David: Thus saith the LORD: Shalt thou build Me an house for Me to dwell in? whereas I have not dwelt in any house since the time that I brought up the children of Israël out of Egypt even to this day, but have walked in a tent and in a tabernacle.

First Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Second Lesson.

IN all the places wherein I have walked with all the children of Israël, spake I a word with any of the tribes of Israël, whom I commanded to feed My people Israël, saying: Why build ye not Me an house of cedar? Now, therefore, so shalt thou say unto My servant David: Thus saith the LORD of hosts: I took thee from the sheep-cote, from following the sheep, to be ruler over My people, over Israël, and I was with thee whithersoever thou wentest, and have cut off all thine enemies out of thy sight, and have made thee a great name, like unto the name of the great men that are in the earth. Moreover, I will appoint a place for My people Israël, and will plant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own, and move no more; neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more, as beforetime, and as since the time that I commanded judges to be over My people Israël. And I will cause thee to rest from all thine enemies. Also the LORD telleth thee, that He, the Lord, will make thee an house.

Second Responsory.

Ye mountains, &c., (p. 420.)

Third Lesson.

AND when thy days be fulfilled and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build an house for My Name, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom for ever. I will be his Father, and he shall be My son. If he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men. But My mercy shall not depart away from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away from before Me. And thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee, and thy throne shall be built in strength. According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, (p. 420.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Kings (xi. 1.)

AND it came to pass, at the turn of the year, at the time when kings go forth to battle, that David sent Joab, and his servants with him, and all Israel, and they wasted the children of Ammon, and besieged Rabbah. But David tarried still at Jerusalem. And it came to pass in an evening-tide, that David arose from off his bed, and walked upon the roof of the King's house. And from the roof he saw a woman washing herself, over against his house. And the woman was very beautiful to look upon. And David sent and inquired after the woman. And one said: Is not this Bathsheba, the daughter of Eliam, the wife of Uriah the Hittite? And David sent messengers and took her.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

AND she returned unto her house, having conceived seed. And she sent and told David, saying: I am with child. And David sent to Joab, saying: Send me Uriah the Hittite. And Joab sent Uriah to David. And Uriah came unto David. And David demanded how Joab did, and how the people did, and how the war prospered. And David said to Uriah: Go down to thine house, and wash thy feet. And Uriah departed out of the King's house, and there followed him a mess of meat from the King. But Uriah slept at the door of the King's house, with all the servants of his lord, and went not down to his house. And when they had told David, saying: Uriah went not down to his house, David said unto Uriah: Camest thou not from thy journey? why then didst thou not go down unto thine house? And Uriah said unto David: The Ark of God, and Israël, and Judah abide in tents, and my lord Joab, and the servants of my lord are encamped in the open fields; shall I then go into mine house, to eat and to drink, and to sleep with my wife? As thou livest, and as thy soul liveth, I will not do this thing.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

AND David said to Uriah; Tarry here to-day also, and to-morrow I will let thee depart. So Uriah abode in Jerusalem that day and the morrow, and David called him to eat and drink before him; and he made him drunk. And at even he went out, and slept upon his bed with the servants of his lord; but went not down to his house. And it came to pass, in the morning, that David wrote a letter to Joab, and sent it by the hand of Uriah; and he wrote in the letter, saying: Set ye Uriah in the fore-front of the hottest battle, and retire ye from him, that he may be smitten and die. And it came to pass when Joab assaulted the city, that he assigned Uriah unto a place where he knew that valiant men were. And the men of the city went out and fought with Joab, and there fell some of the people, of the servants of David, and Uriah the Hittite died also.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [1] I beseech Thee, * O Lord, do away the iniquity of Thy servant, for I have done very foolishly.

The Prayer is taken from the Lauds of the succeeding Sunday.

[1] 1 Par. (Chron.) xxi. 8.

Sixth Sunday after Pentecost.

The Sixth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Kings (xii. 1.)

AND the LORD sent Nathan unto David. And he came unto him, and said unto him: There were two men in one city, the one rich, and the other poor. The rich man had exceeding many flocks and herds; but the poor man had nothing save one little ewe-lamb, which he had bought and nourished up. And it grew up together with him, and with his children. It did eat of his own meat, and drank of his own cup, and lay in his bosom, and was unto him as a daughter. And there came a traveller unto the rich man; and he spared to take of his own flock and of his own herd, to dress for the wayfaring man that was come unto him; but took the poor man's lamb, and dressed it for the man that was come unto him.

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, &c., (p. 419.)

Second Lesson.

AND David's anger was greatly kindled against the man, and he said to Nathan: As the LORD liveth, the man that hath done this thing shall surely die. He shall restore the lamb four-fold, because he did this thing, and because he had no pity. And Nathan said to David: Thou art the man—Thus saith the LORD God of Israël: I anointed thee king over Israël, and I delivered thee out of the hand of Saul, and I gave thee thy master's house, and thy master's wives into thy bosom, and gave thee the house of Israël and of Judah; and if that had been too little, I would moreover have given unto thee much greater things. Wherefore hast thou despised the commandment of the LORD, to do evil in His sight? Thou hast killed Uriah the Hittite with the sword, and hast taken his wife to be thy wife, and hast slain him with the sword of the children of Ammon.

Second Responsory.

God Which heareth all, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson.

NOW, therefore—the sword shall never depart from thine house; because thou hast despised Me, and hast taken the wife of Uriah the Hittite to be thy wife. Thus saith the LORD: Behold, I will raise up evil against thee out of thine house; and I will take thy wives before thine eyes, and give them unto thy neighbour; and he shall lie with thy wives in the sight of this sun. For thou didst it secretly; but I will do this thing before all Israël, and before the sun. And David said unto Nathan: I have sinned against the LORD. And Nathan said unto David: The LORD also hath put away thy sin—thou shalt not die. Howbeit, because by this deed thou hast given great occasion to the enemies of the LORD to blaspheme, the child also that is born unto thee shall surely die. And Nathan departed unto his house. And the LORD struck the child that Uriah's wife bare unto David, and it was very sick. David therefore besought the Lord for the child; and David fasted, and went in, and lay upon the earth.[1]

Third Responsory.

The LORD, That delivered me, &c., (p. 420.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book "On the Defence of David" written by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (i. 2.)

IN how many things doth each one of us transgress every hour! And nevertheless not one of all us common men thinketh it well to confess his sin. Yet that strong and great King would not suffer the acknowledgment of his iniquity to remain, even for a moment, hidden in his own heart. With eager confession and bitter sorrow, he admitted that he had sinned against the Lord. Which of you will easily find me now some honoured and wealthy person, who will not take it ill if I rebuke him for a fault whereof he is guilty? But David, amid the splendours of a throne and the certainty of Divine revelations, when he was rebuked by one of his subjects for his grievous transgression, was not roused to anger, but contrariwise, acknowledged his sin with groans and affliction.

Fourth Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Fifth Lesson.

THE heart-felt sorrow of David moved the Lord to compassion, so that Nathan said: Because thou hast repented, the Lord also hath put away thy sin. The instant gift of pardon declareth the depth of the King's repentance, which was able to obtain the forgiveness of so grievous a transgression. Other men, when they be rebuked of Priests, do but aggravate the heinousness of their sins by the seeking to deny or to excuse them, and thereby make deeper their fall by means of that which should have helped them up. But the saints of the Lord who will to fight a good fight of godliness unto the end and to finish their course by saving their souls, howbeit, they may perchance have fallen like other men, have done so rather through man's weakness than through lust for iniquity, and rise more eager to go on than before. Shame goadeth them on to fly at higher things. So that not only is their fall to be reckoned to have nowise hampered them, but rather to have quickened their speed.

Fifth Responsory.

---

[1] The child died. The next few verses in the Bible describe, very touchingly, the conduct of David on the occasion—and, afterwards, how Solomon was born of Bathsheba. David composed the Miserere during his repentance.

Sixth Lesson. (Ch. iv.)

DAVID sinned; and so oftentimes do other kings. David repented with groaning and tears; and so do not oftentimes other kings. He admitted his guilt; he implored forgiveness; he cast himself down upon the ground, and there wept over his crime; he fasted; he prayed; by publishing his sorrow he left an everlasting witness of his acknowledgment.[1] What meaner men blush to do, the King was not ashamed to own. They who are answerable to law are bold to deny their crimes, and too haughty to ask pardon. Not so he, though he could be haled before no earthly judgment-seat. That he sinned was a matter flowing from his nature; that he asked for pardon, his own repentance. To fall is common to all men, but his confession was his own. To transgress thus was nature; to efface his guilt, greatness.

Sixth Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Kings (xiii. 22.)

AND Absalom spake unto his brother Amnon neither good nor bad; for Absalom hated Amnon, because he had forced his sister Tamar. And it came to pass, after two full years, that Absalom had sheep-shearers in Baal-hazor, which is beside Ephraim; and Absalom invited all the king's sons. And [Absalom] came to the King, and said: Behold, now, thy servant hath sheep-shearers; let the King, I beseech thee, and his servants, go with thy servant. And the King said to Absalom: Nay, my son, let us not all go now, lest we be chargeable unto thee. And he pressed him; howbeit, he would not go, but blessed him.

First Responsory.

Remember, O Lord, Thy covenant, &c., (p. 445.)

Second Lesson.

THEN said Absalom: If not, I pray thee, let my brother Amnon go with us. And the King said unto him: Why should he go with thee? But Absalom pressed him, that he let Amnon and all the King's sons go with him. Now Absalom had made a feast like one of the King's feasts. And Absalom had commanded his servants, saying: Mark ye now when Amnon's heart is merry with wine; and when I say unto you, Smite him,—then kill him, fear not. For it is I that have commanded you. Be courageous, and be valiant. And the servants of Absalom did unto Amnon as Absalom had commanded. Then all the King's sons arose, and every man gat him up upon his mule, and fled.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

AND it came to pass, while they were in the way, that tidings came to David, saying: Absalom hath slain all the King's sons: and there is not one of them left. Then the King arose, and tare his garments, and lay on the earth; and all his servants stood by with their clothes rent. And Jonadab, the son of Shimeah,[2] David's brother, answered and said: Let not my lord the King suppose that they have slain all the young men the King's sons; for Amnon only is dead—for by the appointment of Absalom this hath been determined from the day that he forced his sister Tamar. Now therefore let not my lord the King take the thing to his heart, to think that all the King's sons are dead; for Amnon only is dead. But Absalom fled.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Kings (xiv. 4.)

AND when the woman of Tekoah[3] was come in unto the King's presence, she fell on her face to the ground, and did obeïsance, and said: Help, O King! And the King said unto her: What aileth thee? And she said: Alas for me, I am a widow woman, for mine husband is dead. And thine handmaid had two sons, and they two strove together in the field, and there was none to part them, but the one smote the other and slew him. And, behold, the whole family is risen against thine handmaid, and they said: Deliver him that smote his brother, that we may kill him, for the life of his brother, whom he slew, and we will destroy the heir also: and so they shall quench my coal which is left, and shall not leave to mine husband either name or remainder upon the earth.

First Responsory.

Lord, when Thy people, &c., (p. 445.)

Second Lesson.

AND the King said: Whosoever saith aught unto thee, bring him to me, and he shall not touch thee any more. Then said she: I pray thee, let the King remember the LORD thy God, that they of the kinship be not suffered to seek further for vengeance, and to destroy my son. And he said: As the LORD liveth, there shall not one hair of thy son fall to the earth. Then the woman said: Let thine handmaid speak one word unto my lord the King. And he said: Say on. And the woman said: Wherefore then hast thou thought such a thing against the people of God, and wherefore doth the King speak this thing as one which is faulty, in that the King doth not fetch home again his banished? For we must needs all die, and are as water spilt on the ground, which cannot be gathered up again. Neither is it the will of God that a soul should perish, but He repenteth Him, lest He should utterly destroy the castaway.

[1] I.e., in the Psalm "Miserere."

[2] I.e., Shamma.

[3] She was an agent of Joab.

Second Responsory.

And it came to pass, &c., (p. 446.)

Third Lesson. (19.)

AND the King said: Is not the hand of Joab with thee in all this? And the woman answered and said: As thy soul liveth, my Lord the King, none can turn to the right hand or to the left from aught that my lord the King hath spoken; for thy servant Joab, he bade me, and he put all these words in the mouth of thine handmaid. That I should fetch about this form of speech, thy servant Joab commanded it; but thou art wise, O my lord the King, according to the wisdom of an Angel of God, to know all things that are in the earth. And the King said unto Joab: Behold, now, I am reconciled to do after thy word; go therefore, and bring the young man Absalom again.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Kings (xv. 1.)

AND it came to pass after this that Absalom prepared him chariots and horse-men, and fifty men to run before him. And Absalom rose up early, and stood beside the entering-in of the gate; and it was so that when any man that had a controversy came to the King for judgment, then Absalom called unto him, and said: Of what city art thou? And he said: Thy servant is of one of the tribes of Israël. And Absalom said unto him: See, thy matters are good and right; but there is no man deputed of the King to hear thee.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

ABSALOM said moreover: O that I were made judge in the land, that every man which hath any suit or cause might come unto me, and I would do him justice! And it was so, that when any man came nigh to him to do him obeïsance, he put forth his hand, and took him, and kissed him. And on this manner did Absalom to all Israël that came to the King for judgment; so Absalom stole the hearts of the men of Israël.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

AND it came to pass after forty years that Absalom said unto King David: I will go and pay my vow which I have vowed unto the LORD in Hebron. For thy servant vowed a vow while I abode in Geshur in Syria, saying: If the LORD shall bring me again indeed to Jerusalem, then I will offer a sacrifice unto the LORD. And King David said unto him: Go in peace. So he arose, and went to Hebron. But Absalom sent spies throughout all the tribes of Israël, saying: As soon as ye hear the sound of the trumpet, then ye shall say—Absalom reigneth in Hebron.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Kings (xv. 13.)

AND there came a messenger to David, saying: The heart of all Israël is after Absalom. And David said unto his servants that were with him at Jerusalem: Arise, let us flee; for we shall not else escape from Absalom. Make speed to depart, lest he overtake us suddenly, and bring evil upon us, and smite the city with the edge of the sword. And the King's servants said unto him: Thy servants are ready to do whatsoever our lord the King shall appoint.

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, &c., (p. 419.)

Second Lesson.

AND the King went forth, and all his household after him on foot; and the King left ten women, which were concubines, to keep the house. And the King and all Israël went forth, on foot, and tarried in a place that was far off; and all his servants passed on beside him, and all the Cherethites, and all the Pelethites, and all the Gittites, valiant men of war, six hundred, which came after him from Gath, passed on before him.

Second Responsory.

God Which heareth all, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson.

THEN said the King to Ittai the Gittite: Wherefore goest thou also with us? Return to thy place, and abide with the King; for thou art a stranger, and also an exile. Whereas thou camest but yesterday, should I this day make thee go out with us? As for me, I go whither I go; return thou, and take back with thee thy brethren; and the Lord will deal with thee in mercy and in truth, because thou hast showed me kindness and faithfulness.[1]

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered me, &c., (p. 420.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Kings (xvi. 5.)

AND when King David came to Bahurim, behold, thence came out a man of the family of the house of Saul, whose name was Shimei, the son of Gera. He came forth, and cursed still as he came; and he cast stones at David, and at all the servants of King David. And all the people, and all the mighty men were on the King's right hand and his left. And thus said Shimei when he cursed the King: Come out, come out, thou bloody man, and thou man of Belial. The LORD hath returned upon thee all the blood of the house of Saul, in whose stead thou hast reigned.[2]

First Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Second Lesson. (9.)

THEN said Abishai the son of Zeruiah unto the King: Why should this dead dog curse my lord the King? Let me go over, and take off his head. And the King said: What have I to do with you, ye sons of Zeruiah? Let him curse; because the LORD hath said unto him: Curse David — and who shall then dare to say: Wherefore hast thou done so?

Second Responsory.

Ye mountains of Gilboa, &c., (p. 420.)

Third Lesson.

AND the King said to Abishai, and to all his servants: Behold, my son, which came forth of my bowels, seeketh my life; how much more now may this Benjamite do it? Let him alone, and let him curse, for the LORD hath bidden him. It may be that the LORD will look on mine affliction, and that the LORD will requite me good for his cursing this day.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Kings (xviii. 6.)

SO the people went out into the field against Israël; and the battle was in the wood of Ephraim. There the people of Israël were slain before the army of David: and there was there a great slaughter that day, of twenty thousand men. For the battle was there, scattered over the face of all the country, and the wood devoured more people that day than the sword devoured.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

AND Absalom met the servants of David, and he rode upon a mule; and the mule went under the thick boughs of a great oak, and his head caught hold of the oak, and he was taken up between the heaven and the earth, and the mule that was under him went away. And a certain man saw it, and told Joab, and said: I saw Absalom hanged in an oak. And Joab said unto the man that told him: If thou sawest him, why didst thou not smite him there to the ground? And I would have given thee ten shekels of silver, and a girdle. And the man said unto Joab: Though I should receive a thousand shekels of silver in mine hand, yet would I not put forth mine hand against the King's son; for in our hearing the King charged thee, and Abishai, and Ittai, saying: Beware, and save for me my child Absalom.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

THEN said Joab: Though thou will it not, yet will I go up against him before thy face. And he took three darts in his hand, and thrust them through the heart of Absalom; and while he yet hung quivering with life in the oak, ten young men that bare Joab's armour, compassed about, and smote Absalom and slew him. And Joab blew the trumpet, and the people returned from pursuing after Israël, for Joab was fain to spare the multitude. And they took Absalom and cast him into a great pit in the wood, and laid a very great heap of stones upon him.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. And Zadok the Priest * and Nathan the Prophet anointed Solomon King in Gihon, and they went up with joy, and cried, saying: May the King live for ever!

Note. The above is the First Saturday evening Antiphon which can be displaced by "Wisdom hath builded, &c."

Prayer from the succeeding Lauds.

---

[1] Verse 21. And Ittai answered the King, and said: As the LORD liveth, and as my lord the King liveth, surely in what place my lord the King shall be, whether in death or life, even there also will thy servant be.

[2] The text continues: "And the Lord hath delivered the kingdom into the hand of Absalom thy son. And, behold, thou art taken in thy mischief — because thou art a bloody man."

Seventh Sunday after Pentecost.

The Seventh Lord's Day after Pentecost.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Third Book of Kings (i. 1.)

NOW King David was old, and stricken in years: and they covered him with clothes, but he gat no heat. Wherefore his servants said unto him: Let there be sought for my lord the King a young virgin, and let her stand before the King, and let her cherish him, and let her lie in thy bosom, that my lord the King may get heat. So they sought for a fair damsel throughout all the coasts of Israël, and found Abishag, a Shunamite, and brought her to the King. And the damsel was very fair, and slept with the King, and ministered unto him; but the King knew her not.

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, &c., (p. 419.)

Second Lesson.

THEN Adonijah, the son of Haggith,[1] exalted himself, saying: I will be King. And he prepared him chariots, and horsemen, and fifty men to run before him. And his father had not chidden him at any time, saying: Why hast thou done so? And he also was a very goodly man, and his mother bare him after Absalom. And he conferred with Joab the son of Zeruiah, and with Abiathar the Priest, and they, following Adonijah, helped him. But Zadok the Priest, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiadah, and Nathan the Prophet, and Shimei, and Rei, and the mighty men which belonged to David, were not with Adonijah.

Second Responsory.

God Which heareth all, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson. (11.)

WHEREFORE Nathan spake unto Bathsheba the mother of Solomon, saying: Hast thou not heard that Adonijah, the son of Haggith, doth reign, and David our lord knoweth it not? Now therefore come, let me, I pray thee, give thee counsel, that thou mayest save thine own life, and the life of thy son Solomon. Go, and get thee in unto King David, and say unto him: Didst not thou, O my lord King, swear unto thine handmaid, saying, Solomon thy son shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne? Why, then, doth Adonijah reign? And while thou yet talkest there with the King, I also will come in after thee, and confirm thy words. And Bathsheba went in unto the King, into the chamber.

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered me, &c., (p. 420.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Epistle written to Nepotian by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Ep. ii. tom. i.)

WHEN David, who had once been a man of war, was seventy years old, the chill of old age came upon him, and he could get no heat. So they sought out for him throughout all the coasts of Israël Abishag the Shunamite, to sleep with the king and to warm his aged body. Who is this Shunamite, wife and yet virgin, so hot, that she could heat the chilly, so holy, that her warmth provoked him not to lust? Let Solomon the Wise explain his father's enjoyment, and the "Peaceful One"[2] tell of the warrior's embraces. "Get wisdom, get understanding; forget it not, neither decline from the words of my mouth; forsake her not, and she shall preserve thee; love her, and she shall keep thee. Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting, get understanding. Exalt her, and she shall promote thee. Honour her, and she shall embrace thee, and shall give to thine head an ornament of grace. She shall compass thee like a crown of delights." (Prov. iv. 5-9).

Fourth Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Fifth Lesson.

IN old men almost all the powers of the body become weakened, and while wisdom only is increasing, all things else beside wisdom fail. Then faileth strength for fasting, for watching, for "chaméuniæ," (that is, sleeping on the floor,) for wandering hither and thither, for receiving strangers, for defending the poor, for instance and constancy in prayer, for visiting the sick, for that work with the hands whence alms are given. I need not treat of this with long talk, but, in short, when the body is broken down, all the works of the body wax enfeebled.

Fifth Responsory.

Ye mountains, &c., (p. 420.)

Sixth Lesson.

NEITHER do I say, on the other hand, that wisdom, which in many old men drivelleth into second childhood, is weak, or wanting in such of the young and stout, as win knowledge by work and earnest study, by holiness of life and instancy of prayer to the Lord JESUS, but this I do say, that the more spiritual faculties have in youth many wrestlings with the body to go through, and that, what with violent provocations to vice, and what with the sensual ticklings of the flesh, they are apt to be smothered like fire among green wood, and not able to blaze forth in all their brightness. But when old age cometh upon them, who have spent their youth in acquiring sound knowledge, and have meditated in the law of the Lord day and night, it hath this effect on them, to make them more learned by their increased years, more experienced by constant use, more wise, through the advance of time—and, in short, doth offer them the rich harvest of their past diligence.

---

[1] And of David.

[2] A pun on the name "Solomon," which signifies "Peaceful."

Sixth Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

My sins, &c., (p. 421.)

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Third Book of Kings (i. 28.)

THEN King David answered, and said: Call me Bathsheba. And she came into the King's presence, and stood before the King. And the King sware, and said: As the LORD liveth, that hath redeemed my soul out of all distress, even as I sware unto thee by the LORD God of Israël, saying: Assuredly, Solomon thy son shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne in my stead—even so will I certainly do this day. Then Bathsheba bowed with her face to the earth, and did reverence to the King, and said: Let my lord David live for ever.

First Responsory.

Remember, O Lord, Thy covenant, &c., (p. 445.)

Second Lesson.

AND King David said: Call me Zadok the Priest, and Nathan the Prophet, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiadah. And they came before the King, and he said unto them: Take with you the servants of your lord, and cause Solomon my son to ride upon mine own mule, and bring him down to Gihon, and let Zadok the Priest and Nathan the Prophet anoint him there King over Israël. And blow ye with the trumpet and say: God save King Solomon? Then ye shall come up after him, that he may come, and sit upon my throne, for he shall be King in my stead.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

SO Zadok the Priest, and Nathan the Prophet, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiadah, and the Cherethites, and Pelethites,[1] went down, and caused Solomon to ride upon King David's mule, and brought him to Gihon. And Zadok the Priest took a horn of oil out of the tabernacle, and anointed Solomon; and they blew the trumpet, and all the people said: God save King Solomon! And all the people came up after him, and the people piped with pipes, and rejoiced with great joy, so that the earth rang with the sound of them.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Third Book of Kings (ii. 1.)

NOW the days of David drew nigh, that he should die. And he charged Solomon his son, saying: I go the way of all the earth; be thou strong, therefore, and show thyself a man. And keep the charge of the LORD thy God, to walk in His ways, to keep His statutes, and His commandments, and His judgments, and His testimonies, as it is written in the law of Moses, that thou mayest have understanding in whatsoever thou doest, and whithersoever thou turnest thyself; that the LORD may continue His word, which He spake concerning me, saying: If thy children take heed to their way, to walk before Me in truth with all their heart, and with all their soul, there shall not fail thee a man on the throne of Israël.

First Responsory.

Lord, when Thy people, &c., (p. 445.)

Second Lesson.

MOREOVER thou knowest also what Joab the son of Zeruiah did to me,[2] and what he did to the two captains of the hosts of Israël, unto Abner,[3] the son of Ner, and unto Amasa[4] the son of Jether, whom he slew; and shed the blood of war in peace, and put the blood of war upon his girdle that was about his loins, and in his shoes, that were on his feet. Do therefore according to thy wisdom, and let not his hoar head go down to the grave in peace.

Second Responsory.

And it came to pass, &c., (p. 446.)

Third Lesson.

BUT show kindness unto the sons of Barzillai the Gileadite, and let them be of those that eat at thy table. For so they came to me, when I fled from before Absalom thy brother. And, behold, thou hast with thee Shimei the son of Gera, a Benjamite of Bahurim, which cursed me with a grievous curse in the day when I went to "the Two-Camps;"[5] but he came down to meet me when I passed over Jordan, and I sware to him by the LORD, saying: I will not put thee to death with the sword;—now, therefore, hold him not guiltless.[6]

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

---

[1] Cherethites and Pelethites=executioners and runners. (Gesenius.)

[2] Perhaps referring to the death of Absalom.

[3] He assassinated him from a motive of private revenge when he came to make his peace with David at Hebron. 2 Kings (Sam.) iii. 27.

[4] He assassinated him, probably on suspicion of treachery. 2 Kings (Sam.) xx. 10.

[5] Probably the place where Jacob met the "hosts of God," and which he called Mahanaim, "Two-camps."

[6] Solomon afterwards had him put to death. 3 (1) Kings ii. 46. This command is the last recorded words of David. Verse 10 says: "So David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David."

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Third Book of Kings (iii. 5.)

THE LORD appeared to Solomon in a dream by night, and said: Ask what I shall give thee. And Solomon said: Thou hast showed unto Thy servant David my father great mercy, according as he walked before Thee in truth and in righteousness, and in uprightness of heart with Thee; and Thou hast kept for him this great kindness, that Thou hast given him a son to sit upon his throne, as it is this day.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

AND now, O LORD my God, Thou hast made Thy servant King instead of David my father; and I am but a little child; I know not how to go out or come in. And Thy servant is in the midst of Thy people which Thou hast chosen, a great people, that cannot be numbered nor counted for multitude. Give therefore Thy servant an understanding heart, to judge Thy people, that I may discern between good and bad. For who is able to judge this Thy so great a people?

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

AND the speech pleased the Lord, that Solomon had asked this thing. And the Lord said unto Solomon: Because thou hast asked this thing, and hast not asked for thyself long life, neither riches, nor the life of thine enemies, but hast asked for thyself understanding to discern judgment; behold, I have done according to thy words, and have given unto thee a wise and an understanding heart, so that there was none like thee before thee, neither after thee shall any arise like unto thee. And I have also given thee that which thou hast not asked, both riches and honour, so that there shall not be any among the kings like unto thee all thy days.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, unto the cry, (p. 421.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Third Book of Kings (iv. 21.)

AND Solomon reigned over all kingdoms from the river of the land of the Philistines unto the border of Egypt; they brought him presents and served him all the days of his life. And Solomon's provision for one day was thirty measures of fine flour, and three-score measures of meal; ten fat oxen, and twenty oxen out of the pastures, and an hundred sheep; beside harts, and roe-bucks, and fallow-deer, and fatted fowl. For he had dominion over all the region on this side the river, from Tiphsah even to Gaza, over all the kings on this side the river, and he had peace on all sides round about him.

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, &c., (p. 419.)

Second Lesson.

AND Judah and Israël dwelt safely, every man under his vine and under his fig-tree, from Dan even to Beersheba, all the days of Solomon. And Solomon had forty thousand stalls of horses for his chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen. And the officers of the King that were heretofore named, they provided food for them: and for all that came unto King Solomon's table, they furnished all most carefully according to the season. Barley also and straw for the horses and the beasts of burden, brought they unto the place where the King was, every man according to his charge. And God gave Solomon wisdom and understanding exceeding much, and largeness of heart, even as the sand that is on the sea shore.

Second Responsory.

God Which heareth all, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson.

AND Solomon's wisdom excelled the wisdom of all the children of the east country, and all the wisdom of Egypt; and he was wiser than all men; than Ethan the Ezrahite, and Heman, and Chalcol, and Darda, the sons of Mahol; and his fame was in all nations round about. And he spake three thousand proverbs, and his songs were a thousand and five. And he spake of trees, from the cedar-tree that is in Lebanon, even unto the hyssop that springeth out of the wall; he spake also of beasts, and of fowl, and of creeping things, and of fishes. And there came of all people to hear the wisdom of Solomon, and from all kings of the earth, which had heard of all wisdom.

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered me, &c., (p. 420.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Third Book of Kings (v. 1.)

AND Hiram, King of Tyre, sent his servants unto Solomon; for he had heard that they had anointed him king in the room of his father; for Hiram was ever a lover of David. And Solomon sent to Hiram, saying: Thou knowest how that David my father would have built an house unto the name of the LORD his God, but could not do it, for the wars which were about him on every side, until the LORD put them under the soles of his feet. But now the LORD my God hath given me rest on every side, so that there is neither adversary, nor evil occurrent.

First Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Second Lesson.

WHEREFORE, I purpose to build an house unto the name of the LORD my God, as the LORD spake unto David my father, saying: Thy son, whom I will set upon thy throne in thy room, he shall build an house unto My name. Now, therefore, command thou thy servants that they hew me cedar-trees out of Lebanon, and let my servants be with thy servants; and unto thee will I give hire for thy servants, according to all that thou shalt appoint; for thou knowest that there is not among my people any that can skill to hew timber like unto the Sidonians.

Second Responsory.

Ye mountains of Gilboa, &c., (p. 420.)

Third Lesson.

AND it came to pass, when Hiram heard the words of Solomon, that he rejoiced greatly, and said: Blessed be the LORD God this day, Which hath given unto David a wise son over this great people. And Hiram sent to Solomon, saying: I have considered the things which thou sentest to me for: I will do all thy desire concerning timber of cedar, and concerning timber of fir. My servants shall bring them down from Lebanon unto the sea, and I will convey them by sea in floats unto the place that thou shalt appoint me, and will cause them to be discharged there, and thou shalt receive them, and thou shalt accomplish my desire in giving food for my household.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Third Book of Kings (vii. 51.)

SO was ended all the work that King Solomon made for the house of the LORD, and he brought in the things which David his father had dedicated; even the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, did he put among the treasures of the house of the LORD. (viii.) Then were assembled all the elders of Israël, and the heads of the tribes, and the chiefs of the families of the children of Israël, unto King Solomon in Jerusalem, that they might bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of the city of David, which is Zion.[1] And all the men of Israël assembled themselves unto King Solomon at the feast, in the month Ethanim,[2] which is the seventh month.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

AND all the elders of Israël came; and the Priests took up the ark, and they brought up the ark of the LORD, and the tabernacle of the covenant, and all the vessels of the sanctuary that were in the tabernacle, even those did the Priests and the Levites bring up. And King Solomon, and all the congregation of Israël, that were assembled unto him, were with him before the ark, sacrificing sheep and oxen, that could not be told nor numbered for multitude. And the Priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD unto his place, into the oracle of the house, to the Most Holy Place, even under the wings of the Cherubim.[3] For the Cherubim spread forth their two wings over the place of the ark, and covered the ark, and the staves thereof, above.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

THERE was nothing in the ark save the two tables of stone which Moses put there at Horeb, when the LORD made a covenant with the children of Israël, when they came out of the land of Egypt. And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place, that the cloud filled the house of the LORD; so that the Priests could not stand to minister because of the cloud; for the glory of the LORD had filled the house of the LORD. Then spake Solomon: The LORD said that He would dwell in the cloud.[4]

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, unto the cry, &c., (p. 421.)

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O Lord, Thou hast hearkened unto the prayer of Thy servant, * that I might build a temple unto Thy Name.

Prayer from Lauds of the succeeding Sunday.

Eighth Sunday after Pentecost.

The Eighth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Third Book of Kings (ix. 1.)

AND it came to pass, when Solomon had finished the building of the house of the LORD, and the King's house, and all his desire which he was pleased to do, that the LORD appeared to him the second time, as He had appeared to him at Gibeon. And the LORD said unto him: I have heard thy prayer, and thy supplication that thou hast made before Me: I have hallowed this house which thou hast built, to put My Name there for ever; and Mine eyes and Mine heart shall be there perpetually. And if thou wilt walk before Me, as David thy father walked, in straightforwardness of heart and in uprightness, to do according to all that I have commanded thee, and wilt keep My statutes and My judgments, then I will establish the throne of thy kingdom upon Israël for ever, as I promised to David thy father, saying: There shall not fail thee a man upon the throne of Israël.

[3] Two colossal images of these creatures made of olive-wood plated with gold, which stood in the Holy of Holies, with their wings arranged so as to overshadow the ark of the covenant.

[4] The reader will do well to read the rest of ch. viii., which contains Solomon's dedicatory prayer.

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, &c., (p. 419.)

Seventh Lesson.

BUT if ye shall at all turn from following Me, ye or your children, and will not keep My commandments, and My statutes, which I have set before you, but go and serve other gods, and worship them, then will I cut off Israël out of the land which I have given them; and this house, which I have hallowed for My Name, will I cast out of My sight; and Israël shall be a proverb and a byword among all people. And this house shall be a warning, and every one that passeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss, and shall say; Why hath the LORD done thus unto this land, and to this house? And they shall answer: Because they forsook the LORD their God, Who brought forth their fathers out of the land of Egypt, and have taken hold upon other gods, and have worshipped them, and served them: therefore hath the LORD brought upon them all this evil.

Second Responsory.

God, Which heareth all, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson.

AND it came to pass at the end of twenty years, when Solomon had built the two houses, the house of the LORD, and the King's house, (now Hiram, the King of Tyre, had furnished Solomon with cedar-trees, and fir-trees, and with gold, according to all his desire,) that then King Solomon gave Hiram twenty cities in the land of Galilee. And Hiram came out from Tyre to see the cities which Solomon had given him; and they pleased him not; and he said: What cities are these, which thou hast given me, my brother? And he called them the land of "Cabul"[1] unto this day. And Hiram sent to King Solomon six-score talents of gold.

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered me, &c., (p. 420.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book upon "The City of God" written by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Bk. xvii. ch. 8.)

THINGS which were then still to come were in a certain manner imagined in Solomon, who built the temple, who had that peace which his name implieth (for the name Solomon signifieth "the Peaceful One") and who, at the beginning of his reign, was marvellously praiseworthy. By these things he foreshadowed in his own person, though he set not forth with his mouth, our Lord Christ. Thus are some things written of Solomon which are, as it were, things written concerning Christ, the Holy Scripture in this way, by giving the history of things past, prophesying all the while of things to come.

Fourth Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Fifth Lesson.

FOR besides the books of the Divine history wherein his reign is recorded, the 71st Psalm is superscribed with his name. In this Psalm are many things which cannot suit him, but are most clearly applicable to the Lord Christ, thus showing that Solomon was, as it were, a shadowy figure cast before, of that which was afterwards revealed in very truth in the Person of Christ.

Fifth Responsory.

Ye mountains of Gilboa, &c., (p. 420.)

Sixth Lesson.

WITHOUT going into the rest, I may say that it is known what were the limits of Solomon's dominions, and yet in that Psalm we read: "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth." This we see fulfilled in Christ. It was from the river, that is, from His Baptism by John in Jordan, that He began His assumption of dominion, for then it was when John bare testimony unto Him that His disciples began to acknowledge Him, calling Him, not Master only, but Lord.

Sixth Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Third Book of Kings (x. 1.)

AND when the Queen of Sheba[2] heard of the fame of Solomon concerning the name of the LORD, she came to prove him with hard questions. And she came to Jerusalem with a very great train and riches, with camels that bare spices, and very much gold, and precious stones. And when she was come to King Solomon, she communed with him of all that was in her heart. And Solomon told her all her questions; there was not anything hid from the King, which he told her not.

---

[1] I.e., unpleasant.

[2] She seems to have been an Abyssinian.

First Responsory.

Remember, O Lord, Thy covenant, &c., (p. 445.)

Second Lesson.

AND when the Queen of Sheba had seen all Solomon's wisdom, and the house that he had built, and the meat of his table, and the sitting of his servants, and the attendance of his ministers, and their apparel, and his cup-bearers, and the sacrifices which he offered in the house of the LORD, there was no more spirit in her. And she said to the King: It was a true report that I heard in mine own land, of thy discourse and of thy wisdom; howbeit, I believed not the words, until I came, and mine eyes had seen it, and I perceived that the half was not told me; thy wisdom and thy works exceed the fame which I heard.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

HAPPY are thy men, happy are these thy servants, which stand continually before thee, and that hear thy wisdom. Blessed be the LORD thy God, which delighted in thee, to set thee on the throne of Israël, because the LORD loveth Israël for ever, therefore made He thee king, to do judgment and justice. And she gave the King an hundred and twenty talents of gold, and of spices very great store, and precious stones; there came no more such abundance of spices as these which the Queen of Sheba gave to King Solomon. And the navy also of Hiram, that brought gold from Ophir, brought in from Ophir great plenty of sandalwood,[1] and precious stones.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Third Book of Kings (xi. 1.)

BUT King Solomon loved many strange women, together with the daughter of Pharaoh,[2] women of the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Sidonians, and Hittites—of the nations concerning which the LORD said unto the children of Israël: Ye shall not go in to them, neither shall they come in unto you; for surely they will turn away your hearts to follow after their gods.[3] Solomon clave unto these in love. And he had seven hundred wives, as queens, and three hundred concubines; and his wives turned away his heart. For it came to pass, when Solomon was old, that his wives turned away his heart, to follow after other gods; and his heart was not perfect with the LORD his God, as was the heart of David his father.

First Responsory.

Lord, when Thy people, &c., (p. 445.)

Second Lesson.

FOR Solomon went after Ashtoreth, the goddess of the Sidonians, and after Moloch, the idol of the Ammonites. And Solomon did evil in the sight of the LORD, and went not fully after the LORD, as did David his father. Then did Solomon build an high place for Chemosh, the idol of Moab, in the hill that is before Jerusalem, and for Moloch, the idol of the children of Ammon. And likewise did he for all his strange wives, which burnt incense, and sacrificed unto their gods.

Second Responsory.

And it came to pass, &c., (p. 446.)

Third Lesson.

AND the LORD was angry with Solomon, because his heart was turned from the LORD God of Israël, Which had appeared unto him twice, and had commanded him concerning this thing, that he should not go after other gods; but he kept not that which the LORD commanded him. [Wherefore the LORD said] unto Solomon: Forasmuch as this is done of thee, and thou hast not kept My covenant and My statutes, which I have commanded thee, I will surely rend the kingdom from thee, and will give it to thy servant. Notwithstanding, in thy days I will not do it, for David thy father's sake.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Third Book of Kings (xi. 26.)

AND Jeroboam the son of Nebat, an Ephrathite of Zereda, Solomon's servant, whose mother's name was Zeruah, a widow woman, even he lifted up his hand against the King. And this is the cause that he rebelled against him. Solomon built Millo, and repaired the breaches of the city of David his father. And Jeroboam was a mighty man and powerful. And Solomon, seeing the young man, that he was of a good disposition and industrious, he set him over the tribute of all the house of Joseph.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

AND it came to pass at that time, when Jeroboam went out of Jerusalem, that the Prophet Ahijah the Shilonite found him in the way; and he had clad himself in a new garment; and they two were alone in the field. And Ahijah caught the new garment that was on him, and rent it in twelve pieces, and said unto Jeroboam: Take thee ten pieces. For thus saith the LORD, the God of Israël—Behold, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten tribes to thee.

[3] Ex. xxxiv. 16. Deut. vii. 3, 4.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson. (40.)

SOLOMON sought therefore to kill Jeroboam; but he arose and fled into Egypt, unto Shishak, King of Egypt; and was in Egypt until the death of Solomon. And the rest of the words of Solomon, and all that he did, and his wisdom, behold, they are all of them written in the Book of the Acts of Solomon. And the time that Solomon reigned in Jerusalem over all Israël was forty years. And Solomon slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David his father. And Rehoboam his son reigned in his stead.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, unto the cry, &c., (p. 421.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Third Book of Kings (xii. 1.)

AND Rehoboam went to Shechem. For all Israël were come to Shechem, to make him king. And it came to pass, when Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who was yet in Egypt, where he was fled from the presence of King Solomon, had heard of his death, that he came back again out of Egypt; for they had sent and told him. And Jeroboam and all the congregation of Israël came, and spake unto Rehoboam, saying: Thy father made our yoke grievous; now therefore make thou the grievous service of thy father, and his heavy yoke which he put upon us, lighter, and we will serve thee. And he said unto them: Depart yet for three days, and then come again to me.

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, &c., (p. 419.)

Second Lesson.

AND the people departed; and King Rehoboam consulted with the old men that stood before Solomon his father, while he yet lived; and said: How do ye advise that I may answer this people? And they spake unto him, saying: If thou wilt be a servant unto this people this day, and wilt serve them, and wilt yield to their petition, and wilt speak good words to them, then they will be thy servants for ever. But he forsook the counsel of the old men, which they had given him, and consulted with the young men that were grown up with him, and stood before him.

Second Responsory.

God Which heareth all, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson. (13.)

AND the King answered the people roughly, and forsook the old men's counsel that they gave him, and spake to them after the counsel of the young men, saying: My father made your yoke heavy, and I will add to your yoke; my father also chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions. Wherefore the King hearkened not unto the people; for the LORD had turned him aside, that He might perform His saying, which the LORD spake by Ahijah the Shilonite unto Jeroboam the son of Nebat. So when the people saw that the King hearkened not unto them, they answered him, saying: What portion have we in David? or what inheritance in the son of Jesse?[1]

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered me, &c., (p. 420.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Third Book of Kings (xiv. 5.)

AND the LORD said unto Ahijah: Behold, the wife of Jeroboam cometh to ask a thing of thee for her son, for he is sick; thus and thus shalt thou say unto her. When therefore she came in, she feigned herself to be another woman, but Ahijah heard the sound of her feet, as she came in at the door, and said: Come in, thou wife of Jeroboam—why feignest thou thyself to be another? For I am sent to thee with heavy tidings.

First Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Second Lesson.

GO, tell Jeroboam: Thus saith the LORD God of Israël: Forasmuch as I exalted thee from among the people, and made thee Prince over My people Israël, and rent the kingdom away from the house of David, and gave it to thee; and yet thou hast not been as My servant David, who kept My commandments, and who followed Me with all his heart, to do that only which was right in Mine eyes—but hast done evil above all that were before thee,—for thou hast gone and made thee other gods, and molten images,[2] to provoke Me to anger, and hast cast Me behind thy back—

Second Responsory.

---

[1] After this all the tribes except Judah and Benjamin revolted, forming a new state called "Israël," as opposed to Judah; and taking for their king Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made them to sin by setting up schismatical places of worship at Dan and Bethel, in opposition to the Temple at Jerusalem.

[2] These were the figures of calves which Jeroboam had set up in his two sanctuaries, and before which himself, and other persons devoid of real Priest's orders, took upon themselves to officiate. The calves may, like the well-known idol at Horeb, have been meant to represent the Supreme Being, but were absolutely in defiance of His law (Deut. iv. 15-18.) The horror of Jeroboam's offence, even as compared to Solomon's, perhaps was that Solomon had set up his idol temples for his wives, but Jeroboam had deliberately substituted, for his own use, and that of his subjects, another form of worship for that which God had commanded.

Third Lesson.

THEREFORE, behold, I will bring evil upon the house of Jeroboam, and will cut off from Jeroboam him that pisseth against the wall, and him that is shut up, and left, in Israël—and will take away the remnant of the house of Jeroboam, as a man wipeth away dung till it be all gone.[1] Him that dieth of Jeroboam in the city shall the dogs eat; and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat; for the LORD hath spoken it. Arise thou, therefore, get thee to thine own house, and when thy feet enter into the city, the child shall die.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Third Book of Kings (xviii. 21.[2])

AND Elijah came unto all the people, and said: How long halt ye between two opinions? If the LORD be God, follow Him—but if Baal, then follow him. And the people answered him not a word. Then said Elijah unto the people: I, even I only, remain a Prophet of the LORD—but Baal's Prophets are four hundred and fifty men.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

LET them therefore give us two bullocks, and let them choose one bullock for themselves, and cut it in pieces, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under: and I will dress the other bullock, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under. Call ye on the name of your gods, and I will call on the name of the LORD. And the God that answereth by fire, let him be God. And all the people answered and said: It is well spoken.

Second Responsory.

O LORD, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

AND Elijah said unto the prophets of Baal: Choose you one bullock for yourselves, and dress it first, for ye are many; and call on the name of your gods—but put no fire under. And they took the bullock which was given them, and they dressed it; and called on the name of Baal from morning even until noon, saying: O Baal, hear us! But there was no voice nor any that answered; and they leapt about the altar which they had made. And it came to pass at noon that Elijah mocked them, and said: Cry aloud.[3]

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. When the LORD took up Elijah * by a whirlwind into heaven, Elisha cried: My father! the chariot of Israël and the horsemen thereof!

Prayer from the succeeding Lauds.

Ninth Sunday after Pentecost.

The Ninth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Fourth Book of Kings (i. 1.)

THEN Moab rebelled against Israël after the death of Ahab. And Ahaziah[4] fell down through a lattice in his upper chamber that he had in Samaria, and was sick. And he sent messengers and said unto them: Go, inquire of Baal-zebub,[5] the god of Ekron, whether I shall recover of this disease. But the Angel of the LORD said to Elijah the Tishbite:[6] Arise, go up to meet the messengers of the King of Samaria, and say unto them: Is it not because there is not a God in Israël that ye go to inquire of Baal-zebub, the god of Ekron? Now, therefore, thus saith the LORD: Thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, &c., (p. 419.)

Second Lesson.

AND Elijah departed. And the messengers turned back unto Ahaziah. And he said unto them:

[2] If the reader now desires to follow the Church Lessons intelligently he must read the history as given in the Bible for himself. To give sense, however, to the Lessons of this Saturday, it is enough to remember that Ahab, King of Israël, "did evil in the sight of the LORD above all that were before him." "As if it had been a light thing for him to walk in the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, he took to wife Jezebel the daughter of Ethbaal, King of the Sidonians, and went and served Baal, and worshipped him." (See Note, p. 436.) "And he reared up an Altar for Baal in the house of Baal which he had built in Samaria. And Ahab made a grove" (this probably means an image of Ashtoreth), "and Ahab did more to provoke the LORD God of Israël to anger than all the kings of Israël that were before him." The Divine anger at these idolatries, and an accompanying brutal persecution of the Monotheists, manifested itself in a drought for three years, at the end of which the Prophet Elijah brought about a great national gathering of the Israelites on Mount Carmel, at which were present himself, Ahab, and the idolatrous priests, 450 of Baal's, and 400 of "the grove's." At this point the narrative proceeds as in the text.

[3] This sort of thing went on "until the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice." Elijah then prepared his bullock, and called on the name of the Eternal. "Then the fire of the LORD fell, and consumed the burnt sacrifice, . . . and when all the people saw it, they fell on their faces, and they said: The LORD He is God! The LORD He is God! And Elijah said unto them: Take the prophets of Baal; let not one of them escape. And they took them; and Elijah brought them down to the brook Kishon, and slew them there."

[4] Ahab's son and successor.

[5] That is "the Lord of flies" or "Baal of the flies." In Matth. xii. 24 he is called "the Prince of the devils."

[6] That is, of Tishbah, a town of Priests in the tribe of Gad.

Why are ye now turned back? And they said unto him: There came a man up to meet us, and said unto us: Go, turn again unto the King that sent you: and say unto him: Thus saith the LORD—Is it not because there is not a God in Israël, that thou sendest to inquire of Baal-zebub, the god of Ekron? Therefore thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

Second Responsory.

God, Which heareth all, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson.

AND he said unto them: What appearance and raiment had the man which came up to meet you, and told you these words? And they answered him: He was an hairy man, and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins. And he said: It is Elijah the Tishbite. Then he sent unto him a captain of fifty with his fifty. And he went up to him, where he sat on the top of an hill. And he said unto him: Thou man of God, the king hath said—Come down. And Elijah answered, and said to the captain of fifty: If I be a man of God, then let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And there came down fire from heaven, and consumed him and the fifty that were with him.[1]

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered me, &c., (p. 420.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo]. (201*st for the Season.*)

DEARLY beloved brethren, in the Lessons which are now being read to us day by day, I have often warned you that we must not follow the deathful letter, to the abandonment of the quickening spirit. For it is thus that the Apostle saith:—"The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life." (2 Cor. iii. 6.) If we will understand only the plain meaning of the letter, we shall get little or no edification from our readings in the Divine Scriptures. All those things whereof we hear were types and images of things to come; and those things which were foreshadowed in the history of the Jews are, by the gift of God, fulfilled in us.

Fourth Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Fifth Lesson.

THE Blessed Elias was a type of the Lord our Saviour. Just as Elias was rejected by the Jews, so was the true Elias, even our Lord, rejected and despised by the same Jews. Elias went away out of his own country, and Christ hath left the synagogue—Elias went into the desert, and Christ hath come into the world. Elias, when he was in the desert, was fed by ravens,[2] and Christ in the desert of this world is comforted by the faith of the Gentiles.

Fifth Responsory.

Ye mountains of Gilboa, &c., (p. 420.)

Sixth Lesson.

FOR the ravens which, at the command of the Lord, ministered unto Elias, were a type of the flock of Gentiles. Wherefore also it is said for the Gentile Church:—"I am black, but comely—O daughters of Jerusalem!" (Cant. i. 4.) Why is the Church black but comely? She is black by nature, but comely by grace. Why is she black by nature? [Because she must needs own:—] "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me." (Ps. l. 7.) Why is she comely by grace? [Because she can go on, and say:—] "Sprinkle me with hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow," (v. 9.)

Sixth Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (ii. 5.)

AND the sons of the Prophets that were at Jericho came to Elisha,[3] and said unto him: Knowest thou that the LORD will take away thy master from thee to-day? And he answered: Yea, I know it—hold ye your peace. And Elijah said unto him: Tarry here; for the LORD hath sent me to Jordan. And he said: As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And they two went on; and fifty men of the sons of the Prophets went, and stood to view afar off; and they two stood by Jordan.

First Responsory.

Remember, O Lord, Thy covenant, &c., (p. 445.)

Second Lesson.

AND Elijah took his mantle, and wrapped it together, and smote the waters, and they were divided hither and thither, so that they two went over on dry ground. And when they were gone over, Elijah said unto Elisha: Ask what I shall do for thee, before I be taken away from thee.

[1] This happened once again, but God allowed Elijah to go with a third company to Ahaziah to whom he repeated his message. "So he died, according to the word of the LORD," and was succeeded by his brother Jehoram.

[2] At the beginning of the drought "the word of the LORD came unto him, (Elijah) saying: Get thee hence, and turn thee eastward, and hide thyself by the brook Cherith . . . . . I have commanded the ravens to feed thee there. So he went . . . . . and the ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning, and bread and flesh in the evening." (3 Kings xvii. 2-6.)

[3] Elijah's servant and disciple.

And Elisha said: I pray that a double portion of thy spirit be upon me. And he said: Thou hast asked an hard thing; nevertheless, if thou see me when I am taken from thee, it shall be so unto thee, as thou hast asked—but if thou see not, it shall not be so.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

AND as they still went on and talked, behold, a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, parted them twain asunder, and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven. And Elisha saw it; and he cried: My father! the chariot of Israël and the horses thereof! And he saw him no more. And he took hold of his own clothes, and rent them in two pieces. And he took up the mantle of Elijah, that fell from him; and went back, and stood by the bank of Jordan.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (iii. 6.)

AND King Jehoram[1] went out of Samaria at that time, and numbered all Israël. And he sent to Jehoshaphat the King of Judah, saying: The King of Moab hath rebelled against me; come thou with me against him to battle. And he said: I will go up; he that is mine is thine—my people are thy people, and my horses thy horses. And he said: Which way shall we go up? And he answered: The way through the wilderness of Edom. So the King of Israël went, and the King of Judah, and the King of Edom; and they fetched a compass of seven days' journey. And there was no water for the host, and for the cattle that followed them.

First Responsory.

Lord, when Thy people, &c., (p. 445.)

Second Lesson.

AND the King of Israël said: Alas! that the LORD hath called us three kings together, to deliver us into the hand of Moab! But Jehoshaphat said: Is there not here a Prophet of the LORD, that we may betake us unto the LORD by him? And one of the King of Israël's servants answered and said: Here is Elisha, the son of Shaphat; which poured water on the hands of Elijah. And Jehoshaphat said: The Word of the LORD is with him. So the King of Israël, and Jehoshaphat King of Judah, and the King of Edom, went down to him. And Elisha said unto the King of Israël: What have I to do with thee? Get thee to the prophets of thy father and to the prophets of thy mother.

Second Responsory.

And it came to pass, &c., (p. 446.)

Third Lesson.

AND the King of Israël said unto him: [Nay; but] wherefore hath the LORD called these three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab? And Elisha said unto him: As the LORD of hosts liveth, before Whom I stand, surely were it not that I regard the presence of Jehoshaphat, the King of Judah, I would not look toward thee, nor see thee. But now bring me a minstrel. And it came to pass, when the minstrel played, that the hand of the LORD came upon him, and he said: Thus saith the LORD—Make this valley full of ditches. For thus saith the LORD—Ye shall not see wind, neither shall ye see rain; yet that valley shall be filled with water; and ye shall drink, both ye, and your people, and your cattle. And this is but a light thing in the sight of the LORD; moreover, He will deliver Moab also into your hand.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (iv. 1.)

NOW there cried a certain woman of the wives of the Prophets unto Elisha, saying: Thy servant my husband is dead; and thou knowest that thy servant did fear the LORD—and, behold, the creditor is come to take unto him my two sons to be bondmen. And Elisha said unto her: What shall I do for thee? Tell me; what hast thou in thine house? And she said: Thine handmaid hath not anything in the house, save a little oil, to anoint withal. And he said: Go; borrow thee vessels abroad of all thy neighbours, even empty vessels, and that not a few. And when thou art come in thou shalt shut the door upon thee and upon thy sons, and shalt pour out into all those vessels; and thou shalt set aside that which is full.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

SO the woman went, and shut the door upon her and upon her sons; who brought the vessels to her, and she poured out. And it came to pass, when the vessels were full, that she said unto her son: Bring me yet a vessel. And he said unto her: I have no more. And the oil stayed. Then she came and told the man of God. And he said: Go, sell the oil, and pay thy creditor; and live thou and thy children of the rest.

And it fell on a day, that Elisha passed by Shunem. And there was a great woman there; and she constrained him to eat bread. And, as he oftentimes passed by there, he turned in thither to eat bread. And she said unto her husband: [Behold now,] I perceive that this is an holy man of God, which passeth by us continually. Let us make for him a little chamber, and let us set for him there a bed, and a table, and a stool, and a candlestick; and when he cometh to us, he shall turn in thither.

[1] Ahab's son, and Ahaziah's brother and successor.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

AND it fell on a day that he came thither, and he turned into the chamber, and lay there. And he said to Gehazi his servant: Call this Shunammite. And when he had called her, she stood before him. And he said unto his servant: Say unto her—Behold, thou hast been careful for us with all this care; what wouldest thou that I should do for thee? Hast thou any matter, wherein thou wouldest that I should speak for thee to the king, or to the captain of the host? And she answered: I dwell among mine own people. And he said: What will she, then, that I should do for her? And Gehazi said: Ask her not; verily, she hath no child, and her husband is old. And he commanded to call her. And when he had called her, she stood in the door; and he said unto her: At this time, and in this same hour, thou shalt embrace a son if thou be alive. And she said: Nay, my lord, I pray thee—nay, thou man of God! do not lie unto thine handmaid. And the woman conceived, and bare a son at that season that Elisha had said unto her, and in that same hour.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (vi. 24.)

BEN-HADAD, King of Syria, gathered all his host, and went up and besieged Samaria. And there was a great famine in Samaria; and it was besieged until an ass's head was sold for fourscore pieces of silver, and the fourth part of a kab[1] of dove's dung for five pieces of silver. And as the King of Israël was passing by upon the wall, there cried a woman unto him, saying: Help! my lord — O King! And he said: The LORD helpeth thee not—whence can I help thee? out of the barn-floor? or out of the wine-press?

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, &c., (p. 419.)

Second Lesson.

AND the King said unto her: What aileth thee? And she answered: This woman said unto me, Give thy son, that we may eat him to-day, and we will eat my son to-morrow. So we boiled my son, and did eat him. And I said unto her on the next day, Give thy son, that we may eat him—and she hath hid her son. And when the King heard it, he rent his clothes, and passed by upon the wall. And all the people saw that he was clad with sackcloth within upon his flesh. Then the King said: God do so, and more also, to me, if the head of Elisha the son of Shaphat shall stand on him this day. But Elisha sat in his house; and the elders sat with him.

Second Responsory.

God, Which heareth, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson.

NOW [the King] sent a man before him, but ere the messenger came to him, [Elisha] said to the elders: Know ye how that this son of a murderer hath sent to take away mine head? Look, therefore, when the messenger cometh; shut the door, and prevent him from entering; for, behold, the sound of his master's feet is behind him. And while he yet talked with them, behold, the messenger appeared that came down unto him; and he said: Behold, this great evil is of the LORD—why should I wait on the LORD any longer? (vii.) Then Elisha said: Hear ye the word of the LORD; Thus saith the LORD—To-morrow, about this time, shall a measure of fine flour be sold for a shekel, and two measures of barley for a shekel, in the gate of Samaria.

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered me, &c., (p. 420.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (viii. 1.)

THEN spake Elisha unto the woman whose son he had restored to life,[2] saying: Arise, and go, thou and thine household, and sojourn wheresoever thou canst sojourn; for the LORD hath called for a famine, and it shall come upon the land seven years. And the woman arose, and did after the saying of the man of God. And she went, with her household, and sojourned in the land of the Philistines seven years. And at the seven years' end, the woman returned out of the land of the Philistines; and she went forth to cry unto the King for her house, and for her land.

First Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Second Lesson.

AND the King talked with Gehazi, the servant of the man of God, saying: Tell me all the great things that Elisha hath done. And as he was telling the King how he had restored a dead body to life, behold the woman, whose son he had restored to life, cried to the King for her house and for her land. And Gehazi said: My lord, O King! this is the woman, and this is her son, whom Elisha restored to life. And when the King asked the woman, she told him. So the King appointed unto her an officer, saying: Restore all that was hers, and all the fruits of the field, since the day that she left the land, even until now.

Second Responsory.

---

[1] A measure of about two pints. It is not quite certain that a sort of vegetable pottage is not meant by the name in the text.

[2] The same as mentioned in the Second and Third Lessons on Wednesday. The whole history is in ch. iv. 17-37.

Third Lesson.

AND Elisha came to Damascus; and Ben-hadad, the King of Syria, was sick; and they told him, saying: The man of God is come hither. And the King said unto Hazaël: Take a present in thine hand, and go, meet the man of God, and inquire of the LORD by him, saying—Shall I recover of this disease? So Hazaël went to meet him, and stood before him, and said: Thy son Ben-hadad, King of Syria, hath sent me to thee, saying: Shall I recover of this disease? And Elisha said unto him: Go, say unto him: Thou shalt recover. Howbeit, the LORD hath showed me that he shall surely die.[1]

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (ix. 1.)

AND Elisha the Prophet called one of the sons of the Prophets, and said unto him: Gird up thy loins, and take this vessel of oil in thine hand, and go to Ramoth-Gilead. And when thou comest thither, look out there Jehu, the son of Jehoshaphat, the son of Nimshi, and go in, and make him arise up from among his brethren, and carry him to an inner chamber. Then take the vessel of oil, and pour it on his head, and say: Thus saith the LORD—I have anointed thee king over Israël! Then open the door, and flee, and tarry not. So the young man, the servant of the Prophet, went to Ramoth-Gilead, and came thither. And, behold, the captains of the host were sitting. And he said: I have an errand to thee, O captain! And Jehu said: Unto which of all us? And he said: To thee, O captain!

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

AND he arose, and went into the inner chamber: and he poured the oil on his head, and said unto him: Thus saith the LORD God of Israël—I have anointed thee king over the people of the LORD, even over Israël; and thou shalt smite the house of Ahab thy master, that I may avenge the blood of My servants the Prophets, and the blood of all the servants of the LORD, at the hand of Jezebel. And the whole house of Ahab will I destroy. And I will cut off from Ahab every man child, and him that is shut up, and him that is left at large, in Israël. And I will make the house of Ahab like the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and like the house of Baasha the son of Ahijah.[2] And the dogs shall eat Jezebel in the field of Jezreel, and there shall be none to bury her. And he opened the door, and fled.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

THEN Jehu came forth to the servants of his lord, and they said unto him: Is all well? wherefore came this mad fellow to thee? And he said unto them: Ye know the man, and his communication.[3] And they said: It is false; tell us now. And he said: Thus and thus spake he to me, saying,—Thus saith the LORD: I have anointed thee king over Israël. Then they hasted, and took every man his garment, and put them under his feet, after the manner of a king's seat, and blew with trumpets, saying: Jehu is King!

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Jehoash did that which was right in the sight of the LORD * all his days wherein Jehoiada the Priest instructed him.

Prayer from the succeeding Lauds.

Tenth Sunday after Pentecost.

The Tenth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (ix. 29.)

IN the eleventh year of Jehoram the son of Ahab began Ahaziah to reign over Judah, and Jehu came to Jezreel. And when Jezebel heard of his coming, she painted her eyes with antimony,[4] and tired her head, and looked out at a window, as Jehu entered in at the gate, and said: Had Zimri peace, who slew his master?[5] And Jehu lifted up his face to the window, and said: Who is this woman? And two or three eunuchs made obeïsance unto him. And he said unto them: Throw her down! So they threw her down. And some of her blood was sprinkled on the wall, and the horses trampled her. And when he was come in to eat and drink, he said: Go, see now this cursed woman, and bury her, for she is a king's daughter.

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, &c., (p. 419.)

---

[1] That is, of something else—and, in fact, he did recover, but Hazaël murdered him the next day.

[2] This Baasha had conspired against Nadab the son of Jeroboam, and killed him, and exterminated the family of Jeroboam. But the like was done to his own son and successor, and to his whole family, by his own officer Zimri. See 3 (1) Kings xv. 25-30.

[3] He seems to have thought it was a practical joke planned by his comrades.

[4] Lit. sea-weed.

[5] Jehu had just met Jehoram outside the town and shot him in his chariot. The historical allusion is to the history of Zimri, an officer in the service of Elah, King of Israël, whom he murdered, and reigned instead of, for a week, at the end of which the city was taken by Omri, a candidate set up by the army. "And when Zimri saw that the city was taken, he went into the palace of the King's house, and burnt the King's house over him with fire, and died." See 3 Kings xvi. 8-20.

Second Lesson.

AND when they went to bury her, they found no more of her than the skull, and the feet, and the palms of her hands. And they came again, and told him. And Jehu said: This is the word of the LORD, which He spake by His servant Elijah the Tishbite, saying—In the field of Jezreel shall dogs eat the flesh of Jezebel; and the carcase of Jezebel shall be as dung upon the face of the ground in the field of Jezreel, so that they that pass by shall say: Yea, and is this indeed that Jezebel?[1] (x.) And Ahab had seventy sons in Samaria. And Jehu wrote a letter, and sent it to Samaria, unto the rulers of the city, to the elders, and to them that brought up Ahab's children, saying: Now, as soon as this letter cometh to you, seeing your master's sons are with you, and there are with you chariots, and horses, and fenced cities, and arms, look even out the best of your master's sons, even him that best pleaseth you, and set him on his father's throne; and fight for your master's house.

Second Responsory.

God, Which heareth, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson.

THEY were exceedingly afraid, and said: Behold, two kings[2] stood not before him; how then shall we stand? And they that were over the house, and they that were over the city, the elders also, and the bringers-up of the children, sent to Jehu, saying: We are thy servants, and will do all that thou shalt bid us; we will not make us any king; do thou that which is good in thine eyes. Then he wrote a letter the second time to them, saying: If ye be mine, and will to obey me, take ye the heads of the men your master's sons, and come to me to Jezreel by to-morrow this time. Now, the King's sons, being seventy persons, were with the great men of the city, which brought them up. And when the letter came to them, they took the King's sons, and slew the seventy men, and put their heads in baskets, and sent him them to Jezreel.

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered me, &c., (p. 420.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (Hom. 25 on the Epistle to the Romans.)

LET us not dream that we are ourselves to be held less guilty, when we find that we have not been alone in sin. On the contrary, such fellowship addeth to our punishment. The serpent was more heavily punished than Eve, and Eve than Adam, and Jezebel suffered more than Ahab, who took the vineyard of Naboth. She it had been that planned the whole matter, and opened the way for her husband's crime. Even so thou also, who shalt have caused another's perdition, shalt suffer more grievously than shall they, whom thou hast ruined. Since, for a man to commit sin himself is less wicked than to lead others into sin.

Fourth Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Fifth Lesson.

IF, therefore, we should see others sinning, let us not only not help them, but let us do what in us lieth to draw them out of the bottomless pit of destruction, lest we should suffer as accomplices in their trespass. Let our memory never forget that right awful judgment-seat, the river of fire, the chains that can never be unlocked, the darkness that cannot be pierced, the sound of teeth gnashing, the deadly worm. But thou sayest: God is good. Are then all these things but idle words? Is there no punishment for the rich man which giveth no heed to Lazarus? (Luke xvi. 20-26.) Doth the bridegroom open to the foolish virgins the door of the marriage-chamber? (Matth. xxv. 1-12.) They that have denied to Christ the necessaries of life, are they not to depart from Him into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels? (Matth. xxv. 41-46.) The man that cometh in to the marriage-supper, not having a wedding garment, shall he, or shall he not, be bound hand and foot, and taken away, and cast into outer darkness? (Matth. xxii. 11-13.) The servant that hath no compassion on his fellow-servant, which oweth him an hundred pence, shall he, or shall he not, be delivered to the tormentors? (Matth. xviii. 23-35.) It is said, concerning such as commit adultery, that their worm dieth not and their fire is not quenched? (Mark ix. 44.) Is that not true?

Fifth Responsory.

Ye mountains of Gilboa, &c., (p. 420.)

Sixth Lesson.

BUT these are perhaps only threats on God's part? No doubt, quoth thou. I ask thee: How darest thou say such a thing out loud, and deliver this judgment from thine own imagining? For sooth, I can prove to thee, from the things which God hath done, that thou art wrong. If thou wilt not believe for things to come, at least believe for things past. Of them at least it cannot be said that they are nought but threats and mere words, for they have happened, and actually been realised in fact. Who was He which brought in a great flood, until the whole land was standing water, and our whole race perished, save eight persons? Who was He which rained upon Sodom brimstone and fire out of heaven? (Gen. xix. 24.) Who was He which overthrew all the host of Egypt in the Red Sea? (Ex. xiv. 27.) Who was He which sent out a fire and consumed them that were of the faction of Abiram? (Num. xvi. 35.) Who was He which sent a pestilence upon

[1] Ahab and Jezebel had procured by false witness the judicial murder of one Naboth, that they might confiscate his land, and make a garden of his vineyard. When they went down to see their new property, Elijah met them there, and denounced upon them the Divine anger, uttering the prophecy quoted in the text. See 3 (1) Kings xxi.

Israël, because David had sinned, and, from the morning even to the time appointed, there died of the people seventy thousand men? (2 Kings xxiv.) Was it not God, and none other, Which brought upon them all these things, and more also.

Sixth Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c. (p. 420.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (xi. 1.)

AND when Athaliah,[1] the mother of Ahaziah, saw that her son was dead, she arose, and destroyed all the seed royal. But Jehosheba, the daughter of King Jehoram, sister of Ahaziah, took Joash, the son of Ahaziah, and stole him out of the chamber from among the King's sons which were slain, and his nurse with him, and hid him from Athaliah, so that he was not slain. And he was with her, hid, in the house of the LORD, six years. And Athaliah did reign over the land.

First Responsory.

Remember, O Lord, Thy covenant, &c., (p. 445.)

Second Lesson.

AND in the seventh year Jehoiada sent,[2] and fetched the rulers over hundreds, and the men of war, and brought them to him into the house of the LORD, and made a covenant with them, and took an oath of them in the house of the LORD, and showed them the King's son, and commanded them, saying: This is the thing that ye shall do; a third part of you shall enter in on the Sabbath, and shall even be keepers of the watch of the King's house; and a third part shall be at the gate of Sur; and a third[3] part at the gate behind the dwelling of the keepers of the shields;[4] so shall ye keep the watch of the house of Massakh.[5] And the two parts of you that go forth on the Sabbath, they shall keep the watch of the house of the LORD round about the King.[6]

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson. (9.)

AND they took every man his men, that were to come in on the Sabbath, and came to Jehoiada the Priest. And he gave unto them King David's spears and shields, that were in the house of the LORD. And they stood, every man with his weapons in his hand, from the right side of the Temple to the left side of the altar and the Holy House, round about the King. And he brought forth the King's son, and put upon him the crown and the testimony; and they made him king, and anointed him; and they clapped their hands and said: God save the King!

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (xii. 1.)

IN the seventh year of Jehu, Joash began to reign; and forty years reigned he in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Zibiah, of Beer-sheba. And Joash did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, all his days wherein Jehoiada the Priest instructed him. Nevertheless, he took not away the high places; for the people still sacrificed and burnt incense on the high places.

First Responsory.

Lord, when Thy people, &c., (p. 445.)

Second Lesson.

AND Joash said to the Priests: All the [redemption]-money of the dedicated things that is brought into the house of the LORD by every one that passeth, the money that one offereth for the redemption of his own soul,[7] and the money that any man out of his own heart and free-will bringeth into the temple of the LORD, let the Priests collect in the order of their course, and let them repair the breaches of the house, whereinsoever anything be found that hath need to be repaired.

Second Responsory.

And it came to pass, &c., (p. 446.)

Third Lesson.

BUT it was so that unto the three-and-twentieth year of King Joash the Priests had not repaired the breaches of the Temple. Then King Joash called for Jehoiada the High Priest, and for the Priests, and said unto them: Why repair ye not the breaches of the Temple? Now, therefore, receive no more money in the order of your courses, but deliver it for the repairing of the Temple. So the Priests were forbidden to receive any more money of the people, or to repair the Temple.[1]

[1] Daughter of Ahab and Jezebel, wife of Jehoram, King of Judah, sister of the King of Israël of the same name, and mother of Ahaziah, King of Judah, who was killed by Jehu at Jezreel, along with his uncle Jehoram.

[2] The High Priest.

[3] Supposed by some ancient commentators to be the eastern gate, but Jonathan ben Uzziel calls it "the gate of the heroes."

[4] These were three hundred brazen shields made by Jehoram, in place of as many of gold presented by Solomon to the Temple, and which were carried by their keepers before the sovereign when he attended public worship in state. 3 Kings xiv. 26-28. The Royal entrance, where they were kept, was on the western side of the Temple.

[5] Perhaps a proper name. Jonathan ben Uzziel, however, "from being in any way neglected."

[6] Viz., at the gates of the Temple, as opposed to those within, close about the King's lodging.

Third Responsory.

Thus said the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (xiii. 14.)

NOW Elisha was fallen sick of his sickness whereof he died. And Joash,[2] the King of Israël, came down unto him, and wept over his face, and said: O my father! my father! the chariot of Israël and the horsemen thereof! And Elisha said unto him: Take bow and arrows. And he took unto him bow and arrows. And he said to the King of Israël: Put thine hand upon the bow. And he put his hand upon it; and Elisha put his hands upon the King's hands, and said: Open the window eastward. And he opened it; and Elisha said: Shoot. And he shot. And Elisha said: The arrow of the LORD'S deliverance, and the arrow of deliverance from Syria, for thou shalt smite Syria in Aphek, till thou have consumed it.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

AND he said: Take the arrows. And he took them; and he said unto him again: Smite the weapons upon the ground. And he smote thrice and stayed; and the man of God was wroth with him, and said: If thou hadst smitten five times, or six times, or seven times, then hadst thou smitten Syria till thou hadst consumed it—whereas, now, thou shalt smite Syria but thrice. And Elisha died, and they buried him. And the bands of robbers from Moab invaded the land the same year.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

AND it came to pass, as they were burying a man, that they spied the robbers, and they cast the dead body into the sepulchre of Elisha. And when it touched the bones of Elisha, the man revived, and stood up on his feet. (24.) And Hazaël, King of Syria, died; and Ben-hadad his son reigned in his stead. And Joash, the son of Jehoahaz, took again out of the hand of Ben-hadad, the son of Hazaël, the cities which he had taken out of the hand of Jehoahaz his father by war. Three times did Joash beat him, and recovered the cities of Israël.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, unto the cry, &c., (p. 421.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (xvii. 6.)

AND in the ninth year of Hoshea,[3] the King of Assyria took Samaria, and carried Israël away into Assyria, and placed them in Halah, and in Habor, by the river of Gozan, in the cities of the Medes. For so it was, that the children of Israël had sinned against the LORD their God, Which had brought them up out of the land of Egypt, from under the hand of Pharaoh, King of Egypt, and had worshipped other gods, and walked in the ways of the heathen, whom the LORD had destroyed before the children of Israël, and the kings of Israël, because they did such things. And the children of Israël provoked the LORD their God with froward words, and built them high places in all their cities.

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, (p. 419.)

Second Lesson. (13.)

AND the LORD testified against Israël, and against Judah, by all the Prophets, and by all the Seers, saying: Turn ye from your evil ways, and keep My commandments and My statutes, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers, and which I sent to you by My servants the Prophets. Notwithstanding, they would not hear, but hardened their necks, like to the neck of their fathers, that willed not to obey the LORD their God. And they rejected His statutes, and His covenant that He made with their fathers, and His testimonies which He testified against them; and they followed vanities, and did foolishly.

Second Responsory.

God, Which heareth all, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson. (18.)

THEREFORE the LORD was very angry with Israël, and removed them out of His sight, and there was none left but the tribe of Judah only. But neither did Judah keep the commandments of the LORD their God; but walked in the sins of Israël which they committed. And the LORD rejected all the seed of Israël, and afflicted them, and delivered them into the hand of the spoilers until He put them away from before His face, from the time that Israël was rent away from the house of David, and that they made Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, king.

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered me, &c., (p. 420.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (xvii. 21.)

JEROBOAM drave Israël from following the LORD, and made them sin a great sin. For the children of Israël walked in all the sins of Jeroboam which he did; they departed not from them, until the LORD removed Israël out of His sight, as He had said by all His servants the Prophets. So was Israël carried away out of their own land to Assyria, unto this day.

First Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Second Lesson.

AND the King of Assyria brought men from Babylon, and from Cuthah, and from Avah, and from Hamath, and from Sepharvaim, and placed them in the cities of Samaria instead of the children of Israël. And they possessed Samaria, and dwelt in the cities thereof. And so it was, at the beginning of their dwelling there, that they feared not the LORD. Therefore the LORD sent lions among them, which slew some of them.

Second Responsory.

Ye mountains of Gilboa, &c., (p. 420.)

Third Lesson.

WHEREFORE they sent unto the King of Assyria, and said: The nations which thou hast removed, and placed in the cities of Samaria, know not the manner of the god of the land; therefore [the Lord[1]] hath sent lions among them, and, behold, they slay them, because they know not the manner of the god of the land. Then the King of Assyria commanded, saying: Carry thither one of the Priests whom ye brought from thence; and let him go and dwell with them, and let him teach them the manner of the god of the land.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (xviii. 1.)

IN the third year of Hoshea, son of Elah, King of Israël, Hezekiah, the son of Ahaz, King of Judah, began to reign. Twenty and five years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Abi, the daughter of Zachariah. And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that David his father did. He removed the high places, and brake the images, and cut down the groves, and brake in pieces the brazen serpent that Moses had made, for unto those days the children of Israël did burn incense to it; and he called it Nehushtan.[2] He trusted in the LORD God of Israël.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

SO that after him there was none like him among all the kings of Judah; nor any that were before him; for he clave to the LORD, and departed not from following Him, and kept His commandments, which the LORD commanded Moses. Therefore the LORD also was with him, and he did wisely in all things, whatsoever he undertook. And he rebelled against the King of Assyria, and served him not. He smote the Philistines, even unto Gaza, and all their borders, from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

IN the fourth year of King Hezekiah, which was the seventh year of Hoshea, son of Elah, King of Israël, Shalmaneser King of Assyria came up against Samaria, and besieged it, and took it. For at the end of three years, even in the sixth year of Hezekiah, that is, the ninth year of Hoshea, King of Israël, Samaria was taken. And the King of Assyria did carry away Israël into Assyria, and put them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, in the cities of the Medes —because they obeyed not the voice of the LORD their God, but transgressed His covenant: all that Moses, the servant of the LORD commanded, they would not hear them nor do them.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [3] I beseech Thee, O LORD, * remember now how I have walked before Thee in truth and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in Thy sight.

Prayer from the succeeding Lauds.

Eleventh Sunday after Pentecost.

The Eleventh Lord's Day after Pentecost.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (xx. 1.)

IN those days was Hezekiah sick unto death, and the Prophet Isaiah, the son of Amoz, came to him, and said unto him: Thus saith the

---

[1] Not in the Hebrew.

[2] "A piece of brass."

[3] xx. 3.

LORD—Set thine house in order, for thou shalt die and not live. Then he turned his face to the wall, and prayed unto the LORD, saying: I beseech Thee, O LORD, remember now how I have walked before Thee in truth and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in Thy sight. And Hezekiah wept sore.

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, &c., (p. 419.)

Second Lesson.

And afore Isaiah was gone out into the middle court, the word of the LORD came to him saying: Turn again, and tell Hezekiah, the Captain of My people: Thus saith the LORD, the God of David thy father—I have heard thy prayer; I have seen thy tears; and, behold, I have healed thee: on the third day thou shalt go up into the house of the LORD. And I will add unto thy days fifteen years; and I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria; and I will defend this city for Mine own sake, and for My servant David's sake. And Isaiah said: Take a lump of figs. And they took and laid it on the boil and he recovered.

Second Responsory.

God, Which heareth all, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson.

And Hezekiah said unto Isaiah: What shall be the sign that the LORD will heal me, and that I shall go up into the house of the LORD the third day? And Isaiah said: This sign shalt thou have of the LORD, that the LORD will do the thing that He hath spoken—Wilt thou that the shadow shall go forward ten degrees, or go back ten degrees? And Hezekiah answered: It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees: nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees. And Isaiah the Prophet cried unto the LORD: and He brought the shadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the dial of Ahaz.

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered me, &c., (p. 420.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Exposition of the Prophet Isaiah written by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. ii. on Is. xxxviii.)

Lest the heart of Hezekiah should be puffed up by his strange and unlooked for triumphs, and by his victory when he was but a prisoner, he was visited by bodily weakness, and told that he was to die; that he might betake himself to the Lord, and turn Him from carrying out the sentence. We read of a like case in the history of the Prophet Jonah (ii. 4, 10.) And in regard to the threatening made against David (2 Kings (Sam.) xxiv. 16)—when punishments were foretold which were not brought to pass. This is not because that God is a Being capable of changing His mind, but because He willeth to mankind to know Him, how that "He [is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and] repenteth Him of the evil." (Joel ii. 13.) Hezekiah turned his face unto the wall, not being able to go up to the Temple. This may either mean that he turned towards the wall of the Temple, hard by which Solomon had built a palace, or simply, that he turned his face to the wall, so as not to parade his tears before his attendants.

Fourth Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Fifth Lesson.

Having been told that he was about to die, he prayed not for life and many years, but left it to God to do as in His good judgment He was pleased to will. He knew how this had pleased God on the part of Solomon. (3 (1) Kings iii. 11.) So, when he betook him to the Lord, he only made mention of his works, how he had walked before Him in truth, and with a perfect heart. Happy is he whose conscience in the hour of affliction can assure him of good works. Yea, "blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God" (Matth. v. 8.) It is indeed written in another place: "Who can say, I have made my heart clean, I am pure from my sin?" (Prov. xx. 9.) How then could Hezekiah say that he had walked with a perfect heart? But the answer is, that by this is meant that he had destroyed the idols, opened the doors of the Temple, broken in pieces the brazen serpent, and done the rest of the things whereof the Scripture maketh mention.

Fifth Responsory.

Ye mountains of Gilboa, &c., (p. 420.)

Sixth Lesson.

"And Hezekiah wept sore." He had then no children, and it seemed as though the promise which God had made unto David, [that "his seed should endure for ever, and his throne as the sun before" Him, (Ps. lxxxviii. 29,)] was about to fail in his own death. It is written that "Manasseh was twelve years old when he began to reign," (xxi. 1)—whence it is evident that Hezekiah begat him not till after three years of his new lease of life. Sore therefore wept he, when all hope was torn from him that the Messiah should spring from his seed. Others again remark that he wept sore, since death terrifieth sometimes even the saints, since they know not what sentence is about to be pronounced upon them, and what place shall be allotted them in the inscrutable judgment.

Sixth Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (xxii. 1.)

JOSIAH was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned thirty and one years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jedidah, the daughter of Odaiah of Boscath. And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, and walked in all the way of David his father, and turned not aside to the right hand or to the left. And in the eighteenth year of Josiah the king sent Shaphan, the son of Azaliah, the son of Meshullam, the Scribe, to the house of the LORD, saying: Go up to Hilkiah the High Priest, that he may sum the silver which is brought into the house of the LORD, which the doorkeepers of the temple have gathered of the people, and let them deliver it into the hand of the doers of the work, that have the oversight of the house of the LORD, and let them give it to the doers of the work which is in the house of the LORD.

First Responsory.

Remember, O Lord, Thy covenant, &c., (p. 445.)

Second Lesson. (8.)

AND Hilkiah the Priest said unto Shaphan the Scribe: I have found a book of the Law in the house of the LORD. And Hilkiah gave the book to Shaphan, and he read it. And Shaphan the Scribe came to the King, and brought the King word again and said: Thy servants have gathered the money that was found in the house of the Lord, and have delivered it into the hand of them that do the work, that have the oversight of the house of the LORD. And Shaphan the Scribe told the King, saying: Hilkiah the Priest hath delivered me a book.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

AND Shaphan read it before the King. And when the King had heard the words of the book of the Law of the Lord, he rent his clothes. And the King commanded Hilkiah the Priest, and Ahikam, the son of Micha, and Shaphan the Scribe, and Asahiah, a servant of the King's, saying: Go ye, enquire of the LORD for me, and for the people, and for all Judah, concerning the words of this book that is found: for great is the wrath of the LORD, that is kindled against us, because our fathers have not hearkened unto the words of this book, to do according to all that which is written concerning us.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (xxiii. 2.)

AND the King went up into the house of the LORD, and all the men of Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem with him, and the Priests and the Prophets, and all the people, both small and great; and he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant, which was found in the house of the LORD. And the King stood on the platform,[1] and made a covenant before the LORD, to walk after the LORD, and to keep His commandments, and His testimonies, and His statutes, with all their heart, and with all their soul, to perform the words of this covenant, that were written in this book. And all the people stood to the covenant.

First Responsory.

Lord, when Thy people, &c., (p. 445.)

Second Lesson.

AND the King commanded Hilkiah the High Priest, and the Priests of the second order, and the keepers of the door, to bring forth out of the temple of the LORD all the vessels that had been made for Baal, and for the "Grove," and for all the host of heaven. And he burnt them without Jerusalem, in the valley of Kidron, and carried the ashes of them unto Bethel. And he put down the idolatrous priests whom the kings of Judah had ordained to offer in the high places in the cities of Judah, and in the places round about Jerusalem; them also that burnt incense unto Baal, to the sun, and to the moon, and to the twelve signs [of the Zodiac],[2] and to all the host of heaven.

Second Responsory.

And it came to pass, &c., (p. 446.)

Third Lesson.

AND he brought out the "Grove" from the house of the LORD, without Jerusalem, into the vale of Kidron, and burnt it there, and stamped it small to powder, and cast the powder thereof upon the graves of the common people. And he brake down the houses of the unsexed wretches,[3] that were in the house of the LORD, for whom women wove tents, like the tents of the "Grove." And he brought all the priests out of the cities of Judah, and defiled the high places where the priests had offered, from Gibeah unto Beersheba.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

MOREOVER, the workers with familiar spirits, and the wizards, and the images of the idols, and the unclean things, and the abominations that were in Judah and in Jerusalem, did Josiah put away, that he might set up the words of the Law, which were written in the book that Hilkiah the Priest found in the house of the LORD. Like unto him was there no king before him, that turned to the LORD with all his heart, and with all his soul, and with all his might, according to all the Law of Moses; neither after him arose there any like him. Notwithstanding, the LORD turned not from the fierceness of His great wrath, wherewith His anger was kindled against Judah, because of all the provocations that Manasseh[1] had provoked Him withal.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

AND the LORD said: I will remove Judah also out of My sight, as I have removed Israël, and will cast off this city Jerusalem, which I have chosen, and the house of which I said: My Name shall be there. Now the rest of the acts of Josiah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah? In his days Pharaoh-Nechoh, King of Egypt, went up against the King of Assyria to the River Euphrates, and King Josiah went against him; and he slew him at Megiddo, when he had seen him. And his servants carried him dead from Megiddo, and brought him to Jerusalem, and buried him in his own sepulchre.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

AND the people of the land took Jehoahaz, the son of Josiah, and anointed him, and made him king in his father's stead. Jehoahaz was twenty and three years old when he began to reign; and he reigned three months in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his fathers had done. And Pharaoh-Nechoh put him in bands at Riblah, in the land of Hamath, that he might not reign in Jerusalem, and put the land to a tribute of an hundred talents of silver and a talent of gold. And Pharaoh-Nechoh made Eliakim, the son of Josiah, king, in the room of Josiah his father, and turned his name to Jehoiakim. And he took Jehoahaz away, and brought him into Egypt; and he died there.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (xxiii. 36.)

JEHOIAKIM was twenty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Zebudah, the daughter of Pedaiah of Rumah. And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his fathers had done. (xxiv.) In his days Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, came up, and Jehoiakim became his servant three years; then he turned and rebelled against him.

First Responsory.

Prepare your hearts, &c., (p. 419.)

Second Lesson.

AND the LORD sent against him bands of rievers of the Chaldees, and bands of rievers of the Syrians, and bands of rievers of the Moabites, and bands of rievers of the children of Ammon; and sent them against Judah, to destroy it, according to the word of the LORD, which He spake by His servants the Prophets. Surely at the commandment of the LORD came this upon Judah, to remove them out of His sight, for the sins of Manasseh, according to all that he did, and for the innocent blood that he shed; for he filled Jerusalem with innocent blood; which the LORD would not pardon.

Second Responsory.

God Which heareth all, &c., (p. 419.)

Third Lesson.

NOW the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah? So Jehoiakim slept with his fathers; and Jehoiachin his son reigned in his stead. And the King of Egypt came not again any more out of his land; for the King of Babylon had taken from the River of Egypt unto the River Euphrates all that pertained to the King of Egypt.

Third Responsory.

The LORD That delivered me, &c., (p. 420.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (xxiv. 8.)

JEHOIACHIN was eighteen years old when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem three months. His mother's name was Nehushta, the daughter of Elnathan of Jerusalem. And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father had done. At that time the servants of Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon came up against Jerusalem, and the city was besieged. And Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon came against the city along with his servants, to besiege it.

First Responsory.

Saul hath slain, &c., (p. 420.)

Second Lesson.

AND Jehoiachin King of Judah went out to the King of Babylon, he, and his mother, and his servants, and his princes, and his officers, and his eunuchs; and the King of Babylon took him in the eighth year of his reign. And he carried out thence all the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the King's house, and cut in pieces all the vessels of gold which Solomon King of Israël had made in the temple of the LORD—as the LORD had said. And he carried away all Jerusalem, and all the princes, and all the mighty men of valour, even ten thousand captives—and all the craftsmen and smiths; none remained save the poorest sort of the people of the land.

Second Responsory.

Ye mountains of Gilboa, &c., (p. 420.)

Third Lesson.

AND he carried away Jehoiachin to Babylon, and the King's mother, and his eunuchs; and the judges of the land carried he into captivity from Jerusalem to Babylon; and all the men of might, even seven thousand, and craftsmen and smiths, a thousand; all that were strong and apt for war, even them the King of Babylon brought captive to Babylon. And he made Mattaniah, his father's brother, king, in his stead, and changed his name to Zedekiah.

Third Responsory.

Thus saith the LORD, &c., (p. 420.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Fourth Book of Kings (xxiv. 18.)

ZEDEKIAH was twenty and one years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that Jehoiakim had done. For the LORD was provoked against Jerusalem and Judah, until He cast them out from His presence. And Zedekiah rebelled against the King of Babylon. (xxv.) And it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon came, he and all his host, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it, and built forts against it round about. And the city was shut up and trenched round about unto the eleventh year of King Zedekiah, on the ninth day of the month; and the famine prevailed in the city, and there was no bread for the people of the land.

First Responsory.

My sins are many, &c., (p. 421.)

Second Lesson.

AND the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled by night, by the way of the gate between two walls, which is by the King's garden. (And the Chaldees still beset the city round about.) So the King fled by the way which leadeth toward the plains of the desert. And the army of the Chaldees pursued after the King, and overtook him in the plains of Jericho; and all the men of war that were with him were scattered, and left him. So they took the King, and brought him up to the King of Babylon to Riblah, and he gave judgment upon him. And he slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes, and put out his eyes, and bound him with fetters, and carried him to Babylon.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast hearkened, &c., (p. 421.)

Third Lesson.

IN the fifth month, on the seventh day of the month, (which is the nineteenth year of the King of Babylon,) came Nebuzar-adan, captain of the host, a servant of the King of Babylon, unto Jerusalem. And he burnt the house of the LORD, and the King's house, and the houses of Jerusalem; even all the houses burnt he with fire. And all the army of the Chaldees, that were with the captain of the host, brake down the walls of Jerusalem round about. And the rest of the people that had been left in the city, and the fugitives that had fallen away to the King of Babylon, with the remnant of the multitude, did Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the host, carry away. But of the poor of the land left he to be vine-dressers and husbandmen. And the pillars of brass that were in the house of the LORD, and the bases, and the brazen sea that was in the house of the LORD, did the Chaldees break in pieces, and carried all the brass of them to Babylon.

Third Responsory.

Hearken, O LORD, &c., (p. 421.)

Prayer at Vespers from the succeeding Lauds.

AUGUST.

First Week.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin on the preceding Saturday evening. [1] Wisdom hath builded her house, * she hath hewn out her seven pillars; she hath broken the nations under her; in the greatness of her strength she hath trodden under her feet the necks of such as be haughty and proud.

[1] Prov. ix. 1; Ecclus. xxiv. 11.

First Sunday of August.

The First Lord's Day of August.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here begin the Proverbs of Solomon (i. 1.)

THE Proverbs of Solomon, the son of David, King of Israël, to know wisdom and instruction; to perceive the words of understanding; to receive the instruction of wisdom, justice, and judgment, and equity; to give subtilty to the simple; to the young man, knowledge and discretion. A wise man will hear, and will increase his wisdom; and a man of understanding shall know how to rule. He will consider a proverb, and the interpretation; the words of the wise, and their dark sayings.

First Responsory.

[1] God [possessed me] in the beginning, before He made the earth, before He created the depths, before He caused the fountains of water to spring. Before the mountains were settled, before there were any hills, did the Lord beget me.

Verse. When He prepared the heavens, I was there with Him, ordering all things.

Answer. Before the mountains were settled, before there were any hills, did the Lord beget me.

Second Lesson.

THE fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom. Fools despise wisdom and instruction. My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother; for they shall be an ornament of grace unto thine head, and a collar [2] about thy neck. My son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not to them. If they say: Come with us, let us lay wait for blood, let us spread a net without a cause for him that is innocent, let us swallow him up alive like the grave, and whole, as those that go down into the pit. We shall find all precious substance, we shall fill our houses with spoil. Cast in thy lot among us; let us all have one purse.

Second Responsory.

[3] I alone compassed the circuit of heaven, and walked on the waves of the sea. In every nation and in every people, I held the first place. In the greatness of my strength have I trodden under my feet the necks of such as be haughty and proud.

Verse. I dwell in the highest places, and my throne is in a cloudy pillar.

Answer. In the greatness of my strength have I trodden under my feet the necks of such as be haughty and proud.

Third Lesson.

MY son, walk not thou in the way with them; refrain thy foot from their path. For their feet run to evil, and make haste to shed blood. Surely, in vain the net is spread in the sight of any bird. They also lay wait for their own blood, and plot against their own lives. So the ways of every one that is greedy of gain take away the lives of the owners thereof.

Third Responsory.

[4] O send out wisdom from the throne of Thy glory, O Lord, to be with me, and to labour with me, that I may know at all times what is pleasing unto Thee.

Verse. Give me wisdom, O Lord, that sitteth by Thy throne.

Answer. That I may know at all times what is pleasing unto Thee.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. That I may know at all times what is pleasing unto Thee.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Treatise of St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan,] upon the cxviiith Psalm. (Sermon v. 6.)

THE Prophet saith that "the fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom." And what is the first act of wisdom but to renounce the world?—since to love the things of the world is folly. So indeed saith the Apostle:—"The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God." (1 Cor. iii. 19.) But the very fear of the Lord itself is useless, nay, harmful, if it be not according to knowledge. The Jews have a truly fervent zeal for God, but since they have not knowledge, their very zeal and fear do cause them to do things contrary to God's will. That they circumcise their children, that they keep holy the Sabbath-Day, showeth how they fear the Lord, but knowing not the spiritual meaning of the Law, they circumcise the body and not the heart.

Fourth Responsory.

[5] Give me wisdom, O Lord, that sitteth by Thy throne, and reject me not from among Thy children. For I am Thy servant and son of Thine handmaid.

Verse. O send her out from the throne of Thy glory, to be with me and to labour with me.

Answer. For I am Thy servant and son of Thine handmaid.

Fifth Lesson.

BUT wherefore should I speak of Jews? There are those among ourselves who have the fear of God, but not according to knowledge, and set up hard ordinances which the weakness of man is not able to bear. They fear God in this, that they seem to themselves to be looking to discipline, and to be enforcing the practice of godliness, but they lack knowledge, in that they feel not for the weakness of nature, nor consider whether a thing can, or cannot be done. Let not then the fear of God be unreasonable. True wisdom beginneth with the fear of God, neither is it spiritual wisdom without the fear of God, but neither ought the fear of God to be without wisdom.

[5] Wisd. ix. 5, 10.

Fifth Responsory.

[1] The fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom. A good understanding have all they that do His commandments. His praise endureth for ever.

Verse. Love is the keeping of her laws, for all wisdom is the fear of the Lord.

Answer. A good understanding have all they that do His commandments. His praise endureth for ever.

Sixth Lesson.

HOLY fear is the foundation of all good instruction. Just as a statue is set up upon a pedestal, and thereby receiveth both beauty and strength, even so doth it become the word of God to be set forth based upon an holy fear, and it is in the heart of him that feareth that it getteth the firmest root, even an home wherefrom it droppeth not, neither do the fowls of the air come and carry it away, as from the heart of him that is careless and deceiving.

Sixth Responsory.

[2] Lord, remove far from me vanity and lies. Give me neither poverty nor riches, but feed me with food convenient for me.

Verse. Two things have I required of Thee; deny me them not before I die.

Answer. Give me neither poverty nor riches, but feed me with food convenient for me.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Give me neither poverty nor riches, but feed me with food convenient for me.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

[3] O Lord, Father and God of my life, leave me not to evil counsels; give me not a proud look, but turn away from me an haughty mind, O Lord! Turn away from me concupiscence, and give me not over unto an impudent and froward mind, O Lord!

Verse. Leave me not, O Lord, lest mine ignorance increase, and my sins abound.

Answer. And give me not over unto an impudent and froward mind, O Lord.

Eighth Responsory.

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Proverbs of Solomon (iii. 1.)

MY son, forget not my law, but let thine heart keep my commandments. For length of days, and long life, and peace, shall they add to thee. Let not mercy and truth forsake thee; bind them about thy neck; write them upon the table of thine heart; so shalt thou find favour and good understanding in the sight of God and man. Trust in the LORD with all thine heart, and lean not upon thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths.

First Responsory.

[4] O Lord, Father and Governor of my life, leave me not, lest I fall before mine adversaries, and mine enemy rejoice over me.

Verse. Take hold of shield and buckler, and stand up for mine help.

Answer. Lest mine enemy rejoice over me.

Second Lesson.

BE not wise in thine own eyes; fear God, and depart from evil; it shall be health to thy navel, and marrow to thy bones. Honour the LORD with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase; so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new Wine.

Second Responsory.

[5] Great are Thy judgments, O Lord, and Thy words cannot be expressed. Thou didst make Thy people mighty and honourable.

Verse. Thou broughtest them through the Red Sea, and leddest them through much water.

Answer. Thou didst make Thy people mighty and honourable.

Third Lesson.

MY son, despise not the chastening of the LORD; neither faint when thou art corrected of Him. For whom the LORD loveth He chasteneth, even as a father the son in whom he delighteth. Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding; for the purchasing thereof is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than the finest [and purest[6]] gold. She is more precious than all riches, and all the things thou canst desire are not to be compared unto her.

Third Responsory.

[7] Lord, Thine eyes behold all that is in the heart of man, and in Thy book are they all written. [8] Man looketh on the outward appearance, but God looketh on the heart.

Verse. [9] For He searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts.

Answer. Man looketh on the outward appearance, but God looketh on the heart.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Man looketh on the outward appearance, but God looketh on the heart.

MY son, attend unto my wisdom, and bow thine ear to my understanding: that thou mayest keep my counsels, and that thy lips may preserve knowledge. [Give not heed to a seductress.[1]] For the lips of an harlot drop as an honey-comb, and her mouth is smoother than oil. But her end is bitter as wormwood, yea, sharp as a two-edged sword. Her feet go down to death, and her steps take hold on hell. They walk not in the path of life; her ways are moveable: thou canst not know them.

First Responsory.

[2] My son, give me thine heart, and let thine eyes observe my ways. For they shall be an ornament of grace unto thine head.

Verse. My son, attend unto my wisdom, and incline thine ear unto my sayings.

Answer. For they shall be an ornament of grace unto thine head.

Second Lesson.

HEAR me now therefore, O my son, and depart not from the words of my mouth. Remove thy way far from her, and come not nigh the door of her house; lest thou give thine honour unto others, and thy years unto the cruel; lest strangers be filled with thy strength, and thy labours be in the house of a stranger; and thou mourn at the last, when thy flesh and thy body are consumed: and say: Why have I hated instruction, and mine heart despised reproof, and have not obeyed the voice of my teachers, nor inclined mine ear to them that instructed me?

Second Responsory.

The fear of the LORD, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson. (20.)

WHY wilt thou, my son, be ravished with a strange woman, and be cherished in the bosom of a stranger? The ways of man are before the eyes of the LORD, and He considereth all his goings. His own iniquities shall take the wicked himself, and he shall be holden with the cords of his own sins. He shall die for want of instruction, and go astray in the greatness of his folly.

Third Responsory.

Lord, remove, &c., (p. 482.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Proverbs of Solomon (viii. 1.)

DOTH not wisdom cry, and understanding put forth her voice? She standeth in the top of high places, by the way, in the midst of the paths. She crieth at the gates, at the entry of the city, at the coming in at the doors, saying: Unto you, O men, I call, and my voice is to the sons of man. O ye simple, understand wisdom, and, ye fools, be ye of an understanding heart. Hear, for I will speak of excellent things, and the opening of my lips shall be right things.

First Responsory.

O Lord, Father and God, &c., (p. 482.)

Second Lesson.

MY mouth shall speak truth, and wickedness is an abomination to my lips. All the words of my mouth are in righteousness; there is nothing froward or perverse in them. They are all plain to him that understandeth, and right to them that find knowledge. Receive my instruction, and not silver; and knowledge, rather than choice gold. For wisdom is better than all precious stones, and all the things that may be desired are not to be compared to it.

Second Responsory.

Great are Thy judgments, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

I, WISDOM, dwell with prudence, and find out knowledge of witty inventions. The fear of the LORD is to hate evil; pride, and arrogancy, and the evil way, and the double mouth, do I hate. Counsel is mine, and sound wisdom; understanding is mine; mine is strength. By me kings reign, and law-givers decree justice. By me princes rule, and the mighty command righteousness. I love them that love me, and those that seek me early shall find me.

Third Responsory.

Lord, Thine eyes behold, &c., (p. 482.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Proverbs of Solomon (x. 1.)

A WISE son maketh a glad father, but a foolish son is the heaviness of his mother. Treasures of wickedness profit nothing, but righteousness delivereth from death. The LORD will not suffer the soul of the righteous to famish, but He casteth away the designs of the wicked. He becometh poor that dealeth with a slack hand, but the hand of the diligent maketh rich. [He that useth lies in contention, doth but feed the winds, yea, he but followeth birds that fly away.[3]] He that gathereth in summer is a wise son, but he that sleepeth in harvest is a son that causeth shame.

First Responsory.

God [possessed me], &c., (p. 481.)

Second Lesson.

THE blessing [of the Lord [3]] is upon the head of the just, but violence covereth the mouth of the wicked. The memory of the just is blessed, but the name of the wicked shall rot. The wise in heart will receive commandments, but a prating fool shall be beaten. He that walketh uprightly, walketh surely, but he that perverteth his ways shall be known. He that winketh with the eye causeth sorrow; and a prating fool shall be beaten.

[2] xxiii. 26; i. 9; iv. 20.

[3] Not in the present Hebrew.

Second Responsory.

I alone compassed, &c., (p. 481.)

Third Lesson.

THE mouth of a righteous man is a well of life, but violence covereth the mouth of the wicked. Hatred stirreth up strife, but love covereth all sins. In the lips of him that hath understanding wisdom is found, but a rod is for the back for him that is void of understanding. Wise men lay up knowledge, but the mouth of the foolish is near destruction. The rich man's wealth is his strong city, but the destruction of the poor is their poverty. The labour of the righteous tendeth to life, but the fruit of the wicked to sin.

Third Responsory.

O send out wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Proverbs of Solomon (xiv. 1.)

EVERY wise woman buildeth her house, but the foolish plucketh it down with her hands. He that walketh in his uprightness, and feareth the LORD, is despised of him that is perverse in his ways. In the mouth of the foolish is a rod of pride, but the lips of the wise shall preserve them. Where no oxen are, the crib is clean; but where there is much increase, there the strength of the ox is seen. A faithful witness will not lie, but a false witness will utter lies.

First Responsory.

Give me wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

Second Lesson.

A SCORNER seeketh wisdom and findeth it not, but knowledge is easy unto him that understandeth. Go from the presence of a foolish man, when thou seest that he knoweth not the lips of knowledge. The wisdom of the prudent is to understand his way, but the folly of fools is to wander. Fools make a mock at sin, but among the righteous there is favour. The heart knoweth its own bitterness, and a stranger doth not meddle with his joy. The house of the wicked shall be overthrown, but the tabernacle of the upright shall flourish.

Second Responsory.

The fear of the LORD, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

THERE is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death. Even in laughter the heart is sorrowful, and the end of mirth is heaviness. The backslider in heart shall be filled with his own ways, and a good man shall be happier than he. The simple believeth every word, but the prudent man looketh well to his going. [A tricksome fellow getteth good out of nothing; but the doings of a wise servant are prosperous, and his way is smooth.[1]] A wise man feareth, and departeth from evil; but the fool plungeth in boldly, and is confident.

Third Responsory.

Lord, remove far from me, &c., (p. 482.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Proverbs of Solomon (xvi. 1.)

THE preparation of the heart is man's, but the government of his tongue is from the LORD. All the ways of a man are clean in his own eyes, but the LORD weigheth the spirits. Lay open thy works unto the LORD, and thy thoughts shall be established. The LORD hath made all things for Himself, yea, even the wicked for the day of evil. Every one that is proud in heart is an abomination to the LORD; though hand join in hand, he shall not be unpunished.

First Responsory.

O Lord, Father and God, &c., (p. 482.)

Second Lesson.

[TO do righteousness is the beginning of a good way, and it is more acceptable in the sight of God, than to offer sacrifices.[2]] By mercy and truth iniquity is purged, and by the fear of the LORD men depart from evil. When a man's ways please the LORD, He maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him. Better is a little with righteousness, than great revenues with iniquity. A man's heart deviseth his way; but the LORD directeth his steps.

Second Responsory.

Great are Thy judgments, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

A DIVINE sentence is in the lips of the king; his mouth transgresseth not in judgment. A just weight and balance are the LORD'S; all the weights of the bag are His work. It is an abomination to kings to commit wickedness, for the throne is established by righteousness. Righteous lips are the delight of kings, and they love him that speaketh right. The wrath of a king is as messengers of death, but a wise man will pacify it. In the light of the king's countenance is life, and his favour is as a cloud of the latter rain.

Third Responsory.

Lord, Thine eyes behold, &c., (p. 482.)

Second Sunday of August.

The Second Lord's Day of August.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of Ecclesiastes[1] (i. 1.)

THE words of the Preacher, the son of David, King of Jerusalem. Vanity of vanities, saith the Preacher, vanity of vanities; all is vanity. What profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the sun? One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh; but the earth abideth for ever. The sun also ariseth and goeth down, and hasteth to his place where he arose; thence he ariseth again, and maketh his round by the South, turning again to the North. The wind whirleth about continually, and returneth again according to his circuits. All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea doth not overflow; unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return to flow again.

First Responsory.

God [possessed me], &c., (p. 481.)

Second Lesson.

ALL things are full of labour: man cannot utter it. The eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing. The thing that hath been, what is it? It is even that which shall be. That which is done, what is it? It is even that which shall be done. There is no new thing under the sun, neither anything whereof it may be said: See, this is new. It hath been already, of old time, which was before us. There is no remembrance of former things, neither shall there be any remembrance of things that are to come, with those that shall come after.

Second Responsory.

I alone compassed, &c., (p. 481.)

Third Lesson.

I, THE Preacher, was king over Israël in Jerusalem, and I gave my heart to seek and search out by wisdom concerning all things that are done under heaven. This sore travail hath God given to the sons of men, to be exercised therewith. I have seen all the works that are done under the sun, and, behold, all is vanity and vexation of spirit! It is a toil to correct the wayward, and the number of fools is uncountable. I communed with mine own heart, saying: Lo, I am come to great estate, and have gotten more wisdom than all they that have been before me in Jerusalem; yea, my heart had great experience of wisdom and knowledge. And I gave my heart to know wisdom and learning, and to know madness and folly.

Third Responsory.

O send out wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (Sermon against concubinage.)

WHILE Solomon was given up to the lust of the world, he deemed the same a great and noble pursuit, and expended thereon great labour and care. He built magnificent palaces, he heaped up gold in plenty, he gathered together choirs of singers, and all sorts of servants to minister to the luxury of his table and of his fare. He sought enjoyment for his heart from the charm of gardens and of fair bodies. In short, he gave himself up to the study of all kinds of pleasure and recreation.

Fourth Responsory.

Give me wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

Fifth Lesson.

BUT when he came to himself again, and was once more able, as it were, out of that dark pit, to look upon the light of true wisdom, he uttered that saying, so high, so worthy of heaven—"Vanity of vanities; all is vanity." And ye also, if ever ye will shake yourselves clear of your debasing habit, will utter this cry, and an higher cry than this, as ye turn from your untimely indulgences.

Fifth Responsory.

The fear of the LORD, &c., (p. 482.)

Sixth Lesson.

THE ages that had rolled before the time of Solomon had not left to his own so precious an inheritance of wisdom [as those which have preceded us have left to us]; the old law did not forbid these indulgences, nor pronounce it folly to enjoy other idle luxuries — and yet, even with matters so, we can see how low, how worthless, such things be. As for us, we are called to a higher life, we ascend to a nobler stand-point, and brace ourselves in a manlier school—and why, but because we are bidden to strive for a life like the life of the spiritual and bodiless powers?

Sixth Responsory.

Lord, remove far from me, &c., (p. 482.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

O Lord, Father, &c., (p. 482.)

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiastes (ii. 1.)

I SAID in mine heart: Let me go to now, and revel in my luxury, and enjoy pleasure. And I saw that this also is vanity. I said of laughter, It is mad, and to mirth, Why mockest thou still? I settled in mine heart to keep back my flesh from wine, and to turn my soul to wisdom, and to give up folly, till I might see what was that good for the sons of men, which they should do under the sun all the days of their life. I made me great works, I builded me houses, and planted me vineyards.

---

[1] I.e. "Preacher." Hebrew "Koheleth." The work has been generally regarded, both by Jews and Christians, as written by Solomon.

First Responsory.

O Lord, Father and Governor, &c., (p. 482.)

Second Lesson. (7.)

I GOT me servants and maidens, and had many to mine household, cattle also, and great flocks of sheep, above all that were in Jerusalem before me. I gathered me also silver and gold, and the treasures of kings and of provinces; I gat me men-singers and women-singers, and the delights of the sons of men, cups and flagons for my service, to pour out wine withal; so I increased more in riches than all that were before me in Jerusalem; also my wisdom remained with me.

Second Responsory.

Great are Thy judgments, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

AND whatsoever mine eyes desired, I kept not from them; I withheld not mine heart from any joy, even from rejoicing in all my labour, and this deemed I my wage of all my labour. And when I turned and looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labour whereon I had sweated in vain, I saw that all was vanity and vexation of spirit! and that there is nothing lasting under the sun!

Third Responsory.

Lord, Thine eyes, &c., (p. 482.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiastes (iii. 1.)

TO everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven. A time to be born, and a time to die. A time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted. A time to kill, and a time to heal. A time to break down, and a time to build up. A time to weep, and a time to laugh. A time to mourn, and a time to dance. A time to cast away stones, and a time to gather [stones] together. A time to embrace, and a time to refrain from embracing. A time to get, and a time to lose. A time to keep, and a time to cast away. A time to rend, and a time to sew. A time to keep silence, and a time to speak. A time to love, and a time to hate. A time of war, and a time of peace.

First Responsory.

My son, give me thine heart, &c., (p. 483.)

Second Lesson.

WHAT profit hath a man of that wherein he laboureth? I have seen the travail which God hath given to the sons of men, to be exercised in it. He hath made everything good in its time; also He hath given the world over to their wranglings, so that no man can find out the work that God maketh, from the beginning to the end. And I know that there is nothing better than for a man to rejoice, and to do good in his life. For that a man should eat and drink, and enjoy the good of all his labour, it is the gift of God.

Second Responsory.

The fear of the LORD, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

I KNOW that whatsoever GOD doeth, it shall be for ever; by us nothing can be put to it, nor anything taken from it; and God doeth it that men should fear before Him. That which hath been, is now; and that which is to be, hath already been; and God reneweth that which is past. I saw under the sun the place of judgment, that wickedness was there; and the place of justice, that iniquity was there. And I said in mine heart: God shall judge the righteous and the wicked, for there is a time then for everything.

Third Responsory.

Lord, remove, &c., (p. 482.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiastes (iv. 1.)

SO I returned, and considered all the oppressions that are done under the sun, and the tears of the innocent, and that they had no comforter, nor were able to resist their oppressors, but were utterly helpless. Wherefore I praised the dead more than the living; yea, I judged that better is he than both they, which hath not yet been, who hath not seen the evil work that is done under the sun. Again I considered all the travail of men, and every right work, that for this a man is envied of his neighbour, and how that is also vanity and useless vexation of spirit.

First Responsory.

O Lord, Father and God, &c., (p. 482.)

Second Lesson.

THE fool foldeth his hands together, and eateth his own flesh, [saying [1]]: Better is an handful, with quietness, than both the hands full, with travail and vexation of spirit. I returned, and I saw another vanity under the sun. There is one alone, and there is not a second, yea, he hath neither child nor brother; yet is there no end to all his labour, neither is his eye satisfied with riches, neither considereth he, saying: For whom do I labour, and bereave my soul of good? This is also vanity, yea, it is a sore travail.

[1] Not in the Hebrew, and opposed to the apparent sense, which contrasts the comfort of a little with quiet with the folly of calculations and anxiety.

Second Responsory.

Great are Thy judgments, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

TWO are better than one, because they have profit from fellowship; for if the one fall, his fellow will lift him up. Woe to him that is alone when he falleth, for he hath not another to help him up. Again, if two sleep together, then they have heat one from the other; but how can one be warm alone? And if a man prevail against one, yet may he be withstood of twain; a threefold cord is not quickly broken. Better is a poor and wise child than an old and foolish king, who knoweth not how to look to that which will come after him.

Third Responsory.

Lord, Thine eyes behold, &c., (p. 482.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiastes (v. 1.)

BE not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter anything before God. For God is in heaven, and thou upon earth; therefore let thy words be few. Dreams come from the multitude of business, and a fool's voice is known by multitude of words. When thou vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it, for He is displeased at a broken and foolish promise. Pay that which thou hast vowed; better it is that thou shouldest not vow, than that thou shouldest vow and not pay.

First Responsory.

God [possessed me], &c., (p. 481.)

Second Lesson.

SUFFER not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin, neither say thou before the angel, It is an error—lest God be angry at thy voice, and destroy the work of thine hands. When there is multitude of dreams, there are many vanities, and store of words. But fear thou God. If thou seest the oppression of the poor, and violent perverting of judgment and justice in a province, marvel not at the matter: for he that is high hath another higher, and there be higher than they, and moreover there is the King that reigneth over all the land that is subject unto him.

Second Responsory.

I alone compassed, &c., (p. 481.)

Third Lesson.

A MISER is not satisfied with silver; nor he that loveth abundance with increase. This is also vanity. When goods increase, they are increased that eat them. And what good is it to the owners thereof, saving the beholding of them with their eyes? The sleep of the labouring man is sweet, whether he eat little or much; but the fulness of the rich will not suffer him to sleep. There is another sore evil which I have seen under the sun; riches kept for the owners thereof, to their hurt. For they perish by evil travail; and he begetteth a son, and there is nothing in his hand.

Third Responsory.

O send out wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiastes (vi. 1.)

THERE is an evil which I have seen under the sun, and it is common among men. A man to whom God hath given riches, wealth, and honour, so that he wanteth nothing to his soul of all that he desireth; yet God giveth him not power to eat thereof, but a stranger eateth it. This is vanity, and it is a great vexation.

First Responsory.

Give me wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

Second Lesson.

IF a man beget an hundred children, and live many years, so that the days of his years be many, and his soul be not filled with good, and also that he hath no burial, I say that an untimely birth is better than he. For he cometh in with vanity, and departeth to darkness, and his name passeth away into forgetfulness. He hath not seen the sun, nor known the difference between good and evil. Yea, such an one is better than he, though he live a thousand years twice told, seeing he hath not tasted enjoyment.

Second Responsory.

The fear of the Lord, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

DO not all go to one place? All the labour of man is for his mouth, and yet the appetite is not filled. What hath the wise more than the fool? What hath the poor, but to go thither where is life? Better is it to see what thou longest for, than to desire thou knowest not what. This is also vanity and vexation of spirit.

Third Responsory.

Lord, remove far from me, &c., (p. 482.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiastes (vii. 1.)

WHAT need is there for a man to seek for things above him, seeing that he knoweth not what will befall him in his life, nor the number of the days of his pilgrimage, nor his time, saving that it passeth away like a shadow? Or who is there that can tell him what shall be after him under the sun? A good name is better than precious ointment, and the day of death than the day of one's birth. It is better to go to the house of mourning than to go to the house of feasting; for in the [house of mourning] is shown the end of all men, and the living layeth to heart that which will be.

First Responsory.

O Lord, Father and God, &c., (p. 482.)

Second Lesson.

ANGER is better than laughter, for by the sternness of the countenance the soul of the transgressor is corrected. The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning, but the heart of fools is in the house of mirth. It is better to hear the rebuke of the wise, than to be caught by the flattery of fools, for as the crackling of thorns under the pot, so is the laughter of the fool. This also is vanity. Surely oppression maketh a wise man mad, and destroyeth the strength of his heart. Better is the end of a discourse than the beginning thereof. The patient in spirit is better than the proud in spirit.

Second Responsory.

Great are Thy judgments, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

SAY not thou: What is the cause that the former days were better than these? For thou dost not inquire wisely concerning this. Wisdom is best along with riches, and thereby is there more profit of it to them that see the sun. For wisdom is a defence, and money is a defence. The excellency of knowledge and wisdom is this, that they give life to him that hath them. Consider the work of God, how that none can make him right whom He hath despised.

Third Responsory.

Lord, Thine eyes behold, &c., (p. 482.)

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [1] All wisdom is of the Lord God, and was with Him from everlasting, yea before time was.

Prayer of the succeeding Sunday.

Third Sunday of August.

The Third Lord's Day of August.

If upon this Sunday should be the Feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin, or of St Joachim, or of St Hyacinth, or the Octave-Day of St Lawrence, then the Book of Wisdom is begun upon either the Feast of St Hyacinth or the Octave-Day of St Lawrence, and it is read on the Feast of St Bernard, and the Feast of Ste. Jeanne Frances de Chantal, and upon any days of the week which may come after the Octave-Day of the Assumption. Upon the day on which the Book of Wisdom is begun are read the Lessons of Sunday, (with or without those of the day itself, if other than the Sunday,) but on the next day when it is read, then the Lessons belonging to the day, the Lessons of the intermediate days being omitted, (unless they have been read with those of Sunday, as above.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the [2] Book of Wisdom (i. 1.)

LOVE righteousness, ye that be judges of the earth. Think of the Lord with a good heart, and in simplicity of heart seek Him; for He will be found of them that tempt Him not, and show Himself unto such as do not distrust Him. For froward thoughts separate from God; and His power, when it is tried, reproveth the unwise. For into a malicious soul wisdom shall not enter, nor dwell in the body that is subject unto sin.

First Responsory.

God [possessed me] in the beginning, &c., (p. 481.)

Second Lesson.

FOR the holy spirit of discipline will flee deceit, and remove from thoughts that are without understanding, and will not abide when unrighteousness cometh in. For wisdom is a loving spirit, and will not acquit an evil-speaker of his words; for God is witness of his reins, and a true beholder of his heart, and an hearer of his tongue. For the Spirit of the Lord filleth the world, and that which containeth all things hath knowledge of the voice. Therefore he that speaketh unrighteous things cannot be hid, neither shall vengeance, when it punisheth, pass by him.

Second Responsory.

I alone compassed, &c., (p. 481.)

Third Lesson.

FOR inquisition shall be made into the counsels of the ungodly; and the sound of his words shall come unto God, for the punishment of his wicked deeds. For the ear of jealousy heareth all things, and the noise of murmurings is not hid. Therefore, beware of murmuring, which is unprofitable, and refrain your tongue from back-biting, for there is no word so secret that it shall go for nought; and the mouth that lieth, slayeth the soul.

Third Responsory.

O send out wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan,] "On Offices." (Bk. i. c. 28.)

GREAT is the glory of justice. She liveth for others rather than for herself. By her our commonwealth and fellowship are holpen. She holdeth such a pre-eminence that all things are subject unto her judgment. She helpeth others. She giveth wealth. She refuseth not to labour. She taketh upon her the dangers of others. Who would not desire to hold this castle of power and courage, if the covetousness of our first parents had not weakened and distorted the strength of our nerve? But so it is, that, while we are fain to increase wealth, to put by money, to add lands to our possessions, or to make show of our abundance, we put off the image of justice, and lose charity toward our brethren.

[1] Ecclesiasticus i. 1.

[2] Abp. Kenrick says:—"This book has been ascribed to Solomon, but . . . is now generally held to have been written long after his time, by an unknown individual . . . at a time when the Greek language prevailed among the Jews, and perhaps at Alexandria, subsequently to the commencement of the translation of the Scriptures called the LXX. . . . The author was probably an Alexandrian Jew, who possessed a knowledge of Greek, which he wrote with ease and fluency." It is not found in Hebrew, nor in the Jewish Canon, nor in St Jerome's translation.

Fourth Responsory.

Give me wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

Fifth Lesson.

HOW far-spreading is the field of justice appeareth by this, that there is excepted therefrom no place, person, or time, nay, she hath to do even as regards enemies, for if one be agreed with his enemy of a certain place, or day for battle, it should be deemed unjust to fall on him beforehand, at some other place, or time. For it is a very different thing, whether one get the better of another in a hard fight, or by skill, or by accident. If therefore in war justice hath place, how much more is she to be observed in time of peace?

Fifth Responsory.

The fear of the LORD, &c., (p. 482.)

Sixth Lesson.

HONOUR is the foundation of justice. The thoughts in the hearts of just men are honourable thoughts; and when the just man accuseth himself, it is honour that bringeth him to that just deed. Then is his justice made manifest by his honourable avowal. The Lord saith by Isaiah: "Behold, I lay in Zion a foundation-stone" (xxviii. 16), that is to say, He giveth Christ unto the Church to be her foundation. Christ is the true honour for all men, and the Church is as it were a figure of justice, being a commonwealth wherein all have rights, and which worketh as one, and suffereth as one. Whosoever denieth himself, the same is just, and worthy of Christ. Therefore also Paul saith: "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is JESUS Christ" (1 Cor. iii. 11), and upon that foundation is it, that every building of justice must be raised. For [the spirit of Christ is the true spirit of] honour [which] is the foundation [whereon justice resteth.]

Sixth Responsory.

Lord, remove far from me, &c., (p. 482.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

O Lord, Father and God, &c., (p. 482.)

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Wisdom (iii. 1.)

BUT the souls of the righteous are in the hand of God, and there shall no torment of death touch them. In the sight of the unwise they seemed to die, and their departure is taken for misery, and their going from us to be utter destruction—but they are in peace. For though they be punished in the sight of men, yet is their hope full of immortality: and having been a little chastised, they shall be greatly rewarded, for God proved them and found them worthy for Himself. As gold in the furnace hath He tried them, and received them as a burnt offering, and in time they shall be regarded.

First Responsory.

O Lord, Father and Governor, &c., (p. 482.)

Second Lesson.

THE righteous shall shine, and run to and fro like sparks among the stubble. They shall judge the nations, and have dominion over the people, and their Lord shall reign for ever and ever. They that put their trust in Him shall understand the truth, and such as be faithful in love shall abide with Him; for grace and mercy is to His elect. But the ungodly shall be punished according to their own imaginations, which have neglected the righteous and forsaken the Lord. For whoso despiseth wisdom and nurture, he is miserable; and their hope is vain, their labours unfruitful, and their works unprofitable.

Second Responsory.

Great are Thy judgments, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson. (v. 16.)

BUT the righteous live for evermore; their reward also is with the Lord, and the care of them is with the Most High. Therefore shall they receive a glorious kingdom, and a beautiful crown from the Lord's hand; for with His right hand shall He cover them, and with His holy arm shall He protect them. He shall take to Him His jealousy for complete armour, and make the creature His weapon for the revenge of His enemies. He shall put on righteousness as a breastplate, and true judgment instead of an helmet. He shall take equity for an invincible shield, He shall sharpen His severe wrath for a sword, and the world shall fight with Him against the unwise.

Third Responsory.

Lord, Thine eyes behold, &c., (p. 482.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Wisdom (vi. 1.)

WISDOM is better than strength, and a man of discretion than a man of might. Hear therefore, O ye kings, and understand; learn, ye that be judges of the ends of the earth. Give ear, ye that rule the peoples, and glory in the multitude of nations; for power is given you of the Lord, and sovereignty from the Highest, Who shall try your works, and search out your counsels, because, being ministers of His kingdom, ye have not judged aright, nor kept the law of righteousness, nor walked according to the will of God.

First Responsory.

My son, give me thine heart, &c., (p. 483.)

Second Lesson.

HORRIBLY and speedily shall He come upon you; for a sharp judgment shall be to them that be in high places. For mercy will soon pardon the meanest, but mighty men shall be mightily tormented. For God shall fear no man's person, neither shall He stand in awe of any man's greatness. For He hath made the small and great, and careth for all alike. But a sore trial shall come upon the mighty.

Second Responsory.

The fear of the LORD, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

UNTO you, therefore, O kings, do I speak, that ye may learn wisdom and not fall away. For they that keep righteousness righteously, shall be judged righteous; and they that have learned such things, shall find what to answer. Wherefore set your affection upon my words; desire them, and ye shall be instructed. Wisdom is glorious, and never fadeth away. Yea, she is easily seen of them that love her, and found of such as seek her.

Third Responsory.

Lord, remove, &c., (p. 482.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Wisdom (vii. 1.)

I MYSELF also am a mortal man, like to all, and the offspring of him that was first made of the earth: and in my mother's womb was fashioned to be flesh, in the time of ten months, being compacted in blood, of the seed of man, and the pleasure that came with sleep. And when I was born I drew in the common air; and fell upon the earth, which is of like nature; and the first voice which I uttered was crying, as all others do. I was nursed in swaddling-clothes, with great care. For there is no king that had any other beginning of birth. For all men have one entrance into life, and the like going out.

First Responsory.

O Lord, Father and God, &c., (p. 482.)

Second Lesson.

WHEREFORE I prayed, and understanding was given me. I called, and the spirit of wisdom came to me. I preferred her before kingdoms and thrones, and esteemed riches nothing in comparison of her; neither compared I unto her any precious stone, because all gold in respect of her is as a little sand, and silver shall be counted as clay before her. I loved her above health and beauty, and chose to have her instead of light, for the light that cometh from her never goeth out.

Second Responsory.

Great are Thy judgments, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

ALL good things came to me together with her, and innumerable riches in her hands; and I rejoiced in them all, because wisdom went before me, and I knew not that she was the mother of them. I learned her faithfully, and do communicate her liberally; and I do not hide her riches. For she is a treasure unto men that never faileth, which they that use, become the friends of God, becoming commended for the gifts that come from learning.

Third Responsory.

Lord, Thine eyes behold, &c., (p. 482.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Wisdom (ix. 13.)

WHAT man is he that can know the counsel of God? or who can think what the will of God is? For the thoughts of mortal men are miserable, and their devices are but uncertain. For the corruptible body presseth down the soul, and the earthly tabernacle weigheth down the mind that museth upon many things. And hardly do we guess aright at things that are upon earth; and with labour do we find the things that are before us. But the things that are in heaven, who shall search them out? And Thy counsel who hath known, except Thou give wisdom, and send Thy Holy Spirit from on high? And so the ways of them which live on the earth are corrected, and men learn the things that are pleasing unto Thee. For by wisdom have they been healed, whosoever have pleased Thee, O Lord, even from the beginning.

First Responsory.

God [possessed me] in the beginning, &c., (p. 481.)

Second Lesson. (x.)

SHE preserved the first father of the world that God formed, that was created alone, and brought him out of his fall, and gave him power to rule all things. But when the unrighteous went away from her in his anger, he perished also in the fury wherewith he murdered his brother. For whose cause the earth being drowned with the flood, wisdom again preserved it, and directed the course of the righteous in a piece of wood of small value. Moreover, the nations in their wicked conspiracy being confounded, she found out the righteous, and preserved him blameless unto God, and kept him strong against his tender compassion towards his son.

Second Responsory.

I alone compassed, &c., (p. 481.)

Third Lesson.

WHEN the ungodly perished she delivered the righteous man, who fled from the fire which fell down upon the five cities, of whose wickedness even to this day the waste land smoketh as a testimony, and plants bearing fruit that never come to ripeness, and a standing pillar of salt is a monument of an unbelieving soul. For regarding not wisdom, they gat not only this hurt, that they knew not things which were good, but also left behind them to the world a memorial of their foolishness, so that in the things wherein they offended, they could not so much as be hid. But wisdom delivered from pain those that attended upon her.

Third Responsory.

O send out wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Wisdom (xiii. 1.)

SURELY vain are all men, who are ignorant of God, and could not, out of the good things that are seen, know Him That is; neither, by considering the works, did they acknowledge the Work-Master; but deemed either fire, or wind, or the swift air, or the circle of the stars, or the violent water, or the sun and moon, to be the gods that govern the world. With whose beauty if they being delighted, took them to be gods, let them know how much better the Lord of them is. For the First Author of beauty hath created them all.

First Responsory.

Give me wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

Second Lesson.

BUT if they were astounded at their power and virtue, let them understand by them, how much mightier is He That made them. For by the greatness and beauty of the creatures, the Creator can be intelligibly perceived. But yet for this they are the less to be blamed, for perchance they erred, seeking God and desirous to find Him. For being conversant in His works, they search Him diligently, and believe their sight, because the things are beautiful that are seen.

Second Responsory.

The fear of the LORD, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

HOWBEIT, neither are they to be pardoned. For if they were able to know so much, that they could form an opinion concerning the world, how did they not sooner find out the Lord thereof? But miserable are they, and in dead things is their hope, who called them gods which are the works of men's hands, gold and silver, to show art in, and resemblances of beasts, or a stone good for nothing, the work of an ancient hand.

Third Responsory.

Lord, remove far from me, &c., (p. 482.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Wisdom (xv. 1.)

BUT Thou, O our God, art gracious and true, long-suffering, and in mercy ordering all things. For even if we sin, we are Thine, knowing Thy power; and if we sin not, we know that with Thee we are counted Thine. For to know Thee is perfect righteousness; and to know Thy righteousness and Thy power is the root of immortality.

First Responsory.

O Lord, Father and God, &c., (p. 482.)

Second Lesson.

FOR neither did the mischievous invention of men deceive us, nor the fruitless labour of a painted image, a similitude fashioned with divers colours, the sight whereof enticeth fools to lust after it, and so desire the form of a dead image that hath no breath. Both they that make them, and they that desire them, and they that worship them are lovers of evil things, and are worthy to have such things to trust upon.

Second Responsory.

Great are Thy judgments, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

FOR the potter tempering the soft earth, fashioneth every vessel with much labour for our service, yea, of the same clay he maketh both the vessels that serve for clean uses, and likewise also such as serve to the contrary. But what is the use of either sort, the potter himself is the judge. And, employing his labours lewdly, he maketh a god of the same clay, even he which a little before was made of earth himself, and within a little while after returneth to the same out of the which he was taken, when his life which was lent him shall be demanded.

Third Responsory.

Lord, Thine eyes behold, &c., (p. 482.)

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Wisdom crieth in the streets: * If any man love wisdom, let him come unto me, and he shall find her; and when once he hath found her, blessed shall he be if he hold her.

Prayer of the succeeding Sunday.

Fourth Sunday of August.

The Fourth Lord's Day of August.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of [1] Ecclesiasticus (i. 1.)

ALL wisdom is of the Lord God, and with Him hath ever been, and is before the ages. Who can number the sand of the sea and the drops of rain, and the days of eternity? Who hath measured the height of heaven, and the breadth of the earth, and the depth of the deep? Who can search out the wisdom of God, that was before all things? Wisdom hath been created before all things, and the understanding of prudence from everlasting. The word of God most high is the fountain of wisdom, and her ways the everlasting commandments.

First Responsory.

God [possessed me], &c., (p. 481.)

Second Lesson.

TO whom hath the root of wisdom been revealed? or who hath known her wise counsels? Unto whom hath the knowledge of wisdom been made manifest? And who hath understood her manifold ways? God, the Most High, the Creator, the Almighty, the Powerful King, the Awful, That sitteth upon His throne and reigneth, He is One. He created her in His Holy Spirit, and saw her, and numbered her, and measured her. And He poured her forth upon all His works, and upon all flesh according to His gift; and He hath given her to them that love Him.

Second Responsory.

I alone compassed, &c., (p. 481.)

Third Lesson.

THE fear of the Lord is honour, and glory, and gladness, and a crown of rejoicing. The fear of the Lord maketh a merry heart, and giveth joy, and gladness, and a long life. Whoso feareth the Lord, it shall go well with him at the last, and he shall be blessed in his death. The love of God is the glory of wisdom. They unto whom she appeareth in visions, love the sight of her, and the knowledge of her mighty works. To fear the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and it was created with the faithful in the womb.

Third Responsory.

O send out wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Moral Reflections on Job, written by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Bk. i. 10 on Job i.)

SOME there are who are careless concerning their true life, greedy of the things which pass away, but as to the things which are eternal, either understand them not, or, understanding them, holding them to be but of little moment; they feel no sorrow, nor know how to take wise advice; and, in forgetfulness of the heavenly possessions which they have lost, they deem themselves (alas, poor wretches!) happy in their goods. They lift not up their eyes to the light of truth for which they were created; no keen desire ever maketh them to cast a longing look toward the everlasting Fatherland. Leaving alone the chief end for which they were made, they fix their affections upon the exile which they are enduring, instead of upon their home, and make merry in the blindness which they are suffering, as though it were glorious day-light.

Fourth Responsory.

Give me wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

Fifth Lesson.

BUT, on the other hand, the understandings of the elect, while they apprehend the things which pass away, perceive them to be indeed nothings, and work towards grasping the true end to which they were created, and since nothing outside God satisfieth them, their thought, wearied by the intensity of speculation, findeth rest in the hope for, and the contemplation of, their Maker. They are fain to take their place among the citizens above, and each one of them, although still placed in the world as concerns his body, doth yet in heart and mind ascend above the world. They bemoan the hardships of the exile which they are enduring, and rouse themselves by the constant pricking of their love, to look to their Fatherland above. When therefore such an one seeth with grief that [by sin] he hath lost an eternal inheritance, he findeth this healthy counsel, to reckon but lightly the things of time through which he is passing, and as the riper groweth his wise course that he hath chosen, to let be these perishing things, the deeper groweth his sorrow that he hath not yet attained unto the things which endure.

Fifth Responsory.

The fear of the Lord, &c., (p. 482.)

Sixth Lesson.

WE must also realise that they who are headlong in their courses, feel not sorrow of heart. They that live without thought, who leave themselves recklessly to the guidance of events, escape the weariness of thought. He that ordereth his life by prudent consideration, looketh carefully around him before each thing that he doth, and, like a man, that before advancing on an uncertain way, trieth the ground with his foot, so he taketh thought beforehand, lest some sudden and evil thing should happen to him; he considereth whether that which he hath a mind to do is not forbidden to him by caution, whether he be not too hasty about things which were better put off to another season, lest evil should overcome him by open attack upon his lusts, or even good undo him by the in-bringing of vain glory.

---

[1] Abp. Kenrick says that the author of this Book, Jesus the son of Sirach, wrote it originally in Hebrew. (Now lost.) It was translated into Greek by his grand-son, in the most literal manner, with no small detriment to perspicuity, as well as to elegance of style. Nothing certain is known of the author, beyond what is gathered from the work itself. It is thought to have been composed about 300 years before the coming of our Lord. The translation into Greek was made under Ptolemy, probably the first of that name, who began to reign 247 years before Christ. The Latin version is that of the ancient Vulgate. It abounds in paraphrases and double translations of the same words.

Sixth Responsory.

Lord, remove far from me, &c., (p. 482.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

O Lord, Father and God, &c., (p. 482.)

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (i. 22.)

THE crown of wisdom is the fear of the Lord, Who maketh peace and perfect health to flourish; Who hath seen and numbered them; and both of them are the gifts of God. Wisdom raineth down skill and knowledge of understanding, and exalteth them to honour that hold her fast. The root of wisdom is to fear the Lord, and the branches thereof are long life. In the treasury of wisdom is understanding, and the godly use of knowledge; but of sinners is wisdom accursed.

First Responsory.

O Lord, Father and Governor, &c., (p. 482.)

Second Lesson.

THE fear of the Lord driveth away sins, for he that feareth Him not cannot be justified, for the fury of such an one's anger is his destruction. A patient man shall bear for a time, and afterward joy shall spring up unto him. Good understanding will hide his words for a time, and the lips of many shall declare his wisdom. The understanding of instruction is in the treasures of wisdom, but the worship of God is an abomination to a sinner. My son, if thou desire wisdom, keep the commandments, and the Lord shall give her unto thee.

Second Responsory.

Great are Thy judgments, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

FOR the fear of the Lord is wisdom and instruction, and faith and meekness are His delight, and therewith shall He fill His treasures. Be not unbelieving, as touching the fear of the Lord, and come not unto Him with a double heart. Be not an hypocrite in the sight of men, and give not offence with thy lips. Take good heed thereto, lest perchance thou fall, and bring dishonour upon thy soul, and so God discover thy secrets, and cast thee down in the midst of the congregation, because thou camest wickedly unto the Lord, and thine heart was full of wickedness and deceit.

Third Responsory.

Lord, Thine eyes behold, &c., (p. 482.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (ii. 1.)

MY son, if thou come to serve the Lord, stand firm in righteousness and fear, and prepare thy soul for temptation. Set thine heart lowly and constantly endure; incline thine ear, and take heed to the word of understanding; and make not haste in time of trouble. Bear patiently the trials which God sendeth thee; cleave unto God, and wait patiently, that thy life may be increased at the last.

First Responsory.

My son, give me thine heart, &c., (p. 483.)

Second Lesson.

WHATSOEVER is brought upon thee take cheerfully; and be patient when thou art changed to a low estate. For gold and silver are tried in the fire, and acceptable men in the furnace of adversity. Believe in God, and He will help thee. Order thy way aright, and trust in Him. Keep thee in awe of Him, and grow old in His service.

Second Responsory.

The fear of the LORD, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

YE that fear the Lord, wait for His mercy, and go not aside, lest ye fall. Ye that fear the Lord, believe Him, and your reward shall not fail. Ye that fear the Lord, hope in Him, and His mercy shall come joyfully upon you. Ye that fear the Lord, love Him, and your hearts shall be enlightened. My sons, look at the generations of old, and see, did ever any trust in the Lord, and was confounded? or did any abide in His fear, and was forsaken? or whom did He ever despise that called upon Him?

Third Responsory.

Lord, remove, &c., (p. 482.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (iii. 1.)

THE children of wisdom are the congregation of righteousness, and the generation thereof, obedience and love. Hear the judgment of your father, O children, and do thereafter, that ye may be safe. For God hath given the father honour over the children, and hath confirmed the authority of the mother over the sons. Whoso loveth God, prayeth that his sins may be forgiven, and turneth him away from them, and in time his prayer shall be heard.

First Responsory.

O Lord, Father and God, &c., (p. 482.)

Second Lesson.

AND he that honoureth his mother is as one that layeth up treasure. He that honoureth his father, shall have joy of his own children, and when he maketh his prayer, he shall be heard. He that honoureth his father shall have a long life, and he that is obedient unto his father, shall be a comfort to his mother. He that feareth the Lord, honoureth his parents, and doth service unto them that begat him, as unto his masters.

Second Responsory.

Great are Thy judgments, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

HONOUR thy father in deed, and in word, and in all patience, that a blessing may come upon thee from him, and his blessing abide upon thee at the last. The blessing of a father establisheth the houses of children; but the curse of a mother rooteth out foundations. Glory not in the dishonour of thy father: for thy father's dishonour is no glory unto thee. For the glory of a man is from the honour of his father, and a father in dishonour is a reproach to the children.

Third Responsory.

Lord, Thine eyes behold, &c., (p. 482.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (iii. 22.)

SEEK not out the things that are above thee, neither search the things that are above thy strength. But what God hath commanded thee, think thereon alway, and be not curious concerning the diversity of His works. For it is not necessary for thee to see with thine eyes the things that are in secret. Search not too much into unnecessary matters, and be not curious concerning the diversity of His works, for more things are shown unto thee than men understand. For many are deceived by their guesses concerning them, and a vain opinion hath overthrown their judgment.

First Responsory.

God [possessed me], &c., (p. 481.)

Second Lesson.

A STUBBORN heart shall fare evil at the last, and he that loveth danger shall perish therein. An heart that entereth on a double way, shall not have success, and he whose heart is corrupt shall stumble therein. An obstinate heart shall be laden with sorrows, and the wicked man shall heap sin upon sin. In the congregation of the proud there is no remedy, for the plant of wickedness hath taken root there, and they shall not know it.

Second Responsory.

I alone compassed, &c., (p. 481.)

Third Lesson.

THE heart of the prudent will understand wisdom, and the ear of the good will listen to wisdom with all eagerness. A wise and understanding heart will refrain from sin, and will work righteousness, and have success therein. Water will quench a flaming fire, and alms are an antidote against sins. God looketh upon him which giveth. He is mindful of him hereafter, and when he faileth, he shall find a stay.

Third Responsory.

O send out wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (iv. 1.)

MY son, defraud not the poor of his alms, and turn not away thine eyes from the needy. Deem not lightly of an hungry soul, neither provoke a poor man in his distress. Grieve not the heart of the needy, and defer not to give to him that is in straits. Reject not the supplication of the afflicted, and turn not away thy face from a poor man.

First Responsory.

Give me wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

Second Lesson.

TURN not away thine eyes in anger from the needy, and leave not such as ask from thee to curse thee behind thy back; for if he curse thee in the bitterness of his soul, his prayer shall be heard; for He That made him will hear him. Get thyself the love of the congregation of the poor, and bow thy soul to the aged, and bow thine head to a great man.

Second Responsory.

The fear of the Lord, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

LET it not grieve thee to bow down thine ear to the poor, and pay that thou owest, and give him a friendly answer with meekness. Deliver him that suffereth wrong from the hand of the oppressor, and be not faint-hearted. When thou sittest in judgment, be as a tender father unto the fatherless, and instead of an husband unto their mother; so shalt thou be as a dutiful son unto the Most High, and He shall love thee more than thy mother doth.

Third Responsory.

Lord, remove far from me, &c., (p. 482.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (iv. 23.)

MY son, observe the time, and beware of evil. For thy soul's sake be not ashamed to speak the truth. For there is a shame that bringeth sin; and there is a shame that bringeth glory and grace. Accept no person against thy person, nor a lie against thine own soul. Fear not thy neighbour when he falleth, and refrain not to speak when there is occasion to do good. Hide not thy wisdom in her beauty.

First Responsory.

O Lord, Father and God, &c., (p. 482.)

Second Lesson.

FOR by speech wisdom is known, and understanding, and knowledge and instruction by the word of him that understandeth, and firmness by works of righteousness. In no wise speak against the truth, but be abashed for the falsehood which thou hast uttered through ignorance. Be not ashamed to confess thy sins, and make not thyself an underling to any man by [cleaving to] thy sin. Strive not against the person of the mighty, and contend not against the course of the river.

Second Responsory.

Great are Thy judgments, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

STRIVE for righteousness with all thy soul, and contend for righteousness unto death, and God shall beat down thine enemies for thee. Be not hasty in thy tongue, and in thy deeds slack and remiss. Be not as a lion in thine own house, troubling thy servants, and oppressing them that are subject unto thee. Let not thine hand be stretched out to receive, and shut when thou shouldest give.

Third Responsory.

Lord, Thine eyes behold, &c., (p. 482.)

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [1] My son, keep thy father's commandment, and forsake not the law of thy mother, but bind them continually upon thine heart.

If, however, the next day be the Sunday nearest to the 1st day of September, the above is omitted, and the Antiphon, "When Job heard," &c., (p. 498) is said instead.

Prayer of the succeeding Sunday.

Note. The whole of the following week is omitted if the Sunday after the fourth Saturday in August be the Sunday nearest to the 1st day of September. And so with the fifth week of September and October.

Fifth Sunday of August.

The Fifth Lord's Day of August.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (v. 1.)

TURN not aside after ill-gotten gain, neither say: This life is all I need—for when the hour of vengeance cometh, the hour when thou shalt have all things taken from thee, this life will be nothing to thee. When thou art lusty, follow not the desire of thine heart, neither say: How can I do it? or who will bring me to account for it, when it is done? For there is a God of vengeance Who will be avenged on thee. Say not: I have sinned, but what harm hath befallen me? The Most High repayeth, slowly, but surely. Though thou have made an atonement for thy sin, be not fearless concerning it, nor go on to sin again.

First Responsory.

God [possessed me], &c., (p. 481.)

Second Lesson.

SAY not: the mercy of the Lord is great, He will take my many sins into merciful consideration—for mercy is in Him a dweller with anger, and to the sinner it is His anger. Tarry not to turn thee to the Lord, yea, defer not thy repentance from day to day. For His wrath will come upon thee suddenly, and in the moment of His vengeance He will destroy thee. Long not for ill-gotten gain—for, when the hour of vengeance cometh, the hour when thou shalt have all things taken from thee, they will avail thee nothing. Be not blown about with every wind, nor essay every path. For thus, even by his double tongue, is every sinner made manifest.

Second Responsory.

I alone compassed, &c., (p. 481.)

Third Lesson.

STAND firm in the Lord's way, and in faithfulness to thine understanding and knowledge, and let the word of peace and righteousness go with thee. Be courteous in listening, that thou mayest understand, and with wisdom give a truthful answer. If thou have wit, answer thy neighbour; but if not, let thine hand be upon thy mouth, and be not detected in a foolish speech, and put to the blush. The utterance of him that hath understanding bringeth him honour and credit; but the undoing of a fool is his own tongue. Be not thou called a tale-bearer, and be not caught in thy speech, and put to the blush.

Third Responsory.

O send out wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.]

TARRY not to turn thee to the Lord, yea, defer not thy repentance from day to day—for thou knowest not what the morrow may bring forth. In delay there is danger and terror, but where there is no delay, there health is safe and secure. Live well then, and, then, however young thou diest, thou wilt die safely; and if thou come to old age thou wilt depart without vexation or trouble; and thou wilt have a double happiness, in that thou wilt be leaving all the evils of life, and in that thou hast lived well. Say not: There will be a time meet for repentance—for such words as these do greatly rouse the anger of God.

---

[1] Prov. vi. 20, 21.

Fourth Responsory.

Give me wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

Fifth Lesson.

HE hath promised thee eternal ages, and thou willest not to work in this present life, which is so short and so fleeting. Dost thou so idly and loosely carry thyself, as though the life for which thou seekest were a shorter life than this? Do not daily feastings, daily gluttonies, daily uncleanness, shows, and riches bear witness to the undying nature of sinful cravings? Think it well over, that as often as thou dost commit uncleanness, thou dost damn thyself—for this is the nature of sin, as soon as it is committed, the Judge's sentence is uttered.

Fifth Responsory.

The fear of the LORD, &c., (p. 482.)

Sixth Lesson.

HAST thou been drunken? Hast thou over-eaten thyself? Hast thou stolen? Stop, and turn back; thank the goodness of God, that He hath not taken thee away in the midst of thy sins; seek not more time wherein to commit iniquity. Many have they been who have perished suddenly, in the midst of bad and vicious lives, and have gone away to manifest damnation; have a fear lest the same thing befall thee. But, thou sayest, they have been many to whom God hath given time, and they have been to confession in their old age. What then? Is that a proof that it will be given to thee? Perchance, sayest thou. Why sayest thou, Perchance? It befalleth sometimes. Bethink thee that it is of thy soul thou art considering. Look at it the other way, and say: What if it be not given? But, sayest thou, and what if it be? May it be so—it is true it is among His gifts—but nevertheless, this is the safer and the better way.

Sixth Responsory.

Lord, remove far from me, &c., (p. 482.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

O Lord, Father and God, &c., (p. 482.)

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (vii. 1.)

DO not evil, so shall none come unto thee. Depart from the unjust, and iniquity shall turn away from thee. My son, sow not evil in the furrows of unrighteousness, and thou shalt not reap the same sevenfold. Seek not of the lord pre-eminence, neither of the king the seat of honour. Justify not thyself before God, for He is the Beholder of hearts; and seek not to seem wise before the king.

First Responsory.

O Lord, Father and Governor, &c., (p. 482.)

Second Lesson.

SEEK not to be made a judge, unless thou hast strength to break down iniquity; lest at any time thou fear the person of the mighty, and lay a stumbling-block in the way of thine uprightness. Offend not against the multitude of a city, nor cast thyself down among the people, nor bind the one fault upon the other, for in one thou shalt not be unpunished. Be not faint-hearted in thy soul; pray, and forget not to give alms.

Second Responsory.

Great are Thy judgments, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

SAY not: God will look upon the multitude of my oblations, and when I offer to the Most High God, He will accept it. Laugh no man to scorn in the bitterness of his soul; for there is One Which humbleth and exalteth, even God the Beholder. Devise not a lie against thy brother; neither do the like to thy friend. Use not to make any manner of lie; for the custom thereof is not good. Use not many words in a multitude of elders, and make not much repetition when thou prayest.

Third Responsory.

Lord, Thine eyes behold, &c., (p. 482.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (x. 1.)

A WISE judge will judge his people, and the government of a man of understanding is firm. As the judge of the people is himself, so are his officers; and what manner of man the ruler of the city is, such are all they that dwell therein. An unwise king destroyeth his people, but through the prudence of them which are in authority the cities shall be inhabited. The power of the earth is in the hand of God, and in due time He will set over it one that is profitable. In the hand of God is the prosperity of man; and upon the person of the scribe shall He lay His honour.

First Responsory.

My son, give me thine heart, &c., (p. 483.)

Second Lesson.

BEAR not hatred to thy neighbour for every wrong; and do nothing at all by injurious practices. Pride is hateful before God and man, and by both is the iniquity of the heathen held in abhorrence. Because of unrighteous dealings, injuries, insults, and divers deceits, the kingdom is translated from one people to another. There is not a more wicked thing than a covetous man. Why is earth and ashes proud? There is not a more wicked thing than for a man to love money; for such an one setteth his own soul to sale, because while he liveth he casteth away his bowels.

Second Responsory.

The fear of the LORD, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

SHORT is the duration of all power. A long sickness is a weariness to the physician. The physician cutteth off a short disease; so also, he that is a king to-day, to-morrow shall die. For when a man is dead, he shall inherit creeping things, beasts, and worms. The beginning of pride is when one departeth from God; for his heart is turned away from his Maker. For pride is the beginning of all sin; he that hath it shall be filled with curses, and in the end it will destroy him. Therefore hath the Lord put to shame the assemblies of the wicked, and utterly overthrown them.

Third Responsory.

Lord, remove, &c., (p. 482.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (xiii. 1.)

HE that toucheth pitch shall be defiled therewith, and he that hath fellowship with a proud man will put on pride. He taketh a burden upon himself that hath fellowship with one that is more honourable than himself. Company not with one that is richer than thou. How agree the kettle and the earthen pot together? For if the one be smitten against the other, it shall be broken. The rich man hath done wrong, and yet he threateneth withal; the poor is wronged and holdeth his peace. If thou be for his profit, he will use thee; and if thou have nothing, he will forsake thee. If thou have anything, he will live with thee, yea, he will make thee bare, and will not be sorry for thee.

First Responsory.

O Lord, Father and God, &c., (p. 482.)

Second Lesson.

BEAR thyself lowly toward God, and watch for His hand. Beware that thou be not deceived and brought down to folly. Be not lowly in esteem of thy wisdom, lest in thy lowliness thou be led astray into folly. If thou be invited of a mighty man, withdraw thyself, and so much the more will he invite thee. Press not upon him, lest thou be put back; and stand not far off, lest thou be forgotten. Affect not to be made equal unto him in talk, and believe not his many words. For with much communication will he tempt thee, and, smiling upon thee, will get out thy secrets. Cruelly will his soul lay up thy words, and will not spare to do thee hurt and to put thee in prison.

Second Responsory.

Great are Thy judgments, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

OBSERVE, and take good heed unto what thou hearest, for thou walkest in peril of thy over-throwing. When thou hearest these things, look about thee as though thou wert asleep, and thou shalt watch well. Love God all thy life, and call upon Him when thou art in health. Every beast loveth his like, and every man loveth his neighbour. All flesh consorteth according to kind, and every man will cleave to his like. What fellowship hath the wolf with the lamb?—so, the sinner with the godly. What hath an holy man to do with a dog? And what portion is there alike to the rich and the poor?

Third Responsory.

Lord, Thine eyes behold, &c., (p. 482.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (xiv. 1.)

BLESSED is the man that hath not slipped with his mouth, and is not pricked with the sorrowful memory of sins. Happy is he whose conscience hath not condemned him, and who is not fallen from his hope. Riches are not comely for a niggard, and what should an envious man do with money? He that gathereth by defrauding his own soul, gathereth for others, and another will spend his goods riotously. He that is evil to himself, to whom will he be good? He shall not take pleasure in his goods.

First Responsory.

God [possessed me], &c., (p. 481.)

Second Lesson.

THERE is none worse than he that envieth himself, and this is a recompense of his wickedness; and if he doth good he doth it unknowingly and unwillingly, and at the last he declareth his wickedness. The envious man hath a wicked eye, he turneth away his face, and is reckless of his own soul. The covetous man's eye is not satisfied with his ill-gotten portion; he will never be satisfied until he dry up his own soul and destroy it. A wicked eye looketh for wickedness; he will not satisfy himself with bread, but is a niggard and a sufferer at his own table.

Second Responsory.

I alone compassed, &c., (p. 481.)

Third Lesson.

MY son, if thou hast wherewith, do good to thyself, and give God worthy offerings. Remember that death will not be long in coming, and that the inheritance of the grave is clearly before thee, for the inheritance of this world is the certainty of death.

Do good unto thy friend before thou die, and according to thy ability stretch out thine hand and give to the poor. Defraud not thyself of the good day, and let not any part of a good gift overpass thee. Shalt thou not leave thy travails unto another, and thy labours to be divided by lot? Give and take, and sanctify thy soul. Work righteousness before thou diest, for there is no bread to be found in the grave.

Third Responsory.

O send out wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (xxi. 1.)

MY son, hast thou sinned? Do so no more, but ask pardon for thy former sins. Flee from sin as from the face of a serpent; for if thou comest too near it, it will bite thee; the teeth thereof are as the teeth of a lion, slaying the souls of men. All iniquity is as a two-edged sword; the wounds thereof cannot be healed. Reviling and insult destroy riches, and the house which is wealthy over-much is destroyed by its own pride; thus do the riches of the proud come to nought.

First Responsory.

Give me wisdom, &c., (p. 481.)

Second Lesson.

A PRAYER out of a poor man's mouth reacheth to [God] His ears, and his judgment cometh speedily. He that hateth to be reproved is in the way of sinners, and he that feareth God will repent from his heart. The masterful tongue of a braggart is known far and near, but a man of understanding knoweth to rid himself of him. He that buildeth his house with other men's money is like one that gathereth his stones in winter. The congregation of the wicked is like tow wrapped together, and the end of them is a flame of fire.

Second Responsory.

The fear of the Lord, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

THE way of sinners is made plain with stones, but at the end thereof is hell, and darkness, and punishment. He that keepeth righteousness will get the understanding thereof. The end of the fear of God is wisdom and understanding. He that is not rightly wise will not be taught. But there is a wisdom which overfloweth with evil, and where there is bitterness there is no understanding. The knowledge of a wise man shall abound like a flood, and his counsel is like a constant fountain of life.

Third Responsory.

Lord, remove, &c., (p. 482.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (xxxii. 1.)

HAVE they made thee a ruler? Lift not thyself up, but be among them as one of the rest. Take diligent care for them, and so be trustful; and when thou hast done all thine office, sit thee down, that thou mayest rejoice with them, and mayest receive a crown for an ornament of comeliness, and an acknowledgment that thou wert worthy to be besought of them. Speak, thou that art the elder, for the first word becometh thee, with careful knowledge, and hinder not music.

First Responsory.

O Lord, Father and God, &c., (p. 482.)

Second Lesson.

POUR not out words where there are none to heed thee, and magnify not thyself with wisdom out of time. A concert of music in a banquet of wine, is as a signet of carbuncle set in gold. As a signet of an emerald set in a work of gold, so is the melody of music with merriment and sufficiency of wine. Listen in silence, and thou shalt have a good name for thy modesty. Young man, scarcely speak concerning thine own matter. If thou be twice asked, let thine answer be short.

Second Responsory.

Great are Thy judgments, &c., (p. 482.)

Third Lesson.

CONCERNING many things, be as though thou knewest not, and listen, holding thy tongue, and as seeking instruction. If thou be among great men, thrust not thyself forward, and where ancient men are in place, use not many words. Before hail goeth lightning, and before a shamefaced man shall go favour, and thou shalt have a good name for thy modesty. Rise up betimes and be not the last; but go unto thine own house the first, and there be called, and take thy pastime, and do what thou wilt, so it be not sin or proud words. And for all these things bless the Lord that made thee, and hath replenished thee with all His good things.

Third Responsory.

Lord, Thine eyes behold, &c., (p. 482.)

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin, on Saturday evening before the First Lord's Day of September. [1] When Job heard the words of the messengers, he suffered it patiently, * and said: What! shall we receive good at the hand of the Lord, and shall we not receive evil? In all this did not Job sin with his lips, nor charged God foolishly.

Prayer of the ensuing Sunday.

---

[1] Job ii. 10; i. 21, 22.

SEPTEMBER.

First Sunday of September.

The First Lord's Day of September.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of Job (i. 1.)

THERE was a man in the land of Uz, whose name was Job, and that man was perfect, and upright, and one that feared God and eschewed evil. And there were born unto him seven sons and three daughters. His substance also was seven thousand sheep, and three thousand camels, and five hundred yoke of oxen, and five hundred she-asses, and a very great household. So that this man was the greatest of all the men of the East.

First Responsory.

[1] What! shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil? The LORD gave and the LORD hath taken away. As the Lord hath pleased, so hath it befallen. Blessed be the Name of the LORD.

Verse. Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither.

Answer. The LORD gave and the LORD hath taken away. As the Lord hath pleased, so hath it befallen. Blessed be the Name of the LORD.

Second Lesson.

AND his sons went and feasted in their houses, every one his day. And sent and called for their three sisters, to eat and to drink with them. And it was so, when the days of their feasting were gone about, that Job sent unto them and sanctified them, and rose up early in the morning, and offered burnt-offerings according to the number of them all. For he said: It may be that my sons have sinned, and blessed[2] God in their hearts. Thus did Job continually.

Second Responsory.

[3] My sighing cometh before I eat, and my roarings are poured out like the waters, for the thing which I greatly feared is come upon me, and that which I was afraid of is come unto me. Was not I silent? Held not I my peace? Was not I at rest? And trouble came.

Verse. Behold, I cannot help myself, and they that were needful unto me[4] have forsaken me.

Answer. And trouble came.

Third Lesson.

NOW there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan came also among them. And the LORD said unto him: Whence comest thou? And he answered and said: From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it. And the LORD said unto him: Hast thou considered My servant Job, a perfect, and an upright man, one that feareth God and escheweth evil? Then Satan answered and said: Doth Job fear God for nought? Hast Thou not made an hedge about him, and about his house, and about all that he hath, on every side? [Hast Thou not] blessed the work of his hands? And is not his substance increased in the land? But put forth Thine hand a little, and touch all that he hath, and he will bless[5] Thee to Thy face.

Third Responsory.

Why do ye argue against the words of truth? Do ye imagine words to reprove me? and strive to confound one that is your friend? Nevertheless, finish that ye have in mind.

Verse. Judge that which is just, and ye shall find no iniquity in my tongue.

Answer. Nevertheless, finish that ye have in mind.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Nevertheless, finish that ye have in mind.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Moral [Reflections upon Job] written by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Bk. ii. ch. 1.)

THE Holy Scripture is put before the eyes of our mind somewhat after the fashion of a looking-glass, that we may see therein the aspect of our inward man. Therein we see what are our unsightly, and what our comely traits; thereby we judge how we are growing, and how far yet we are from fulness of stature. The Holy Scripture telleth of the doings of the Saints, and stirreth up the heart of us weaklings to follow them. While it maketh memorial of their victorious deeds, it strengtheneth our frailty to strive against sin. And so by the words of the Scripture it cometh to pass that the soul trembleth less at the battle, for that she seeth how many times the enemies before her have been beaten by brave men.

Fourth Responsory.

[6] My flesh is clothed with worms and clods of dust. My skin is dry and drawn together. Remember me, O Lord, for my life is wind.

Verse. My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle, and are spent without hope.

Answer. Remember me, O Lord, for my life is wind.

Fifth Lesson.

AND some whiles the Scripture showeth unto us, not only how the Saints fought bravely, but also how they fell, that we may see by the example of the mighty, not only what weapons we must take, if we would conquer, but also what snares we must keep clear of, if we would avoid falling. For example, here is Job on the one hand, waxing nobler under trial, and on the other hand, David, tried, and failing utterly.[7] And so the glory of the great strengtheneth our hope, and the backsliding of the same doth stir us up to be watchful and lowly—the one cheering us with gladness, and the other putting us on our guard through fear, so that the soul of him which heareth of these things may by the one gain sure and certain hope, and by the other fearfulness and watchfulness, and so neither be rashly puffed up, nor hopelessly cast down, nor may faint under the weight of dread, forasmuch as she is stirred up to trustfulness by the example of him who triumphed.

[1] ii. 10; i. 21, 22.

[2] I.e., invoked Him blasphemously in connection with some wicked thoughts, but it seems more probable that the expression is here "transferred to curses and impious words against God" Himself. So Gesenius. Targum:—"provoked." (Walton's Polyglott.)

[3] iii. 24; vi. 13.

[4] Latin: necessarii mei.

[5] In a bad sense, as before. Abp. Kenrick has—"See if he will not bless Thee"—apparently taking it as sarcastic. Targum:—"if he will not provoke Thee before the face of Thy Word."

[6] vii. 5-7.

[7] I.e., in the case of Bathsheba.

Fifth Responsory.

[1] My days are few, and in a short while they will be ended. Let me alone, then, O Lord! that I may bewail my sorrow a little, before I go to the land of darkness and of the shadow of death.

Verse. Thine hands, O Lord! have made me, and fashioned me together round about, and yet dost Thou forthwith destroy me?

Answer. Before I go to a land of darkness and of the shadow of death.

Sixth Lesson. (Bk. i. ch. 1.)

"THERE was a man in the land of Uz, whose name was Job." We are told where this holy man lived, that thereby we may gauge the worth of his bravery. Who knoweth not that Uz is a place in the countries of the Gentiles?[2] The Gentile world had been so degraded and corrupted by sin, that they had ceased to know that they had a Maker. Therefore is it told us where Job dwelt, that it may redound to his praise that he was good in the midst of the wicked. It is not very praiseworthy to be good among the good, but to be good among the bad. For even as it is more grievous to be bad among the good, so is it right praiseworthy to have remained good among the bad.

Sixth Responsory.

[3] Hide not Thy face from me, O Lord! Withdraw not Thine hand far from me, let not Thy dread make me afraid.

Verse. [4] O Lord, correct me—but in mercy; not in Thine anger, lest Thou bring me to nothing.

Answer. And let not Thy dread make me afraid.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And let not Thy dread make me afraid.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

[5] O that Thou wouldest hide me in the grave! that Thou wouldest keep me secret, until Thy wrath be past, even Thine, O Lord, Thou That alone art God! That Thou wouldest appoint me a set time, and remember me!

Verse. Are Thy days as the days of man, that Thou inquirest after mine iniquity? and there is none that can deliver out of Thine hand.

Answer. That Thou wouldest appoint me a set time, and remember me!

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Job (i. 13.)

AND there was a day when his sons and his daughters were eating and drinking wine in their eldest brother's house. And there came a messenger unto Job and said: The oxen were ploughing, and the asses feeding beside them, and the Sabæans fell upon them and took them away; and they have slain the servants with the edge of the sword; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee. While he was yet speaking, there came also another, and said: The fire of God is fallen from heaven, and hath burned up the sheep, and the servants, and consumed them; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

First Responsory.

[6] My harp is turned to mourning, and my organ into the voice of them that weep. Let me alone, O Lord, for my days are vanity.

Verse. My skin is black upon me, and my bones are burned with heat.

Answer. Let me alone, O Lord, for my days are vanity.

Second Lesson.

WHILE he was yet speaking there came also another, and said: The Chaldæans made out three bands, and fell upon the camels, and have carried them away; and slain the servants with the edge of the sword; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee. And while he was yet speaking, behold, there came in also another, and said: Thy sons and thy daughters were eating and drinking wine in their eldest brother's house, and, behold, there came a great wind from the wilderness, and smote the four corners of the house, and it fell upon thy children; and they are dead; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

Second Responsory.

[7] O that my sins, whereby I have deserved wrath, and the calamity whereunder I suffer, were laid in the balances together.

Verse. For now it would appear heavier than the sand of the sea, therefore also my words are full of sorrow.

Answer. And the calamity, whereunder I suffer, were laid in the balances together.

Third Lesson.

THEN Job arose, and rent his garments, and shaved his head, and fell down upon the ground, and worshipped, and said: Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither. The LORD gave, and the LORD hath taken away. As the Lord hath been pleased, so is it come to pass. Blessed be the Name of the LORD! In all these things, Job sinned not with his lips, nor charged God with foolishness.

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Job (ii. 1.)

AGAIN there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan came also among them to present himself before the LORD. And the LORD said unto Satan: Whence comest thou? And he answered: From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it. And the LORD said unto Satan: Hast thou considered My servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God, and escheweth evil? And still, he holdeth fast his integrity, although thou movedst Me against him, to afflict him without a cause. And Satan answered, and said: Skin for skin! yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life. But put forth Thine hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh. And thou shalt see that he will bless[1] Thee to Thy face!

First Responsory.

My flesh is clothed, &c., (p. 499.)

Second Lesson.

AND the LORD said unto Satan: Behold, he is in thine hand; but save his life. So went Satan forth from the presence of the LORD, and smote Job with sore boils, from the sole of his foot unto his crown. And he took a potsherd to scrape away the matter, and sat down in a dung-hill. Then said his wife unto him: Dost thou still retain thine integrity? Bless God, and die![2] But he said unto her: Thou speakest as one of the foolish women speaketh. Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil? In all this did not Job sin with his lips.

Second Responsory.

My days are few, &c., (p. 500.)

Third Lesson.

NOW when Job's three friends heard of all this evil that was come upon him, they came every one from his own place, Eliphaz the Temanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite; for they had made an appointment together to come to visit him and to comfort him. And when they lifted up their eyes afar off, and knew him not, they lifted up their voice and wept, and they rent their garments, and sprinkled dust upon their heads toward heaven. So they sat down with him upon the ground seven days and seven nights. And none spake a word unto him. For they saw that his grief was very great.

Third Responsory.

Hide not Thy face, &c., (p. 500.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Job (iii. 1.)

AFTER this Job opened his mouth, and cursed his day, and said: Perish the day wherein I was born! and the night in which it was said: There is a man-child conceived! Let that day be darkness! Let not God regard it from above! neither let the light shine upon it! Let darkness and the shadow of death stain it! Let a cloud dwell upon it! and let bitterness occupy it!

First Responsory.

O that Thou wouldest hide me, &c., (p. 500.)

Second Lesson.

AS for that night,—let darkness seize upon it! Let it not be joined unto the days of the year! Let it not come into the number of the months! Let that night be solitary—let no joyful voice come therein. Let them curse it that curse the day, who are ready to raise up Leviathan.[3] Let the stars be obscured by the darkness thereof—let it look for light but have none; neither let it see the uprising of the breaking day. Because it shut not up the doors of the womb that bare me, nor hid sorrow from mine eyes.

Second Responsory.

O that my sins, &c., (p. 500.)

Third Lesson.

WHY died I not from the womb? Why did I not give up the ghost when I came out of the belly? Why did the knees receive me? or the breasts, that I should suck? For now should I have lain still and been quiet—I should have slept—then had I been at rest—with kings and counsellors of the earth, which build desolate places for themselves—or with princes that had gold, who filled their houses with silver—or as an hidden untimely birth I had not been; as infants which never saw light.[4]

Third Responsory.

Why do ye argue, &c., (p. 499.)

---

[1] See note on the Third Lesson on Sunday.

[2] So also Gesenius, who explains it thus: "However much thou praisest and blessest God, yet thou art to die—thy piety towards God is therefore vain."

[3] Targum:—"Let the Prophets curse it who curse the day of vengeance which hath been prepared, when they are raised up to rehearse their lamentation."

[4] The description of the grave in the next few verses is so sublime, and so justly famous, that the reader ought to turn to it in the Bible.

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Job (iv. 1.)

THEN Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said: If we essay to commune with thee, wilt thou be grieved? But who, having begun to speak, can withhold himself from speaking? Behold, thou hast instructed many, and thou hast strengthened the weak hands. Thy words have upholden him that was falling, and thou hast strengthened the feeble knees. But now affliction is come upon thee, and thou faintest; it hath touched thee, and thou are troubled. Where is thy fear, thy confidence, thy patience, and the uprightness of thy ways?

First Responsory.

What! shall we receive good, &c., (p. 499.)

Second Lesson.

REMEMBER, I pray thee, who ever perished, being innocent? or when were the righteous cut off? But rather, I have seen them that plough iniquity, and sow wickedness, reap the same. By the blast of God they perish, and by the breath of His wrath are they consumed. The roaring of the lion, and the voice of the lioness, and the teeth of the young lions are broken. The tiger perisheth for lack of prey, and the lion's whelps are scattered abroad.

Second Responsory.

My sighing cometh, &c., (p. 499.)

Third Lesson.

NOW a thing was secretly brought to me, and mine ear caught as it were privily a faint sound thereof. In the dread of a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth on men, fear came upon me and trembling, which made all my bones to shake. Then a spirit passed before my face. The hair of my flesh stood up. It stood still; but I could not discern the form thereof; an image was before mine eyes, and I heard a voice like the sighing of the wind. "Shall mortal man be more just than God? Shall a man be more pure than his Maker? Behold, His servants were not to be trusted, and in His angels He found perverseness."

Third Responsory.

Why do ye argue, &c., (p. 499.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Job (vi. 1.)

BUT Job answered and said: O that my sins, whereby I have deserved wrath, and the calamity whereunder I suffer, were laid in the balances together! For now it would appear heavier than the sand of the sea; therefore also my words are full of sorrow. For the arrows of the Lord are in me; the poison thereof drinketh up my spirit; and the terrors of the Lord do set themselves in array against me![1]

First Responsory.

My flesh is clothed, &c., (p. 499.)

Second Lesson.

DOTH the wild ass bray when he hath grass? or loweth the ox when he standeth before a rack full of fodder? Can that which is unsavoury be eaten without salt? or will one taste deadly poison? The things that my soul aforetime refused to touch, are now my needful meat.

Second Responsory.

My days are few, &c., (p. 500.)

Third Lesson.

O THAT I might have my request, and that God would grant me the thing that I long for! Even that He That hath begun, would destroy me; that He would let loose His hand, and cut me off! And then would I have comfort, even if He That afflicteth me would not spare me. Yea, I would not speak against the sentence of the Holy One. What is my strength, that I should hope? And what is mine end, that I should now bear patiently? My strength is not the strength of stones, nor is my flesh of brass. Behold, I have no help in me, and they that are needful to me[2] are gone far from me.

Third Responsory.

Hide not Thy face, &c., (p. 500.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Job (vii. 1.)

THE life of man upon earth is a warfare, and his days are like the days of an hireling. As a servant earnestly desireth the shadow, and as an hireling looketh to the reward of his work, so have I had months of vanity, and have counted the wearisome nights. When I lie down, I say: When shall I arise? And again, I long for the evening, and am fretted looking for the darkness.

First Responsory.

O that Thou wouldest hide me, &c., (p. 500.)

Second Lesson.

MY flesh is clothed with rottenness, and my skin is dried up and drawn with clods of dust. My days are passed quicker than as when a weaver cutteth off the shuttle, and are spent without hope. O remember that my life is wind, and that mine eye shall no more see good. The eye of him that hath seen me shall see me no more: Thine eyes are upon me, and I am not.

---

[1] In the Hebrew "the arrows" are described as "of the Almighty," and "the terrors" "of God."

[2] Latin: necessarii mei.

Second Responsory.

O that my sins, &c., (p. 500.)

Third Lesson.

AS the cloud is consumed and vanisheth away, so he that goeth down to the grave shall come up no more. He shall return no more to his house, neither shall his place know him any more. Therefore I will not refrain my mouth; I will speak in the anguish of my spirit; I will complain in the bitterness of my soul. Am I a sea, or a whale,[1] that Thou settest a watch over me?

Third Responsory.

Why do ye argue, &c., (p. 499.)

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. In all these things Job sinned not * with his lips, nor charged God with foolishness.

Prayer of the ensuing Sunday.

Second Sunday of September.

The Second Lord's Day of September.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Job (ix. 1.)

THEN Job answered and said: I know it is so of a truth, and that a man cannot be justified before God. If He will contend with him, he cannot answer Him one of a thousand. He is wise in heart and mighty in strength; who hath hardened himself against Him and hath prospered?—Which removeth the mountains or ever they whom He overturneth in His anger know it—

First Responsory.

What! shall we receive, &c., (p. 499.)

Second Lesson.

WHICH shaketh the earth out of her place, and the pillars thereof tremble—Which commandeth the sun and it riseth not, and sealeth up the stars—Which alone spreadeth out the heavens, and treadeth upon the waves of the sea—Which maketh Arcturus, and Orion, and the Hyades, and the Chambers of the South[2]—Which doeth great things past finding out, yea, and wonders without number.

Second Responsory.

My sighing cometh, &c., (p. 499.)

Third Lesson.

IF He come unto me, I see Him not; if He pass on, I perceive Him not. If He suddenly maketh inquiry, who shall answer Him? or who can say unto Him: Why doest Thou thus? He is God, Whose anger none can withstand, and under Whom they that bear up the earth are bowed down. What then am I, that I should answer him, or my words, that I should reason with Him?—I, who though I were righteous in somewhat, yet would not answer Him, but would make supplication to my Judge. If I had called and He had answered me, yet would I not believe that He had hearkened unto my voice. For He breaketh me with a tempest, and multiplieth my wounds without cause.

Third Responsory.

Why do ye argue, &c., (p. 499.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Moral [Reflections upon Job] written by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Bk. ix. ch. 2.)

"I KNOW that it is so of a truth, and that a man cannot be justified as against God." When God is put out of the consideration, a man may be considered to be just, but considered as against God, his righteousness vanisheth away. When a man measureth himself by his relation to Him, Who is the Author of all good, he doth thereby acknowledge that of himself he hath no good in him, but hath received from God whatsoever he hath. He that glorifieth himself because of good which hath been given him, fighteth against God with God's own gifts. It is just therefore that the grounds upon which he ought to have been humbled, but upon which he hath puffed himself up, should be used to humble his vain-glory. But an holy man, because he perceiveth that the worth of our own good deeds falleth short,[3] when he considereth his own spiritual man, justly saith: "If He will contend with him, he cannot answer Him one of a thousand."

Fourth Responsory.

My flesh is clothed, &c., (p. 499.)

Fifth Lesson.

IN the Holy Scriptures the numeral a thousand is used to be taken as signifying a generalization. Thus, the Psalmist saith: "The word which He commanded to a thousand generations" (Ps. civ. 8), whereas it is notorious that the Evangelist doth not reckon more then seventy-and-seven generations between the very beginning of the world and the coming of our Redeemer. What therefore is to be understood here by a thousand? The general ripeness of the old generation to bring forth a new offspring. Hence also it is said by John: "And shall reign with Him a thousand years" (Apoc. xx. 6,)—because the reign of the Holy Church will be over all mankind made perfect.

Fifth Responsory.

My days are few, &c., (p. 500.)

---

[1] "Am I a sea, or a sea-monster, that"—i.e., am I untamed like the sea? It may be conjectured that this word (Yam=Sea) properly denotes the boiling, foaming of the sea. Gesenius.

[2] According to Gesenius, the first constellation named is the Great Bear, the second uncertain, but generally taken to be Orion, the third the Pleiades—the "Chambers of the South"—the most remote Southern regions. (Qu. the constellations of more southern skies?)

[3] Omne virtutis nostræ meritum esse vitium.

Sixth Lesson.

TEN times one is ten, and ten times ten is an hundred, and ten times an hundred is a thousand. Observing therefore this connection between one and a thousand, what are we to understand by the one [in the text, connected as it is with the thousand whereby we understand perfection]? Is it not the beginning of a good life, even as the thousand representeth perfection? The contending with God [which is spoken of in the text] is the non-acknowledgment of that which is owed to Him, and the vain-glorying instead in our own strength. But an holy man should see, that even if one had received the gifts of perfection, and were to make them the grounds of self-glorifying, such an one would thereby lose all that he had received.

Sixth Responsory.

Hide not Thy face, &c., (p. 500.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

O that Thou wouldest hide me, &c., (p. 500.)

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Job (xxvii. 1.)[1]

MOREOVER, Job continued his parable and said: As God liveth, Who hath taken away my judgment, and the Almighty, Who hath vexed my soul, all the while my breath is in me, and the spirit of God is in my nostrils, my lips shall not speak wickedness, nor my tongue utter deceit. God forbid that I should acknowledge you to be right. Till I die I will not draw back from [asserting] mine integrity.

First Responsory.

My harp is turned, &c., (p. 500.)

Second Lesson.

MY righteousness I hold fast, and will not let it go, for mine heart doth not reprove me for anything in mine whole life. Let mine enemy be as the wicked, and he that riseth up against me as the unrighteous. For what is the hope of the hypocrite, though he hath gained, but God hold not his soul guiltless? Will God hear his cry when trouble cometh upon him? Or can he delight himself in the Almighty, and call alway upon God?

Second Responsory.

O that my sins, &c., (p. 500.)

Third Lesson.

I WILL teach you by the hand of God that which is with the Almighty, and will not conceal it. Behold all ye yourselves know it; why, then, do ye talk such groundless folly? This is the portion of a wicked man with God, and the heritage of the oppressors, which they shall receive of the Almighty. If his children be multiplied, it is for the sword—and his offspring shall not be satisfied with bread. Those that remain of him shall be buried in destruction; and his widows shall not weep.

Third Responsory.

Why do ye argue, &c., (p. 499.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Job (xxviii. 12.)

[2] WHERE shall wisdom be found? And where is the place of understanding? Man knoweth not the price thereof, neither is it found in the land of the easy-living. The depth saith: It is not in me; and the sea saith: It is not in me. It cannot be gotten for the purest gold, neither shall silver be weighed for the price thereof. It cannot be valued with the dyes of India, with the most precious sardonyx stone, or the sapphire.

First Responsory.

My flesh is clothed, &c., (p. 499.)

Second Lesson.

THE gold and the crystal cannot equal it, and the exchange of it shall not be for jewels of fine gold. Things noble and esteemed shall not be spoken of beside it, for wisdom is drawn from the secret places. The topaz of Ethiopia shall not equal it, neither shall it be valued with the purest colour. Whence then cometh wisdom? And where is the place of understanding? It is hid from the eyes of all living, and lieth unseen by the birds of the air. Destruction and death say: We have heard the fame thereof with our ears.

Second Responsory.

My days are few, &c., (p. 500.)

Third Lesson.

GOD understandeth the way thereof, and He knoweth the place thereof. For He looketh to the ends of the earth, and seeth under the whole heaven—even He Who maketh the weight for the winds, and weigheth the waters by measure. When He made a decree for the rain, and a way for the thunderstorms, then did He see it, and declare it, and prepare it, and search it out; and unto man He said: Behold, the fear of the LORD, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil is understanding.

Third Responsory.

Hide not Thy face, &c., (p. 500.)

---

[1] The intermediate chapters are filled with the discussion of Job and his friends upon the difficulty of reconciling God's dealings with His justice. Their arguments had been that Job must have committed some horrible sin, which pride prevented his confessing, or else, God neither could nor would have so punished him.

[2] Job still speaking.

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Job (xxxi. 1.)[1]

I MADE a covenant with mine eyes, not so much as to think upon a maid. For what portion would God have in me from above? and what inheritance the Almighty from on high? Is not destruction to the wicked? and to be set afar off unto the workers of iniquity? Doth not He see my ways, and count all my steps? If I have walked with vanity, or if my foot hath hasted to deceit, let Him weigh me in an even balance, and let God know mine integrity.

First Responsory.

O that Thou wouldest hide me, &c., (p. 500.)

Second Lesson.

IF my step hath turned out of the way, and mine heart walked after mine eyes, and if any blot hath cleaved to mine hands, then let me sow, and let another eat, and let mine offspring be rooted out. If mine heart have been deceived by a woman, or if I have laid wait at my neighbour's door, then let my wife be harlot unto another, and let others bow down upon her. For this is an heinous crime, and a most abominable wickedness. It is a fire that consumeth to destruction, and would root out all increase.

Second Responsory.

O that my sins, &c., (p. 500.)

Third Lesson.

IF I did despise the cause of my man-servant, or of my maid-servant, when they contended with me—what then shall I do when God riseth up to judge me? And when He demandeth of me, what shall I answer Him? Did not He That made me in the womb make him? And did not One fashion us in the womb? If I have withheld their desire from the poor, or have caused the eyes of the widow to wait—if I have eaten my morsel myself alone, and the fatherless hath not eaten thereof—(but compassion grew with me from my childhood, and came out with me from my mother's womb)—[if I have seen any perish for want of clothing, or any poor without covering,—if his loins have not blessed me, and if he were not warmed with the fleece of my sheep,—if I have lifted up my hand against the fatherless, when I saw my help in the gate,—then let mine arm fall from my shoulder-blade, and mine arm be broken from the bone.]

Third Responsory.

Why do ye argue, &c., (p. 499.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Job (xxxviii. 1.)[2]

THEN the LORD answered Job out of the whirl-wind, and said:—Who is this that darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge? Gird up thy loins like a man, for I will demand of thee, and answer thou Me. Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? Declare—if thou hast understanding. Who hath laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest? or who hath stretched the line upon it? Whereupon are the foundations thereof fastened? or who laid the corner-stone thereof, when the morning stars sang My praise together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy—?

First Responsory.

What! shall we receive, &c., (p. 499.)

Second Lesson.

WHO shut up the sea with doors, when it brake forth, as if it had issued out of the womb, when I made the cloud the garment thereof, and thick darkness a swaddling-band for it? I set it within such bounds as I would, and set bars and doors, and said:—Hitherto shalt thou come and no farther; and here shall thy proud waves be stayed. Hast thou commanded the morning since thy days, and caused the dayspring to know his place? Yea, hast thou taken hold of the uttermost parts of the earth and made them to quiver, and shaken the wicked out of it?[3]

Second Responsory.

My sighing cometh, &c., (p. 499.)

Third Lesson.

[4] THE seal shall be restored as clay, and shall stand as a garment. From the wicked their light shall be withholden, and the high arm shall be broken. Hast thou entered into the springs of the sea? or hast thou walked in the search of the depth? Have the gates of death been opened unto thee? or hast thou seen the doors of the shadow [of death]? Hast thou perceived the breadth of the earth? Declare, if thou knowest it all—where the way is where light dwelleth, and where is the place of darkness, that thou canst trace everything to its beginning, and knowest the paths to the house thereof.

Third Responsory.

Why do ye argue, &c., (p. 499.)

---

[1] Job still speaking.

[2] The discourse of Job continues to the end of ch. xxx. With ch. xxxii. it is announced that the original disputants now became silent, but "Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite" incensed at their lame and impotent conclusion, begins to address them. His discourse lasts to the end of ch. xxxvii. and xxxviii. begins abruptly as above.

[3] Abp. Kenrick says that De Rossi "refers this to" [God's action by means of] "the morning, which seems to take the earth at both extremities, and to shake from its surface evil-doers, who have abused the darkness for the perpetration of crime."

[4] The description of morning is continued. "As clay receives an impression from a seal, so the earth receives new form and appearance from the light of morning" and "the light becomes as a garment for the earth." (Abp. Kenrick.) Compare also the Revised Version.

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Job (xl. 1.)

THEN answered[1] the Lord unto Job out of the whirl-wind, and said:—Gird up thy loins like a man; I will demand of thee, and declare thou unto Me. Wilt thou disannul My judgment? Wilt thou condemn Me, that thou mayest justify thyself? Hast thou an arm like God? or canst thou thunder with a voice like Him? Deck thyself now with majesty and excellency, and array thyself with glory and beauty!

First Responsory.

My flesh is clothed, &c., (p. 499.)

Second Lesson.

SCATTER the haughty in thy rage, and behold every one that is proud, and abase him. Look on every one that is proud, and bring him low, and tread down the wicked in their place. Hide them in the dust together, and plunge their faces into the pit. Then will I also confess unto thee that thine own right hand can save thee.

Behold, the behemoth,[2] which I made with thee. He eateth grass as an ox. His strength is in his loins, and his force in the navel of his belly.

Second Responsory.

My days are few, &c., (p. 500.)

Third Lesson. (xlii. 1.)

THEN Job answered the Lord, and said:—I know that Thou canst do everything, and that no thought can be withholden from Thee. "Who is he that hideth counsel without knowledge?"[3] Therefore have I spoken foolishly, and concerning things which are utterly beyond the reach of my knowledge. "Hear, and I will speak; I will demand of thee, and answer thou Me."[3] I have heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth Thee. Wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes.

Third Responsory.

Hide not Thy face, &c., (p. 500.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Job (xlii. 7.)

AND after the Lord had spoken these words unto Job, He[4] said to Eliphaz the Temanite: My wrath is kindled against thee, and against thy two friends, for ye have not spoken the thing that is right in My sight, as My servant Job hath. Therefore take unto you now seven bullocks and seven rams, and go to My servant Job, and offer up for yourselves a burnt-offering. And My servant Job shall pray for you—for him will I accept—that your folly may not be imputed unto you; in that ye have not spoken of Me the thing that is right, like My servant Job.

First Responsory.

O that Thou wouldest, &c., (p. 500.)

Second Lesson.

SO Eliphaz the Temanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite went, and did according as the Lord commanded them; the Lord also accepted Job. The Lord also gave ear unto the supplication of Job, when he prayed for his friends. And the Lord gave Job twice as much as he had before. Then came there unto him all his brethren, and all his sisters, and all they that had been of his acquaintance before, and did eat bread with him in his house; and they bemoaned him, and comforted him over all the evil that the Lord had brought upon him; every man also gave him one sheep, and one ring[5] of gold.

Second Responsory.

O that my sins, &c., (p. 500.)

Third Lesson.

AND the Lord blessed the latter days of Job more than his beginning. For he had fourteen thousand sheep, and six thousand camels, and a thousand yoke of oxen, and a thousand she-asses. He had also seven sons and three daughters. And he called the name of the first "Day," and the name of the second "Cassia," and the name of the third "Horn-of-paint," and in all the land were no women found so fair as the daughters of Job; and their father gave them inheritance among their brethren. After this lived Job an hundred and forty years, and saw his sons, and his son's sons, even four generations; and he died, old and full of days.

Third Responsory.

Why do ye argue, &c., (p. 499.)

Vespers are of the Feast of the Seven Sorrows of the Blessed Virgin, unless they be supplanted by that of her holy Name, or that of the Octave of her Birth, or that of the Apostle St Matthew—in which case the Feast of her Sorrows is moved on to the next Sunday which is not occupied by a Double of the First or Second

---

[1] At the end of ch. xxxix. Job cries out that he is silenced, and cannot say any more.

[2] The behemoth is described till the end of the chapter, and theologians, naturalists, &c., are not agreed as to what animal is meant, though the common opinion is that it is the hippopotamus. Similar doubts exist about the leviathan in this and the next chapter (generally believed to be the crocodile), but all naturalists will read with delight this appeal of the Creator, in which He cites His works as the living evidence of His being, power, wisdom, and goodness. The description of an horse (xxxix. 19-25) is particularly celebrated.

[3] Quotations, of which he acknowledges the justice.

[4] The Hebrew repeats the Divine Name.

[5] A "sheep" is understood to mean here a particular piece of money which bore the image of a sheep, somewhat as big dog and little dog are names among the common people of Spain for a penny and a halfpenny; a "ring" perhaps denotes pierced money, like that still used by the Chinese, but anciently elsewhere also.

Class. In any case, no more of the Office of this Third Sunday is said than the Antiphon forming part of the Commemoration of the Sunday at Vespers on Saturday evening, which is as follows:

Antiphon. Remember not, Lord, mine offences, nor the offences of my forefathers, neither take Thou vengeance of my sins. (Tob. iii. 3.)

Verse. Let the evening prayer ascend unto Thee, O Lord.

Answer. And let there descend upon us Thy mercy.

Prayer of the Sunday.

Third Sunday of September.

The Third Lord's Day of September.

This day is always occupied by a festival.

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of Tobias (i. 1.)

TOBIAS, of the tribe and state of Nephtali, (which is in the upper parts of Galilee above Naasson, after the way that leadeth unto the West, having the city of Saphed upon the left,) the same was taken a prisoner in the days of Salmanasar King of the Assyrians, but albeit he was in captivity yet he swerved not out of the way of truth. All things whatsoever that he had, he shared them, day by day, with his brethren of the captivity that were of his own lineage. And being the youngest of all the tribe of Nephtali, yet behaved he himself in nowise as a child.

First Responsory.

[1] I entreat Thee, O Lord, that Thou wouldest loose me from this reproach, or that Thou wouldest take me away from the earth. Remember not mine offences nor the offences of my forefathers, neither take Thou vengeance of my sins; for Thou, O Lord, art a Redeemer unto all that hope in Thee.

Verse. For all Thy judgments are just, and all Thy ways are mercy and truth. And now, O Lord, remember me.

Answer. Remember not mine offences nor the offences of my forefathers, neither take Thou vengeance of my sins; for Thou, O Lord, art a Redeemer unto all that hope in Thee.

Second Lesson.

MOREOVER, when all men sought after the golden calves which Jeroboam King of Israël had made, this man alone separated himself from the company of all of them; and went unto Jerusalem unto the Temple of the Lord, and worshipped there the Lord God of Israël, and offered faithfully his first-fruits and his tithes, and every third year he gave a tithe unto the proselytes and strangers. These things and the like did he, according to the law of God, when he was a child. Furthermore, when he was come to the age of a man, he married Anna of his own kindred, and of her he begat a son, unto whom he gave his own name, and trained him up from a child to fear God, and to abhor all evil. (Third Lesson for Sunday.) Therefore, when he was carried away captive to Ninive, with his wife and his son, and all his tribe, and they all did eat of the bread of the Gentiles, he kept his own soul clean, and never defiled himself with their meat. And because he remembered the Lord with all his heart, God gave him grace before Salmanasar the King, and he gave him power to go wheresoever he would, and freedom to do whatsoever he pleased. He went therefore unto all that were of the captivity, and exhorted them with wholesome words.

Second Responsory.

[2] In all seasons bless God, and ask of Him to order thy goings, and in all seasons let thy counsels be steadfastly in Him.

Verse. Seek faithfully and with all thy strength to do such things as please Him.

Answer. And in all seasons let thy counsels be steadfastly in Him.

Third Lesson. (First Lesson of Monday.) (ii. 1.)

AND after these things, when there was a Feast of the Lord, and there was a good dinner prepared in the house of Tobias, he said unto his son: Go and bring some out of our brethren that fear God, that they may dine with us. But after that he was gone out, he came again, and said unto him, that one of the children of Israël had been slain, and was lying in the market-place. Then straightway he started up, and left his dinner, and went fasting unto the dead body, and took it up, and carried it to his own house secretly, that he might bury it cautiously after the going-down of the sun. (Second Lesson of Monday.) But all his neighbours chided him, and said: Already thou hast been condemned to death for this matter, and hardly didst thou escape from the power of the grave: and dost thou bury the dead again? But Tobias feared God more than the King, and took away the bodies of them that were slain, and hid them in his house, and buried them in the midst of the night. So it came to pass that on a certain day he returned weary from the burial, and came into his own house, and lay down by the wall and slept, and as he was asleep there fell upon his eyes warm dung out of a swallow's nest, and he became blind. This trial did the Lord allow to befall him, that his patience, like the patience of holy Job, might be an ensample to them that come after him. (Third Lesson of Monday.) For from a child he had alway feared God, and kept His commandments, and therefore, when the affliction of blindness came upon him, he was not angered against God, but remained unshaken in the fear of God, giving God thanks all the days of his life. For even as kings mocked at blessed Job, so did his kinsmen and his cousins mock at his life, saying: Where now is thine hope, for the which thou didst give alms and bury the dead? But Tobias rebuked them, saying: Speak not thus, seeing that we are the children of the Saints, and that we look for that life which God will give unto them that deal never falsely in His covenant.

[2] iv. 20; xiv. 10.

Third Responsory.

[1] My son, remember that we have but a frail life. If thou fear God thou shalt have great goods.

Verse. Be mindful of Him, and beware lest ever thou transgress His commandments.

Answer. If thou fear God thou shalt have great goods.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. If thou fear God thou shalt have great goods.

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Tobias (ii. 11.)

NOW Anna his wife went to do women's work every day, and she brought home such living as she could obtain by the work of her hands. And so it came to pass that she received a kid of the goats, and brought it home. And when her husband heard it cry, he said: See that haply it be not stolen; render it to the owners; for it is not lawful to eat nor to touch anything that is stolen.

First Responsory.

[2] Our poverty was enough for us, that it might have been accounted riches. O that the money had never been, for which thou hast sent away our son, the staff of our old age!

Verse. Alas! my son, wherefore have we sent thee wandering, even thee, the light of our eyes!

Answer. The staff of our old age!

Second Lesson.

WHEREUPON his wife was enraged against him, and said: It is manifest that thine hope is disappointed, and that thine alms come not back unto thee again. And with these and the like words did she revile him. (iii.) Then Tobias groaned and began to weep, and prayed, and said: O Lord, Thou art just, and all Thy judgments are just, and all Thy ways are mercy, and truth, and judgment. And now, O Lord, remember me, and take not vengeance of my sins, neither remember mine offences, nor the offences of my forefathers.

Second Responsory.

[3] Bless the God of heaven, and confess Him before all living, for He hath had mercy upon you.

Verse. Bless Him, and sing praises unto Him, and tell of all His marvellous works.

Answer. For He hath had mercy upon you.

Third Lesson.

FOR we obeyed not Thy commandments, wherefore Thou hast delivered us for a spoil, and unto captivity, and unto death, and for a proverb, and a reproach to all the nations among whom we are dispersed. And now, O Lord, great are Thy judgments; because we have not kept Thy commandments, neither have walked in truth before Thee. And now, O Lord, deal with me as seemeth best unto Thee, and command my spirit to be taken from me in peace, for it is profitable for me to die rather than to live.

Third Responsory.

[3] It is time for me to return unto Him That sent me, but bless ye God, and tell of all His marvellous works.

Verse. Confess Him before all living, for He hath had mercy upon you.

Answer. But bless ye God, and tell of all His marvellous works.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. But bless ye God, and tell of all His marvellous works.

Ember Wednesday.

Fourth Day in the September Week of Quarter-Tense.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark (ix. 16.)

AT that time: One of the multitude answered and said unto JESUS: Master, I have brought unto Thee my son, which hath a dumb spirit. And so on.

Homily by the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow.] (Bk. iii. ch. 38, on Mark ix.)

Concerning this possessed person whom the Lord healed, after that He was come down from the mount, Mark saith that he was deaf and dumb, and Matthew (xvii. 15) that he was lunatic.[4] He was a figure of them of whom it is said: "A fool changeth as the moon," (Ecclus. xxvii. 12.) These are they who continue never in one stay, but change now to one sin, and now to another, waxing and waning—dumb, in that they confess not the faith; deaf, in that they have no ears for the word of truth. They foam at the mouth also, and pine away with folly. For it is the way with idiots, and swooners, and stupified, to foam their spittle out at their mouths. They gnash their teeth when they are inflamed with the heat of passion. They wither up in the paralysis of sloth: and live nerveless lives unbraced by any strong exercise.

First Responsory.

We have heard of the tribulation of those cities, which they have suffered, and we have fainted. Fear and confusion of mind are fallen upon us. Even the mountains will not give us a refuge. Lord, have mercy.

---

[1] iv. 23, 6.

[2] v. 25, 24, 23.

[3] xii. 6, 18, 20.

[4] I.e., moon-struck.

Verse. [1] We have sinned like our forefathers, we have done unjustly, and wrought iniquity.

Answer. Lord, have mercy.

Second Lesson.

THE father saith: "And I spake to Thy disciples, that they should cast him out, and they could not." Here he maketh a sort of accusation against the Apostles. But that cures cannot be wrought is sometimes owing, not to the powerlessness of them that would heal, but to the want of faith in them that are to be healed—as saith the Lord: "According to your faith be it unto you." (Matth. ix. 29.) He answereth him, and saith: "O faithless generation, how long shall I be with you?" The meek and lowly One, Who, as a lamb before his shearers, is dumb, so opened not His Mouth, was not wearied out of patience, nor did He break out into words of passion, but He spake as a physician might speak, who saw that the sick man did contrary to his commands. "Wherefore should I come unto thine house? How long am I to throw away the exercise of my skill, while I order one thing and thou dost another?"

Second Responsory.

In all seasons, &c., (p. 507.)

Third Lesson.

"AND He said unto them: This kind can come forth by nothing but by prayer and fasting." While He teacheth the Apostles how the very worst kind of devil must be driven out, He giveth unto all of us an instruction unto life, that we may know that the most grievous trials, either from unclean spirits, or from men, are to be overcome by fasting and prayer. The wrath of the Lord also, when it is kindled to take vengeance of our sins, can be turned away by this remedy only. To fast, in a general sense, is not only to abstain from meats, but to restrain oneself from all the inticements of the flesh, and from all evil passions. So also, to pray, is not only to call in words for the mercy of God, but also, in all things which we do, in earnestness of faith to worship our Maker.

Third Responsory.

My son, remember, &c., (p. 508.)

LAUDS.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. This kind of devils * can come forth by nothing but by prayer and fasting.

Long Preces.

Prayer.

WE pray Thee, O Lord, that the healing power of Thy mercy may give strength to our weakness, that those things which do pass away by their own frailty, may be renewed again by Thy clemency. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Long Preces at Prime.

Prayer at Terce, Sext, and None as at Lauds, and Preces.

At Vespers, Preces, but Prayer of last Sunday.

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Tobias (xii. 1.) [2]

THEN Tobias called his son unto him, and said unto him: What can we give to that holy man that is come with thee? And Tobias answered and said unto his father: Father, what wages shall we give unto him? or what can be a sufficient reward for all the kindness that he hath done? He hath led me, and brought me again in safety, and himself received the money from Gabel, and made me to have my wife, and driven away from her the devil [that troubled her], and made her parents to rejoice, and delivered me myself from being swallowed up by the fish. Thee also he hath made to see the light of heaven, and by him are we filled with all good things. For these things what sufficient reward shall we give him? But, I pray thee, my father, ask him if haply it please him to take half of all that hath been brought.

First Responsory.

I entreat Thee, O Lord, &c., (p. 507.)

Second Lesson.

SO the father and the son called him, and took him apart, and began to ask him if it would please him to take half of all that had been brought. Then he said unto them secretly: Bless the God of Heaven, and confess Him before all living, for He hath had mercy upon you. Verily it is a good thing to keep the king's secret, but to show forth and to acknowledge the works of God is honourable. Prayer is good with fasting, and to lay up alms rather than to lay up stores of gold. For alms doth deliver from death, and the same it is which purgeth away sin, and causeth to find mercy and everlasting life. But they that work sin and iniquity are enemies of their own soul.

Second Responsory.

In all seasons, &c., (p. 507.)

Third Lesson.

THEREFORE I show you the truth, and will not keep an hidden matter back from you. When thou didst pray with tears, and bury the dead, and leave thy dinner, and hide the dead in thine house by day, and bury them by night, I did bring up thy prayer before the Lord. And because thou wast accepted with God, it was needs that temptation should try thee. And now the Lord sent me to heal thee, and to deliver Sara thy son's wife from a devil. For I am the Angel Raphaël, one of the seven, which stand before the Lord. And when they heard it, they were troubled, and quaked, and fell upon their faces on the ground. And the angel said unto them: Peace be unto you; fear not.

[1] Judith vii. 19.

[2] The intermediate chapters contain an account of the adventures of Tobias the younger, when, accompanied by a mysterious stranger, he made a journey to recover some money for his father.

Third Responsory.

My son, remember, &c., (p. 508.)

Ember Friday.

Sixth Day in the September Week of Quarter-Tense.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (vii. 36.)

AT that time: One of the Pharisees desired JESUS that He would eat with him. And He went into the Pharisee's house, and sat down to meat. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (33*rd on the Gospels.*)

Of what is the Pharisee that was exalted by self-righteousness a type, but of the Jewish people? And of what the woman which was a sinner and came and wept at the Lord's feet, but of the conversion of the Gentiles? She "brought an alabaster box of ointment, and stood at His feet behind Him weeping, and began to wash His Feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed His Feet, and anointed them with the ointment." Of us, therefore, even of us, was that woman a type, if after our sins we turn unto the Lord with all our heart, and imitate the example of her repentant grief. And of what is the ointment a type, but of the sweet savour of a good reputation? Whence also Paul saith: "[God maketh manifest the savour of His knowledge by us] in every place; [for] we are unto God a sweet savour of Christ." (2 Cor. ii. 15.)

First Responsory.

Our poverty was enough, &c., (p. 508.)

Second Lesson.

IF therefore we do good works, whereby we gain for the Church the savour of good reputation, what do we but pour ointment upon the body of the Lord? But the woman stood at the Feet of JESUS, behind Him: we stood opposite to the Feet of the Lord, what time we were in sin, and went contrary unto His ways. But when we turn again, and truly repent us of our sins, we stand behind His Feet, for we follow His footsteps against Whom we once contended. The woman washed His Feet with her tears; and we do in very deed the same when we show the tenderness of sympathy to any of His humbler members, when we feel with His Saints in their tribulations, when we make their woes our own.

Second Responsory.

Bless the God of heaven, &c., (p. 508.)

Third Lesson.

WE wipe the Lord's Feet with our hair when we give charity, even out of such things as we have ourselves no need of, to His holy ones, with whom we feel in their trials, in as far as our heart so sympathizeth, that the bounty of our hand showeth the truth of our compassion. He washeth the Feet of the Redeemer, but wipeth them not with his hair, who feeleth for the sufferings of his neighbours, but nevertheless, relieveth them not, even out of such things as he himself hath no need for. He weepeth, but wipeth not, who offereth words of tenderness, but sootheth not sorrow by giving such things as be lacking. The woman kissed the Feet; and we do fully the same, if we warmly love those whom out of bounty we support, so that the neediness of our neighbour is not grievous unto us, nor the penury which we relieve a weariness to us, nor, when the hand is giving what is needful, the heart is untouched by compassion.

Third Responsory.

It is time for me, &c., (p. 508.)

LAUDS.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. A woman in the city which was a sinner stood at the Lord's Feet behind Him, * and began to wash His Feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed His Feet, and anointed them with the ointment.

Long Preces.

Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that we who every year do earnestly renew the sacred observance of this Fast, may please Thee both in body and in soul. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Long Preces at Prime.

Prayer at Terce, Sext, and None as at Lauds; and Preces.
At Vespers, Preces, but Prayer of last Sunday.

Ember Saturday.

Sabbath in the September Week of Quarter-Tense.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xiii. 6.)

AT that time: JESUS spake unto the multitudes this parable: A certain man had a fig-tree planted in his vineyard, and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (31*st on the Gospels.*)

Our Lord and Redeemer speaketh unto us sometimes by words, and sometimes by deeds, sometimes one thing by words, and another by deeds, and sometimes the same thing both by word and deed. In the portion of the Gospel which hath this day been read, ye have heard, my brethren, two things, the parable of the fig-tree and the history of the woman which was bowed together. In both is a manifestation of the Lord's mercy, but in the one by a parable, in the other by an example. But the barren fig-tree signifieth the same thing as doth the woman bowed together, and the patience shown to the fig-tree the same thing as doth the healing of the woman bowed together.

First Responsory.

We have heard of the tribulation, &c., (p. 508.)

Second Lesson.

OF what is the fig-tree a type, but of mankind? Of what is the woman bowed together by a spirit of infirmity a type, but of the same mankind? Man was originally placed in a garden like the fig-tree, and created upright like the woman, but man fell away by his own wilful fault; like the fig-tree he brought forth no fruit; like the woman he ceased to stand straight. When he wilfully went into sin, because he would not bring forth the fruit of obedience, he lost his uprightness. The nature which had been created in the image of God, continued not in honour, but cast aside the state wherein it had been placed and made. The lord of the vineyard came thrice to the fig-tree, for God hath come in hope, and in warning, seeking fruit from mankind under three successive dispensations, that is to say, before the law, under the law, and under grace.

Second Responsory.

In all seasons, &c., (p. 507.)

Third Lesson.

HE came before the law, in that by natural understanding, He let all know by example of Himself, what and how they should do toward their neighbour. In the law He came teaching. After the law He came by grace, opening, manifesting His merciful Presence. But after all these three years He yet hath to complain that He findeth no fruit upon the fig-tree, for there are still some degraded minds which the inborn voice of the natural law doth not control, which the commandments do not teach, and which the wonders of the Incarnation itself do not convert. Of what is the dresser of the vineyard a type, but of the Episcopacy? For these are they who have the government in the Church, and are therefore truly called the dressers of the Lord's vineyard.

Third Responsory.

My son, remember, &c., (p. 508.)

LAUDS.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Give light, O Lord, to them that sit in darkness, * and guide our feet into the way of peace, O Thou the God of Israël.

Long Preces.

Prayer.

O ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, Who hast chosen healthy fasting, as a mean to do good both to bodies and to souls, we humbly implore Thy Majesty, that the godly prayer of such as be fasting this day, may turn away Thy wrath, and may be effectual to gain for us Thy blessing in time and in eternity. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Long Preces at Prime.

Prayer at Terce, Sext, and None, as at Lauds, and Preces.

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [1] O Adonaï, O Lord God, * Thou art great and glorious, Who hast given salvation into the hand of a woman; graciously hear the prayers of Thy servants.

No Preces, and Prayer of the ensuing Sunday.

Fourth Sunday of September.

The Fourth Lord's Day of September.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of Judith (i. 5.)

NOW Arphaxad, King of the Medes, had brought down many nations under his dominion, and he built a strong city, and called it Ecbatané, of stones squared and hewn. He made the height of the wall thereof seventy cubits, and the breadth thirty cubits, and set up the towers thereof an hundred cubits high. And the towers were twenty feet every way, four square; and he made the gates thereof as high as the tower; and he made his boast, like a mighty man, in the strength of his army and in the fame of his chariots.

First Responsory.

O Adonaï, O Lord God, Thou art great and glorious, Who hast given salvation into the hand of a woman; graciously hear the prayers of Thy servants.

Verse. Blessed art Thou, O Lord, Who failest none that put their trust in Thee, and humblest such as boast themselves in their own strength.

Answer. Graciously hear the prayers of Thy servants.

Second Lesson.

THEREFORE in the twelfth year of his reign, Nebuchadnezzar King of the Assyrians, which reigned in the great city Nineveh, fought against Arphaxad and took him in the great plain which is called Ragan, which bordereth upon Euphrates, and Tigris, and Jadason, in the field of Erioch, King of the Elicians. Then was the kingdom of Nebuchadnezzar exalted, and his heart was lifted up; and he sent messengers unto all the dwellers in Cilicia, and in Damascus, and in Lebanon, and unto the tribes that are in Carmel and Cedar, and unto them that dwelt in Galilee in the great plain of Esdraelon, and unto all that were in Samaria, and beyond Jordan even unto Jerusalem, and all the land of Jesse, until thou comest unto the borders of Æthiopia.

Second Responsory.

We have heard of the tribulation, &c., (p. 508.)

Third Lesson.

UNTO all these did Nebuchadnezzar King of the Assyrians send messengers, but they all with one consent gainsaid his messengers, and sent them away empty, and cast them out without honour. Then was the wrath of King Nebuchadnezzar kindled against all that land, and he swore by his throne and by his kingdom that he would avenge himself on all those countries. In the thirteenth year of King Nebuchadnezzar, on the two-and-twentieth day of the first month, there was talk in the house of Nebuchadnezzar King of the Assyrians, that he should avenge himself. So he called unto him all his elders, and his captains, and his fighting men, and made known unto them his secret counsel, and declared his thought to bring the whole earth into subjection unto his kingdom.

[1] Judith xvi. 16.

Third Responsory.

[1] The Lord bless thee by His power, Who hath brought our enemies to nought through thee. And may the praise of thee never fail from the mouth of men.

Verse. Blessed be the Lord, Who hath created the heaven and the earth, because that He hath so glorified thy name this day.

Answer. And may the praise of thee never fail from the mouth of men.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And may the praise of thee never fail from the mouth of men.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book upon Elijah and Fasting, written by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (ch. 9.)

"IT is not for kings to drink wine, nor for princes strong drink, lest they drink and forget the law." (Prov. xxxi. 5.) The rulers drank wine even unto drunkenness, who planned to deliver themselves into the hand of Holofernes, captain of the host of the King of the Assyrians; but the woman Judith drank not, who fasted all the days of her widowhood, saving the solemn Feast-days. She went forth in the harness of this abstinence, and over-reached the whole army of the Assyrians. By the clear thought of her soberness she took away the head of Holofernes, kept her chastity, and carried off the victory.

Fourth Responsory.

[2] We know no strange God before the Lord. In Him we trust. He despiseth us not, neither putteth He away His salvation from our nation.

Verse. His mercy let us seek with tears, and humble our souls before Him.

Answer. He despiseth us not, neither putteth He away His salvation from our nation.

Fifth Lesson.

GIRDED with fasting, she entered the camp of the strangers; he lay soaked in wine, so that he could not feel the blow that slew him. And thus the fast of one woman overthrew the countless armies of the Assyrians. Esther also became fairer by fasting; for the Lord gave favour unto her for her soberness. She delivered all her nation, that is, the whole people of the Jews, from the fierceness of persecution, so that she brought down the King himself under her will.

Fifth Responsory.

[3] O Lord, Ruler of the heavens and of the earth, Maker of the waters, King of every creature, graciously hear the prayer of Thy servants.

Verse. Thou, O Lord, unto Whom the supplications of the humble and meek are alway well-pleasing—

Answer. Graciously hear the prayer of Thy servants.

Sixth Lesson.

THUS also [Esther] who fasted three days, and washed her body with water, found greater favour, and obtained vengeance, whereas Haman, who boasted himself at the King's table, paid the penalty of his drunkenness, even while yet he was in his cups. Fasting, therefore, is a sacrifice of reconciliation, a means of strength, whereby in the might of grace, women wax manful. Fasting knoweth not usury, nor the gain of the usurer; the faster's table smelleth not of usury, but the fast itself giveth favour to them that sit at meat. A banquet is all the pleasanter after hunger, whereas by constant use it becometh unattractive, and when it is long carried on cometh to be lightly esteemed. Fasting is a good sauce for meat. The keener the appetite, the more toothsome the food.

Sixth Responsory.

O Lord God, That breakest the battles from of old, lift up Thine arm against the Gentiles, that devise evil against Thy servants. And let Thy right hand be glorified in us.

Verse. Throw down their strength in Thy power, and bring down their force in Thy wrath.

Answer. And let Thy right hand be glorified in us.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And let Thy right hand be glorified in us.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

Strengthen me, O King, Who reignest over the holy ones. Put Thou in my mouth clear and well-sounding words.

Verse. O Lord, King of all forces, turn back their device upon themselves.

Answer. Put Thou in my mouth clear and well-sounding words.

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Judith (iv. 1.)

---

[1] xiii. 22, 24, 25.

[2] Cf. viii. 19, 17, 16.

[3] Cf. ix. 17, 16.

NOW the children of Israël, that dwelt in Judea, were exceedingly afraid of Holofernes.[1] Trouble and consternation took hold upon them, lest he should do unto Jerusalem and unto the Temple of the Lord as he had done unto the other cities, and unto their temples. Therefore they sent into all the coasts of Samaria, even unto Jericho, and possessed themselves beforehand of all the tops of the high mountains, and fortified their villages, and laid up victuals for the provision of war.

First Responsory.

O Adonaï, &c., (First Responsory on Sunday.)

Second Lesson.

ALSO Eliakim the Priest wrote to all them that dwelt over against Esdraelon, toward the open country, near to Dothain, and unto all them through whose country the way [of the Assyrians] might lie, to take possession of the steep places of the hills, whereby they might essay to go up toward Jerusalem, and to hold the passages wheresover the way was narrow between the mountains. And the children of Israël did as Eliakim, the Priest of the Lord, had commanded them. Then all the people cried unto the Lord with great fervency, and humbled their souls in fastings and in prayers, both they and their wives.

Second Responsory.

We have heard of the tribulation, &c., (p. 508.)

Third Lesson.

AND the Priests clothed themselves in sackcloth, and the little children cast themselves down before the Temple of the Lord; and they put sackcloth about the Altar of the Lord, and cried to the Lord God of Israël all with one consent that their children might not be given for a prey, and their wives for a spoil, and their cities to destruction, and their holy things to profanation, and for a reproach for the Gentiles to rejoice at. Then Eliakim, the High Priest of the Lord, went about through all Israël, and spake unto them, saying: Know ye of a surety that the Lord will hear your prayers, if ye continue in fastings and in supplications before the Lord.

Third Responsory.

The Lord bless thee, &c., (p. 512.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Judith (viii. 1.)[2]

AND it came to pass, when Judith the widow heard thereof, (which was the daughter of Merari, the son of Idox, the son of Joseph, the son of Oziah, the son of Elai, the son of Jamnor, the son of Gideon, the son of Raphaim, the son of Achitob, the son of Melkiah, the son of Enan, the son of Nathaniah, the son of Salathiel, the son of Simeon, the son of Reuben.) And her husband had been Manasseh, who died in the days of the barley harvest; for, as he stood overseeing them that bound sheaves in the field, the heat came upon his head; and he died in Bethulia, his own city, and there was buried with his fathers. And so Judith was left a widow three years and six months.

First Responsory.

We know no strange God, &c., (Fourth Responsory on Sunday, p. 512.)

Second Lesson.

AND she made her a closet upon the top of her house, to shut herself up therein with her maids and dwell there; and put on sackcloth upon her loins, and fasted all her days, save the Sabbaths, and the New Moons, and the Feasts of the house of Israël. She was also very beautiful to behold; and her husband had left her much wealth, and many servants, and lands full of cattle and flocks of sheep. And with all this she was most honourable, for she feared the Lord greatly, and there was none that gave her an ill word.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Ruler, &c., (p. 512.)

Third Lesson.

WHEN then she had heard that Ozias had promised to deliver up the city after five days, she sent unto the elders Chabri and Charmi. And they came unto her. And she said unto them: What is this, whereunto Ozias hath bound himself, to deliver the city unto the Assyrians, unless within five days there come help unto you? And who be ye, that ye should tempt the Lord?

Third Responsory.

O Lord God, That breakest, &c., (p. 512.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Judith (x. 1.)

AND it came to pass, after that she had ceased to cry unto the Lord, she rose up from the place where she had cast herself down before the Lord. And she called her maid, and went down into her house, and pulled off the sackcloth which she had on, and put off the garments of her widowhood, and washed her body, and anointed herself with precious ointment, and parted the hair of her head, and put on a tire upon her head, and put on her the garments of her gladness, and she put sandals upon her feet, and put about her her bracelets, and her lilies, and her ear-rings, and her rings, and decked herself bravely with all her ornaments. And the Lord also made her to seem more comely.

[1] Captain of the Assyrian host.

[2] The intermediate chapters describe the progress of the Assyrians, and how they beleaguered the city of Bethulia, the inhabitants of which prepared to surrender, unless relieved by a certain day.

First Responsory.

Strengthen me, O King, &c., (p. 512.)

Second Lesson.

AND it came to pass, as she went down the mountain, that, about the dawning of the day, the first watch of the Assyrians met her, and took her, and asked her, saying: Whence comest thou? and whither goest thou? And she answered: I am a daughter of the Hebrews, and have fled from them, because I know that they shall be given you to be consumed, for that they set you at nought, and are no more willing to deliver themselves up, that they may find mercy in your sight.

Second Responsory.

We have heard of the tribulation, &c., (p. 508.)

Third Lesson.

AND they brought her to the tent of Holofernes, and shewed him of her. And when Judith was come before him, Holofernes was straightway taken with her eyes. And his servants said unto him: Who shall despise the Hebrews, that have among them such fair women, that it is enough to fight against them for these alone? And when Judith saw Holofernes sitting under a canopy woven with purple, and gold, and emerald, and precious stones, she fell down upon her face upon the ground, and did reverence unto him.

Third Responsory.

The Lord bless thee, &c., (p. 512.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

Note. If this be the last week of September, the Scripture Lessons read on this Thursday, Friday, and Saturday are those of the Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday of the Fifth Week, with the Responsories of the Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. But if September have five weeks, the following are read.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Judith (xii. 10.)

AND it came to pass that in the fourth day Holofernes made a feast to his own servants, and said to Bagoas his eunuch: Go now, and persuade this Hebrew woman to come of her own accord, and dwell with me. For it is a shame among the Assyrians, if a woman laugh a man to scorn, so that she come away from him scatheless. Then came Bagoas unto Judith, and said: Let not this fair damsel fear to come to my lord, and to be honoured in his presence, to eat with him, and to drink wine in merriment. Then said Judith unto him: Who am I now, that I should gainsay my lord?

First Responsory.

O Adonaï, &c., (p. 511.)

Second Lesson. (xiii. 1.)

NOW when the evening was come, his servants made haste unto their own lodgings, and Bagoas shut his tent without, and departed. And they were all overcome with wine; and Judith was left alone in the tent. And Holofernes was lying along on his bed, for he was filled with wine. And Judith commanded her maid to stand without the chamber, and to watch. And Judith stood before the bed, and prayed with tears, her lips moving silently, saying: Strengthen me, O Lord God of Israël, and look at this present upon the works of mine hands, that Thou mayest exalt Jerusalem, Thine own city, even as Thou hast promised; and that I may finish that which I have believed that I could do by Thine help.

Second Responsory.

We have heard, &c., (p. 508.)

Third Lesson.

AND when she had so spoken, she came to the pillar which was at the head of his bed, and took down his fauchion that was hanging thereon. And she drew it, and took hold of the hair of his head, and said: Strengthen me, O Lord God, in this hour. And she smote him twice upon his neck, and cut off his head from him, and pulled down the canopy from the pillars, and tumbled his body down. And anon she went forth, and gave Holofernes his head to her maid, and bade her to put it into her bag.

Third Responsory.

The Lord bless thee, &c., (p. 512.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Judith (xv. 1.)

AND when all the army heard how that Holofernes was beheaded, their mind and their wit departed from them, and being driven only of fear and trembling, they fled for safety, so that no man spake unto his neighbour; but bowed his head, and left all, and made haste to escape from the Hebrews, (of whom they heard that they were coming harnessed upon them,) flying by the way of the plains, and the path-ways in the hills. And when the children of Israël saw that they fled, they followed after them. And they went down after them, with blowing of trumpets and shouting.

First Responsory.

We know no strange God, &c., (p. 512.)

Second Lesson.

THEN sent Ozias messengers throughout all the cities and coasts of Israël. And every coast, and every city sent out their young men after them, harnessed, and followed after them with the edge of the sword, even unto the uttermost parts of their coasts. And the residue that dwelt at Bethulia, fell upon the camp of the Assyrians, and took away the prey which the Assyrians had left behind them when they fled, and were greatly enriched.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Ruler, &c., (p. 512.)

Third Lesson.

THEN Joachim the high priest came from Jerusalem to Bethulia, with all his Priests, to see Judith. And when she was come out unto him, they all blessed her with one voice, saying: Thou art the glory of Jerusalem, thou art the great rejoicing of Israël, thou art the exaltation of our people, because thou hast done manfully, and because thine heart was strengthened, by the mean that thou hast loved continency, and, since thine husband, thou hast not known a man; therefore also the hand of the Lord hath strengthened thee, and therefore thou shalt be blessed for ever. And all the people said: So be it, So be it.

Third Responsory.

O Lord God, That breakest, &c., (p. 512.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Judith (xvi. 22.)

AND it came to pass after these things, that all the people came unto Jerusalem after the victory to worship the Lord: and as soon as they were purified, they all offered burnt-offerings, and free-offerings, and the gifts which they have vowed. Judith also dedicated for an everlasting remembrance all the stuff of war of Holofernes, which the people had given unto her, and the canopy which she had taken out of his bed-chamber.

First Responsory.

Strengthen me, O King, &c., (p. 512.)

Second Lesson.

SO the people continued feasting before the sanctuary, and rejoicing with Judith for three months because of this victory. And after this time every one returned to his own house; and Judith became honourable in Bethulia, and famous in all the land of Israel. And she was strong also in her continency, so that she knew not a man all the days of her life, after that Manasses her husband was dead. And on the festival-days she appeared with great honour.

Second Responsory.

We have heard, &c., (p. 508.)

Third Lesson.

AND she remained in her husband's house an hundred and five years, and made her maid free; and she died; and was buried with her husband, in Bethulia. And all the people lamented her seven days. And there was none that made the children of Israël any more afraid in all the life-time of Judith, nor a long time after her death. And the day of the rejoicing for this victory is taken by the Hebrews into the number of the holidays, and it is observed of the Jews, from that time, even unto this day.

Third Responsory.

The Lord bless thee, &c., (p. 512.)

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O my Lord the King Almighty! * all things are in Thy power, and there is no man that can gainsay Thy will.

Prayer of the ensuing Sunday.

Fifth Sunday of September.

The Fifth Lord's Day of September.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of Esther (i. 1.)

NOW it came to pass in the days of Ahasuerus, which reigned from India even unto Æthiopia, over an hundred and seven and twenty provinces, that when he sat upon the throne of his kingdom, the city of Shushan was the capital of his kingdom. And in the third year of his reign he made a great feast unto all his princes and his servants, the mightiest men of Persia, and the famous men of India, and them that were set over the provinces under him, to show the riches of his glorious kingdom, and the greatness and excellency of his power, many days, even an hundred and four score days.

First Responsory.

[1] O my Lord, the King Almighty! All things are in Thy power, and there is no man that can gainsay Thy will! Deliver us for Thy Name's sake.

Verse. Hear our prayer, and turn our sorrow into joy.

Answer. Deliver us for Thy Name's sake.

Second Lesson.

AND when the days of the feast were fulfilled, he bade all the people that were present in Shushan, both great and small, and commanded to make a feast seven days, in the outer court of the garden, and of the grove, which had been planted by the king's care and his hand. And there were hung round about on all sides hangings of sky colour, and of green, and of purple, upon cords of fine white linen, and purple, drawn through rings of ivory, and fastened up upon marble pillars. Seats also of gold and of silver were set upon the pavement, which was paved with stones like emeralds and white marble. And all of it was wondrously ornamented with pictures of divers colours.

Second Responsory.

Strengthen me, &c., (p. 512.)

Third Lesson.

AND they that were bidden, drank in vessels of gold, and the meats were brought in vessels diverse one from the other. The wine also, as was meet for the greatness of the kingdom, was set forth in abundance, and of the best quality. Neither was there any to compel them to drink that would not, but even as the King had commanded, when he set one of his princes at every table, that every man should take according to his own pleasure. Also Vashti the Queen made a feast for the women in the royal house where King Ahasuerus was used to dwell.

[1] xiii. 9, 17.

Third Responsory.

I have had no hope in any other but in Thee, O God of Israël, Who art angry, and wilt again show mercy, and forgivest all the sins of men when they are in affliction.

Verse. O Lord God! Maker of heaven and earth! look upon our low estate!

Answer. Thou that forgivest all the sins of men when they are in affliction.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Thou that forgivest all the sins of men when they are in affliction.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book "On Duties" written by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. iii. ch. 15.)

WHAT did Queen Esther? Did she not, to save her people from danger (a beautiful and noble object) put herself in jeopardy of death, and face the anger of the cruel King? The King of the Persians, cruel and violent as he was, nevertheless, thought it seemly to show grace unto him that told him of the plot that was made against him, to free the people from bondage, and to deliver them from death, but not to spare him that had persuaded such iniquity. In the end he gave up to the gallows him, whom he had held second only to himself, and chiefest among all his friends, because he found himself dishonoured through his false counsels.

Fourth Responsory.

Remember me for good, O Lord God, and put not away my works of mercy, which I have wrought in the house of my God, and in the times of His solemn rites.

Verse. Remember me, O Lord my God!

Answer. And put not away my works of mercy, which I have wrought in the house of my God, and in the times of His solemn rites.

Fifth Lesson.

THAT true friendship, which careth for honour, careth less for riches, or dignities, or power than for itself, but for honour before itself. Such was the friendship of Jonathan, which caused him to risk the anger of his father, and danger to himself. Such was the friendship of Achimelech, who chose to earn death for himself by giving relief to David, rather than to betray the outlaw. But before honour nothing is to be put, and friendship must not be allowed to outrun it, even as we are warned by the Scriptures.

Fifth Responsory.

We have heard, &c., (p. 508.)

Sixth Lesson.

THE Philosophers have started divers questions — whether friendship can, or cannot justify disloyalty to a man's own country—whether friendship can, or cannot justify serving a friend at the cost of breach of faith. Scripture indeed saith: "A man that beareth false witness against his neighbour, is a maul, and a sword, and a sharp arrow." (Prov. xxv. 18.) But mark that what is here condemned is not witness by itself, but false witness. How if a man be compelled to give such witness, for the sake of God? or for the sake of his country? Ought friendship to outweigh religion? Is not to say this as much as to say that a sinful weakness is to outweigh a duty?

Sixth Responsory.

The Lord bless thee, &c., (p. 512.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

We know no strange god, &c., (p. 512.)

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Esther (ii. 5.)

IN the city of Shushan there was a certain Jew, whose name was Mordecai, the son of Jair, the son of Shimei, the son of Kish, a Benjamite, who had been carried away from Jerusalem at that time when Nebuchadnezzar the King of Babylon had carried away Jeconiah King of Judah. And he brought up Hadassah (who by another name was called Esther) his brother's daughter: and she had lost both father and mother; and the maid was very fair and beautiful. And when her father and mother were dead, Mordecai took her for his own daughter.

First Responsory.

O my Lord, the King Almighty, &c., (p. 515.)

Second Lesson.

AND when the King's commandment was heard, and when many fair maidens were gathered together unto Shushan according to his decree, and were given into the custody of Hegai the eunuch, Esther also was given into his custody among the other damsels, to be kept in the number of the women. And she pleased him, and found grace in his sight. And he commanded a eunuch to give her speedily her things for purification, and to give her her portions, and seven of the most comely maidens of the King's house, and to adorn her and wait upon her, both her and her fellows. She would not show unto him her people or her kindred; for Mordecai had charged her that as to that matter she should be silent altogether. And [Mordecai] walked every day before the outer court of the house, wherein the chosen maidens were kept, to know how Esther did.

Second Responsory.

Strengthen me, &c., (p. 512.)

Third Lesson. (15.)

NOW the turn of Esther, the daughter of Abihail, the brother of Mordecai, whom he had taken for his daughter, came, to go in unto the King. And she sought not to bedizen herself after the manner of women, but whatsoever Hegai the eunuch, the keeper of the women, was pleased, that he gave her to adorn herself withal. For she was exceedingly comely, and of beauty that cannot be believed, and to every eye that saw her she was full of grace and loveliness. So she was taken unto King Ahasuerus his bedchamber, in the tenth month, which is the month Tebeth, in the seventh year of his reign. And the King loved Esther above all the women, and she obtained grace and favour in his sight more than all the women, so that he set the royal crown upon her head, and made her Queen instead of Vashti.

Third Responsory.

I have had no hope, &c., (p. 516.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Esther (iii. 1.)

AFTER these things did King Ahasuerus promote Haman, the son of Hammedatha, who was of the stock of Agag, and set his seat above all the princes that were with him. And all the King's servants that were used to be about the gate of the Palace, bowed the knee and did reverence to Haman; for the King had so commanded them. Only Mordecai bowed not the knee, nor did him reverence. Then the King's servants which had the ordinance of the gate of the Palace, said unto him: Why transgressest thou the King's commandment?

First Responsory.

Remember me for good, &c., (p. 516.)

Second Lesson.

AND when they spake thus unto him again and again, and he would not hearken unto them, they told Haman; to see whether [Mordecai] would still persist; for he had told them that he was a Jew, And when Haman heard it, and saw that Mordecai bowed not the knee before him, nor did him reverence, he was filled with wrath; and he thought scorn to lay hands on Mordecai alone.

Second Responsory.

We have heard, &c., (p. 508.)

Third Lesson.

FOR he had heard that he was of the people of Judea; wherefore, he sought rather to destroy all the nation of the Jews that were in the kingdom of Ahasuerus. In the first month (that is it which is called Nisan), in the twelfth year of King Ahasuerus, they cast lots (which are called in the Hebrew tongue "purim")[1] in a vessel, before Haman, to see what day and what month the Jews should be slain: and the lot fell on the twelfth month, which is called Adar.[2]

Third Responsory.

The Lord bless thee, &c., (p. 512.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Esther (iv. 1.)

AND when Mordecai had heard it, he rent his clothes, and put on sackcloth, and put ashes upon his head, and went out into the midst of the city, and cried with a loud cry, to show the bitterness of his soul, and so crying came even before the gate of the Palace. For none might enter into the King's court clothed with sackcloth. And in every province, and town, and place, whithersoever had come the King's cruel commandment, there was great mourning among the Jews, and fasting, and wailing, and weeping; and many lay in sackcloth and ashes. And Esther's maids and her eunuchs came and told it her. And, when she heard it, she was appalled; and she sent raiment to clothe [Mordecai] withal, and to take away his sackcloth from him: but he would not receive it. Then called she for Hatach, an eunuch, whom the King had given her to attend upon her, and gave him commandment to go to Mordecai and learn from him wherefore he did thus.

First Responsory.

We know no strange god, &c., (p. 512.)

Second Lesson.

SO Hatach went forth to Mordecai, as he stood in the open place of the city, which was before the gate of the Palace. And [Mordecai] told him of all that had happened, and of the sum of the money that Haman had promised to pay to the King's treasuries for the Jews, to destroy them. Also he gave him the copy of the writing of the decree that was hung up at Shushan, to show it unto the Queen, and to charge her that she should go in unto the King, to make supplication unto him for her people. And Hatach came in again, and told Esther all the words of Mordecai. And she spake again unto him and bade him tell Mordecai, saying: All the King's servants, and all the provinces which are under his kingdom do know, that whosoever, whether man or woman, shall come into the King's inner court, who is not called, shall forthwith be put to death, except such to whom the King shall hold out the golden sceptre, for a sign of mercy, that he may live. How then shall I be able to enter in before the King, even I, who have not been called unto him these thirty days?

---

[1] Hebrew—"they cast 'Pur' (that is, the lot)." Pur is not a Hebrew, but a Persian or Assyrian word.

[2] And accordingly Haman obtained a Royal decree for a general massacre of all the Jews upon the 13th Adar.

Second Responsory.

Strengthen me, &c., (p. 512.)

Third Lesson.

AND when Mordecai had heard it, he commanded to answer Esther, saying: Think not that thou shalt save thine own life in the King's house, more than all the Jews; for if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, then shall there deliverance arise to the Jews from another place; but thou, and thy father's house shall be destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom, that thou mightest be ready against such a time as this? Then Esther bade them return Mordecai this answer: Go and gather together all the Jews that thou shalt find in Shushan, and pray for me. Neither eat, nor drink for three days and three nights; I also, and my maids, will fast likewise, and so will I go in unto the King—which is not according to the law—without having a call, and will give myself over unto death and danger. So Mordecai went his way, and did according to all that Esther had commanded him.

Third Responsory.

I have had no hope, &c., (p. 516.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Esther (v. 1.)

AND on the third day, Esther put on her royal apparel, and stood in the inner court of the King's house, over against the King's Hall;[1] and he sat upon his throne in the chief place of the palace, over against the gate of the house. And when he saw Esther the Queen standing, she obtained favour in his sight, and he held out to her the golden sceptre that he had in his hand. And she drew near, and kissed the top of his sceptre. Then said the King unto her: What wilt thou, Queen Esther? What is thy request? It shall be even given thee to the half of the kingdom. And she answered: If it seem good unto the King, I pray that thou wouldest come unto me this day, and Haman with thee, unto the banquet that I have prepared. Then the King said straightway: Cause Haman to make haste, that he may do as Esther hath said.

First Responsory.

O my Lord, the King, &c., (p. 515.)

Second Lesson. (9.)

THEN went Haman forth that day joyful and with a glad heart. And when he saw Mordecai sitting before the gates of the Palace, and that he stood not up, nor moved for him, he was full of indignation; but he restrained his anger, and, when he came home, he called for his friends, and Zeresh his wife; and he told them of the glory of his riches, and the multitude of his children, and all the things wherein the King had advanced him above all the princes and servants of the King. And he said moreover: Yea, Esther the Queen did bid no man to come in with the King unto the banquet [that she had prepared,] but myself; and to-morrow am I to dine with her also with the King. Yet all this availeth me nothing, so long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the King's gate.

Second Responsory.

Strengthen me, &c., (p. 512.)

Third Lesson.

THEN answered Zeresh his wife, and the others his friends: Let a gallows be made of fifty cubits high, and to-morrow speak thou unto the King, that Mordecai may be hanged thereon; and so shalt thou go in merrily with the King unto the banquet. The thing pleased Haman; and he caused the lofty gallows to be made.

Third Responsory.

I have had no hope, &c., (p. 516.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Esther (vi. 1.)

ON that night the King could not sleep, and he commanded to bring the histories and the chronicles of times past. And, when they were read before him, they came to the place wherein it was written how Mordecai had told of the plot of Bigthana and Teresh the eunuchs, who sought to slay the King Ahasuerus. And when the King heard it, he said: What honour and reward hath been done to Mordecai for this faithfulness? And his bondsmen and servants said unto him: He hath had no reward. And the King said: Who is in the court? Now Haman was come into the inner court of the King's house, to speak unto the King to hang Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared for him. And the servants answered [the King:] Haman standeth in the court. And the King said: Let him come in.

First Responsory.

Remember me, &c., (p. 516.)

Second Lesson.

AND when he was come in, the King said unto him: What shall be done unto the man whom the King delighteth to honour? Now, Haman thought in his heart that there could be none other unto whom the King could delight to do honour, more than to himself; and he answered: For the man whom the King delighteth to honour, let him be clad in the royal apparel, and be set upon the horse that the King rideth on, and let him have the crown royal upon his head, and let the noblest of the King's princes and lords lead his horse, and, as they go through the street of the city, let him proclaim aloud and say: Thus shall the man be honoured whom the King is pleased to honour.

[1] Basilica.

Second Responsory.

We have heard, &c., (p. 508.)

Third Lesson.

AND the King said unto him: Make haste, and take the apparel and the horse, and do, even as thou hast said, to Mordecai the Jew, that sitteth at the gate of the Palace. See lest anything fail of all that thou hast spoken. Then took Haman the apparel and the horse, and arrayed Mordecai, and set him on the horse, and went before him through the street of the city, and proclaimed: Of this honour is he worthy whom the King is pleased to honour. And Mordecai came again to the gate of the Palace, and Haman hasted to his house, mourning and having his head covered; and he told Zeresh his wife, and his friends, everything that had befallen him.

Third Responsory.

The Lord bless thee, &c., (p. 512.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Esther (vii. 1.)

SO the King and Haman came in to drink with the Queen. And the King again said unto Esther, on the second day, after that he was heated with wine: What is thy petition, Esther, that it may be granted thee? and what willest thou? Even if thou ask the half of my kingdom, thou shalt have it. And she answered him, and said: If I have found favour in thy sight, O King!—and if it please thee—give me my life at my petition, and my people at my request. For we are given over, I and my people, to be destroyed, to be slain, and to perish. And would that we had been sold for bondmen and bondwomen; the evil might have been borne, and I had groaned and held my tongue; but now he is our enemy whose cruelty doth reflect upon the King.

First Responsory.

We know no strange god, &c., (p. 512.)

Second Lesson.

THEN the King Ahasuerus answered and said: Who is he, and of what power is he, that durst presume to do so? And Esther said: Our worst adversary and enemy is this Haman. And when he heard it, he was confounded, and could not bear to sit before the King and the Queen. And the King rose in wrath, and went out of the place of the banquet into a garden planted with trees. And Haman stood up, to make request for his life to Esther the Queen; for he saw that there was evil determined against him by the King.

Second Responsory.

Strengthen me, &c., (p. 512.)

Third Lesson.

WHEN the King returned out of the garden planted with trees, and entered into the place of the banquet, he found Haman fallen upon the bed whereon Esther was; and he said: Will he force the Queen also, before me, in mine own house? As the word went out of the King's mouth, they covered [Haman's] face. And Harbonah, one of the eunuchs that stood to wait upon the King, said: Behold the gallows, fifty cubits high, which [Haman] had made for Mordecai, who had spoken good for the King, standeth in the house of Haman. And the King said unto him: Hang him thereon. So Haman was hanged upon the gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai, and the King's wrath was pacified.

Third Responsory.

I have had no hope, &c., (p. 516).

First Sunday of October.

The First Lord's Day of October.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the [1] First Book of Maccabees (i. 1.)

AND it happened after that Alexander, son of Philip, the Macedonian, who was the first that reigned over Greece, came out of the land of Chettim, and had smitten Darius, King of the Persians and Medes, that he made many wars, and won all men's strong-holds, and slew the kings of the earth. And he went through to the ends of the earth, and took spoils of many nations; and the earth was quiet before him. And he gathered a great power and a mighty strong host; and his heart was exalted and lifted up; and he ruled over countries and kings; and they became tributaries unto him. And after these things, he fell sick upon his bed, and perceived that he should die. And he called unto him his honourable servants, who had been brought up with him from his youth, and parted his kingdom among them while he was yet alive.

[1] Abp. Kenrick says of these two books: "The authors are unknown, one of whom wrote in Hebrew . . . . the other in Greek." "The name of Maccabees has been given from the celebrated heroes of the Asmonean family known by this title, the origin of which is not fully ascertained. . . . It was given not only to the Asmoneans, but to others generally who emulated their zeal for the Jewish institutions and laws, under the Syrian monarchy." The history of the period between the fall of Jerusalem and that at which these books commence is mainly contained in Ezra and Nehemiah.

First Responsory.

[1] The Lord open your hearts in His law and commandments, and send peace in your days. May He grant you salvation and redeem you out of all evil.

Verse. The Lord hear your prayers, and be at one with you, and never forsake you in the time of trouble.

Answer. May He grant you salvation and redeem you out of all evil.

Second Lesson.

SO Alexander reigned twelve years, and then died. And his servants bare rule, every one in his place. And after his death, they all put crowns upon themselves; so did their sons after them many years; and evils were multiplied in the earth. And there came out of them a wicked root, Antiochus the Illustrious,[2] son of Antiochus the King, who had been an hostage at Rome: and he reigned in the hundred-and-thirty-seventh year of the kingdom of the Greeks.[3]

Second Responsory.

[1] The Lord hear your prayers, and be at one with you, and never forsake you in the time of trouble, even He, the Lord our God.

Verse. Give you all an heart to serve Him, and to do His will.

Answer. Even He, the Lord our God.

Third Lesson.

IN those days there went out of Israël wicked men, and persuaded many, saying: Let us go and make a covenant with the heathen that are round about us; for since we departed from them, we have had much sorrow. So this device pleased them well. And certain of the people determined to do this, and went to the King; who gave them licence to do after the ordinances of the heathen. Whereupon they built a place of exercise[4] at Jerusalem, according to the customs of the heathen: and made themselves uncircumcised:[5] and forsook the holy covenant: and joined themselves to the heathen, and were sold[6] to do mischief.

Third Responsory.

Our enemies are gathered together, and make their boast of their own strength. O Lord, break their power, and scatter them; that they may know that there is none other that fighteth for us, but only Thou, O our God!

Verse. Scatter them in Thy strength, and destroy them, O Lord our Shield!

Answer. That they may know that there is none other that fighteth for us, but only Thou, O our God!

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. That they may know that there is none other that fighteth for us, but only Thou, O our God!

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book upon Duties written by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan]. (Bk. i. ch. 40.)

THERE may perchance be some who are so blinded by the glory of war as to think there is no valour but warlike valour, and that the reason why I have taken up other subjects is that among us there is no warlike valour whereof to speak. But what was the valour of Josue the son of Nun, when in one battle he laid low five nations, and took prisoners their kings; when he was fighting against the Gibeonites, and feared least the closing in of night should cut short his victory, he cried aloud in the greatness of his mind and of his faith, "And he said, in the sight of Israel: Sun stand thou still over against Gibeon, and thou Moon over against the valley of Ajalon; and the sun stood still, and the moon stayed, until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies" (Josue x. 12, 13). Gideon, with three hundred men, won the victory over the vast people, and the savage enemy. The lad Jonathan waxed valiant in fight.

Fourth Responsory.

[7] Be ye not afraid of the assault of the enemy; remember how our fathers were delivered. Now, therefore, let us cry unto heaven, and our God will have mercy upon us.

Verse. [8] Remember His marvellous works that He hath done unto Pharaoh and his host in the Red Sea.

Answer. Now, therefore, let us cry unto heaven, and our God will have mercy upon us.

Fifth Lesson.

SHALL I speak of the Maccabees? But before I speak of them, I will speak of their fathers, even of them who, when they were ready to fight for the Temple of God and for their own rights, were assailed by a trick of their enemies upon the Sabbath day, and were willing rather to offer their bodies naked to the sword than to strike back again and break the Sabbath, and so they gave themselves up gladly to death; but when the Maccabees bethought them that the whole nation might thus perish, avenged the innocent blood of their brethren even upon the Sabbath day when they were provoked to battle, and afterward, when King Antiochus had been stirred up to make war on them by his generals, even Lysias and Nicanor and Gorgias, he and his Eastern and Assyrian forces were so crushed that forty and eight thousand were laid low on the field by three thousand.

Fifth Responsory.

[9] The heathen are assembled together to fight against us, and we

Verse. What things they imagine against us, Thou knowest. How shall we be able to stand against them, except Thou be our help?

Answer. Our eyes look unto Thee, O Lord our God, that we should not perish.

Sixth Lesson.

WHAT was the valour of Judas the Maccabean leader we may judge by the type of one of his men. When Eleazar saw an elephant bigger than the rest, and adorned with the King's harness, he thought that the King was riding thereon, and he threw himself into the midst of the enemy, and cast away his shield and slew on either hand until he was come to the beast, and ran underneath it, and killed it with his sword, and so the beast fell upon Eleazar and crushed him, and he died. What valour was here! To begin with, he feared not to die, and when the enemy surrounded him he cast himself into the midst of their ranks, pierced their column, and becoming all the fiercer through his mockery of death, he threw away his shield and upheld with both hands the huge bulk of the wounded monster beneath which he had gone the better to spite it, so that when he died with it he might well have been said not so much to be crushed as to be swallowed up in victory.

Sixth Responsory.

[2] Thine, O Lord, is the power, Thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and Thou art exalted above all the heathen. Give peace in our time, O Lord.

Verse. [3] O Lord God, Creator of all things, Who art fearful and strong, righteous and merciful.

Answer. Give peace in our time, O Lord.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Give peace in our time, O Lord.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

[4] The sun shone upon the shields of gold, and the mountains glistered therewith, and the army of the heathens was spread abroad.

Verse. For the army was very great and mighty: then Judas and his host drew near and entered into battle.

Answer. And the army of the heathens was spread abroad.

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (i. 17.)[5]

NOW when the kingdom was established before Antiochus, he thought to reign over Egypt, that he might have the dominion of two realms. Wherefore he entered into Egypt with a great multitude, with chariots, and elephants, and horsemen, and a great navy, and made war against Ptolemy, King of Egypt; but Ptolemy was afraid of him, and fled; and many were wounded to death. Thus he got the strong cities in the land of Egypt, and took the spoils of the land of Egypt.

First Responsory.

[6] Judas said unto Simon his brother: Choose thee out men, and go, and deliver thy brethren that are in Galilee: and I, and Jonathan thy brother, will go into the country of Galaad. [7] As the Will is in heaven, so let it be.

Verse. Arm yourselves, ye valiant men, and be in readiness: for it is better for us to die in battle, than to behold the calamities of our people, and our sanctuary.

Answer. As the Will is in heaven, so let it be.

Second Lesson.

AND, after that Antiochus had smitten Egypt, he returned again in the hundred-and-forty-and-third year, and went up to Jerusalem with a great multitude. And he entered proudly into the Sanctuary, and took away the golden Altar, and the candlestick of light, and all the vessels thereof, and the table of the shew-bread, and the pouring vessels, and the vials, and the spoons of gold, and the crowns, and the golden ornament that was before the Temple, and brake them all up.

Second Responsory.

[8] They decked the fore-front of the Temple with crowns of gold, and dedicated the Altar unto the Lord. And there was very great gladness among the people.

Verse. They praised the Lord with Psalms and thanksgiving.

Answer. And there was very great gladness among the people.

Third Lesson.

HE took also the silver and the gold, and the precious vessels: also he took the hidden treasures which he found, and, when he had taken all away, he went into his own land. He made, moreover, a great massacre of men, and spake very proudly. Therefore there was great mourning in Israël, and in every place where they[9] were: and the princes and elders mourned, the virgins and young men were made feeble, and the beauty of women was changed. Every bridegroom took up lamentation; and she that sat in the marriage chamber was in heaviness. The land also was moved for the inhabitants thereof, and all the house of Jacob was covered with confusion.

Verse. They decked the fore-front of the Temple with crowns of gold, and dedicated the Altar unto the Lord.

Answer. Who had done so great things for Israël, and given them the victory—the Lord Almighty.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Who had done so great things for Israël, and given them the victory—the Lord Almighty.

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (ii. 1.)

IN those days arose Mattathias, the son of John, the son of Simeon, a Priest of the sons of Joarib from Jerusalem, and dwelt in Mount Modin. And he had five sons—John, called Gaddis; Simon, called Thasi; Judas, who was called Maccabee; Eleazar, called Abaron; and Jonathan, whose surname was Apphus. These saw the blasphemies, which were committed in the people of Judah, and in Jerusalem.

First Responsory.

[2] This is a lover of the brethren, and of the people of Israël: this is one who prayeth much for the people, and for all the Holy City, Jerusalem.

Verse. [3] There appeared a man most gentle toward all his people.

Answer. This is one who prayeth much for the people, and for all the Holy City, Jerusalem.

Second Lesson.

AND Mattathias said: Woe is me! Wherefore was I born, to see this misery of my people, and the misery of the Holy City, and to dwell there, when it is delivered into the hand of the enemy? The Sanctuary is come into the hand of strangers—her temple is become as a man without glory. Her glorious vessels are carried away into captivity, her elders are slain in the streets, and her young men have fallen by the sword of the enemy. What nation hath not had a part in her kingdom, and gotten of her spoils?

Second Responsory.

[4] Thou, O Lord of all things, Who hast need of nothing, wast pleased that the Temple of Thine habitation should be among us. Therefore now, O Lord, keep this house ever undefiled!

Verse. [5] Thou, O Lord, didst choose this house, that Thy Name should be called on therein, and to be an house of prayer and petition for Thy people.

Answer. Therefore now, O Lord, keep this house ever undefiled.

Third Lesson. (14.)

THEN Mattathias and his sons rent their clothes, and put on sackcloth, and mourned very sore. And there came men sent from the King Antiochus, to make them that had fled unto the city of Modin to sacrifice, and to burn incense, and to forsake the law of God. And many of the people of Israël consented, and came unto them: but Mattathias and his sons stood firm.

Third Responsory.

Open Thine eyes, O Lord, and behold our affliction: for the heathen are come round about us to punish us. But Thou, O Lord, stretch forth Thine arm, and deliver our souls.

Verse. Punish them that oppress us and with pride do us wrong, and keep Thine own portion.

Answer. But Thou, O Lord, stretch forth Thine arm, and deliver our souls.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. But Thou, O Lord, stretch forth Thine arm, and deliver our souls.

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (ii. 19.)

THEN Mattathias answered and spake with a loud voice: Though all nations should obey King Antiochus, and fall away every one from the religion of their fathers, and give consent to his commandments, yet will I, and my sons, and my brethren walk according to the law of our fathers; it is not good for us to forsake the law and the ordinances of God: we will not hearken unto the words of King Antiochus, neither will we offer sacrifice, to transgress against the commandments of our law, to go by another way.

First Responsory.

The sun shone, &c., (p. 521.)

Second Lesson.

NOW when he had left speaking these words, there came one of the Jews, in the sight of all, to sacrifice unto idols on the altar, which was in the city of Modin, according to the King's commandment. Which thing when Mattathias saw, he was inflamed with zeal; and his reins trembled, and his fury was kindled according as the Law hath judged; wherefore he ran and slew him upon the altar: also the man whom King Antiochus had sent, who compelled men to sacrifice, he killed at that time, and the altar he pulled down; thus dealt he zealously for the law, like as Phinehas did unto Zambri the son of Salom.

Second Responsory.

They decked the fore-front, &c., (p. 521.)

[2] The ghost of the Prophet Jeremiah, II. xv. 14.

[3] The ghost of the High Priest Onias.

[4] II. xiv. 35, 36.

[5] I. vii. 37.

Third Lesson.

AND Mattathias cried throughout the city with a loud voice, saying: Whosoever is zealous of the Law, and maintaineth the covenant, let him follow me. So he and his sons fled into the mountains, and left all that ever they had in the city. Then many that sought after judgment and justice went down into the wilderness, to dwell there, both they, and their children, and their wives, and their cattle: because afflictions increased sore upon them.

Third Responsory.

They praised the Lord, &c., (p. 522.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (ii. 49.)

NOW the time drew near that Mattathias should die, and he said unto his sons: Now hath pride and rebuke gotten strength, and the time of destruction, and the wrath of indignation. Now therefore, my sons, be ye zealous for the Law, and give your lives for the covenant of your fathers; and call to remembrance what acts our fathers did in their time; and so shall ye receive great honour, and an everlasting name. Was not Abraham found faithful in temptation, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness? Joseph, in the time of his distress, kept the commandment, and was made lord of Egypt; Phinehas our father, in being zealous with God's zeal, obtained the covenant of an everlasting Priesthood.

First Responsory.

The Lord open your hearts, &c., (p. 520.)

Second Lesson.

JESUS, by fulfilling the word, was made a leader in Israël. Caleb, for bearing witness before the congregation, received heritage. David, for being merciful, possessed the throne of an everlasting kingdom. Elias, for being zealous with zeal for the law, was taken up into heaven. Ananias, Azarias, and Mishaël, by believing, were saved out of the flame. Daniel, for his innocency, was delivered from the mouth of lions. And thus consider ye, that, from generation to generation, none that put their trust in Him have been overcome. Fear not then the words of the sinful man, for his glory shall be dung and worms; to-day he shall be lifted up, and to-morrow he shall not be found, because he is returned into his dust, and his thought is come to nothing.

Second Responsory.

The Lord hear your prayers, &c., (p. 520.)

Third Lesson.

WHEREFORE, ye, my sons, be valiant, and show yourselves men in the behalf of the Law; for by it shall ye obtain glory. And, behold, I know that your brother Simon is a man of counsel; give ear unto him alway, and he shall be a father unto you. As for Judas Maccabeus, he hath been mighty and strong, even from his youth up; let him be your captain, and fight the battle of the people. Take also unto you all those that observe the Law, and avenge ye the wrong of your people. Recompense fully the heathen, and take heed to the commandments of the Law. So he blessed them, and was gathered to his fathers.

Third Responsory.

Our enemies are gathered together, &c., (p. 520.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabeus (ii. 70.)

MATTATHIAS died in the hundred-and-forty-and-sixth year, and his sons buried him in the sepulchres of his fathers at Modin, and all Israël made great lamentation for him. (iii.) Then his son Judas, called Maccabeus, rose up in his stead; and all his brethren helped him, and so did all they that held with his father, and they fought with cheerfulness the battle of Israël. So he gat his people great honour. He pursued the wicked, and sought them out; and burnt up those that vexed his people: wherefore his enemies shrunk for fear of him, and all the workers of iniquity were troubled: and salvation prospered in his hand.

First Responsory.

Be ye not afraid, &c., (p. 520.)

Second Lesson.

HE grieved also many kings, and made Jacob glad with his acts, and his memorial is blessed for ever. Moreover he went through the cities of Judah, and destroyed the ungodly out of them, and turned away wrath from Israël. So that he was renowned unto the uttermost part of the earth; and he received unto him such as were ready to perish. Then Apollonius gathered the Gentiles together, and an exceeding great host out of Samaria, to fight against Israël. Which thing when Judas perceived, he went forth to meet him, and smote him, and slew him. Many also fell down slain, and the rest fled; and Judas took their spoils, and Apollonius his sword also, and therewith he fought all his lifelong.

Second Responsory.

The heathen are assembled, &c., (p. 520.)

Third Lesson.

AND the fear of Judas and his brethren, and exceeding great dread, fell upon all the nations round about them, insomuch as his fame came unto the King Antiochus, and all nations talked of the battles of Judas. Now when King Antiochus heard these things, he was full of indignation, and sent, and gathered together a force out of all his realm, even a very strong army: he opened also his treasury, and gave them pay for a year, commanding them to be ready whensoever he should need them.

Third Responsory.

Thine, O Lord, &c., (p. 521.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (iii. 42.)

NOW when Judas and his brethren saw that miseries were multiplied, and that forces did encamp themselves in their borders; and when they knew how the King had given commandment to destroy the people, and utterly abolish them, they said one to another: Let us restore the decayed estate of our people, and let us fight for our people and our holy things. Then was the congregation gathered together, that they might be ready for battle, and that they might pray, and ask mercy and compassion. Now Jerusalem lay void, as a wilderness; there was none of her children that went in or out; the sanctuary also was trodden down; and aliens kept the strong-hold, where the heathen had their habitation; and joy was taken from Jacob, and the pipe with the harp ceased.

First Responsory.

The sun shone, &c., (p. 521.)

Second Lesson.

AND [the Israëlites] assembled together, and came to Mizpeh, over against Jerusalem—for in Mizpeh was the place where they prayed beforetime in Israël. And they fasted that day, and put on sackcloth, and cast ashes upon their heads, and rent their clothes, and laid open the book of the Law, wherefrom the heathen sought the likeness of their images; they brought also the Priests' garments, and the first-fruits, and the tithes; and the Nazarites they stirred up, who had accomplished their days; and they cried with a loud voice toward heaven, saying: What shall we do with these? And whither shall we carry them away? Thy sanctuary is trodden down and profaned! and Thy Priests are in heaviness and brought low! And, behold, the heathen are assembled together against us, to destroy us. What things they imagine against us, Thou knowest. How shall we be able to stand against them, except Thou, O God, be our help.

Second Responsory.

They decked the fore-front, &c., (p. 521.)

Third Lesson.

THEN they sounded with trumpets, and cried with a loud voice—And after this Judas ordained captains over the people, even captains over thousands, and over hundreds, and over fifties, and over tens. But as for such as were building houses, or marrying wives, or planting vineyards, or were fearful, these he commanded that they should return, every man to his own house, according to the Law. So the camp removed, and pitched upon the south side of Emmaus. And Judas said: Arm yourselves, and be valiant men, and see that ye be in readiness against the morning, that ye may fight with these heathen, that are assembled together against us, to destroy us and our holy things, for it is better for us to die in battle than to behold the calamities of our people and of our holy things. Nevertheless, as the Will is in heaven, so let it be done.

Third Responsory.

They praised the Lord, &c. (p. 522.)

The following Sunday is always occupied by a festival, usually that of the Rosary or of the Motherhood of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and no more of its office is used than the following, forming part of the Commemoration of the Sunday, at Vespers on Saturday evening.

Antiphon. The sun shone upon the shields of gold, and the mountains glistened therewith, and the army of the heathens was spread abroad.

Verse. Let the evening prayer ascend unto Thee, O Lord.

Answer. And let there descend upon us Thy mercy.

Prayer of the Sunday.

Second Sunday of October.

The Second Lord's Day of October.

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (iv. 52.)

ON the five-and-twentieth day of the ninth month (which is called the month Casleu), in the hundred-forty-and-eighth year, they rose up betimes in the morning, and offered sacrifice according to the Law, upon the new altar of burnt-offerings which they had made. At what time and what day the heathen hath profaned it, even in that was it dedicated anew, with songs, and citherns, and harps, and cymbals. And all the people fell upon their faces, worshipping and blessing even unto heaven, Him Who had given them good success.

First Responsory.

Judas said, &c., (p. 521.)

Second Lesson.

AND they kept the Dedication of the Altar eight days, and offered burnt-offerings with gladness, and sacrificed the sacrifice of deliverance and praise. They decked also the fore-front of the Temple with crowns of gold, and with shields, and the gates and the chambers they renewed, and hanged doors upon them. Thus was there very great gladness among the people, and the reproach of the heathen was put away. And Judas and his brethren, with the whole congregation of Israël, ordained that the days of the Dedication of the Altar should be kept in their season, from year to year, by the space of eight days, from the five-and-twentieth day of the month Casleu, with mirth and gladness.

Second Responsory.

They decked the fore-front, &c., (p. 521.)

Third Lesson.

AT that time also they builded up the Mount Zion, with high walls and strong towers round about, lest the Gentiles should come and tread it down, as they had done before. And he set there a garrison to keep it, and fortified it to preserve Beth-sura, that the people might have a defence against Idumea.

Third Responsory.

They praised the Lord, &c., (p. 522.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (v. 1.)

AND it came to pass, when the nations round about heard that the Altar was built, and the Sanctuary renewed as before, they were very much displeased, and thought to destroy the generation of Jacob that was among them, and began to slay some of the people, and to persecute them. And Judah fought against the children of Esau in Idumea, and them that were in Acrabathané, because they besieged the Israëlites, and gave them a great overthrow. Also he remembered the injury of the children of Bean, who had been a snare and an offence unto the people, in that they lay in wait for them in the way. And he shut them up in the towers; and encamped against them, and made them a curse, and burned their towers with fire, with all that were in them.

First Responsory.

This is a lover, &c., (p. 522.)

Second Lesson.

AND he passed over to the children of Ammon, and found a mighty power, and much people, and Timothy their Captain, and fought many battles with them; and they were discomfited before them, and he smote them, and took the city of Gazer, and the towns belonging thereto, and returned into Judea. Then the heathen that were in Galaad assembled themselves together against the Israëlites that were in their quarters, to destroy them; but they fled to the fortress at Dathema.

Second Responsory.

Thou, O Lord of all, &c., (p. 522.)

Third Lesson.

AND they sent letters unto Judas and his brethren, saying: The heathen that are round about us are assembled together against us, to destroy us, and they are preparing to come and take the fortress whereunto we are fled, Timothy being the Captain of their host. Come, now, therefore, and deliver us from their hands, for many of us are slain, yea, all our brethren that were in the places of Tubin are put to death; their wives and their children also they have carried away captives, and [have borne away] their stuff, and they have destroyed there about a thousand men.

Third Responsory.

Open Thine eyes, &c., (p. 522.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (v. 55.)

WHAT time as Judas and Jonathan were in the land of Galaad, and Simon his brother in Galilee before Ptolemaïs, Joseph the son of Zacharias, and Azarias, Captain of the garrison, heard of the valiant acts and warlike deeds which they had done; and they said: Let us also get us a name, and go fight against the heathen that are round about us. So, when they had given charge unto the garrison that was with them, they went toward Jamnia.

First Responsory.

The sun shone, &c., (p. 521.)

Second Lesson.

THEN came Gorgias and his men out of the city, to fight against them, and so it was that Joseph and Azarias were put to flight [and pursued] unto the borders of Judea. And there were slain that day of the people of Israël about two thousand men, and there was a great rout among the people, because they were not obedient unto Judas and his brethren, but thought to do some valiant act. Moreover, these men came not of the seed of those by whose hand deliverance was given unto Israël.

Second Responsory.

They decked the fore-front, &c., (p. 521.)

Third Lesson.

HOWBEIT the men of Judas were greatly renowned in the sight of all Israël, and of all nations, wheresoever their name was heard of, and the people assembled unto them with joyful acclamations. And Judas and his brethren went forth, and fought against the children of Esau, in the land toward the South, and he smote Hebron and the towns thereof; and burnt the walls and towers thereof with fire. Then he removed to go into the land of the strangers, and passed through Samaria. At that time certain Priests, desirous to show their valour, were slain in battle, for that they went out to fight unadvisedly.

Third Responsory.

They praised the Lord, &c., (p. 522.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (vi. 1.)

AND as King Antiochus was travelling through the high countries, he heard say that the city of Elymaïs in Persia was a right noble city, and rich in silver and gold, and that there was in it a very rich temple, wherein were coverings of gold, both breastplates and shields, which Alexander the son of Philip, the Macedonian King, who reigned first among the Grecians, had left there. Wherefore he came and sought to take the city, and to spoil it; but he was not able, because they of the city, having had warning thereof, rose up against him in battle; so he fled, and departed thence with great heaviness, and returned to Babylon. Moreover, there came one who brought him tidings in Persia, that the armies which went against the land of Judea were put to flight, and that Lysias, who went forth first with a great power, was put to flight of the Jews.

First Responsory.

The Lord open your hearts, &c., (p. 520.)

Second Lesson.

AND that [the Jews] were made strong by the armour, and power, and store of spoils, which they had gotten of the armies which they had destroyed: also that they had pulled down the abomination which he had set up upon the Altar in Jerusalem, and that they had compassed about the Sanctuary with high walls as before, and his city Beth-sura. And it came to pass, when the King heard these words, he was astonished and sore moved, and fell down upon his bed, and fell sick for grief, because it had not befallen him as he looked for. And there he continued many days, for his grief was ever more and more, and he made account that he should die.

Second Responsory.

The Lord hear your prayers, &c., (p. 520.)

Third Lesson.

AND he called for all his friends, and said unto them: The sleep is gone from mine eyes, and I am fallen down, and my heart faileth for very care; and I have said in my heart: Into what tribulation am I come, and how great a flood of misery is it, wherein now I am, who have been merry and beloved in my power! But now I remember the evils that I did at Jerusalem, and that I took all the vessels of gold and silver that were therein, and sent to make away with the inhabitants of Judea without a cause. I perceive therefore that for this cause these troubles are come upon me, and, behold, I perish through great grief in a strange land.

Third Responsory.

Our enemies are gathered, &c., (p. 520.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (vii. 1.)

IN the hundred-and-one-and-fiftieth year, Demetrius the son of Seleucus departed from Rome, and came up with a few men unto a city of the sea-coast, and reigned there. Now when Demetrius was set upon the throne of his kingdom, there came unto him wicked and ungodly men of Israël, having Alcimus, who was desirous to be High Priest, for their captain. And they accused the people to the King, saying: Judas and his brethren have slain all thy friends, and driven us out of our own land. Now, therefore, send some man whom thou trustest, and let him go and see what havock he hath made among us, and in the King's land, and let him punish all his friends, and all them that aid him.

First Responsory.

Be ye not afraid, &c., (p. 520.)

Second Lesson.

THEN the King chose Bacchides, a friend of his, who ruled in the kingdom beyond the Great River, and was faithful to the King. And him he sent to see what havock Judas had made. And that wicked Alcimus he made High Priest, and commanded that he should take vengeance of the children of Israël. So they departed, and came with a great power into the land of Judea, where they sent messengers to Judas and his brethren with peaceable words deceitfully. But they gave no heed to their words; for they saw that they were come with a great power.

Second Responsory.

The heathen are assembled, &c., (p. 520.)

Third Lesson.

THEN did there assemble unto Alcimus and Bacchides a company of Scribes, to require justice. Now the Assidæans were the first among the children of Israël that sought peace of them; for they said: One that is a Priest of the seed of Aaron is come, and he will do us no wrong. So he spake unto them peaceably, and sware unto them, saying: We will procure the harm neither of you nor of your friends. And they believed him. And he took of them three-score men, and slew them in one day, according to the word that is written: The flesh of Thy Saints [have they given to be meat unto the beasts of the earth,] and their blood have they shed [like water] round about Jerusalem; and there was none to bury them.[1]

Third Responsory.

Thine, O Lord, &c., (p. 521.)

---

[1] Ps. lxxviii. 2, 3, "The Flesh of Thy Saints" might be rendered "The flesh of Thine Assideans," the Greek "Assidaios" being merely an attempt to represent the Hebrew "Kasid," or Saint, the official title of these unfortunate persons, (much as we now call some people "Most Reverend," "Venerable," and the like.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (viii. 1.)

NOW Judas had heard of the fame of the Romans, that they are mighty and valiant men, and such as lovingly accept all that betake themselves unto them, and make a league of amity with all that come unto them, and that they are mighty and valiant men. And they heard also of their wars, and noble acts which they had done among the Galatians, and how they had conquered them, and brought them under tribute; and what they had done in the country of Spain, and won the mines of silver and gold which are there; and that by their policy and patience they had conquered all the place, though it were very far from them; and the kings also that came against them from the uttermost parts of the earth, they have discomfited them, and smitten them with a great overthrow; so that the rest do give them tribute every year.

First Responsory.

The sun shone, &c., (p. 521.)

Second Lesson.

AND Judas chose Eupolemus, the son of John, the son of Jacob, and Jason, the son of Eleazar, and sent them to Rome, to make a league of amity and confederacy with them, and [to entreat them] that they would take away the yoke of the Greeks from off them, for they saw that they did oppress the kingdom of Israël even unto bondage. They went therefore to Rome, which was a very great journey, and came into the senate, and said: Judas Maccabeus, and his brethren, and the people of the Jews, have sent us unto you, to make a confederacy and peace with you, and that we might be registered your confederates and friends. And the saying was good in their sight. And this is the epistle which they wrote back again in tables of brass, and sent to Jerusalem, that there they might have by them a memorial of peace and confederacy.

Second Responsory.

They decked the fore-front, &c., (p. 521.)

Third Lesson.

GOOD success be to the Romans, and to the people of the Jews, by sea and by land, for ever; the sword also and enemy be far from them! If there come first any war upon the Romans, or any of their confederates throughout all their dominion, the people of the Jews shall help them, as the time shall require, with all their heart; neither shall they give anything unto them that make war upon them, or aid them with corn, weapons, money, or ships, as it hath seemed good unto the Romans; but they shall keep their commands, without taking anything therefrom. In like manner also, if war come first upon the nation of the Jews, the Romans shall help them with all their heart, according as the time shall enable them.

Third Responsory.

They praised the Lord, &c., (p. 522.)

The following Sunday is always occupied by a festival, usually that of the Motherhood or of the Purity of the Blessed Virgin. In any case, no more of the Sunday office is used than the following, forming part of the commemoration of the Sunday, at Vespers on Saturday evening.

Antiphon. Moreover, all Israël made great lamentation for Judas, saying: How art thou fallen, thou valiant man of war, that didst deliver the Lord's people!

Verse. Let the evening prayer ascend unto Thee, O Lord.

Answer. And let there descend upon us Thy mercy.

Prayer of the Sunday.

Third Sunday of October.

The Third Lord's Day of October.

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (ix. 28.)

AND all Judas' friends came together, and said unto Jonathan: Since thy brother Judas died, we have no man like him to go forth against our enemies, against Bacchides, and against them of our nation that are adversaries to us. Now, therefore, we have chosen thee this day, to be our Prince and Captain in his stead, that thou mayest fight our battles. Upon this Jonathan took the government upon him at that time, and rose up instead of his brother Judas. And Bacchides gat knowledge thereof, and sought for to slay him.

First Responsory.

Judas said, &c., (p. 521.)

Second Lesson.

AND Jonathan, and Simon his brother, and all that were with him, heard of it, and fled into the wilderness of Tekoa, and pitched their tents by the water of the pool Asphar. And Bacchides knew it, and came across Jordan with all his host upon the Sabbath day. And Jonathan sent his brother John, a captain of the people, to pray his friends the Nabathites, that they might leave with them their equipage which was much. But the children of Jambri came out of Medaba, and took John, and all that he had, and went their way with it.

Second Responsory.

They decked the fore-front, &c., (p. 521.)

Third Lesson.

AFTER this came word to Jonathan and Simon his brother, that the children of Jambri made a great marriage, and were bringing the bride from Madaba, being the daughter of one of the great princes of Canaan, with a great train. And they remembered the blood of John their brother, and went up, and hid themselves under the covert of the mountain. And they lifted up their eyes, and looked; and, behold, there was much ado, and great carriage; and the bridegroom came forth, and his friends and brethren, to meet them, with drums, and instruments of music, and many weapons. Then [Jonathan and they that were with him] rose up against them from the place where they lay in ambush, and made a slaughter of them, in such sort as many fell smitten, and the remnant fled into the mountains: and they took all their spoils.

Third Responsory.

They praised the Lord, &c., (p. 522.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (xii. 1.)

NOW, when Jonathan saw that the time served him, he chose certain men, and sent them to Rome, for to confirm and renew the friendship that they had with them. He sent letters also to the Spartans, and to other places, after the same manner. So they went unto Rome, and entered into the Senate, and said: Jonathan the High Priest and the people of the Jews have sent us unto you, to the end we should renew the friendship and league as in former time. And [the Romans] gave them letters unto the Governors of every place, that they should bring them into the land of Judea peaceably.

First Responsory.

This is a lover, &c., (p. 522.)

Second Lesson.

AND this is the copy of the letters which Jonathan wrote to the Spartans. Jonathan the High Priest, and the elders of the nation, and the Priests, and the other people of the Jews, unto the Spartans their brethren send greeting. There were letters sent in times past unto Onias the High Priest from Arius, who reigned then among you, to signify that ye are our brethren; as the copy here underwritten doth specify. And Onias entreated the ambassador, that was sent, honourably, and received the letters, wherein declaration was made of the league and friendship.

Second Responsory.

Thou, O Lord of all, &c., (p. 522.)

Third Lesson.

WE, albeit we need none of these things, for that we have the holy books in our hands to comfort us, have been fain to send unto you for the renewing of brotherhood and friendship, lest we should become strangers unto you altogether; for there is a long time past since ye sent unto us. We therefore at all times without ceasing, both in our Feasts and other convenient days, do remember you in the sacrifices which we offer, and in our prayers, as reason is, and as it becometh us to think upon our brethren.

Third Responsory.

Open Thine eyes, &c., (p. 522.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (xii. 39.)

NOW Tryphon had in his thoughts to get the kingdom of Asia, and to take the crown, and to stretch forth his hand against Antiochus the King. Howbeit, he was afraid that Jonathan would not suffer him, but that he would fight against him; wherefore he sought a way how to take Jonathan, that he might kill him. So he arose and came to Bethshan. Now when Tryphon saw that Jonathan came with so great a force, he durst not stretch his hand against him, and was afraid. So he received him honourably, and commended him unto all his friends, and gave him gifts, and commanded his host to be as obedient unto him as to himself.

First Responsory.

The sun shone, &c., (p. 521.)

Second Lesson.

UNTO Jonathan also he said: Why hast thou put all the people to so great trouble, seeing there is no war betwixt us? Therefore send them now home again, and choose a few men to wait on thee, and come now with me to Ptolemaïs, and I will give it thee, and the rest of the strongholds, and forces, and all that have any charge; as for me, I will return and depart — for this is the cause of my coming. And [Jonathan] believed him and did as he bade him, and sent away his host, who went into the land of Judah. And with himself he retained three thousand men, of whom he sent two thousand into Galilee; and one thousand went with him.

Second Responsory.

They decked the fore-front, &c., (p. 521.)

Third Lesson.

BUT as soon as Jonathan entered into Ptolemaïs, they of Ptolemaïs shut the gates of the city, and took him, and all that came with him they slew with the sword. And Tryphon sent an host [of footmen] and horsemen into Galilee, and into the Great Plain, to destroy all Jonathan's company. But when they knew that Jonathan, and they that were with him, were taken and slain, they encouraged one another, and went forth prepared to fight. They, therefore, that followed upon them, perceiving that they were ready to fight for their lives, turned back again; whereupon they all came into the land of Judah peaceably. And they bewailed Jonathan and them that were with him, with great lamentation.

Third Responsory.

They praised the Lord, &c., (p. 522.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (xiii. 1.)

AND Simon heard that Tryphon had gathered together a great host, to invade the land of Judah and destroy it. And when he saw that the people was in trembling and fear, he went up to Jerusalem, and gathered the people together, and gave them exhortation, saying: Ye yourselves know what great battles I, and my brethren, and my father's house, have made for the laws, and the sanctuary; and the troubles which we have seen; by reason whereof all my brethren are slain for Israël's sake, and I am left alone. Now, therefore, be it far from me that I should spare mine own life in any time of trouble, for I am no better than my brethren. Yea, I will avenge my nation, and the sanctuary, and our children, and our wives; for all the heathen are gathered to destroy us of very malice.

First Responsory.

The Lord open, &c., (p. 520.)

Second Lesson.

AND as soon as the people heard these words, their spirit was kindled, and they answered with a loud voice, saying: Thou shalt be our leader instead of Judas and Jonathan thy brother. Fight thou our battle, and whatsoever thou commandest us, that will we do. So then he gathered together all the men of war, and made haste to finish the walls of Jerusalem; and he fortified it round about. And he sent Jonathan the son of Absalom, and with him a new host, to Joppa, who, casting out them that were therein, remained there himself. And Tryphon removed from Ptolemaïs with a great power, to invade the land of Judah; and Jonathan was with him, in ward. But Simon pitched his tents at Addus, over against the plain.

Second Responsory.

The Lord hear, &c., (p. 520.)

Third Lesson.

AND when Tryphon knew that Simon was risen up instead of his brother Jonathan, and that he meant to join battle with him, he sent messengers unto him, saying: For the money that he owed unto the King's treasure, concerning the business that was committed unto him, we have Jonathan thy brother in hold. Wherefore, now, send an hundred talents of silver, and two of his sons for hostages, that, when he is at liberty, he may not revolt from us—and we will let him go. Now Simon perceived that they spake deceitfully unto him; yet sent he the money and the children, lest he should procure to himself great hatred of the people, who might have said: Because he sent him not the money and the children, therefore did he perish. So he sent them the children and the hundred talents. Howbeit [Tryphon] dissembled, neither did he let Jonathan go.[1]

Third Responsory.

Our enemies are gathered, &c., (p. 520.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (xiv. 16.)

AND it was heard at Rome, and as far as Sparta, that Jonathan was dead, and they were very sorry. But as soon as they heard that his brother Simon was made High Priest in his stead, and ruled all the country and the cities therein, they wrote unto him in tables of brass to renew the friendship and league which they had made with Judas and Jonathan his brethren. Which writings were read before the congregation at Jerusalem. And this is the copy of the letters that the Spartans sent.

First Responsory.

Be ye not afraid, &c., (p. 520.)

Second Lesson.

THE Rulers of the Spartans, and their cities, unto Simon the High Priest, and the Elders and Priests, and residue of the people of the Jews, our brethren, send greeting. The ambassadors that were sent unto our people certified us of your glory, and honour, and happiness, and we were glad at their coming. And we did register the things that they spake in the council of the people in this manner: Numenius son of Antiochus, and Antipater son of Jason, the Jews' ambassadors, came unto us to renew the former friendship they had with us. And it pleased the people to entertain the men honourably, and to put the copy of their ambassage in public records, to the end the people of the Spartans might have a memorial thereof. Furthermore, we have written a copy thereof unto Simon the High Priest.

Second Responsory.

The heathen are assembled, &c., (p. 520.)

Third Lesson.

AFTER this Simon sent Numenius to Rome, with a great shield of gold of a thousand pound weight, to confirm the league with them. And when the Roman people heard these things, they said: What thanks shall we give to Simon and his sons? For he hath established his brethren, and chased away in fight the enemies of Israël from them? So then they wrote it in tables of brass, which they set upon pillars in mount Zion.

Third Responsory.

Thine, O Lord, &c., (p. 521.)

---

[1] He soon afterwards killed him.

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Book of Maccabees (xvi. 14.)

NOW Simon was visiting the cities that were in the country of Judea, and taking care for the good ordering of them, at which time he came down himself to Jericho, with his sons Mattathias and Judas, in the hundred-threescore-and-seventeenth year, in the eleventh month, which is the month Shebat. And the son of Abodus received them deceitfully into a little hold, called Doch, which he had built; and he made them a great banquet. Howbeit, he had hid men there. And when Simon and his sons were drunk with wine, Ptolemy and his men rose up, and took their weapons, and came into the banqueting place, and slew [Simon], and his two sons, and certain of his servants. In which he committed a great treachery in Israël, and recompensed evil for good.

First Responsory.

The sun shone, &c., (p. 521.)

Second Lesson.

AND Ptolemy wrote those things, and sent to the King, that he should send him an host to aid him, and he would deliver him the country, and the cities, and the tribute. He sent others also to Gazara to kill John; and unto the tribunes he sent letters to come unto him, that he might give them silver, and gold, and rewards. And others he sent to take Jerusalem, and the mountain of the Temple. But one ran afore to Gazara, and told John that his father and brethren were slain, and that "he hath sent to slay thee also."

Second Responsory.

They decked the fore-front, &c., (p. 521.)

Third Lesson.

HEREOF when he heard, he was sore astonished; and he laid hands on them that were come to destroy him, and slew them; for he knew that they sought to make him away. And as concerning the rest of the acts of John, and his wars, and worthy deeds of valour which he did, and the building of the walls which he made, and his doings, behold, these are written in the Chronicles of his Priesthood, from the time he was made High Priest after his father.

Third Responsory.

They praised the Lord, &c., (p. 522.)

The following Sunday is always occupied by a festival, usually that of the Purity or of the Patronage of the Blessed Virgin. In any case, no part of this Sunday office is used, except the Lessons of the First Nocturn, which being the beginning of the book of Scripture, are transferred to Monday, and the following, which forms part of the commemoration of the Sunday, at Vespers on Saturday evening.

Antiphon. The Lord, even the Lord our God, hear your prayers, and be at one with you, and never forsake you in time of trouble.

Verse. Let the evening prayer ascend unto Thee, O Lord.

Answer. And let there descend upon us Thy mercy.

Prayer of the Sunday.

Fourth Sunday of October.

The Fourth Lord's Day in October.

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson (of Sunday).

Here beginneth the Second Book[1] of the Maccabees (i. 1.)

[2] THE brethren, the Jews that be at Jerusalem, and in the land of Judea, wish unto the brethren, the Jews that are throughout Egypt, health and good peace. God be gracious unto you, and remember His covenant that He made with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, His faithful servants; and give you all an heart to serve Him, and to do His will, with a good courage and a willing mind. May He open your heart in His Law and commandments, and send you peace. May He hear your prayers, and be at one with you, and never forsake you in time of trouble. And now we be here praying for you.

First Responsory.

Judas said, &c., (p. 521.)

Second Lesson (of Sunday. 18).

THEREFORE, whereas we are now purposed to keep the Purification of the Temple upon the five-and-twentieth day of the month Casleu, we have thought it necessary to certify you thereof, that ye also may keep it, as the Feast of the tabernacles, and as the feast of the fire which was given when Nehemiah offered sacrifice, after that he had builded the Temple and the Altar. For when our fathers were led into Persia, the Priests that were then devout toward God took the fire of the Altar privily, and hid it in the valley, where was a pit deep and dry, where they kept it sure, so that the place was unknown to all men. (Third Lesson of Sunday.) But after many years, when it pleased God that Nehemiah should be sent from the King of Persia, he sent of the posterity of those Priests that had hid it, to search for the fire; but they told us they found no fire, but thick water. Then commanded he them to draw it up and to bring it unto him; and, when the sacrifices were laid on, Nehemiah the Priest commanded to sprinkle the wood and the things laid thereon, with the water. When this was done, and the time came that the sun shone, which afore was hid in a cloud, there was a great fire kindled, so that every man marvelled. (First Lesson of Monday. ii. 1.) It is also found in the records of Jeremiah the Prophet, that he commanded them that were carried away to take of the fire, as it hath been signified, and that he so commanded them that had been carried away. He gave them also the Law, lest they should forget the commandments of the Lord, and that they should not err in their minds, when they should see images of silver and gold, with their ornaments. And with other such speeches exhorted he them, that they should not let the Law depart from their hearts.

[1] "This," says Archbishop Kenrick, "is an abridgment of a diffuse history, comprised in seven books, written by Jason or Josue, an inhabitant of Cyrene in Africa."

[2] "Two letters, written by the Jews of Jerusalem to their brethren in Egypt, are placed by the author in the commencement of his work."

Second Responsory.

They decked the fore-front, &c., (p. 521.)

Third Lesson. (Second Lesson of Monday.)

IT was also contained, in the same writing, that the Prophet, being warned of God, commanded the tabernacle and the Ark to go with him, as he went forth into the mountain where Moses climbed up and saw the heritage of God. And when Jeremiah came thither, he found an hollow cave; wherein he laid the tabernacle, and the Ark, and the Altar of incense; and so stopped the door. And some of those that followed him came to mark the way, but they could not find it. (Third Lesson of Monday.) And when Jeremiah perceived it, he blamed them, saying: As for that place, it shall be unknown, until the time that God gather His people again together, and receive them unto mercy: then shall the Lord show them these things, and the glory of the Lord shall appear, and the cloud also, as it was shown with Moses, and as He showed these things when Solomon desired that the place might be sanctified unto the great God. For he treated nobly of wisdom; and, being wise, he offered the sacrifice of Dedication and of the Finishing of the Temple.

Third Responsory.

They praised the Lord, &c., (p. 522.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Maccabees (iii. 1.)

NOW when the Holy City was inhabited with all peace, and the laws were kept very well, because of the godliness of Onias the High Priest, and hatred of wickedness, it came to pass that even the Kings and Princes did highly honour the place, and magnify the Temple with their best gifts; insomuch that Seleucus, King of Asia, of his own revenues, bare all the costs belonging to the service of the sacrifices. But one Simon, of the tribe of Benjamin, who was made Governor of the Temple, fell out with the High Priest, seeking to bring about disorder in the City.

First Responsory.

This is a lover, &c., (p. 522.)

Second Lesson.

AND when he could not overcome Onias, he gat him to Apollonius, the son of Thrases, who then was Governor of Cœlesyria and Phœnicia, and told him that the treasury in Jerusalem was full of infinite sums of money, so that the multitude of their riches which did not pertain to the account of the sacrifices was immeasurable; and that it was possible to bring all into the King's hand. Now, when Apollonius had showed him of the money whereof he was told, the King chose out Heliodorus, who was over his business, and sent him with a commandment to bring him the foresaid money. So forthwith Heliodorus took his journey, under colour of visiting the cities of Cœlesyria and Phœnicia, but, in deed, to fulfil the King's purpose.

Second Responsory.

Thou, O Lord of all, &c., (p. 522.)

Third Lesson.

AND when he was come to Jerusalem, and had been courteously received of the High Priest in the city, he told him what intelligence was given of the money, and declared wherefore he came; and asked if these things were so indeed. Then the High Priest told him that there was such money laid up, for the relief of widows and fatherless children; and that some of it belonged to Hyrcanus, son of Tobias, a man of great dignity, in that whereof that wicked Simon had given information,—but that the sum of it in all was four hundred talents of silver, and two hundred of gold. And that it was altogether impossible that such wrong should be done unto them that had committed it to the [holiness of the] place and to the Temple, whose Majesty and Sanctity are honoured over all the world.

Third Responsory.

Open Thine eyes, &c., (p. 522.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Maccabees (iii. 23.)

NEVERTHELESS, Heliodorus executed that which was decreed, now as he was then present himself, with his guard, about the treasury. But the Spirit of the God of all power caused a great apparition, so that all that presumed to obey his commands were astonished at the power of God, and fainted, and were sore afraid. For there appeared unto them an horse, with a terrible rider upon him, and adorned with a very fair covering; and he ran fiercely and smote at Heliodorus with his fore-feet. And it seemed that he that sat upon the horse had complete harness of gold.

First Responsory.

The sun shone, &c., (p. 521.)

Second Lesson.

MOREOVER, two other young men appeared before him, notable in strength, excellent in beauty, and comely in apparel, who stood by him [Heliodorus] on either side, and scourged him continually, and gave him many sore stripes. And Heliodorus fell suddenly unto the ground, and was compassed with great darkness; but they that were with him took him up, and put him into a litter, and took him away. Thus he that lately came with many footmen and guards into the said treasury, was carried out unable to help himself; and the power of God was manifestly acknowledged. And he by the power of God lay speechless, without any hope or health.

Second Responsory.

They decked the fore-front, &c., (p. 521.)

Third Lesson.

SO the High Priest, suspecting that the King should misconceive that some treachery had been done to Heliodorus by the Jews, offered a sacrifice for the health of the man. And as the High Priest was praying, the same young men, in the same clothing, stood by the side of Heliodorus, and said: Give Onias the Priest thanks; insomuch as for his sake the Lord hath granted thee life. But, seeing that thou hast been scourged from God, declare unto all men the mighty works of God and His power. And, when they had spoken these words, they appeared no more.

Third Responsory.

They praised the Lord, &c., (p. 522.)

Should there be only four weeks in October, and the next Sunday be consequently the First Sunday of November, upon which the Book of Ezekiel is begun, upon the Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, hereafter immediately following, are read the Lessons from Second Maccabees assigned for the Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday of the Fifth Week of October, instead of the Lessons immediately hereafter given. Where, however, the reading of these Lessons is prevented (e.g., by the Feast of SS. Simon and Jude) they are for that year simply omitted.

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Maccabees (iv. 1.)

THIS Simon now, of whom we spake afore, having been a bewrayer of the money and of his country, slandered Onias, as if he had pushed on Heliodorus to this, and been the worker of these evils; thus was he bold to call him a traitor, that had deserved well of the city, and tendered his own nation, and was so zealous of the laws. But when this hatred went so far that by some of Simon's faction murders were committed, Onias, seeing the danger of this contention, (and that Apollonius, as being the Governor of Cœlesyria and Phœnicia, did rage, and increase Simon's malice,) he went to the King—not to be an accuser of his countrymen, but seeking the good of all with whom he had to do.

First Responsory.

The Lord open, &c., (p. 520.)

Second Lesson.

FOR he saw that it was impossible that the State should continue quiet, and Simon leave his folly, unless the King did look thereunto. But after the death of Seleucus, when Antiochus, called "the Illustrious," took the kingdom, Jason, the brother of Onias, laboured underhand to be High Priest, promising unto the King by intercession three hundred and three-score talents of silver, and of other revenues eighty talents; beside this he promised to assign an hundred and fifty more, if he might have licence to set him up a place for exercise and for the training up of youth, and to write them of Jerusalem by the name of "Antiochians."

Second Responsory.

The Lord hear, &c., (p. 520.)

Third Lesson.

WHICH when the King had granted, and he had gotten into his hand the rule, he forthwith began to bring his own nation to the Greekish fashion. And the Royal privileges, granted by special favour, to the Jews, by the means of John, the father of Eupolemus, who went ambassador to Rome for amity and aid, he took away, and, putting down the governments which were according to the Law, he brought up perverse customs.

Third Responsory.

Our enemies, &c., (p. 520.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Maccabees (v. 1.)

ABOUT the same time, Antiochus prepared his second voyage into Egypt. And then it happened that through all the city of Jerusalem, for the space of forty days, there were seen horsemen running in the air, in cloth of gold, and armed with lances, like a band of soldiers, and troops of horses in array, encountering and running one against another, with shaking of shields, and multitude of men in helmets with drawn swords, and casting of darts, and glittering of golden ornaments, and harness of all sorts. Wherefore every man prayed that that apparition might turn to good.

First Responsory.

Be ye not afraid, &c., (p. 520.)

Second Lesson.

BUT when there was gone forth a false rumour, as though Antiochus had been dead, Jason took at the least a thousand men, and suddenly made an assault upon the city. And they that were upon the walls being put back, and the city at length taken, Menelaus fled into the Castle. But Jason slew his own citizens without mercy; not considering that to get the day of them of his own nation would be a most unhappy day for him, but thinking they had been his enemies, and not his countrymen, whom he conquered. Howbeit, for all this he obtained not the principality, but at the last received shame for the reward of his treason, and fled again into the country of the Ammonites.

Second Responsory.

The heathen are assembled, &c., (p. 520.)

Third Lesson.

IN the end therefore, he had an unhappy return, being accused before Aretas, the King of the Arabians, fleeing from city to city, detested of all men, hated as a forsaker of the laws, and being had in abomination as an open enemy of his country and countrymen, he was cast out into Egypt: thus he that had driven many out of their country perished in a strange land, retiring to the Lacedemonians, and thinking there to find succour by reason of his kindred: and he that had cast out many unburied had none to mourn for him, and was cast out unburied, and had neither funeral in a strange land, nor share in the sepulchre of his fathers.

Third Responsory.

Thine, O Lord, &c., (p. 521.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Maccabees (vi. 1.)

BUT not long after this, King Antiochus sent an old man of Antioch to compel the Jews to depart from the laws of their fathers and of their God; and to pollute also the temple in Jerusalem, and to call it the temple of Jupiter Olympius; and the [temple] in Gerizim,[1] [the temple] of Jupiter the Defender of strangers, as they did desire that dwelt in the place. The coming-in of this mischief was sore and grievous to all: for the temple was filled with lewdness and revelling by the Gentiles, and dalliers with harlots; who had to do with women within the circuit of the holy places, and brought in things that were not lawful.

First Responsory.

The sun shone, &c., (p. 521.)

Second Lesson.

THE altar also was filled with profane things, which were forbidden by the Law. Neither were Sabbath-Days kept, nor the ancient Feasts observed, nor did any man plainly profess himself to be a Jew. And in the day of the King's birth they were brought by bitter constraint to the sacrifices; and when the feast of Bacchus was kept, they were compelled to go in procession to Bacchus, crowned with ivy. Moreover, there went out a decree to the neighbour cities of the heathen, by the suggestion of the Ptolemies, that they should observe the same fashions against the Jews, that they might sacrifice: and whoso would not conform themselves to the manners of the Gentiles, they should put to death. Then might a man have seen misery.

Second Responsory.

They decked the fore-front, &c., (p. 521.)

Third Lesson.

FOR there were two women brought who had circumcised their children: whom when they had openly led round about the city, the babes hanging at their breasts, they cast them down headlong from the wall. And others that had run together into caves near by, to keep the Sabbath-Day secretly, being discovered by Philip, were all burnt together, because they made a conscience to help themselves, for the honour of the sacred day. Now I beseech those that read this book that they be not discouraged for these calamities, but that they judge these punishments not to be for destruction, but for a chastening of our nation.

Third Responsory.

They praised the Lord, &c., (p. 522.)

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Thine, O Lord, is the power; * the kingdom is Thine. Thou art high above all the heathen; grant peace in our time, O Lord.

Prayer of the ensuing Sunday.

Fifth Sunday of October.

The Fifth Lord's Day of October.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Note. The Lessons here assigned for Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday, are to be preferred to those assigned for Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. They are therefore to be read, one after another, upon the first three days of this week upon which the Lessons are according to the Season, the others being omitted, if necessary.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Maccabees (vi. 18.)

THEREFORE Eleazar, one of the principal scribes, an aged man and of a well-favoured countenance, was constrained to open his mouth and to eat swine's flesh. But he, choosing rather to die gloriously than to live abominably, came of his own accord to the torment. And when he saw how that it behoved to come, bearing all things patiently, he was resolved not to taste, for the love of life, such things as are unlawful. But they that stood by, moved with cruel compassion, for the sake of the old friendship that they had with the man, took him aside and besought him that flesh might be brought such as was lawful for him to use, and to make as if he did eat of the flesh of the sacrifice commanded by the King, that in so doing he might be delivered from death. So because of the old friendship that they had with the man, they did him this kindness.

First Responsory.

The Lord open, &c., (p. 520.)

---

[1] I.e., the heretical temple of the Samaritans.

Second Lesson.

BUT he began to consider the excellency that became his age and his ancient years, and the honour wherein from his birth he had continued even unto grey hairs, and the honesty of his conversation from a child, and he answered straightway according to the commandments of the holy Law given by God, that he willed rather to be sent to the grave. For it becometh not our age, said he, to dissemble, whereby many young persons might think that Eleazar, being fourscore years old and ten, were now gone to a strange religion; and so they, through mine hypocrisy and [desire to live] in this corruptible life a little longer, should be deceived, and I get a stain to mine old age and make it abominable. For though for the present time I should be delivered from the punishment of men, yet should I not escape the hand of the Almighty, neither alive nor dead. Wherefore now, manfully changing this life, I will show myself such an one as mine age requireth; and leave a notable example to such as be young, by willingly and courageously dying a seemly death for the most honourable and holy laws. And when he had said these words, immediately he was haled to death.[1]

Second Responsory.

The Lord hear, &c., (p. 520.)

Third Lesson. (vii.)

IT came to pass also that seven brethren with their mother were taken, and compelled by the King against the Law to taste swine's flesh, and were tormented with scourges and whips. But one of them, who was the first, said thus: What wouldest thou ask or learn of us? We are ready to die, rather than to transgress the laws which God gave unto our fathers. Then the King, being in a rage, commanded pans and caldrons of brass to be made hot; which forthwith being heated he commanded to cut out the tongue of him that spake first, and to tear off the skin of his head, and to cut off the ends of his hands and feet, the rest of his brethren and his mother looking on. Now, when he was thus maimed in all his members, he commanded him, being yet alive, to be brought to the fire and to be fried in the pan, and while he was a long while suffering therein, the remainder exhorted one another, with the mother, to die manfully.

Third Responsory.

Our enemies, &c., (p. 520.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Gregory of Nazianzus, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (20*th. On the Maccabees.*)

ELEAZAR was the first-fruits of those who suffered before the coming of Christ, even as Stephen was the first-fruits of those who suffered after that coming. He was a Priest and an Elder, grey in years, and grey also in wisdom. Once he had sacrificed and prayed for the people, but now the time came when he offered himself to God as a burnt sacrifice without blemish, a peace-offering for all the people, a blessed beginning in that struggle whereunto his words and his silence were alike their exhortation. He presented likewise the bodies of seven children, the offspring of his teaching, "a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God," (Rom. xii. 1,) an oblation more glorious and more pure than any legal offering; for to give the father credit of his children is most meet and right.

Fourth Responsory.

Be ye not afraid, &c., (p. 520.)

Fifth Lesson.

THERE stood the noble and high-minded lads, the gallant sons of a noble mother, the glorious champions of the truth, men to whom the epoch of Antiochus was an anachronism, true disciples of the Law of Moses, straitest of the observers of the rites of their forefathers, in that seven-fold number which the Hebrews bless, and which is hallowed and worshipful through the reckoning of Sabbath,—there they stood, with one longing, and one aim, looking to one road to life, even to receive death for God's sake,—there they stood, brethren in soul not less than in body, only covetous one of the other's death. O what a mystery! They snatched at agony as at treasure, and perilled themselves for the teaching of the Law, with no more fear for what was before than regret for what was behind. Their dread was but one, even lest any should go uncrowned, lest brother should be unwillingly parted from brother, and be saved from the torment of the conflict to gain a disastrous victory.

Fifth Responsory.

The heathen are assembled, &c., (p. 520.)

Sixth Lesson.

THERE stood the brave and noble mother, burning with love of her children and of God, with her heart rent as few human hearts are riven. Her agony was not so much on account of the tortures which her children suffered, as from fear lest they should shrink therefrom. She yearned not more over those who left this life than she prayed that they who were left might join them; her anxiety was for the living rather than for the dead. The living were still contending, the dead had safely left the field; concerning the living she was straitened in not knowing how God would receive them, the dead she knew that God had joined unto Himself.

Sixth Responsory.

Thine, O Lord, &c., (p. 521.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

The sun shone, &c., (p. 521.)

Eighth Responsory.

One seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

---

[1] He was lashed to death.

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Maccabees (vii. 7.)

SO when the first was dead after this manner, they brought the second to make him a mocking-stock; and when they had pulled off the skin of his head with the hair, they asked him if he would eat before he were punished throughout every member of his body. But he answered in the language of his fathers, and said: No. Wherefore he also received the next torment in order, as the former did; and when he was at the last gasp, he said: Thou indeed, thou devil, takest us out of this present life, but the King of the world shall raise us up, who have died for His laws, in the resurrection unto life everlasting. After him was the third made a mocking-stock, and when he was required he put out his tongue, (and that right soon,) and held forth his hands manfully, and said courageously: These I had from heaven, but for the sake of God's laws I despise them, from Whom I wait to receive them again. Insomuch that the King, and they that were with him, marvelled at the young man's courage, for that he nothing regarded the pains.

First Responsory.

Judas said, &c., (p. 521.)

Second Lesson.

NOW, when this man was dead also, they tormented and mangled the fourth in like manner. So, when he was ready to die, he said thus: It is good, being put to death by men, to look for hope from God, to be raised up again by Him; as for thee, thou shalt have no resurrection to life. Afterward, they brought the fifth also and mangled him. Then looked he unto [the King] and said: Corruptible as thou art, thou hast power over men, and dost what thou wilt; yet think not that our nation is forsaken of God. But abide awhile, and thou shalt behold His great power, how He will torment thee and thy seed. After him also they brought the sixth; who, being ready to die, said: Be not deceived without cause; for we suffer these things of ourselves, having sinned against our God, therefore marvellous things are done unto us; but think not, thou that takest in hand to strive against God, that thou shalt escape unpunished.

Second Responsory.

They decked the fore-front, &c., (p. 521.)

Third Lesson.

BUT the mother was marvellous above all, and worthy of honourable memory, for, when she saw her seven sons slain within the space of one day, she bare it with a good courage, because of the hope that she had in God; yea, she exhorted every one of them in the language of her fathers, filled with wisdom, and stirring up her womanish thoughts with a manly spirit, she said unto them: I cannot tell how ye came into my womb, for I neither gave you breath nor soul nor life, neither was it I that formed the members of any one of you; but doubtless the Creator of the world, Who formed the generation of man, and found out the beginning of all things, will also of His own mercy give you breath and life again, as ye now regard not your own souls for His laws' sake.

Third Responsory.

They praised the Lord, &c., (p. 522.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Maccabees (vii. 24.)

NOW Antiochus, thinking himself to be despised, and suspecting it to be a reproachful speech, whilst the youngest was yet alive, did not only exhort him by words, but also assured him with an oath, that he would make him both a rich and a happy man, and that also he would take him for his friend, and trust him with affairs, if he would turn from the laws of his fathers. But when the young man would in no case hearken unto him, the King called his mother, and exhorted her that she would counsel the young man to save his life. And when he had exhorted her with many words, she promised him that she would counsel her son. But she, bowing herself toward him, laughing the cruel tyrant to scorn, said in the language of her fathers: O my son, have pity upon me, that bare thee nine months in my womb, and gave thee suck three years, and nourished thee, and brought thee up unto this age.

First Responsory.

This is a lover, &c., (p. 522.)

Second Lesson.

I BESEECH thee, my son, look upon the heaven and the earth, and all that is therein, and consider that God made them of things that were not, and so was mankind made likewise: so may it come that thou shalt fear not this tormentor, but be worthy of thy brethren; take thy death, that I may receive thee again in mercy with thy brethren. Whilst she was yet speaking these words, the young man said: Whom wait ye for? I will not obey the King's commandment, but I will obey the commandment of the Law, that was given unto us by Moses. And thou, that hast been the author of all mischief against the Hebrews, shalt not escape the hand of God. For we suffer because of our sins. And though the Lord our God be angry with us a little while for our chastening and correction, yet shall He be at one again with His servants.

Second Responsory.

Thou, O Lord of all, &c., (p. 522.)

Third Lesson.

BUT thou, O godless man, and of all others most wicked, be not lifted up with vain hopes, lifting up thine head against His servants. For thou hast not yet escaped the judgment of Almighty God, Who seeth all things. For my brethren, who have suffered a short pain, are dead under the covenant of everlasting life; but thou, through the judgment of God, shalt receive a just punishment for thy pride. But I, as my brethren, offer up my life and body for the laws of our fathers, beseeching God that He would speedily be merciful unto our nation, and that thou by torments and plagues mayest confess that He alone is God; and that in me and my brethren the wrath of the Almighty, which is justly brought upon all our nation, may cease. Then the King, being in a rage, handled him worse than all the rest, taking it grievously that he was mocked. So this man died undefiled, and put his whole trust in the Lord. Last of all, after her sons, the mother was put to death.

Third Responsory.

Open Thine eyes, &c., (p. 522.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Maccabees (viii. 10.)

SO Nicanor undertook to make so much money of the captive Jews, as should defray the tribute of two thousand talents, which the King was to pay to the Romans; wherefore immediately he sent to the cities upon the sea-coast, proclaiming a sale of the captive Jews, and promising that they should have four score and ten bodies for one talent; not expecting the vengeance that was to follow upon him from the Almighty. Now, when word was brought unto Judas, he imparted unto those Jews that were with him, that Nicanor was coming. And some of them were fearful, and distrusted the justice of God, and fled; others sold all that they had left, and withal besought the Lord to deliver them from the wicked Nicanor.

First Responsory.

The sun shone, &c., (p. 521.)

Second Lesson.

SO Maccabæus called his men together, unto the number of seven thousand, that were with him, and exhorted them not to yield to the enemy, nor to fear the great multitude of the enemy that came wrongfully against them, but to contend bravely, setting before their eyes the injury that these men had unjustly done to the holy place, and the cruel handling of the city, whereof they made a mockery, and also the taking away of the government of their forefathers. "For they," said he, "trust in their arms and boldness; but our confidence is in the Almighty Lord, Who, at a beck, can cast down both them that come against us, and also all the world." Moreover, he recounted unto them what helps from God had been given unto their fore-fathers, and how under Sennacherib an hundred four score and five thousand perished.

Second Responsory.

They decked the fore-front, &c., (p. 521.)

Third Lesson.

THUS when he had made them bold with these words, and ready to die for their laws and their country, he divided his army into four parts, and appointed his brethren leaders of each band, to wit, Simon, and Joseph, and Jonathan, giving each one fifteen hundred men. Thereunto also, Esdras read unto them the holy book, and there was given unto them the watchword of "The help of God," and then, himself, leading the first band, joined battle with Nicanor. And by the help of the Almighty, they slew above nine thousand men, and wounded and maimed the most part of Nicanor's host, and so put them to flight. So they took the money of them that came to buy them, and pursued them on all hands; but, lacking time, they returned; for it was the day before the Sabbath, and therefore they would no longer pursue them. So when they had gathered their armour and spoils together, they occupied themselves about the Sabbath, yielding praise to the Lord, Who had delivered them that day, causing mercy to begin to distil upon them. And after the Sabbath, they gave part of the spoils to the maimed, and orphans, and widows, and divided the residue among themselves and their servants.

Third Responsory.

They praised the Lord, &c., (p. 522.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Maccabees (ix. 1.)

ABOUT that time came Antiochus with dishonour out of the country of Persia. For he had entered the city called Persepolis, and went about to rob the temple, and oppress the city; whereupon the multitude running to arms, they were put to flight; and so it happened that Antiochus, being put to flight, returned with shame. Now, when he came to Ecbatane, he heard news of what had happened to Nicanor and Timothy. Then swelling with anger, he thought to avenge upon the Jews the disgrace done unto him by those that made him flee; therefore commanded he that his chariot should be driven without ceasing, to despatch the journey, the judgment from heaven now following him; for he had spoken proudly in this sort—"that he would come to Jerusalem, and make it a common burying place of the Jews."

First Responsory.

The Lord open, &c., (p. 520.)

Second Lesson.

BUT the Lord God of Israël, Who seeth all, smote him with an incurable and invisible plague. For, as soon as he had spoken these words, a fearful pain of the bowels came upon him, and sore torments of the inner parts—and that most justly, for he had tormented other men's bowels with many and strange torments. Howbeit, he nothing at all ceased from his spite. But still filled with pride, breathing out fire in his rage against the Jews, and commanding to hasten the matter, it came to pass that he fell down from his chariot, carried violently, so that, having a sore fall, all the members of his body were much pained.

Second Responsory.

The Lord hear, &c., (p. 520.)

Third Lesson.

AND thus, he that, a little afore, thought that he might command the waves of the sea, (so proud was he beyond the condition of men,) and weigh the high mountains in a balance, was now cast on the ground, and carried in a litter, showing forth in his own person the manifest power of God; so that the worms rose up out of the body of this wicked man, and, whiles he lived in torments, his flesh fell away, and the filthiness of his smell was noisome to all the army; and the man that thought, a little afore, he could reach to the stars of heaven, no man could endure to carry, for his intolerable stink.

Third Responsory.

Our enemies are gathered, &c., (p. 520.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Maccabees (x. 1.)

NOW Maccabæus and his company, the Lord keeping them, recovered the Temple and the city; and the altars which the heathen had built in the open street, and also the chapels, he pulled down. And having cleansed the Temple, they made another Altar, and, striking stones, they took fire out of them, and offered sacrifices after two years, and set forth incense, and lights, and shew-bread. When that was done, they fell flat down upon the earth, and besought the Lord that they might come no more into such troubles; but, if they sinned any more against Him, that He Himself would chasten them with mercy, and that they might not be delivered unto the barbarous and blasphemous nations. Now upon the same day that the strangers profaned the Temple, on the very same day it was cleansed again, even the five-and-twentieth day of the month which is called Casleu.

First Responsory.

Be ye not afraid, &c., (p. 520.)

Second Lesson. (24.)

NOW Timothy, whom the Jews had overcome before, when he had gathered a great multitude of foreign forces, and collected horsemen out of Asia, came as though he would take Jewry by force of arms. But when he drew near, Maccabæus and they that were with him prayed unto the Lord, and sprinkled earth upon their heads, and girded their loins with sack-cloth, and fell down at the foot of the Altar, and besought Him to be merciful to them, and to be an Enemy to their enemies, and an Adversary to their adversaries, as the Law declareth. So, after the prayer, they took their weapons, and went on farther from the city; and when they drew near to their enemies, they stopped.

Second Responsory.

The heathen are assembled, &c., (p. 520.)

Third Lesson.

NOW, the sun being newly risen, they joined both together, the one part having, together with their valour, their refuge also unto the Lord, for a pledge of their success and victory, the other side making their rage leader of their battle. But when the battle waxed strong, there appeared unto the enemies, from heaven, five comely men upon horses, with bridles of gold, leading the Jews; and two of them took Maccabæus betwixt them, and covered him on every side with their weapons, and kept him safe, but shot arrows and lightnings against the enemies, so that, being confounded with blindness, and full of trouble, they were killed. And there were slain of footmen twenty thousand and five hundred, and six hundred horsemen. As for Timothy himself, he fled into a very strong hold, called Gazara, where Chereas was Governor.

Third Responsory.

Thine, O Lord, &c., (p. 521.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Maccabees (xv. 7.)

BUT Maccabæus had ever sure confidence that God would help him. Wherefore he exhorted his people not to fear the coming of the heathen against them, but to remember the help which in former times they had received from heaven, and now to expect the victory which should come unto them from the Almighty. And so comforting them out of the Law and the Prophets, and withal putting them in mind of the battles that they won afore, he made them more cheerful; and when he had stirred up their minds, he showed them the falsehood of the heathen, and their breach of oaths. Thus he armed every one of them, not so much with defence of shields and spears, as with good and comfortable words, and, [beside that,] he told them a dream worthy to be believed, whereby he rejoiced all of them.

First Responsory.

The sun shone, &c., (p. 521.)

Second Lesson.

AND this was his vision: That Onias, who had been High Priest, a virtuous and a good man, reverend in guise, gentle in conversation, well-spoken also, and exercised from a child in all points of virtue, holding up his hands, prayed for the whole body of the Jews. This done, in like manner there appeared an aged man and exceeding glorious, and of a wonderful and excellent majesty about him. Then Onias answered, saying: This is a lover of the brethren, and of the people of Israël; this is one who prayeth much for the people, and for all the Holy City, to wit, Jeremiah the Prophet of God. Whereupon Jeremiah held forth his right hand and gave to Judas a sword of gold, and said: Take this holy sword, a gift from God, with the which thou shalt fell the adversaries of my people Israël.

Second Responsory.

They decked the fore-front, &c., (p. 521.)

Third Lesson.

THUS being well comforted by the words of Judas, which were very good, and able to stir them up to valour, and to encourage the hearts of the young men, they determined to set upon them, and manfully to try the matter by conflict, because the Holy City and the Temple were in danger. For the care they took for their wives and their children, their brethren and kinsfolks, was in least account with them, but the greatest and principal fear was for the holy Temple. Also, they that were in the city took not little care for them that were gone to the conflict.

Third Responsory.

They praised the Lord, &c., (p. 522.)

NOVEMBER.

First Sunday of November.

The First Lord's Day of November.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin, on the preceding Saturday evening. I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne high and lifted up, * and the whole earth was full of His glory, and His train filled the Temple.

Prayer of the ensuing Sunday.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel[1] (i. 1.)

AND it came to pass in the thirtieth year, in the fourth month,[2] in the fifth day of the month, as I was among the captives by the river of Chebar,[3] that the heavens were opened, and I saw visions of God. In the fifth day of the month, which was the fifth year of King Jehoiachim's captivity, the word of the LORD came unto Ezekiel, the son of Buzi, the Priest, in the land of the Chaldeans, by the river Chebar, and the hand of the LORD was there upon him. And I looked, and, behold, a whirlwind came out of the North, a great cloud, and a fire infolding itself, and a brightness was about it, and out of the midst thereof, (that is, out of the midst of the fire,) as the colour of amber.[4]

First Responsory.

[5] I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne high and lifted up, and the whole earth was full of His glory, and His train filled the Temple.

Verse. Above it stood the Seraphim: each one had six wings.

Answer. And His train filled the Temple.

Second Lesson.

ALSO in the midst thereof the likeness of four living creatures; and this was their appearance, they had the likeness of a man. And every one had four faces, and every one had four wings. Their feet were straight feet, and the sole of their feet was like the sole of a calf's foot, and they sparkled like the colour of glowing brass. And they had the hands of a man under their wings on their four sides, and they had faces and wings on four sides. And the wings of one were joined to the wings of another; they turned not when they went; they went every one straight forward.

Second Responsory.

Look down, O Lord, from the dwelling-place of Thine holiness, and take thought for us. [6] O my God, incline Thine ear, and hear. Open Thine eyes, and behold our desolation.

Verse. [7] Give ear, O Shepherd of Israël, Thou That leadest Joseph like a flock.

Answer. Open Thine eyes, and behold our desolation.

Third Lesson.

AS for the likeness of their faces, they four had the face of a man and the face of a lion on the right side, and they four had the face of an ox on the left side, and they four had the face of an eagle above. Thus were their faces, and their wings were stretched upward, two wings of every one were joined one to another, and two covered their bodies; and they went every one straight forward. Whither the spirit was to go, they went, and they turned not when they went.

---

[1] He was, says St Jerome, a Priest who was carried captive to Babylon along with King Jehoiachim, and prophesied in Chaldæa at the same time that Jeremiah was prophesying in Judæa. The Martyrology (April 10) says that "he was slain at Babylon by the Judge of the Israëlite people, because he rebuked him for idolatry, and was buried in the sepulchre of Shem and Arphaxad, the forefathers of Abraham, whither many use to resort to pray."

[2] The year is supposed by Abp. Kenrick to be reckoned from the beginning of the reign of Nabopolassar, father of Nebuchadnezzar, but he mentions that St Jerome thinks the thirtieth year of the Prophet's life is meant. See also Lesson VI. this day. "It is believed to be the year 595 B.C." If the Jewish civil year is meant, January is about the date; if the ecclesiastical, June. But if the year be of the Prophet's life, why not the month also? The Targum, however, is quite different, and very curious: "And it came to pass thirty years after that Hilkiah the High Priest had found the Book of the Law in the house of the sanctuary, in the court, under the porch, in the middle of the night, after the setting of the moon, in the days of Josiah the son of Amon, King of the tribe of the house of Judah, in the month of Tammuz, upon the fifth day of the month, the Prophet said: As I was among the captives by the river of Chebar, the heavens were opened, and I saw in a vision of prophecy which rested upon me, a vision of the glory of the majesty of the Eternal: in the fifth day of the month, which was the fifth year of King Jehoiachim's captivity: the word of prophecy from the presence of the Eternal came upon Ezekiel, the son of Buzi, the Priest, in the land of Israël. Again a second time spake He with him in a province of the land of the Chaldees, by the river Chebar, and the spirit of prophecy from the presence of the Eternal rested there upon him. And I looked, and behold, &c. &c." (Walton's Polyglott.)

[3] "The Chaboras . . . . empties into the Euphrates a little above Thapsacus."

Third Responsory.

[1] Consider, O Lord, how that the city sitteth solitary that was full of riches; how is she become as a widow, she that was great among the nations; she hath none to comfort her, save Thee, O our God!

Verse. She weepeth sore in the night, and her tears are on her cheeks.

Answer. She hath none to comfort her, save Thee, O our God!

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. She hath none to comfort her, save Thee, O our God!

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Exposition of the Prophet Ezekiel written by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Bk. i. Hom. 2.)

IT is the use of the Prophetic writers first to give name, date, and place, and then to begin to unfold the mysteries of the prophecy; thus, to give certainty of trustworthiness, a foundation is laid before, and afterward the fruits of the Spirit are set forth by signs and in figures. Thus Ezekiel saith concerning the date: "And it came to pass in the thirtieth year, in the fourth month, in the fifth day of the month." And to show the place, he addeth further: "As I was among the captives by the river of Chebar, the heavens were opened, and I saw visions of God." Then he defineth the time even more exactly, saying: "In the fifth day of the month, which was the fifth year of King Jehoiachim's captivity." And he who had thus clearly indicated his individuality, goeth on farther to state his kin, saying: "The word of the LORD came unto Ezekiel, the son of Buzi, the Priest."

Fourth Responsory.

[2] I have set watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem, which shall never hold their peace day nor night, to praise the name of the Lord.

Verse. They shall proclaim My might unto the nations, and declare My glory unto the Gentiles.

Answer. Which shall never hold their peace day nor night, to praise the name of the Lord.

Fifth Lesson.

BUT the first question which meeteth us is, Wherefore doth the Prophet, having hitherto said nothing, begin with the words: "And it came to pass in the thirtieth year?" Now, this word "And" is a conjunction, and we know that it is so called because it conjoineth that which cometh after it with that which goeth before it. Wherefore, then, doth he who hath hitherto been silent, commence by "And," when there is nothing going before for the conjunction to join to that which cometh after? To explain this, we must consider that our senses perceive only things bodily, while those of Prophets perceive also things ghostly, and to them things exist which to our ignorance seem not to do so. Hence it cometh that in the mind of a Prophet, things outer and things inner are so joined that he seeth both together, and the word which he heareth within him and that which he uttereth come together.

Fifth Responsory.

Hedge us about with Thy wall that cannot be broken down, O Lord, and shield us continually with the arms of Thy might. O Lord God of Israël, deliver them that cry unto Thee.

Verse. [3] Deliver us also according to Thy marvellous works, and give glory to Thy Name.

Answer. O Lord God of Israël, deliver them that cry unto Thee.

Sixth Lesson.

IT appeareth plainly, therefore, that he which had hitherto been silent, beginneth by the words, "And it came to pass in the thirtieth year," because his first utterance was but the continuation of something to which he had already been listening in his own mind. The words which he spoke were merely a continuation of the vision already going on within, and therefore the first are, "And it came to pass." His language is framed as though his inner revelation had been an open one. That it was in the thirtieth year[4] that the word of the Lord came unto Ezekiel, causeth us to remark that in the ordinary use of human understanding, men receive not a call to teach until they be of full age. Hence also even the Lord Himself, when He sat in the Temple in the midst of the doctors, in the twelfth year of His age, was pleased to be found, not teaching, but hearing them and asking them questions. (Luke ii. 46.)

Sixth Responsory.

[5] We looked for peace, and it came not; we asked for good, and behold trouble. We acknowledge, O LORD, our wickedness. [6] Forget us not for ever.

Verse. [7] O Lord [our God] we have sinned, we have done ungodly, we have dealt unrighteously in all Thine ordinances.

Answer. Forget us not for ever.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Forget us not for ever.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

Blessed is the people whom the Lord of hosts hath blessed, saying: O Israël! thou art the work of Mine own hands, thou art Mine own inheritance.

Verse. [8] Blessed is the nation whose God is the LORD, and the people whom He hath chosen for His own inheritance.

Answer. Whom the Lord of hosts hath blessed, saying: O Israël! thou art the work of Mine own hands, thou art Mine own inheritance.

Eighth Responsory.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel (ii. 2.)

AND I heard Him That spake unto me. And He said unto me: Son of man, I send thee to the children of Israël, to a rebellious nation, that hath rebelled against Me. They and their fathers have broken My covenant even unto this very day. And they are impudent children, and stiff-hearted, unto whom I do send thee, and thou shalt say unto them: Thus saith the Lord GOD:[1] and they, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear, (for they are a rebellious house,) yet shall know that there hath been a Prophet among them.

First Responsory.

[2] He hath redeemed His people, and ransomed them; therefore they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall rejoice in the goodness of the LORD, for wheat, and for wine, and for oil; [3] and they shall hunger no more.

Verse. And their soul shall be as a watered garden.

Answer. And they shall hunger no more.

Second Lesson.

AND thou, son of man, be not afraid of them, neither be afraid of their words, though unbelievers and rebels be with thee, and thou dost dwell among scorpions. Be not afraid of their words, nor be dismayed at their looks, for it is a rebellious house. And thou shalt speak My words unto them, whether they will hear or whether they will forbear; for they are most rebellious.

Second Responsory.

[4] I am straitened on every side, and know not what to choose. It is better for me to fall into the hands of men, than to sin against the law of my God.

Verse. For if I do this thing, it is death unto me: and if I do it not, I cannot escape your hands.

Answer. It is better for me to fall into the hands of men, than to sin against the law of my God.

Third Lesson.

BUT thou, son of man, hear what I say unto thee, and be not thou rebellious, like that rebellious house; open thy mouth, and eat that I give thee. And I looked, and, behold, an hand was sent unto me, and therein was a roll of a book; and he spread it before me. And it was written within and without, and there was written therein lamentations, and mourning, and woe.

Third Responsory.

[5] The Lord hath sent His angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me; forasmuch as before Him innocency was found in me.

Verse. [6] God hath sent forth His mercy and His truth, [and delivered] my soul from among the lions' whelps.

Answer. They have not hurt me; forasmuch as before Him innocency was found in me.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. They have not hurt me; forasmuch as before Him innocency was found in me.

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel (iii. 1.)

MOREOVER, He said unto me: Son of man, eat that thou findest; eat this roll, and go—speak unto the children of Israël. So I opened my mouth, and He caused me to eat that roll. And He said unto me: Son of man, let thy belly eat, and thy bowels be filled with this roll that I give thee. Then did I eat it; and it was in my mouth as honey, for sweetness. And He said unto me: Son of man, get thee unto the house of Israël, and speak with My words unto them.

First Responsory.

Before the face of Thine anger, O God, the whole earth is troubled; but Thou, O Lord, have mercy, and make not an end utterly.

Verse. [7] O LORD our Ruler, how excellent is Thy Name in all the earth!

Answer. But Thou, O Lord, have mercy, and make not an end utterly.

Second Lesson.

FOR thou art not sent to a people of an hard speech and of a strange language, but to the house of Israël; not to many people of an hard speech and of a strange language, whose words thou canst not understand: surely, if thou hadst been sent unto them, they would have hearkened unto thee. But the house of Israël will not hearken unto thee, for they will not hearken unto Me. For all the house of Israël are impudent and hard-hearted. Behold, I have made thy face strong against their faces, and thy forehead strong against their foreheads. As an adamant, and as a flint have I made thy countenance; fear them not, neither be dismayed at their looks, for they are a rebellious house.

Second Responsory.

Fence Thou this city, O Lord, and let Thine angels keep the walls thereof. O Lord, hearken unto Thy people with mercy.

Verse. O Lord, let Thine anger be turned away from Thy people, and from Thine holy city.

Answer. O Lord, hearken unto Thy people with mercy.

Third Lesson.

MOREOVER, He said unto me: Son of man, all my words that I shall speak unto thee, receive in thine heart and hear with thine ears. And, go—get thee to them of the captivity, unto the children of thy people, and speak unto them, and tell them: Thus saith the Lord GOD:[1]—whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear. Then the spirit took me up, and I heard behind me the voice of great rushing, [saying:] Blessed be the glory of the LORD from His place!—also the noise of the wings of the living creatures that touched one another, and the noise of the wheels following the living creatures, and the noise of a great rushing.

Verse. Let it repent Thee concerning the transgression of Thy people.

Answer. The people laden with iniquity.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. The people laden with iniquity.

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel (vii. 1.)

MOREOVER, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying: Also thou, son of man, thus saith the Lord GOD[1] unto the land of Israël: An end, the end, is come upon the four quarters of the land. Now is the end come upon thee, and I will send Mine anger upon thee, and will judge thee according to thy ways, and will bring upon thee all thine abominations. And Mine eye shall not spare thee, neither will I have pity; but I will bring thy ways upon thee, and thine abominations shall be in the midst of thee; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

First Responsory.

[3] I will show thee, O man, what is good, and what doth the LORD require of thee, but to do justice and judgment, and to walk humbly with thy God?

Verse. [4] Trust in the LORD, and do good, and dwell in the land.

Answer. Do justice and judgment, and walk humbly with thy God.

Second Lesson.

THUS saith the Lord GOD:[5] An evil, an only evil, behold, is come. An end is come, the end is come. It awaketh against thee. Behold, it is come. The ruin is come unto thee, O thou that dwellest in the land! The time is come, the day of slaughter is near, and not the joyful songs of the mountains.[6] Now will I shortly pour forth My fury upon thee, and accomplish Mine anger upon thee; and I will judge thee according to thy ways, and will recompense thee for all thine abominations. And Mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity, but I will judge thee according to thy ways, and thine abominations shall be in the midst of thee. And ye shall know that I am the LORD, That smiteth.

Second Responsory.

I am straitened, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

BEHOLD, the day, behold, it is come! The ruin is gone forth. The rod hath blossomed. Pride hath budded. Violence is risen up into a rod of wickedness. None of them shall remain; none of their people; not a sound of them; and there shall be no rest for them. The time is come; the day draweth near. Let not the buyer rejoice, nor the seller mourn; for wrath is upon all the multitude thereof. For the seller shall not return to that which he hath sold, although they were yet alive.

Third Responsory.

The Lord hath sent, &c., (p. 540.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel (xiii. 1.)

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying: Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israël, that prophesy; and say thou unto them that prophesy out of their own hearts: Hear ye the word of the LORD: thus saith the Lord GOD:[7] Woe unto the foolish prophets, that follow their own spirit, and have seen nothing. O Israël! thy prophets are like the foxes in the deserts. Ye have not gone up into the breach,[8] neither made up the wall for the house of Israël, to stand in the battle in the day of the LORD. They see vanity, and they divine lies, saying: The LORD saith:—when the LORD hath not sent them: and they [have made others to] hope that they would confirm the word.

First Responsory.

I saw the Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

Second Lesson.

HAVE ye not seen a vain vision? And have ye not spoken a lying divination? Whereas ye say: The LORD saith it:—albeit I have not spoken. Therefore, thus saith the Lord GOD:[7] Because ye have spoken vanity, and seen lies, therefore, behold, I am against you, saith the Lord GOD.[7] And Mine hand shall be upon the prophets that see vanity, and that divine lies; they shall not be in the assembly of My people, neither shall they be written in the writing of the house of Israël, neither shall they enter into the land of Israël. And ye shall know that I am the Lord GOD.[7] Even because they have seduced My people, saying: Peace:—and there was no peace—and one built up a wall, and, lo, others daubed it with untempered mortar—

Second Responsory.

Third Lesson.

SAY unto them which daub it with untempered mortar, that it shall fall. There shall be an overflowing shower, and I will cause great hailstones to fall, and a stormy wind to rend it. Lo, when the wall is fallen, shall it not be said unto you, Where is the daubing wherewith ye daubed it? Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD:[1] I will even rend it with a stormy wind in My fury, and there shall be an overflowing shower in Mine anger, and great hailstones in My wrath, to consume it. So will I break down the wall that ye have daubed with untempered mortar.

Third Responsory.

Consider, O Lord, &c., (p. 539.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel (xv. 1.)

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying: Son of man, what is the vine-tree more than any other tree of the wood, which is among the trees of the forest? Shall wood be taken thereof, to do any work? Or will men take a pin of it, to hang any vessel thereon? Behold, it is cast into the fire for fuel; the fire devoureth both the ends of it, and the midst of it is burned into ashes. Is it meet for any work? Behold, when it was whole, it was meet for no work—how much less shall it be meet yet for any work, when the fire hath devoured and burnt it up?

First Responsory.

I have set watchmen, &c., (p. 539.)

Second Lesson.

THEREFORE, thus saith the Lord GOD:[1] As the vine-tree among the trees of the forest, which I have given to the fire for fuel, so will I give the inhabitants of Jerusalem. And I will set My face against them: they shall go out from one fire, and another fire shall devour them. And ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I set My face against them, and I will make the land pathless and desolate, because they have still gone on stubbornly in their transgression, saith the Lord GOD.[1]

Second Responsory.

Hedge us about, &c., (p. 539.)

Third Lesson. (xvi.)

AGAIN the word of the LORD came unto me saying: Son of man, cause Jerusalem to know her abominations, and say: Thus saith the Lord GOD[1] unto Jerusalem: Thy root, and thine up-growing are of the land of Canaan; thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother an Hittite. And, as for thy nativity, in the day thou wast born thy navel was not cut, neither wast thou washed in water to better thee, nor salted at all, nor swaddled at all. None eye pitied thee, to do any of these unto thee, to have compassion upon thee; but thou was cast out in the open field, to the loathing of thy person, in the day that thou wast born.

Third Responsory.

We looked for peace, &c., (p. 539.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel (xix. 1.)

MOREOVER, take thou up a lamentation for the princes of Israël, and say: Why did thy mother the lioness[2] lie down among lions, and nourish her whelps among young lions? And she brought up one of her whelps;[3] and it became a lion; and it learnt to catch the prey, and to devour men. The nations also heard of him, and took him, at the cost of their own wounding, and brought him with chains into the land of Egypt. And when she saw that she was waxen feeble, and that her hope was lost, then she took another of her whelps,[4] and made him a lion. And he went up and down among the lions, and he became a lion, and learned to catch the prey, and to devour men; he learnt how to make widows, and to lay waste their cities; and the land was desolate, and the fulness thereof, by the noise of his roaring.

First Responsory.

Blessed is the people, &c., (p. 539.)

Second Lesson.

THEN the nations set against him on every side from the provinces, and spread their net over him, and with their wounding he was taken. And they put him into a cage, and brought him in chains to the King of Babylon; and they cast him into an hold, that his voice should no more be heard upon the mountains of Israël.

Thy mother was like a vine in thy blood,[5] planted by the waters; she was fruitful and full of branches by reason of many waters. And she had strong rods, for the sceptres of them that bare rule, and her stature was exalted among the thick branches, and she appeared in her height, with the multitude of her branches.

Second Responsory.

I am straitened, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

BUT she was plucked up in fury, she was cast down to the ground, and the hot wind dried up her fruit; her strong rods were broken and withered; the fire consumed her. And now she is planted in the wilderness, in a pathless and thirsty land. And fire is gone out of a rod[1] of her branches, which hath devoured her fruit; so that she hath no strong rod, to be a sceptre to rule. This is a lamentation and shall be for a lamentation.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel (xxi. 1.)

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying: Son of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, and drop thy word toward the Holy Places, and prophesy against the land of Israël. And say to the land of Israël: Thus saith the LORD: Behold, I am against thee, and will draw forth My sword out of his sheath, and will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked. Seeing then that I cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked, therefore shall My sword go forth out of his sheath against all flesh, from the South to the North, that all flesh may know that I, the LORD, have drawn forth My sword out of his sheath, not to return any more.

First Responsory.

I saw the Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

Second Lesson.

SIGH therefore, thou son of man, with the breaking of thy loins,[2] and with bitterness sigh before their eyes. And it shall be, when they say unto thee, Wherefore sighest thou?—that thou shalt answer: For the tidings; because it cometh, and every heart shall melt, and all hands shall be feeble, and every spirit shall faint, and all knees shall be weak as water—Behold, it cometh, and shall be brought to pass, saith the Lord GOD.[3] Again, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying: Son of man, prophesy and say: Thus saith the LORD God: Say—A sword, a sword is sharpened, and furbished. It is sharpened, to slaughter the victims; it is furbished, that it may glitter. Thou, that removest the sceptre of My son, hast cut down every tree.[4] And I have given it[5] to be furbished, that it may be handled. This sword is sharpened, and it is furbished, to give it into the hand of the slayer.

Second Responsory.

Look down, O Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

Third Lesson.

CRY and howl, son of man, for it[5] shall be upon My people, it shall be upon all the Princes of Israel, that are fled. They are delived up to the sword, with My people: smite therefore upon thy thigh. For it is tried, even to the overthrowing of the sceptre, so that it shall be no more,[6] saith the Lord GOD.[7] Thou, therefore, son of man, prophesy, and smite thine hands together, and let the sword be doubled, and let the sword of the slain be tripled. This is the sword of the great slaughter, that maketh them stand amazed, and faint in heart, and that multiplieth ruins.

Third Responsory.

Consider, O Lord, &c., (p. 539.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Exposition of the Prophet Ezekiel, written by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. vii. on Ez. xxi.)

IN the foregoing chapter it is written:—"Son of man, set thy face toward the way of Theman, and drop thy word toward Darom, and prophesy against the forest of the field of Nageb.[8] And say to the forest of Nageb: Hear the word of the LORD: Thus saith the Lord GOD: Behold, I will kindle a fire in thee, and it shall devour every green tree in thee, and every dry tree: the flaming flame shall not be quenched, and all faces from Negab to Tsaphon shall be burned therein. And all flesh shall see that I the LORD have kindled it: it shall not be quenched. Then said I: Ah, Lord

---

[1] "The faithlessness of Zedekiah provoked the entire overthrow of the Royal power."

[2] As with the agony of a woman in childbed. So Abp. Kenrick.

[3] The Name.

[4] St Jerome: "Thou, O sword, that removest the sceptre," &c. Targum: "It is drawn out of the scabbard to make a bloody slaughter, it is sharpened to take revenge, for this, that the tribes of the house of Judah and of Benjamin were glad at the tribes of Israël, when they were removed for having served idols; and they themselves have gone back to stray after wooden dolls." LXX. "Sword! sword! be sharp and angry, to slaughter a slaughter; be sharp to glitter, ready to destroy; slaughter! ruin! cut down every tree!"—(Walton's Polyglott.)

[5] The sword.

[6] The sense of the Latin seems to be that the sword has been tried upon Judah as an instrument of chastisement and possible reformation, with a sternness which spared not even to destroy her Royal dignity for ever.

[7] The Name.

[8] The three foregoing Hebrew names are preserved by St Jerome in the text. In his version of Ezekiel he translates them respectively, "the south," "the south-wind," and the "south field." So also the Vulgate. In the above translation the quotation is amplified, to clear the sense, which, as the actual text of the Breviary stands, is excessively obscure. Tsaphon means the north.

GOD! they say of me, Doth he not speak parables?" (xx. 46-49.) But now, as the people asked for something clearer, the Lord doth speak more openly that which He had uttered in what is diversely called metaphor, parable, or proverb: He showeth how that the forest of the field of Nageb, and Darom, and Theman, are figures of Jerusalem, and the Temple, and the Holy-of-Holies, and of all the land of Judah, and that by the flaming fire which should devour the forest, was to be understood that sword, which should be drawn out of the sheath, and should cut off from the land of Israël the righteous and the wicked. The righteous and the wicked are figured by the green tree and the dry tree. Whence also the Lord saith:—"If they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in a dry?" (Luke xxiii. 31.)

Fourth Responsory.

I have set watchmen, &c., (p. 539.)

Fifth Lesson.

THE first time He had said: "Set thy face toward the South, and drop thy word toward the South wind, and prophesy against the forest of the South." But forasmuch as this seemed dark, and the people knew not what the Prophet said, it is a second time stated more clearly that the forest of the South is Jerusalem; and all its unfruitful trees, unto whose roots the axe is being laid, are to be understood as figures of her inhabitants; and the fire to be kindled in it, to be interpreted the sword. A third time[1] is the Prophet commanded that when they should hold their peace, nor ask wherefore he prophesied thus, he should do that by which he should be questioned, and should answer that which the Lord had spoken.

Fifth Responsory.

Hedge us about, &c., (p. 539.)

Sixth Lesson.

"SIGH thou," He saith, "cry aloud, not softly nor only half sorrowfully, but with the breaking of thy loins, that thy groaning may come from the depth of thy bowels and from the bitterness of thy soul. And this shalt thou do before them. And when they shall ask thee wherefore thou art afflicted with such lamentation, and what evil hath befallen thee that thou groanest thus, thou shalt answer them with My word, saying: I lament, and am not able to hide the grief of mine heart, because that that which hath ever sounded in mine ears will indeed be fulfilled, and cometh, even the host of the wrathful Babylonians which threateneth you; and when it shall have come, and shall have made trenches all round about Jerusalem, then every heart shall melt, and all hands shall be feeble, and horror shall take hold of the minds of men, and none shall dare to withstand."

Sixth Responsory.

We looked for peace, &c., (p. 539.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

Blessed is the people, &c., (p. 539.)

Eighth Responsory.

One Seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel (xxxiii. 1.)

AGAIN, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying: Son of man, speak to the children of thy people, and say unto them: When I bring the sword upon a land, if the people of the land take a man of their coasts, and set him for their watchman, if, when he seeth the sword come upon the land, he blow the trumpet and warn the people, then, whosoever heareth the sound of the trumpet, and taketh not warning, if the sword come and take him away, his blood shall be upon his own head. He heard the sound of the trumpet, and took not warning; his blood shall be upon him. But he that taketh warning shall deliver his soul.

First Responsory.

He hath redeemed, &c., (p. 540.)

Second Lesson.

BUT if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned—if the sword come, and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity, but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand. So, thou, O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israël; therefore thou shalt hear the word at My mouth, and warn them from Me. When I say unto the wicked: O wicked man, thou shalt surely die!—if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity, but his blood will I require at thine hand.

Second Responsory.

I am straitened, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

NEVERTHELESS, if thou warn the wicked from his way, to turn from it,—if he do not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity, but thou hast delivered thy soul. Therefore, O thou son of man, speak unto the house of Israël: Thus ye speak, saying: If our transgressions and our sins be upon us, and we pine away in them, how should we then live? Say unto them: As I live, saith the Lord GOD,[2] I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from his way and live. Turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways!—for why will ye die, O house of Israël?

Third Responsory.

The Lord hath sent, &c., (p. 540.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel (xxxiv. 1.)

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying: Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds of Israël, prophesy, and say unto the shepherds: Thus saith the Lord GOD:[1] Woe be to the shepherds of Israël, that do feed themselves; should not the shepherds feed the flocks? Ye eat the milk, and ye clothe you with the wool, ye kill them that are fat,—but ye feed not the flock. The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken, neither have ye brought again that which was driven away, neither have ye sought that which was lost, but with force and with cruelty have ye ruled them.

First Responsory.

Before the face, &c., (p. 540.)

Second Lesson.

AND My sheep were scattered, because there was no shepherd, and they became meat to all the beasts of the field, when they were scattered. My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill; yea, My flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search, none, I say, did search after them. Therefore, ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD: As I live, saith the Lord GOD,[1] surely because My flock became a prey, and My sheep meat to every beast of the field, because there was no shepherd, neither did My shepherds search for My flock, but the shepherds fed themselves, and fed not My flock—therefore, ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD:

Second Responsory.

Fence thou this city, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

THUS saith the Lord GOD:[1] Behold, I am against the shepherds, and I will require My flock at their hand, and cause them to cease from feeding the flock, neither shall the shepherds feed themselves any more; and I will deliver My flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them any more. For thus saith the Lord GOD:[1] Behold, I, even I, will both search My sheep, and seek them out. As a shepherd seeketh out his flock, in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered, so will I seek out My sheep, and will deliver them out of all places, where they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day.

Third Responsory.

O Lord God! have mercy, &c., (p. 541.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel (xl. 1.)

IN the five-and-twentieth year of our captivity, in the beginning of the year, in the tenth day of the month, in the fourteenth year after that the City[2] was smitten, in the self-same day, the hand of the LORD was upon me, and brought me thither. In the visions of God brought He me into the land of Israël, and set me upon a very high mountain, whereon was as the frame of a city turned toward the south; and He brought me thither.

First Responsory.

I will show thee, &c., (p. 541.)

Second Lesson.

AND, behold, there was a man, whose appearance was like the appearance of brass, with a line of flax in his hand, and a measuring-reed in his hand; and he stood in the gate. And this man said unto me: Son of man, behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears, and set thine heart upon all the things that I shall show thee, for to the intent that they may be shown unto thee, thou art brought hither; declare all that thou seest, to the house of Israël.

Second Responsory.

I am straitened, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

AND, behold, the wall on the outside of the house round about, and in the man's hand a measuring-reed of six cubits long, and an hand-breadth. So he measured the breadth of the building, one reed; and the height, one reed. Then came he unto the gate which looketh toward the east, and went up the stairs thereof, and measured the threshold of the gate, which was one reed broad, that is, one threshold was one reed broad.

Third Responsory.

The Lord hath sent, &c., (p. 540.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel (xli. 1.)

AFTERWARD, he brought me to the Temple, and measured the posts, six cubits broad on the one side, and six cubits broad on the other side, which was the breadth of the Tabernacle. And the breadth of the door was ten cubits; and the sides of the door were five cubits on the one side, and five cubits on the other side; and he measured the length thereof, forty cubits, and the breadth, twenty cubits. Then went he inward, and measured the post of the door, two cubits, and the door, six cubits, and the breadth of the door, seven cubits.

First Responsory.

I saw the Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

---

[1] The Name.

[2] Jerusalem.

Second Lesson.

SO he measured the length thereof, twenty cubits, and the breadth, twenty cubits, before the Temple; and he said unto me: This is the Holy of Holies. After, he measured the wall of the house, six cubits, and the breadth of the side, four cubits, round about the house on every side. And the sides, side to side, were twice thirty and three, and they projected above, entering by the wall of the house, in the sides round about, that they might have hold, and yet not touch the wall of the Temple.

Second Responsory.

Look down, O Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

Third Lesson.

AND there was a broad passage round about, going up by winding-stairs; and it led into the upper loft of the Temple all round. Therefore was the Temple broader in the higher parts, and so increased from the lowest chamber to the highest by the midst. I saw also the height of the house round about, the foundations of the side chambers were a full reed, six great cubits; and the thickness of the wall for the side chamber without was five cubits, and the inner house was inside the side-chambers of the house.

Third Responsory.

Consider, O Lord, &c., (p. 539.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel (xliii. 1.)

AFTERWARD, he brought me to the gate that looketh toward the East. And, behold, the glory of the God of Israël came from the way of the East; and His voice was like the voice of many waters, and the earth shined with His glory. And I saw the vision, according to the appearance which I saw, when He came to destroy the city; and the appearance was like the vision that I saw by the river Chebar. And I fell upon my face. And the glory of the LORD came into the house by the way of the gate whose prospect is toward the East. And the spirit took me up, and brought me into the inner court; and, behold, the house was filled with the glory of the LORD.

First Responsory.

I have set watchmen, &c., (p. 539.)

Second Lesson.

AND I heard Him speaking unto me out of the house, and the man that stood by me said unto me: Son of man, the place of My throne, and the place of the soles of My feet, where I dwell in the midst of the children of Israël for ever, and My Holy Name, shall the house of Israël no more defile, neither they nor their kings, by their whoredom, nor by the carcasses of their kings, nor by their high places. They set their threshold by My threshold, and their posts by my posts, and the wall between Me and them; and they have defiled My Holy Name by their abominations that they have committed; wherefore, I have consumed them in Mine anger.

Second Responsory.

Hedge us about, &c., (p. 539.)

Third Lesson.

NOW, therefore, let them put away their whoredom, and the carcasses of their kings, far from Me; and I will dwell in the midst of them for ever. And thou, son of man, show the house to the house of Israël, and let them be ashamed of their iniquities; and let them measure the pattern, and be ashamed of all that they have done. Show them the form of the house, and the finishings of the building thereof, the goings-out thereof, and the comings-in thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and all the order thereof, and all the laws thereof; and write it in their sight, that they may keep the whole form thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and do them.

Third Responsory.

We looked for peace, &c., (p. 539.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel (xlvii. 1.)

AFTERWARD, he brought me again unto the door of the house; and, behold, waters issued out from under the threshold of the house, Eastward. For the fore-front of the house stood toward the East; and the waters came down from under, by the right side of the house, to the south side of the Altar. Then brought he me out by the way of the gate Northward, and led me about the way without unto the outer gate, by the way that looketh Eastward; and, behold, there ran out waters on the right side.

First Responsory.

Blessed is the people, &c., (p. 539.)

Second Lesson.

AND when the man that had the line in his hand went forth Eastward, he measured a thousand cubits, and he brought me through the waters, —[the waters were] to the ancles. Again, he measured a thousand, and brought me through the waters,—[the waters were] to the knees. Again, he measured a thousand, and brought me through the waters,—[the waters were] to the loins. Afterward, he measured a thousand; and it was a river that I could not pass over, for the waters were risen, a deep, quick river, that cannot be forded.

Second Responsory,

I am straitened, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

AND he said to me: Son of man, hast thou seen this? Then he brought me, and caused me to return to the brink of the river. Now when I had returned, behold, at the bank of the river were very many trees, on the one side, and on the other. And he said unto me: These waters which issue out toward the sand-hills of the East, and go down into the flat country of the desert, shall go into the sea, and when they go forth into the sea, the waters shall be healed. And everything that liveth which moveth, whithersoever the river shall come, shall live; and there shall be a very great multitude of fish, after that these waters shall come thither, and that they shall be healed. And everything shall live whither the river cometh.

Third Responsory.

The Lord hath sent, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Sunday of November.

The Third Lord's day of November.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin on the preceding evening. Hedge us about with Thy wall that cannot be broken down, O Lord, and shield us continually with the arms of Thy might.

Prayer of the ensuing Sunday.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of the Prophet Daniel (i. 1.)

IN the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim, King of Judah, came Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, unto Jerusalem, and besieged it. And the Lord gave Jehoiakim, King of Judah, into his hand, with part of the vessels of the house of God; which he carried into the land of Shinar, to the house of his god; and he brought the vessels into the treasure-house of his god. And the King spake unto Ashpenaz the master of his eunuchs, that he should bring certain of the children of Israël, and of the King's seed, and of the princes, children in whom was no blemish, but well-favoured, and skilful in all wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, and understanding science, and such as had ability in them to stand in the King's Palace, whom they might teach the learning and the tongue of the Chaldeans.

First Responsory.

I saw the Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

Second Lesson.

AND the King appointed them a daily provision of his own meat, and of the wine which he drank, so nourishing them three years, that, at the end thereof, they might stand before the King. Now, among these, were the children of Judah, Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, unto whom the Prince of the eunuchs gave names; unto Daniel, the name of Belteshazzar; unto Hananiah, of Shadrach; unto Mishael, of Meshach; and to Azariah, of Abed-nego. But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the King's meat, nor with the wine which he drank; therefore he requested of the Prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself. And God gave Daniel favour and kindness in the sight of the Prince of the eunuchs.

Second Responsory.

Look down, O Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

Third Lesson.

AND the Prince of the eunuchs said unto Daniel: I fear my lord the King, who hath appointed your meat and your drink; for if he see your faces worse-liking than the other children which are of your sort, then shall ye make me endanger my head to the King. Then said Daniel to Melzar, whom the Prince of the eunuchs had set over Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: Prove thy servants, I beseech thee, ten days, and let them give us pulse to eat, and water to drink; then let our countenances be looked upon before thee, and the countenances of the children that eat of the portion of the King's meat—and, as thou seest, deal with thy servants. So he consented to them in this matter, and proved them ten days. And at the end of ten days, their countenances appeared fairer and fatter in flesh than all the children, which did eat the portion of the King's meat.

Third Responsory.

Consider, O Lord, &c., (p. 539.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book addressed "To Virgins" by St Athanasius, Pope [of Alexandria.] (Bk. ii.)

IF any should come and say unto thee, "Fast not so often, lest thou injure thine health," believe them not, neither listen to them. They are but the tools of the great enemy to suggest such a thing unto thee. Remember how it is written that when the three children, and Daniel, and the other lads, were led captives by Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon, and it was commanded them to eat of his Royal table, and to drink of his wine, Daniel and those three children would not defile themselves with the King's table, but said unto the eunuch into whose keeping they had been given, "Give us of the fruits of the earth, and we will eat." And the eunuch answered them, "I fear my lord the King, who hath appointed your meat and your drink, lest perchance your faces should appear unto the King worse-liking than the other children, who are fed from his Royal table, and he should punish me."

Fourth Responsory.

I have set watchmen, &c., (p. 539.)

Fifth Lesson.

THEN they said unto him: "Prove thy servants ten days, and give us herbs." And he gave them pulse to eat and water to drink; and, when he brought them in before the King, their countenances appeared fairer than all the children which did eat the portion of the King's meat. Seest thou what fasting doth? It healeth diseases, it drieth up the humours of the body, it scareth away devils, it purgeth forth unclean thoughts, it maketh the intellect clearer, it purifieth the heart, it sanctifieth the body, and in the end it leadeth a man unto the throne of God. Think not that this is rash talking. Thou hast the testimony of this in the Gospels under the sanction of the Saviour Himself. His disciples asked Him why they could not cast out an evil spirit, "and He said unto them: This kind can come forth by nothing but by prayer and fasting." (Mark ix. 28.)

Fifth Responsory.

Hedge us about, &c., (p. 539.)

Sixth Lesson.

IF any man therefore be troubled with an unclean spirit, if he bethink him of this, and have recourse to this remedy, namely, fasting, the evil spirit will be forthwith compelled to leave him from dread of the power of fasting. Devils take great delight in fulness, and drunkenness, and bodily comfort. There is great power in fasting, and great and glorious things are wrought thereby. How cometh it that men work such wonders, and that signs are done by them, and that God through them giveth health to the sick, unless it be from their ghostly exercises, and the meekness of their souls, and their godly conversation? To fast is to banquet with Angels, and he that fasteth is to be reckoned, so far, among the Angelic host.

Sixth Responsory.

We looked for peace, &c., (p. 539.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsorv.

Blessed is the people, &c., (p. 539.)

Eighth Responsory.

One Seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Daniel (ii. 31.)[1]

THOU, O King, sawest, and, behold, a great image. This great image, whose height was exalted, stood before thee; and the form thereof was terrible. This image's head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms of silver, and his belly and his thighs of brass; and his legs of iron, and his feet part of iron and part of clay. Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out of a mountain without hands, which smote the image upon his feet, that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces. Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of a summer threshing-floor, which the wind hath carried away, and no place hath been found for them. And the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth.

First Responsory.

He hath redeemed, &c., (p. 540.)

Second Lesson.

THIS is the dream; and we will tell the interpretation thereof before thee, O King. Thou art a King of kings, and the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory, and, wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the heaven, hath He given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all. Thou therefore art this head of gold. And after thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee, of silver; and another third kingdom, of brass; which shall bear rule over all the earth. And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron. Even as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things, so shall it break in pieces and bruise all things.

Second Responsory.

I am straitened, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

WHEREAS thou sawest the feet and toes part of potter's clay and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided, but there shall be in it of the strength of the iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay. And as the toes of the feet were part of iron and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong and partly broken. And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men, but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay. And in the days of these kingdoms shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom thereof shall not be left to other people—but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever.

Third Responsory.

The Lord hath sent, &c., (p. 540.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Daniel (iii. 14.)

[2]AND Nebuchadnezzar spake, and said unto them: Is it true, O Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego? Do not ye serve my gods, nor worship the golden image which I have set up? Now, therefore, if ye be ready, at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, bag-pipes, and all kinds of music, fall down and worship the image which I have made. But if ye worship not, ye shall be cast the same hour into a burning fiery furnace—and who is that god that shall deliver you out of my hand?

First Responsory.

Before the face of Thine anger, &c., (p. 540.)

---

[1] These Lessons contain Daniel's interpretation of a dream of King Nebuchadnezzar. Dr Pusey understands the four kingdoms to be the Assyrian, Persian, Grecian, and Roman Empires, and the final and enduring one, the Kingdom of Christ. (Lectures on Daniel the Prophet. ii.)

[2] This was on the occasion of the dedication of a golden statue, sixty cubits high and six cubits broad, which Nebuchadnezzar had set up in the plain of Dura.

Second Lesson.

SHADRACH, Meshach, and Abed-nego answered and said to King Nebuchadnezzar: We are not careful to answer thee in this matter. For, behold, our God, Whom we serve, is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and to free us out of thy hand, O King! But if not,—be it known unto thee, O King, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up. Then was Nebuchadnezzar full of fury, and the form of his visage was changed against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. And he commanded that they should heat the furnace seven times more than it was wont to be heated.

Second Responsory.

Fence Thou this city, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson. (21.)

THEN these men were bound, in their breeches, their hats and their shoes,[1] and their other garments, and were cast into the midst of the burning fiery furnace; for the King's commandment was urgent, and the furnace exceeding hot. And the flame of the fire slew those men that cast in Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. But these three men, (that is to say, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego,) fell down, bound, into the midst of the burning fiery furnace—and they walked in the midst of the fire, praising God and blessing the Lord.

Third Responsory.

O Lord God! have mercy, &c., (p. 541.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Daniel (iv. 19.)

BELTESHAZZAR[2] answered, and said: My lord, the dream be to them that hate thee, and the interpretation thereof to thine enemies. The tree that thou sawest, which grew and was strong, whose height reached unto the heaven, and the sight thereof to all the earth, whose branches were very fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all, under which the beasts of the field dwelt, and upon whose branches the fowls of the heaven had their habitation, it is thou, O King, that art grown and become strong, for thy greatness is grown, and reacheth unto heaven, and thy dominion unto the end of the earth.

First Responsory.

I will show thee, &c., (p. 541.)

Second Lesson.

AND whereas the King saw a Watcher and an holy one coming down from heaven, and saying: Hew the tree down and destroy it, yet leave the stump of the roots thereof in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass in the tender grass of the field, and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let his portion be with the beasts of the field, till seven times pass over him;—this is the interpretation, O King, and this is the decree of the Most High, which is come upon my lord the King;—That they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field, and thou shalt eat grass as an ox, and thou shalt be wet with the dew of heaven.

Second Responsory.

I am straitened, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

AND seven times shall pass over thee, till thou know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever He will. And whereas He commanded to leave the stump of his roots, (that is, of the tree's)—thy kingdom shall be sure unto thee, after that thou shalt have known that the heavens do rule. Wherefore, O King, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee, and redeem thy sins by alms-giving, and thine iniquities by showing mercy to the poor—haply, He may not remember any more thy trangressions.

All this came upon King Nebuchadnezzar.[3]

Third Responsory.

The Lord hath sent, &c., (p. 540.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Daniel (v. 1.)

BELSHAZZAR[4] the King made a great feast to a thousand of his lords, and they drank every one of them according to his age. And when he began to be full, he commanded to bring the golden and silver vessels, which his father Nebuchadnezzar had taken out of the temple which was in Jerusalem, that the King, and his princes, and his wives, and his concubines, might drink therein. Then were brought the golden and silver vessels that were taken out of the temple which was at Jerusalem; and the King, and his princes, and his wives, and his concubines, drank in them. They drank wine, and praised their gods of gold and of silver, of brass, of iron, of wood, and of stone. In the same hour came forth fingers, as of a man's hand, and wrote over against the candlestick upon the plaster of the wall of the King's palace; and the King saw the part of the hand that wrote. Then the King's countenance was changed, and his thoughts troubled him.

First Responsory.

I saw the Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

---

[1] Rather, according to Gesenius, "their trousers, their tunics, and their cloaks."

[2] I.e., Daniel, called by his heathen name, called in to interpret another dream of Nebuchadnezzar.

[3] I.e., he was afflicted for a time with insanity.

[4] The last of the Chaldean Kings, believed to have been a grandson of Nebuchadnezzar.

Second Lesson. (13.)

THEN was Daniel brought in before the King. And the King spake, and said unto Daniel: Art thou that Daniel, which art of the children of the captivity of Judah, whom the King my father brought out of Jewry? I have heard of thee, that the spirit of the gods is in thee, and that knowledge, and understanding, and wisdom are found excellently in thee. And now the wise men, the magicians, have been brought in before me, that they should read this writing, and make known unto me the interpretation thereof; but they could not show the interpretation of the thing. And I have heard of thee, that thou canst make interpretations, and dissolve doubts. Now, if thou canst read the writing, and make known to me the interpretation thereof, thou shalt be clothed with scarlet, and have a chain of gold about thy neck, and be the third ruler in my kingdom. Then Daniel answered, and said before the King: Let thy gifts be to thyself, and give thy rewards to another! Yet I will read the writing unto thee, O King, and make known to thee the interpretation thereof.

Second Responsory.

Look down, O Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

Third Lesson. (25.)

AND this is the writing that was written: M'NE—T'KEL—PHARSIN. And this is the interpretation of the thing. "M'NE"—God hath "numbered" thy kingdom; and finished it. "T'KEL"—thou art "weighed" in the balances; and found wanting. "PHARSIN"—thy kingdom is "divided"; and given to the Medes and Persians.[1] Then commanded the King, and they clothed Daniel with scarlet, and put a chain of gold about his neck, and made a proclamation concerning him, that he should be the third ruler in the kingdom.

In that night was Belshazzar, the King of the Chaldeans, slain. And Darius the Median took the kingdom, being about threescore-and-two years old.

Third Responsory.

Consider, O Lord, &c., (p. 539.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Daniel (vi. 11.)

WHEN, then, these men made careful search, they found Daniel praying and making supplication before his God. Then they came near, and spake unto the King concerning his decree: O King, hast thou not signed a decree that every man that shall ask a petition of any god or man within thirty days, (save of thee, O King,) shall be cast into the den of lions? The King answered them, and said: The thing is true, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not. Then answered they, and said before the King: That Daniel, which is of the children of the captivity of Judah, regardeth not thy law, nor the decree that thou hast signed, but maketh his petition three times a day. Then the King, when he heard these words, was sore displeased with himself, and set his heart on Daniel, to deliver him, and he laboured till the going-down of the sun to deliver him. But when these men understood [how it was with] the King, they said unto him: Know, O King, that the law of the Medes and Persians is, that no decree which the King establisheth may be changed.

First Responsory.

I have set watchmen, &c., (p. 539.)

Second Lesson.

THEN the King commanded, and they brought Daniel, and cast him into the den of lions. And the King said unto Daniel: Thy God, whom thou servest continually, He will deliver thee. And a stone was brought and laid upon the mouth of the den; and the King sealed it with his own signet, and with the signet of his lords, lest anything should be done against Daniel. Then the King went to his palace, and passed the night fasting; meats were not brought before him, and sleep went from him. And the King rose very early in the morning, and went in haste unto the den of lions. And when he came to the den, he cried with a lamentable voice unto Daniel, and said to him: O Daniel, servant of the living God, hath thy God, Whom thou servest continually, been able to deliver thee from the lions?

Second Responsory.

Hedge us about, &c., (p. 539.)

Third Lesson.

AND Daniel answered the King, and said: O King, live for ever! my God hath sent His Angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me, forasmuch as before Him innocency was found in me; and also before thee, O King, have I done no hurt. Then was the King exceeding glad for him, and commanded that they should take Daniel up out of the den. So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt was found upon him, because he believed in his God. And the King commanded, and they brought those men which had accused Daniel, and they were cast into the den of lions, they, their children, and their wives, and the lions had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones in pieces, or ever they came at the bottom of the den.

Third Responsory.

We looked for peace, &c., (p. 539.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

[1] Probably a further play upon "Paras"—a "Persian."

IN the first year of Darius, the son of Ahasuerus, of the seed of the Medes, who was king over the realm of the Chaldeans, in the first year of his reign, I, Daniel, understood by books[1] the number of the years, whereof the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah the Prophet, that He would accomplish seventy years in the desolations of Jerusalem. And I set my face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplications, with fasting, and sackcloth, and ashes. And I prayed unto the LORD my God, and made my confession, and said: O Lord, the Great and Dreadful God, keeping the covenant and mercy to them that love Thee, and to them that keep Thy commandments: we have sinned, we have committed iniquity, we have done wickedly, and have rebelled, and have departed from Thy precepts and from Thy judgments.

First Responsory.

Blessed is the people, &c., (p. 539.)

Second Lesson. (21.)

WHILES I was speaking in prayer, behold, the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, being caused to fly swiftly, touched me about the time of the evening oblation. And he informed me, and talked with me, and said: O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding. At the beginning of thy supplications the commandment came forth; and I am come to show thee, for thou art greatly beloved; therefore understand the matter, and consider the vision. Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people, and upon thine holy city, to finish the transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the Most Holy.

Second Responsory.

I am straitened, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

KNOW therefore, and understand, that, from the going forth of the commandment to build up again Jerusalem, unto the Prince, the Anointed, shall be seven weeks, and three-score-and-two weeks. The street shall be built again, and the walls, even in troublous times. And after three-score-and-two weeks shall Christ be cut off—and they shall not be His own people that shall deny Him.[2] And a people, with a Prince that shall come, shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be desolation, and after the end of the war desolation is appointed. But he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week; and in the midst of the week the sacrifice and the oblation shall cease; and in the temple shall be the abomination of desolation; and even until the consummation and the end shall endure the desolation.[3]

Third Responsory.

The Lord hath sent, &c., (p. 540.)

Fourth Sunday of November.

The Fourth Lord's Day of November.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin on the preceding Saturday. O Lord, the King of kings, That containest the circuit of the heavens and beholdest the depths, That weighest the mountains, and holdest the earth in Thine hand, *—hear us, O Lord, when we cry unto Thee.

Prayer of the ensuing Sunday.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of the Prophet Hosea[4] (i. 1.)

THE word of the LORD that came unto Hosea, the son of Beeri, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, Kings of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam, the son of Joash, King of Israël.[5] The beginning of the word of the LORD by Hosea. And the LORD said to Hosea: Go, take unto thee a wife of whoredom, and get thee children of whoredom; for the land hath committed great whoredom, departing from the LORD. So he went, and took Gomer, the daughter of Diblaim, which conceived and bare him a son.

First Responsory.

I saw the Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

Second Lesson.

AND the LORD said unto him: Call his name Jezreel, for yet a little while, and I will avenge the blood of Jezreel upon the house of Jehu,[6] and will cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israël. And it shall come to pass at that day, that I will break the bow of Israël in the valley of Jezreel. And she conceived again, and bare a daughter: And He said unto him: Call her name No-mercy, for I will no more have mercy upon the house of Israël, but I will utterly forget them. But I will have mercy upon the house of Judah, and will save them by the LORD their God; and will not save them by bow, nor by sword, nor by battle, nor by horses, nor by horsemen.

[1] The scriptures seem to be meant, and Dr Pusey so translates. The places quoted are Jer. xxv. 11, 12, xxix. 10-12.

[2] I.e., by denying Him they shall alienate themselves from Him.

[3] Dr Pusey's explanation of the numbers is as follows,—the weeks being, of course, year-weeks, consisting of seven years each. First, from the commission to Ezra in the seventh year of Artaxerxes Longimanus, B.C. 457, to the completion of the work of restoration by Nehemiah at his second visit to Jerusalem, 7 weeks = 49 years; second, thence to the Baptism of our Lord, "when the descent of the Holy Ghost upon Him manifested Him to be the Anointed with the Holy Ghost, the Christ," A.D. 27, (since the Nativity was four years earlier than our era,) 62 weeks = 434 years; third, the one week of seven years wherein, by His ministry, He "confirmed the covenant with many," but in the midst of which, (i.e., after three years,) He was "cut off out of the land of the living," and, by His all-sufficing Oblation of Himself, superseded for ever the legal sacrifices. During the rest of the week He continued to confirm the covenant by Himself or His Apostles, before the preaching to the Samaritans showed that the special privileges of the Jews were at an end. (IVth Lecture on Daniel.)

[4] Latin, "Osee," following the LXX. in the imperfect transliteration, of which alone the Greek alphabet is capable. The name signifies "Salvation," and is from the same root as is found in "JESUS."

[5] He prophesied therefore for some sixty years, and was contemporary with Isaiah.

[6] Abp. Kenrick says—"The blood of King Joram, who was slain by Jehu in the valley of Jezreel."

Second Responsory.

Look down, O Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

Third Lesson.

AND she weaned No-mercy. Again, she conceived and bare a son. And He said: Call his name Not-My-people, for ye are not My people, and I will not be your [God.] And the number of the children of Israël shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered. And it shall come to pass that in the place where it shall be said unto them, Ye are not My people,—there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God. Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israël be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head, and they shall come up out of the land: for great shall be the day of Jezreel.

Third Responsory.

Consider, O Lord, &c., (p. 539.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book "Upon the City of God," written by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Bk. xviii. ch. 28.)

AS to the Prophet Hosea, the deeper his meaning, the harder to pierce. But somewhat may be gotten out of him, and, as I promised, I will give it here. He saith: "And it shall come to pass, that, in the place where it shall be said unto them, Ye are not My people,—there it shall be said unto them: Ye are the sons of the living God." This was understood even by the Apostles as a Prophetic witness to the call of the Gentiles, who erst had not been God's people. (Rom. ix. 24-26.)

Fourth Responsory.

I have set watchmen, &c., (p. 539.)

Fifth Lesson.

AND since the converted Gentiles are the spiritual children of Abraham, and are therefore rightly called Israëlites, therefore he goeth on, and saith: "Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israël be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head, and they shall come up out of the land." If we went on expounding this, we should water down the flavour of the prophetic draught. Let there be remembered, however, that Corner Stone, and let there be acknowledged those twain walls, [which It bindeth in one,] the Jews and the Gentiles, one called the children of Judah and the other the children of Israël, bound together under One Head, and coming up out of the land.

Fifth Responsory.

Hedge us about, &c., (p. 539.)

Sixth Lesson.

CONCERNING them that are now Israëlites according to the flesh, that will not now believe in Christ, but shall believe hereafter, (that is, their children shall believe, for these shall die, and go to their own place,) this same Prophet giveth witness, where he saith: "The children of Israël shall abide many days without a King, and without a Prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an Altar, and without a Priest, and without oracles." (iii. 4.) To whom is it not manifest that such is the state of the Jews now?

Sixth Responsory.

We looked for peace, &c., (p. 539.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

Blessed is the people, &c., (p. 539.)

Eighth Responsory.

One Seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Hosea (iv. 1.)

HEAR the word of the LORD, ye children of Israël; for the LORD hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land. By cursing, and lying, and man-killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they break out, and blood toucheth blood.[1] Therefore shall the land mourn, and every one that dwelleth therein shall languish, with the beasts of the field, and with the fowls of heaven, yea, the fishes of the sea also shall be taken away.

First Responsory.

He hath redeemed, &c., (p. 540.)

Second Lesson.

YET let no man judge nor reprove another, for thy people are as they that strive with the Priest. Therefore shalt thou fall this day, and the Prophet shall fall with thee; in the night have I silenced thy mother.[2] My people are speechless for lack of knowledge. Because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee, that thou shalt be no Priest to Me; seeing thou hast forgotten the Law of thy God, I also will forget thy children.

Second Responsory.

I am straitened, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

AS they were increased, so they sinned against Me; therefore have I changed their glory into shame. They eat up the sin of My people, and they set their heart upon their iniquity. And there shall be, like people, like Priest; and I will punish them for their ways, and reward them for their doings. And they shall eat, and not have enough; they shall commit whoredom, and shall not increase; because they have left off to take heed to the LORD.

Third Responsory.

The Lord hath sent, &c., (p. 540.)

---

[1] Incest, or the frequency of murder.

[2] I.e., the nation, or mother-country.

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of the Prophet Joel (i. 1.)

THE word of the LORD that came to Joel, the son of Pethuel.[1] Hear this, ye old men, and give ear, all ye inhabitants of the land! Hath this been in your days, or even in the days of your fathers? Tell ye your children of it, and let your children tell their children, and their children another generation. That which the palmer-worm hath left, hath the locust eaten; and that which the locust hath left, hath the canker-worm eaten; and that which the canker-worm hath left, hath the caterpillar eaten.[2]

First Responsory.

Before the face, &c., (p. 540.)

Second Lesson.

AWAKE, ye drunkards, and weep, and howl, all ye drinkers of new wine [in his sweetness,] for it is cut off from your mouth. For a nation[3] is come up upon My land, strong and without number, whose teeth are the teeth of a lion, and the cheek-teeth as of a young lion. He hath laid My vine waste, and barked My fig-tree—he hath made it clean bare, and cast it away; the branches thereof are made white.

Second Responsory.

Fence Thou this city, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

LAMENT like a virgin girded with sack-cloth for the husband of her youth. The meat-offering and the drink-offering is cut off from the house of the LORD;[4] the Priests, the LORD'S ministers, mourn. The field is wasted, the land mourneth, for the corn is wasted, the new wine is dried up, the oil languisheth. The husbandmen are confounded, the vine-dressers howl, for the wheat and for the barley, because the harvest of the field is perished.

Third Responsory.

O Lord God! have mercy, &c., (p. 541.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Joel (iii. 1.)

IN those days and in that time, when I shall have brought again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem, I will also gather all nations, and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat, and will plead with them there, for My people and for Mine heritage Israël, whom they have scattered among the nations, and parted My land. And they have cast lots for My people, and they have given a boy for a harlot, and sold a girl for wine, that they might drink.

First Responsory.

I will show thee, &c., (p. 541.)

Second Lesson.

YEA, and what have ye to do with Me, O Tyre and Sidon, and all the coasts of Palestine? Will ye render Me vengeance? And if ye recompense Me, swiftly and speedily will I return your recompense upon your own head. Because ye have taken My silver and My gold, and have carried into your temples My goodly and My pleasant things. The children also of Judah and the children of Jerusalem have ye sold unto the children of the Grecians, that ye might remove them far from their border. Behold I will raise them out of the place whither ye have sold them, and will return your recompense upon your own head.

Second Responsory.

I am straitened, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

AND I will sell your sons and your daughters into the hand of the children of Judah, and they shall sell them to the Sabæans, to a people far off; for the LORD hath spoken it. Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles, prepare a war, wake up the mighty men; let all the men of war draw near, let them come up. Beat your plough-shares into swords, and your pruning-hooks into spears. Let the weak say: I am strong. Assemble yourselves, and come, all ye heathen round about, and gather yourselves together: there shall the LORD cause thy mighty ones to come down. Let the nations be wakened, and come up to the valley of Jehoshaphat, for there will I sit to judge all the nations round about.

Third Responsory.

The Lord hath sent, &c., (p. 540.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of the Prophet Amos (i. 1.)

THE words of Amos, who was among the herdmen of Tekoah, —which he saw concerning Israël, in the days of Uzziah, King of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam, son of Joash, King of Israël, two years before the earthquake. And he said: The LORD will roar from Zion, and utter His voice from Jerusalem: and the habitations of the shepherds shall mourn, and the top of Carmel shall wither.

First Responsory.

I saw the Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

---

[1] Abp. Kenrick says that "the author of this book is not known to us otherwise than by his name being prefixed to his prophecy, together with the name of his father. He is thought to have been a contemporary of Amos, and to have prophesied in Judea."

[2] Abp. Kenrick says "it is impossible to determine the force of each of the terms" descriptive of insects. "Some take them to mark the locust in its various stages of formation."

[3] I.e., the swarm of locusts.

[4] I.e., the offerings of flour and wine, the harvest and vintage not availing to furnish them.

Second Lesson.

THUS saith the LORD: For three transgressions of Damascus, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof, because they have threshed Gilead with threshing-instruments of iron. But I will send a fire into the house of Hazaël, which shall devour the palaces of Ben-Hadad. I will break also the bar of Damascus, and cut off the inhabitant from the plain "of the idol," and him that holdeth the sceptre from the house of "Pleasure,"[1] and the people of Syria shall go into captivity unto Cyrene, saith the LORD.

Second Responsory.

Look down, O Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

Third Lesson.

THUS saith the LORD: For three transgressions of Gaza, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof, because they carried away captive the whole captivity, to deliver them up to Edom. But I will send a fire on the wall of Gaza, which shall devour the palaces thereof. And I will cut off the inhabitant from Ashdod, and him that holdeth the sceptre from Ashcalon. And I will turn Mine hand against Ekron, and the remnant of the Philistines shall perish, saith the Lord GOD.[2]

Third Responsory.

Consider, O Lord, &c., (p. 539.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of the Prophet Obadiah (i. 1.)

THE vision of Obadiah.[3] Thus saith the Lord GOD[4] concerning Edom: We have heard a rumour from the LORD, and an ambassador hath He sent among the heathen: Arise ye, and let us rise up against him in battle. Behold, I have made thee small among the nations; thou art greatly despised. The pride of thine heart hath deceived thee, thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock, whose habitation is high, that sayest in thine heart, Who shall bring me down to the ground? Though thou exalt thyself as the eagle, and though thou set thy nest among the stars, thence will I bring thee down, saith the LORD.

First Responsory.

I have set watchmen, &c., (p. 539.)

Second Lesson.

IF thieves came to thee, if robbers by night, how wouldst thou have held thy peace? Would they not have stolen till they had enough? If the grape-gatherers came to thee, would they not have left thee at the least a cluster? How are the things of Esau searched out, how are his hidden things sought up? All the men of thy confederacy have brought thee even to the border, and then have deceived thee; the men that were at peace with thee have prevailed against thee; they that eat thy bread have laid a snare under thee. There is none understanding in him.

Second Responsory.

Hedge us about, &c., (p. 539.)

Third Lesson.

SHALL I not in that day, saith the LORD, even destroy the wise men out of Edom, and understanding out of the mount of Esau? And thy mighty men from the South shall be dismayed, to the end that every one of the mount of Esau may be cut off. For the slaughter, and for thine iniquity against thy brother Jacob, shame shall cover thee, and thou shalt be cut off for ever. In the day that thou stoodest on the other side against him, when the strangers carried away his forces, and foreigners entered into his gates, and cast lots upon Jerusalem,—even thou wast as one of them.

Third Responsory.

We looked for peace, &c., (p. 539.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of the Prophet Jonah (i. 1.)

NOW, the word of the LORD came unto Jonah,[5] the son of Amittai, saying: Arise, and go to Nineveh, that great city, and cry against it, for their wickedness is come up before Me. But Jonah rose up, to flee unto Tarshish from the presence of the LORD; and went down to Joppa; and he found a ship going to Tarshish. So he paid the fare thereof, and went down into it, to go with them unto Tarshish from the presence of the LORD. But the LORD sent out a great wind into the sea, and there was a mighty tempest in the sea, so that the ship was like to be broken.

First Responsory.

Blessed is the people, &c., (p. 539.)

Second Lesson.

THEN the mariners were afraid, and cried every man unto his god, and cast forth the wares that were in the ship into the sea, to lighten it of them. But Jonah was gone down into the lower part of the ship, and he lay fast asleep. So the ship-master came to him, and said unto him: Why sleepest thou thus heavily? Arise, call upon thy God, if so be that God will think upon us, that we perish not. And they said every one to his fellow: Come, and let us cast lots, that we may know for whose cause this evil is upon us. So they cast lots; and the lot fell upon Jonah.

---

[1] According to Gesenius, the two places above named are respectively "some valley near the city of Damascus" and "a Royal city of Syria on Mount Lebanon, called by the Greeks 'Paradeisos.'" According to Abp. Kenrick, the valley between Libanus and Anti-Libanus, and a region of Libanus descending towards the valleys of Cœlesyria.

[2] The Name.

[3] Latin, Abdias. "St Jerome," says Abp. Kenrick, "on the authority of the Hebrews, identifies the Prophet Abdiah with the Governor of the house of Achab, King of Israël, (3 Kings xviii. 3,) but he does not appear to have placed entire confidence in their judgment, which is generally disregarded at the present day. Nothing is known regarding Abdiah, unless what is gathered from his prophecy, which seems to have been made after the taking of Jerusalem by the Babylonians."

[4] The Name.

[5] This Prophet, whose history, not included in the Breviary, is too well known to need relating, flourished in the days of Jeroboam II. King of Israël. (3 Kings xiv. 25.)

Second Responsory.

I am straitened, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

THEN said they unto him: Tell us, we pray thee, for whose cause this evil is upon us? What is thine occupation? What is thy country? And whither goest thou? Or of what people art thou? And he said unto them: I am an Hebrew; and I fear the LORD, the God of heaven, which hath made the sea and the dry land. Then were the men exceedingly afraid, and said unto him: Why hast thou done this? (For the men knew that he fled from the presence of the LORD, because he had told them.) Then said they unto him: What shall we do unto thee, that the sea may be calm unto us? For the sea wrought and was tempestuous. And he said unto them: Take me up, and cast me forth into the sea, so shall the sea be calm unto you, for I know that for my sake this great tempest is upon you.

Third Responsory.

The Lord hath sent, &c., (p. 540.)

Fifth Sunday of November.

The Fifth Lord's Day of November.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin on the preceding Saturday evening. I have set watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem, * which shall never hold their peace day nor night, praising the Name of the Lord.

Prayer of the ensuing Sunday.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of the Prophet Micah (i. 1.)

THE word of the LORD that came to Micah the Morasthite, in the days of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, Kings of Judah, which he saw concerning Samaria and Jerusalem. Hear, all ye people! Let the earth hearken, and all that therein is! And let the Lord GOD[1] be witness against you — the LORD, from His holy Temple. For, behold, the LORD cometh forth out of His place, and will come down, and tread upon the high places of the earth.

First Responsory.

I saw the Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

Second Lesson.

AND the mountains shall be molten under Him, and the valleys shall be cleft, as wax before the fire, and as the waters that are poured down a steep place. For the transgression of Jacob is all this, and for the sins of the house of Israël. What is the transgression of Jacob? Is it not Samaria? And what are the high places of Judah? Are they not Jerusalem? Therefore I will make Samaria as an heap of stones in the field, when as a vineyard is planted; and I will pour down the stones thereof into the valley, and I will discover the foundations thereof.

Second Responsory.

Look down, O Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

Third Lesson.

AND all the graven images thereof shall be beaten to pieces, and all the hires thereof shall be burnt with fire, and all the idols thereof will I lay desolate; for she gathered it of the hire of an harlot, and they shall return to the hire of an harlot. Therefore I will wail and howl; I will go stripped and naked; I will make a wailing like the jackals,[2] and mourning as [the chickens of] the ostrich; for her wound is incurable, for it is come unto Judah, it s come unto the gate of my people, even to Jerusalem.

Third Responsory.

Consider, O Lord, &c., (p. 539.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermon of St Basil the Great, [Archbishop of Cæsarea-in-Pontus,] upon the Thirty-third Psalm.

WHENEVER the desire to sin cometh over thee, I would that thou couldest think of the awful and overwhelming judgment-seat of Christ. There the Judge shall sit upon a throne high and lifted up. Every creature shall stand before Him, quaking because of the glory of His presence. There are we to be led up, one by one, to give account for those things which we have done in life. Presently there will be found, by the sides of those who have in life wrought much evil, dreadful and hideous angels with faces of fire, and burning breath, appointed thereto, and showing their evil will, in appearance like the night, in their despair and hatred of mankind.

Fourth Responsory.

I have set watchmen, &c., (p. 539.)

Fifth Lesson.

THINK again of the bottomless pit, the impenetrable darkness, the lightless fire, burning, but not glowing; the poisonous mass of worms, preying upon the flesh, ever feeding, and never filled, causing by their gnawing unbearable agony; lastly, the greatest punishment of all, shame and confusion for ever. Have a dread of these things, and let that dread correct thee, and be as a curb to thy mind to hold it in from the hankering after sin.

Fifth Responsory.

Hedge us about, &c., (p. 539.)

Sixth Lesson.

THIS fear of the Lord the Prophet hath promised to teach. But he hath not promised to teach it to all, but only to such as will hear him; not to such as have fallen far away, but to such as run to him, hungry for salvation, not to such as have no part in the promises, but to such as by baptism are born children of adoption, set at peace and oneness with the Word. "Come, ye children," saith he, that is to say, Draw nigh unto me by good works, all ye who by the new birth have become the worthy children of light, —"hearken unto me," all ye who have the ears of your heart opened, "I will teach you the fear of the LORD," even the fear of that Being of Whom we have just been speaking.

Sixth Responsory.

We looked for peace, &c., (p. 539.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Responsory.

Blessed is the people, &c., (p. 539.)

Eighth Responsory.

One Seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

Monday.

Second Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of the Prophet Nahum[1] (i. 1.)

THE burden of Nineveh. The Book of the vision of Nahum the Elkoshite. God is jealous, and the LORD revengeth. The LORD revengeth Him upon His enemies, and is furious upon His adversaries. The LORD is slow to anger, and great in power, and will not at all acquit the wicked. The LORD hath His way in the whirlwind and in the storm, and the clouds are the dust of His feet. He rebuketh the sea, and maketh it dry, and drieth up all the rivers.

First Responsory.

He hath redeemed, &c., (p. 540.)

Second Lesson.

BASHAN languisheth, and Carmel, and the flower of Lebanon. The mountains quake at Him, and the hills melt, and the earth trembleth at His presence, yea, the world, and all that dwell therein. Who can stand before His indignation? and who can abide in the fierceness of His anger? His fury is poured out like fire, and the rocks are thrown down by Him.

Second Responsory.

I am straitened, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

THE LORD is good, a strong-hold in the day of trouble, and He knoweth them that trust in Him. But with an over-running flood He will make an utter end of the place thereof,[2] and darkness shall pursue His enemies. What do ye imagine against the LORD? He will make an utter end; affliction shall not rise up a second time. For while they be folden together as thorns, they are drunken as drunkards; they shall be devoured as stubble fully dry.

Third Responsory.

The Lord hath sent, &c., (p. 540.)

Tuesday.

Third Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of the Prophet Habakkuk[3] (i. 1.)

THE burden which Habakkuk the Prophet did see. O LORD, how long shall I cry, and Thou wilt not hear? Even cry out unto Thee, of violence, and Thou wilt not save? Why dost Thou show me iniquity and grievance, and cause me to behold before me spoiling and violence? And there is strife, and perverseness hath the better part. Therefore the law is broken, and justice doth never attain unto execution; for the wicked doth compass about the righteous, therefore wrong judgment proceedeth.

First Responsory.

Before the face, &c., (p. 540.)

Second Lesson.

BEHOLD ye among the heathen, and regard, and wonder marvellously. For a work is worked in your days, which no man will believe when it be told him. For, lo, I raise up the Chaldeans, that bitter and hasty nation, which shall march through the breadth of the land, to possess the dwellings that are not theirs. They are terrible and dreadful. Their judgment and decree shall proceed of themselves.

Second Responsory.

Fence Thou this city, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

THEIR horses are swifter than the leopards, and are more fierce than the evening wolves, and their horsemen shall spread themselves. For their horsemen shall come from afar; they shall fly as the eagle that hasteth to eat. They shall come all to spoil; their faces shall sup up as the east wind; and they shall gather the captivity as the sand. And they shall scoff at the Kings, and the Princes shall be a scorn unto them; they shall deride every strong-hold, for they shall cast a mound, and take it.

Third Responsory.

O Lord God! have mercy, &c., (p. 541.)

Wednesday.

Fourth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of the Prophet Zephaniah[4] (i. 1.)

---

[1] "Already," says St Jerome, (quoted by Abp. Kenrick,) "the ten tribes had been led into captivity whilst Hezekiah was King of Juda; in whose reign the vision concerning Nineveh, which is here recorded, was seen, for the consolation of the people in exile."

[2] I.e., of Nineveh.

[3] Abp. Kenrick says that Habakkuk "appears to have begun to prophesy in the reign of Jehoiakim, King of Juda . . . he continued to prophesy under Jehoiachin and Zedekiah."

[4] Latin, Sophonias.

THE word of the LORD which came unto Zephaniah, the son of Cushi, the son of Gedaliah, the son of Amariah, the son of Hizkiah, in the days of Josiah, the son of Amon, King of Judah. I will utterly consume all things from off the land, saith the LORD,—I will consume man and beast—I will consume the fowls of the heaven, and the fishes of the sea. And the wicked shall come to ruin. And I will cut off man from off the land, saith the LORD.

First Responsory.

I will show thee, &c., (p. 541.)

Second Lesson.

I WILL also stretch out Mine hand upon Judah, and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and I will cut off the remnant of Baal from this place, and the name of the temple-keepers and priests, and them that worship the host of heaven upon the house-tops, and them that worship and that swear by the LORD, and that swear by Malcom.[1] And them that are turned back from the LORD, and those that have not sought the LORD, nor enquired for Him.

Second Responsory.

I am straitened, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

HOLD your peace at the presence of the Lord GOD,[2] for the day of the LORD is at hand; for the LORD hath prepared a sacrifice, He hath hallowed His guests. And it shall come to pass, in the day of the LORD'S sacrifice, that I will visit the Princes and the King's children, and all such as are clothed with strange apparel; in the same day also will I visit all those that enter insolently on the threshold—which fill the house of the Lord their God with violence and deceit.

Third Responsory.

The Lord hath sent, &c., (p. 540.)

Thursday.

Fifth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of the Prophet Haggai[3] (i. 1.)

IN the second year of Darius the King, in the sixth month, in the first day of the month, came the word of the LORD, by the hand of Haggai the Prophet, unto Zerubbabel, the son of Sheltiel, Governor of Judah, and to Joshua, the son of Josedech, the High Priest, saying: Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying: This people say, The time is not come that the LORD'S house should be built.

First Responsory.

I saw the Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

Second Lesson.

THEN came the word of the LORD by the hand of Haggai the Prophet, saying: Is it time for you to dwell in ceiled houses, and this house lie waste? Now, therefore, thus saith the LORD of hosts: Consider your ways. Ye have sown much, and brought in little; ye have eaten, but have not enough; ye have drunk, but ye are not drunken; ye have clothed you, but ye are not warm; and he that hath earned wages hath put them into a bag with holes.

Second Responsory.

Look down, O Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

Third Lesson.

THUS saith the LORD of hosts: Consider your ways; go up to the mountain, and bring wood, and build the house; and I will take pleasure in it, and I will be glorified, saith the LORD. Ye looked for much, and, lo, it came to little; and ye did bring it home, and I blew it away; why, saith the LORD of hosts? Because of Mine house that is waste, and ye run every man unto his own house. Therefore the heaven over you is stayed from dew, and the earth is stayed from her fruit.

Third Responsory.

Consider, O Lord, &c., (p. 539.)

Friday.

Sixth Day.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of the Prophet Zechariah (i. 1.)

IN the eighth month, in the second year of Darius the King, came the word of the LORD unto Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo, the Prophet, saying: The LORD hath been sore displeased with your fathers. And thou shalt say unto them: Thus saith the LORD of hosts: Turn ye unto Me, saith the LORD of hosts; and I will turn unto you, saith the LORD of hosts.

First Responsory.

I have set watchmen, &c., (p. 539.)

Second Lesson.

BE ye not as your fathers, unto whom the former Prophets cried, saying: Thus saith the LORD of hosts: Turn ye from your evil ways, and from your vile thoughts;—but they did not hear, nor hearken unto Me, saith the LORD. Your fathers—where are they? And the Prophets—shall they live for ever?

Second Responsory.

Hedge us about, &c., (p. 539.)

Third Lesson.

BUT My words, and My statutes, which I commanded My servants the Prophets, did they not take hold of your fathers? And they returned, and said: Like as the LORD of hosts thought to do unto us according to our ways, and according to our inventions, so hath He dealt with us.

---

[1] Probably the same as the beastly idol more commonly called Moloch.

[2] The Name.

[3] This Prophet and Zechariah both prophesied after the return from the captivity, to encourage the Jews in the re-building of the Temple.

Third Responsory.

We looked for peace, &c., (p. 539.)

Saturday.

The Sabbath.

MATTINS.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of the Prophet Malachi[1] (i. 1.)

THE burden of the word of the LORD to Israël by the hand of Malachi. I have loved you, saith the LORD, and ye say: Wherein hast Thou loved us? Was not Esau Jacob's brother, saith the LORD, yet I loved Jacob, and I hated Esau, and laid his mountains waste, and gave his heritage unto the savage beasts of the wilderness? Whereas Edom saith: We are impoverished, but we will return and build the desolate places—thus saith the LORD of hosts: They shall build, but I will throw down; and they shall be called the borders of wickedness, and the people against whom the LORD hath indignation for ever.

First Responsory.

Blessed is the people, &c., (p. 539.)

Second Lesson.

AND your eyes shall see, and ye shall say: Let the LORD be magnified upon the border of Israël. A son honoureth his father, and a servant his master; if then I be a Father, where is Mine honour? And if I be a Master, where is My fear? Saith the LORD of hosts unto you, O Priests that despise My Name, and that say: Wherein have we despised Thy Name? Ye offer polluted bread upon Mine Altar, and ye say: Wherein have we polluted Thee? In that ye say: The table of the LORD is contemptible.

Second Responsory.

I am straitened, &c., (p. 540.)

Third Lesson.

IF you offer the blind for sacrifice, is it not evil? And if ye offer the lame and sick, is it not evil? Offer it now unto thy governor; will he be pleased with thee, or accept thy person? saith the LORD of hosts. And now beseech the face of God, that He will be gracious unto you, (for this hath been by your means,) if so be He will anywise accept your persons, saith the LORD of hosts. Who is there among you that would shut the doors for nought, or kindle fire on Mine Altar for nought? I have no pleasure in you, saith the LORD of hosts, neither will I accept an offering at your hand. For from the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same, My Name shall be great among the Gentiles; and in every place incense and a pure offering shall be offered unto My Name, for My Name shall be great among the heathen, saith the LORD of hosts.

Third Responsory.

The Lord hath sent, &c., (p. 540.)

With Vespers begins Advent.

---

[1] "This book," says Abp. Kenrick, "was composed after the erection of the second Temple . . . . it is assigned to a time subsequent to [Nehemiah's] second return from Persia to Canaan, namely, after the 32nd year of Artaxerxes Longimanus." The writer appears as the last of the Prophets, and whether Malachi—i.e., "Messenger of the LORD"—is really a proper name or a title, seems uncertain.

Prayers, Homilies, and Gospel Antiphons

For all the Sundays after Pentecost,

From the Fourth to the Twenty-third, both inclusive, and for the Sunday next before Advent.

Fourth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

GRANT, O Lord, we beseech Thee, that the course of this world may be so peaceably ordered by Thy governance, that Thy Church may serve Thee in all godly quietness. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (v. 1.)

AT that time: As the people pressed upon JESUS, to hear the word of God, He stood by the lake of Gennesareth. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. iv. on Luke v.)

When the Lord wrought so many works of healing, neither time nor place could restrain the people from seeking health. Evening came, and they still followed Him; He went down to the lake, and they still pressed upon Him; and therefore He entered into Peter's ship. This is that ship, which spiritually up to this very hour, according to the expression of Matthew,[1] is buffeted by tempests, but still, according to Luke, is filled with fishes, this signifying, that, for a while, to labour is present to the Church, but, hereafter, it shall be to rejoice. The fishes are they which swim in the troublous waters of human life. In this ship also spiritually doth Christ, for His disciples, still sleep, and still command; for He sleepeth for the lukewarm, and watcheth for the perfect.

Eighth Lesson.

NO fear, then, for the ship where wisdom steereth, false teaching is not known, and faith swelleth the sails. How shall she be troubled, whose Lord is Himself the Church's sure Foundation? It is where faith is weak that there is fear; where love is perfect, there there is safety. To many it is commanded to loose their nets, but to Peter only to "Launch out into the deep," that is, into the depths of doctrine. What indeed is there so deep, as to gaze upon the depth of all riches, to recognise the Son of God, and to take up the confession of His Divine generation? This is a thing which the mind is not able to grasp by the searchings of man's reason, but which is embraced by an hearty faith.

Ninth Lesson.

FOR albeit, it is not given unto me to know how He was born, yet that born He was, I may not be ignorant. What the order of His generation was, I know not, but the Source of His generation I acknowledge. None hath beheld the Begetting of the Son of God by the Father, but the Church hath stood by to hear the Father testify that this is His beloved Son. (Luke iii. 22.) If we believe not God, whom shall we believe? For whatsoever we believe cometh either by sight or by hearing; sight is oftentimes deceived, but "faith cometh by hearing." (Rom. x. 17.)

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. JESUS entered into the ship, * and sat down, and taught the people. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Master, we have toiled all night, * and have taken nothing; nevertheless at Thy word I will let down the net.

Fifth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who hast prepared for them that love thee such good things as pass man's understanding; pour into our hearts such love toward Thee, that we, loving Thee in all things and above all things, may obtain Thy promises, which exceed all that we can desire. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (v. 20.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Unless your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven. And so on.

---

[1] St Ambrose's version must in this respect have differed from the present Latin, which contains no such passage in Matthew.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Bk. i. on the Lord's Sermon on the Mount, ch. 9.)

"Thou shalt not kill," is of the righteousness of the Pharisees; "Thou shalt not be angry with thy brother without a cause," is of the righteousness of them which shall enter into the kingdom of heaven. The least therefore is: "Thou shalt not kill," and whosoever shall break this commandment, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven. (v. 19.) But whosoever shall do it, and not kill, he is not therefore great, and meet for the kingdom of heaven; albeit, he hath risen a step; but he will have gotten farther, if he be not angry with his brother without a cause,—which, if he do, he will be the farther off from manslaughter. Wherefore, He Which teacheth us that we are not to be angry without a cause, destroyeth not the law, "Thou shalt not kill," but rather fulfilleth and increaseth it, making us not only to be free of the sin of outward killing, but also clean of anger within.

Eighth Lesson.

IN sins of this kind there are divers steps. First, there is the swelling feeling of anger. When this feeling appeareth in a man's heart, he keepeth it. Then the inward disturbance wringeth forth words of indignation, not themselves meaning aught, but showing the trouble of him who is provoked. And this is something more than anger kept covered under silence. Next, this audible outburst of indignation may contain direct and open reviling of him who hath roused it. And it cannot be doubted that this is something more than an empty cry of anger.

Ninth Lesson.

BEHOLD here the three degrees of guilt open respectively to the judgment, to the council, and to hell-fire. In the judgment, there is still place for defence. In the council, albeit this also is in a sense a judgment, yet we may suppose this distinction from the judgment proper, that the council pronounceth sentence, not as the result of a trial whereat the accused is present, but as the result of a consultation among the judges, to what punishment he is to be sentenced of whom it is already established that he is guilty. When we get to hell-fire, there remaineth no longer any doubt about condemnation, as in the judgment, and no longer any doubt about sentence, as in the council. In hell-fire the condemnation and the pain of him that is condemned are alike certain.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Ye have heard that it was said * by them of old time: Thou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. If thou bring thy gift to the Altar, * and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee, leave there thy gift before the Altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift. Alleluia.

Sixth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

LORD of all power and might, Who art the Author and Giver of all good things, graft in our hearts the love of Thy Name, increase in us true religion, nourish us with all goodness, and, of Thy great mercy, keep us in the same. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark (viii. 1.)

IN those days the multitude being very great, and having nothing to eat, JESUS called His disciples unto Him, and saith unto them: I have compassion on the multitude, because they have now been with Me for three days, and have nothing to eat. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. vi. on Luke ix.)

After that that woman, who is a type of the Church, was healed of the issue of blood (Luke viii. 43-48); after that the Lord had sent His disciples to preach the kingdom of God (ix. 2), His heavenly tenderness gave food. But consider who they were unto whom He gave it. He gave it—not to such as dwell at ease, not to men in cities, not to such as sit in places of worldly splendour,—but to men seeking Christ in a desert place. Such as are not given to niceness are they whom Christ receiveth, and unto whom the Word of God speaketh, not of earthly things, but of the kingdom of God (11.) And if any bear in them the running sores of fleshly passion, He healeth them.

Eighth Lesson.

AND then it came to pass that, as He had healed them that had need of healing, He fed their hunger with ghostly meat. Thus it is that no man taketh Christ's meat, unless he be first healed, and they, that are bidden to the supper, are first cured by the invitation. The lame receive the power to walk, that they may be able to come; the blind cannot see the door of the house of the Lord, unless light be given them.

Ninth Lesson.

EVERYWHERE is preserved the order of the Sacraments. The sinful soul is first healed by the remission of sins, and afterward is filled at the Table of the Lord—albeit this multitude now present is of such as do not yet feed on those strong meats, nor pasture their starving spirits upon the Body and Blood of Christ, as do they of a manlier faith. To use the words [of Paul], "I have fed you with milk and not with meat, for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able." (1 Cor. iii. 2.) The five loaves are, as it were, your milk; the stronger meat will be the Body of Christ; the more generous cup, the Blood of the Lord.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. The multitude being very great, * and having nothing to eat, JESUS called His disciples unto Him, and saith unto them: I have compassion on the multitude, because they have now been with Me three days, and have nothing to eat. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. I have compassion on the multitude, * because they have now been with Me three days, and have nothing to eat; and if I send them away fasting, they will faint by the way. Alleluia.

Seventh Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

O GOD, Whose never-failing Providence ordereth all things both in heaven and earth, we humbly beseech Thee to put away from us all hurtful things, and to give us those things which be profitable for us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (vii. 15.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. And so on.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.] (Comment. on Matth. ch. vi.)

The Lord here warneth us that we must rate the worth of soft words and seeming meekness, by the fruits which they that manifest such things bring forth in their works, and that we should look, in order to see what a man is, not at his professions, but at his deeds. For there are many in whom sheep's clothing is but a mask to hide wolfish ravening. But "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit, but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit." Thus, the Lord teacheth us, is it with men also; evil men bring not forth good fruits, and hereby are we to know them. Lip-service alone winneth not the kingdom of heaven, nor is every one that saith unto Christ, "Lord, Lord," an heir thereof.

Eighth Lesson.

WHAT use is there in calling the Lord, Lord? Would He not be Lord all the same, whether or not we called Him so? What holiness is there in this ascription of a name, when the true way to enter into the kingdom of heaven is to do the will of our Father, Who is in heaven? "Many will say to Me in that day: Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy Name?" Already here doth the Lord rebuke the deceit of the false prophets, and the feigning of the hypocrites, who take glory to themselves because of the power of their words, their prophesying in teaching, their casting out of devils, and such-like mighty works.

Ninth Lesson.

BECAUSE of all these things they promised unto themselves that they shall enter into the kingdom of heaven — as though in their words and works any good thing were their own, and not all the mighty working of that God upon Whom they call, since reading bringeth knowledge of doctrine, and the Name of Christ driveth out devils. That which is needed on our part to win that blessed eternity, that of our own which we must give, is to will to do right, to turn away from all evil, to obey with our whole heart the commandments laid on us from heaven, and so to become the friends of God. It should be ours rather to do God's will, than to boast of God's power. And we must put off from us and thrust away such as are by their wicked works already estranged from His friendship.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Beware of false prophets, * which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, * neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewn down and cast into the fire. Alleluia.

Eighth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

GRANT to us, Lord, we beseech Thee, the spirit to think and do always such things as be rightful, that we, who cannot do anything that is good without Thee, may by Thee be enabled to live according to Thy will. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xvi. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS spake this parable unto His disciples: There was a certain rich man, which had a steward; and the same was accused unto him that he had wasted his goods. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Letter 151. To Algasia.)

The lord commended the unjust steward, because he had done wisely though wickedly. The lord, although himself defrauded by it, could not but praise the shrewdness of his dishonest servant, because he had cheated him with profit to himself. How much more will our Master

Christ, Who is above any defrauding by us, and is Himself the Great Forgiver, praise us if we [win a blessing from Him by] deal[ing] indulgently with those who are to believe in Him?

Eighth Lesson.

AFTER this parable the Lord saith: "Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness." This word "mammon" is a Syriac (not an Hebrew) word, signifying ill-gotten gains. If then even ill-gotten gains can be so used by such as have them as to profit them, how much more can they who, like the Apostles, are "stewards of the mysteries of God," those true and blameless riches, how much more can they profit themselves, (1 Cor. iv. 1,) even everlastingly, by their right use of them?

Ninth Lesson.

THEREFORE it is immediately written: "He that is faithful in that which is least"—that is to say, in bodily things—"is faithful also in much"—that is to say, in spiritual things. "And he that is unjust in the least"—that is to say, by not giving to his needy brother succour of those things which are needful for the body, and which God hath made for all men, such an one—"is unjust also in much"—that is to say, he will deal out spiritual things unfairly, this to one and that to another, and not according to their true spiritual needs. "If therefore," saith the Lord, "ye have not been faithful in the" use of earthly riches which pass away, "who will commit to your trust the true and abiding riches," that is, the spiritual riches of the word of God?

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. The lord said unto his steward: * How is it that I hear this of thee? Give an account of thy stewardship. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. What shall I do? * For my lord taketh away from me the stewardship. I cannot dig; to beg, I am ashamed. I am resolved what to do, that, when I am put out of the stewardship, they may receive me into their houses. Alleluia.

Ninth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

LET Thy merciful ears, O Lord, be open to the prayers of Thy humble servants; and, that they may obtain their petitions, make them to ask such things as shall please Thee. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, One God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xix. 41.)

AT that time: When JESUS was come near to Jerusalem, He beheld the city, and wept over it, saying: If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace!—but now they are hid from thine eyes. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (39th on the Gospels.)

No man that hath read the history of the destruction of Jerusalem by the Roman Princes Vespasian and Titus, can be ignorant that it was of that destruction that the Lord spoke when He wept over the ruin of the city. It is these Princes that are pointed at where it is said: "For the days shall come upon thee that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee." The truth of what followeth: "They shall not leave in thee one stone upon another"—is even now fulfilled in the change of site of the city, which hath been re-built round about that place without the gates, where the Lord was crucified, while the ancient city hath been, as I am told, rooted up from the very foundations.

Eighth Lesson.

WHAT the sin of Jerusalem was which brought upon her the punishment of this destruction, we find written after: "Because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation." The Maker of men, through the mystery of His Incarnation, was pleased to visit her, but she remembered not to fear and to love Him. Hence also the Prophet Jeremiah, rebuking the hardness of man's heart, calleth the birds of the air to testify against it, saying: "The stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed time; and the turtle, and the swallow, and the crane, observe the time of their coming; but my people know not the judgment of the LORD." (viii. 7.)

Ninth Lesson.

THE Saviour wept over the ruin of the unfaithful city, while she herself as yet knew not that it was coming. "If thou hadst known," said He, "even thou—" and we may understand Him to have meant—"thou wouldest thyself have wept, in place of making merry as thou now dost, knowing not what hangeth over thee." And hence He saith farther: "at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace." While she was giving herself up to fleshly pleasures, and casting no look ahead upon coming sorrows, she had still for a day in her power the things which might have brought unto her peace.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. When the Lord was come near to Jerusalem, He beheld the city, and wept * over it, saying: If thou hadst known, even thou! For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side; and shall lay thee even with the ground—because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. It is written: My house is the house of prayer * for all nations; but ye have made it a den of thieves. And He taught daily in the Temple.

Tenth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who declarest Thine Almighty power most chiefly in showing mercy and pity, mercifully grant unto us such a measure of Thy grace, that we, running the way of Thy commandments, may obtain Thy gracious promises, and be made partakers of Thy heavenly treasure. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xviii. 9.)

AT that time: JESUS spake this parable unto certain which trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and despised others: Two men went up into the Temple to pray, the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (36*th upon the Words of the Lord.*)

The Pharisee might at least have said, "I am not as many men are." But what meaneth "other men"? All other men except himself. "I," said he, "am righteous; others are sinners." "I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers,"—and then he took occasion, from the neighbourhood of the publican, to plume himself—"or even," quoth he, "as this publican." "I am alone," he thought, "that publican is one of the others. Mine own righteousness maketh the gulf between me and the wicked, such as he is."

Eighth Lesson.

"I FAST twice in the week; I give tithes of all that I possess." If we look in his prayer to find what he went to the Temple to pray to God for, we shall find nothing. He went up to pray, but his prayer was not a request of anything from God, but a glorification of himself. It was little enough not to pray to God, but he also glorified himself and despised his neighbour. But the publican stood afar off—and yet drew nigh to God. Self-knowledge bade him keep at a distance, but his earnestness made him close. The publican stood afar off, but the Lord was at hand to hear him.

Ninth Lesson.

"THOUGH the LORD be high, yet hath He respect unto the lowly; but the proud"—such as was this Pharisee—"He knoweth afar off." (Ps. cxxxvii. 6.) He knoweth the proud, all the same, but they are afar off from Him. Consider now the lowliness of the publican. It was not only that he stood afar off, but "he would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven;" he looked carefully lest he should look up; he dared not to lift up his eyes unto heaven; self-knowledge kept him down, though hope raised him up. Consider again, how that he "smote upon his breast." He afflicted himself, and therefore the Lord had compassion upon his acknowledgment of guilt. "He smote upon his breast, saying: Lord, be merciful to me a sinner." Hearken here to a prayer; and wonderest thou that when the sinner remembereth, God forgetteth?

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. The publican, standing afar off, * would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying: God be merciful to me a sinner.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. This man went down to his house * justified rather than the other: for every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

Eleventh Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, Who art always more ready to hear than we to pray, and art wont to give more than either we desire or deserve, pour down upon us the abundance of Thy mercy, forgiving us those things whereof our conscience is afraid, and giving us those good things which we are not worthy to ask. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark (vii. 31.)

AT that time: JESUS, departing from the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, came unto the sea of Galilee, through the midst of the coasts of Decapolis. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Hom. x. Bk. i. on Ezekiel.)

What signifieth it that when God, the Maker of all, would heal a deaf and dumb man, "He put His Fingers into his ears, and He spit, and touched his tongue?" What is figured by the Fingers of the Redeemer but the gifts of the Holy Ghost? Hence it is written in another place (Luke xi. 20) that after He had cast out an evil spirit, He said: "If I with the finger of God cast out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come upon you"—which words are thus given by another Evangelist (Matth. xii. 28):—"If I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you." By setting these two passages together we see that the Spirit is called the Finger. For our Lord, then, to put His Fingers into the deaf man's ears was by the gift of the Holy Spirit to enlighten his dark mind unto obedience.

Eighth Lesson.

WHAT signifieth it also that "He spit and touched his tongue?" We receive spittle out of the Redeemer's mouth upon our tongues when we receive wisdom to speak God's truth. Spittle is a secretion of the head which floweth into the mouth. And so, that wisdom, which is Himself, the great Head of His Church, as soon as it hath touched our tongue, doth straightway take the form of preaching. "And looking up to heaven, He sighed," not that He had any need to sigh, Who gave whatsoever He asked, but that He was fain to teach us to look up and sigh toward Him Whose throne is in heaven, confessing our need, that our ears should be opened by the gift of the Holy Spirit, and our tongue loosed by the spittle of our Saviour's Mouth, that is, by knowledge of His Divine Word, before we can use it to preach to others.

Ninth Lesson.

"AND He said unto him: Ephphatha—that is: Be opened. And straighway his ears were opened, and the string of his tongue was loosed." Herein we must remark the command, "Be opened" was addressed to the deaf ears, but the tongue also was immediately loosed. Just so, when the ears of a man's heart have been opened to learn the obedience of faith, the string of his tongue also is thereupon loosed, that he may exhort others to do the good things which himself doth. It is well added: "And he spake plain." He only doth well preach obedience to others who hath first learnt himself to obey.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. When the Lord had departed from the coasts of Tyre, * He made both the deaf to hear and the dumb to speak.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. He hath done all things well, * He maketh both the deaf to hear and the dumb to speak.

Twelfth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

ALMIGHTY and merciful God, of Whose only gift it cometh that Thy faithful people do unto Thee true and laudable service, grant, we beseech Thee, that we may so faithfully serve Thee in this life, that we fail not finally to attain Thy heavenly promises. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (x. 23.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see. For I tell you that many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them. And so on.

Homily by the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow.] (Bk. iii. ch. 43 on Luke x.)

Blessed were the eyes — not of Scribes and Pharisees, which saw but the Body of the Lord,—but those eyes, eyes blessed indeed, which were able to see those things whereof it is written: "Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes." Blessed are the eyes of those little ones unto whom it seemeth good in the eyes of the Son to reveal Himself and the Father also. Abraham rejoiced to see the day of Christ; and he saw it, and was glad. (John viii. 56.) Isaiah, and Micah, and many among the Prophets, saw the glory of the Lord, —wherefore also they be called Seers,—but all they beheld it and hailed it afar off, seeing but as through a glass, darkly. (1 Cor. xiii. 12.)

Eighth Lesson.

OTHERWISE were the Apostles, who saw the Lord face to Face, eating with Him, and learning from Him by asking whatsoever they listed. For them there was no need to be taught by Angels, or the shifting fabric of visions. They whom Luke doth call Prophets and kings, Matthew nameth as "Prophets and righteous men" (xiii. 17.) Righteous men are indeed mighty kings, who know how to lord it over their own rebellious temptations, instead of falling under them to become their slaves.

Ninth Lesson.

"AND, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted Him, saying: Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" This lawyer, who stood up to ask the Lord a tempting question touching eternal life, took the subject of his asking, as I think, from the words which the Lord had just uttered, when He said: "Rejoice, because your names are written in heaven" (20.) But his attempt was a proof of the truth of that which the Lord immediately added: "I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes!"

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Master, what shall I do * to inherit eternal life? He said unto him: What is written in the law? How readest thou? And he, answering, said: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. A certain man went down from Jerusalem * to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead.

Thirteenth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, give unto us the increase of faith, hope, and charity, and that we may worthily obtain that which Thou dost promise, make us to love that which Thou dost command. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xvii. 11.)

IT came to pass, as JESUS went to Jerusalem, that He passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee. And, as He entered into a certain village, there met Him ten men that were lepers. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Bk. ii. Gospel Questions, ch. 40.)

The ten lepers "lifted up their voices and said: JESUS, Master, have mercy on us. And when He saw them, He said unto them: Go, show yourselves unto the Priests. And it came to pass that, as they went, they were cleansed." Question: why did the Lord send them unto the Priests, that, as they went, they might be cleansed? Lepers were the only class among those upon whose bodies He worked mercy, whom we find that He sent unto the Priests. It is written in another place that He said to a leper whom He had cleansed: "Go, and show thyself to the Priest, and offer for thy cleansing according as Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them" (Luke v. 14, Lev. xiv. 1 et seq.) We ask then, of what leprosy was a type, whereof they that were ridded were called, not "healed," but "cleansed." It is a disease which doth first appear in the skin, but destroyeth not immediately the strength, nor the use of feeling and the limbs.

Eighth Lesson.

BY lepers, therefore, we may not absurdly suppose such to be figured as have not the knowledge of the true faith, but do show forth divers parti-coloured teachings of error. They hide not their witlessness, but do use all such wit as they have to make it manifest, and proclaim it in high-sounding phrases. There is no false doctrine but hath some truth mixed up with it. A man's discourse then, with some truths in it unequally mingled with falsehoods, and all confounded in one mass, is like to the body of one that is stricken with leprosy, whereon all manner of foul colours do appear in this and that place along with the true colour of skin.

Ninth Lesson.

SUCH men as these are banished out of the walls of the Church, to the end that haply when they stand afar off they may lift up their voices and cry to Christ for pardon, just as those ten men that were lepers, which stood afar off, outside the village, lifted up their voices and said: "JESUS, Master, have mercy on us." That they styled Him Master, by which title I know not if any besought the Lord for bodily healing, I think doth sufficiently show that leprosy signifieth false doctrine, whereof the Good Master doth cleanse us.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. As JESUS passed through * a certain village, there met Him ten men that were lepers, which stood afar off; and they lifted up their voices, and said: "JESUS, Master, have mercy on us."

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. And one of them, * when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God. Alleluia.

Fourteenth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

KEEP, we beseech Thee, O Lord, Thy Church with Thy perpetual mercy, and because the frailty of man without Thee cannot but fall, keep us ever by Thy help from all things hurtful, and lead us to all things profitable to our salvation. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (vi. 24.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: No man can serve two masters. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Bk. ii. on the Lord's Sermon on the Mount, ch. xiv.)

"No man can serve two masters," and this is further explained—"for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other." These words we ought carefully to weigh, for the Lord showeth straightway who be the two masters whom we have choice of: "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon." Mammon is a term which the Hebrews are said to use for riches. It is also a Carthaginian word; for the Punic for "gain" is "mammon."

Eighth Lesson.

HE which serveth mammon, serveth that evil one who hath perversely chosen to be lord of these earthly things, and is called by the Lord "the prince of this world." (John xiv. 30.) Of these two masters, either a man will hate the one and love the other, that is God—or he will hold to the one and despise the other. He which serveth mammon holdeth to an hard and destroying master, for he is led captive by his lust, and sold a slave to the devil, and him loveth no man—is there any man that loveth the devil? And yet there be that hold to him.

Ninth Lesson.

"THEREFORE, I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on"—lest, albeit such things are not idle, but needful to be sought after, yet the seeking for things even needful should divide the heart; and our intention should be corrupted when we do something as it were mercifully; that is, lest, when we would seem to be seeking another's good, it should be profit to ourselves, rather than benefit to him, that we seek; and therefore we seem not to ourselves to sin, because we would seek things not idle, but needful.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Take no thought, saying: What shall we eat? * or, What shall we drink? For your Father knoweth what things ye have need of. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Seek ye first the kingdom of God * and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you. Alleluia.

Fifteenth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

O LORD, we beseech Thee, let Thy continual pity cleanse and defend Thy Church, and because it cannot continue in safety without Thy succour, preserve it evermore by Thy help and goodness. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (vii. 11.)

AT that time: JESUS went into a city called Nain; and His disciples went with Him, and much people. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (44*th Discourse on the Words of the Lord.*)

That her son was called again to life was the joy of that widowed mother; that souls of men are every day called to life is the joy of our Mother the Church. He was dead in body; they have been dead in mind. His death was outward, and was outwardly bewailed; their inward death hath been neither mourned for nor seen. But He hath sought for them, Who hath seen that they are dead, and He only hath seen that they are dead, Who hath been able to make them alive. If He had not come to raise the dead, the Apostle had not said:—"Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." (Eph. v. 14.)

Eighth Lesson.

WE find written how the Lord raised from the dead three persons visibly, but thousands invisibly. But how many they may have been whom He raised visibly, who knoweth? For all the things which He did are not written. John saith thus:—"There are also many other things which JESUS did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written." (xxi. 25.) There were then, doubtless, many more raised to life, but it is not meaningless that three are recorded. For our Lord JESUS Christ hath willed that those things which He did carnally, we should understand also spiritually. He worked not miracles only for the sake of working wonders, but that His works might be at once wonderful to them that beheld, and true to them that understand them.

Ninth Lesson.

EVEN as one that looketh upon a scroll right fairly written, and knoweth not how to read therein, praiseth the hand of the old scribe when he seeth the beauty of the points, but what it saith, what those points mean, he knoweth not, and praiseth by the eye, without understanding by the mind,—and as, on the other hand, he that can not only gaze on it, as can all men, but also can read it, praiseth the penmanship, and catcheth the sense likewise, which the unlearned cannot do: even so, there were some that saw the miracles which Christ did, and understood not what they meant, nor what they, as it were, hinted to such as did understand them, and these only marvelled to see them wrought. And other some there were which saw the works, and marvelled, and understood them, and profited by them. And it is as these last that we ought to be in the school of Christ.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. JESUS went into a city called Nain; * and, behold, there was a dead man carried out, the only son of his mother.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. A great prophet is risen up among us; * and God hath visited His people.

Sixteenth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

LORD, we pray Thee that Thy grace may always prevent and follow us, and make us continually to be given to all good works. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xiv. 1.)

AT that time: As JESUS went into the house of one of the chief Pharisees, to eat bread on the Sabbath-day, they watched Him. And, behold, there was a certain man before Him, which had the dropsy. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. vii. on Luke xiv.)

Now is healed this man sick of the dropsy, in whom too much watery matter had well-nigh drowned the functions of life, and quenched the fire of understanding. Anon, a lesson is given in lowly-mindedness, when it is forbidden to the guests at a marriage feast to go and sit down unasked in the highest room, albeit the Lord spake gently, that the teaching of courtesy might forestall a harsh rebuke, reason prevail by dint of persuasion, and the desires be bent to follow the instruction. And upon this, as next-door neighbour, cometh courtesy, which is so called by the Lord, when it is shown to the poor and weak, since to show it to them from whom we are to receive aught, is but a movement of self-interest.

Eighth Lesson.

LASTLY, as to a soldier that hath served his full time, is apportioned a reward for esteeming lightly of riches: so he only can inherit the kingdom of God, whose soul is not given to seek after lower ends, and who purchaseth not to himself earthly possessions; whereas the Lord saith: "Sell that thou hast, and follow Me." (Matth. xix. 21.) Neither can he gain it that buyeth oxen, which beasts Elisha slew and gave unto the people. (3 Kings xix. 21.) Neither can he win it which hath married a wife and therefore cannot come, for "he that is unmarried careth for the things that belong to the Lord, how he may please the Lord; but he that is married careth for the things that are of the world, how he may please his wife." (1 Cor. vii. 32, 33.) Not that this is to be taken for blame of marriage, but only that virginity is the more honourable way, since "the unmarried woman"—and the widow "careth for the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and in spirit." (34.)

Ninth Lesson.

BUT in all fairness, having thus spoken concerning widows, let us betake ourselves again among the married, and join with them in entertaining the opinion which is held by so many, that there are only three classes of men who are shut out from the great supper named in the gospel, which three classes are Heathens, Jews, and Heretics. And therefore it is that the Apostle warneth us that we "walk not as other Gentiles walk," in malice and bitterness, and uncleanness, and covetousness, and so have no entry into the kingdom of Christ, since "no unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God." (Eph. iv. 17, v. 5.)

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. As JESUS went into the house * of one of the chief Pharisees, to eat bread on the Sabbath Day, behold, there was a certain man before Him which had the dropsy; and He took him, and healed him, and let him go.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. When thou art bidden * of any man to a wedding, go and sit down in the lowest room, that he that bade thee may say: Friend, go up higher,—then shalt thou have worship in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee. Alleluia.

Seventeenth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

LORD, we beseech Thee, grant Thy people grace to withstand the temptations of the devil, and with pure hearts to follow Thee the only God. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxii. 35.)

AT that time: the Pharisees came unto JESUS, and one of them, which was a lawyer, asked Him a question, tempting Him, saying: Master, which is the great commandment in the Law? And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (72nd on Matthew.)

When the Pharisees had heard that Christ had put the Sadducees to silence, they gathered themselves together for a fresh attack; just when it behoved them to be quiet, they willed to contend; and so they put forward one of themselves who professed skill in the law, not wishing to learn, but to lay a snare. This person therefore proposed the question: "Which is the great commandment in the law?" The first and great commandment is: "Thou shalt love the LORD thy God," but they expected that He would make some exception or addition to this in His Own case, since He made Himself God. (John x. 33.) With this expectation they asked Him the question; but what said Christ? To show that they had adopted this course, because they were loveless, and sick with envy, He answered: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it: Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."

Eighth Lesson.

WHY is this second commandment like unto the first? Because the first is the second's source and sanction. "For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light." (John iii. 20.) And again: "The fool hath said in his heart: There is no God"—and there followeth: "They are corrupt, and become abominable in their works." (Ps. xiii. 1.) And yet again: "The love of money is the root of all evil; which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith." (1 Tim. vi. 10.) And yet once more: "If ye love Me, keep My commandments," (John xiv. 15,)—of which commandments the head and root is: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God; and thy neighbour as thyself."

Ninth Lesson.

IF, therefore, to love God is to love our neighbour also, (as it appeareth where it is written: "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me? And he said unto Him: Lord, Thou knowest all things; Thou knowest that I love Thee. JESUS saith unto him: Feed My sheep," John xxi. 17,)—and if "love is the fulfilling of the law," (Rom. xiii. 10,) justly doth the Lord say that "on these two commandments hang all the law and the Prophets." And even as when, before this, (23-32,) being interrogated about the Resurrection, He answered them more than they asked, so, now, being interrogated concerning the first and great commandment, He answereth them, of His own accord, touching that second one also, which is little lower than the first, for "the second is like unto it." Herein He would have them understand that it was hatred stirred them up to question Him. For "Charity," saith the Apostle, "envieth not." (1 Cor. xiii. 4.)

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Master, which is the great commandment * in the law? JESUS said unto him: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. What think ye of Christ? Whose Son is He? * They say all unto Him: The Son of David. JESUS saith unto them: How then doth David in spirit call Him Lord, saying, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit Thou at My right hand?

Eighteenth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

MERCIFULLY grant, O Lord, that Thine effectual goodness may in all things direct our hearts, forasmuch as without Thee we are not able to please Thee. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (ix. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS entered into a ship, and passed over, and came into His own city. And so on.

Homily by St Peter Chrysologus, Archbishop [of Ravenna.] (Sermon 50.)

This day's reading hath shown us an instance of how Christ, in those things which He did as Man, worked deep works of God, and by things which were seen wrought things which were not seen. The Evangelist saith: JESUS "entered into a ship, and passed over, and came into His Own city." Was not This He Who had once parted the waves hither and thither, and made the dry ground appear at the bottom of the sea, so that His people Israël passed dry-shod between masses of water standing still, as through an hollow glen in a mountain? Was not This He Who made the depths of the sea solid under the feet of Peter, so that the watery path offered a firm way for human footsteps?

Eighth Lesson.

WHEREFORE then denied He unto Himself a like service from the sea, but crossed over that narrow lake at the cost of a voyage on shipboard? "He entered into a ship, and passed over." What wonder, my brethren? Christ came to take our weakness upon Him, that He might make us partakers of His strength; to seek the things of men, that He might give to men the things of God; to receive insults, that He might bestow honours; to bear weariness, that He might grant rest; for the physician that is himself beset by no frailties, knoweth not how to treat the frailties of others, nor he that is not weak with the weak, how to make the weak strong.

Ninth Lesson.

THEREFORE, if Christ had abode still in His strength, He had in no wise been a fellow of men; if in Him Flesh had not run the way of flesh, then had it been idle for Him to have taken Flesh at all. "He entered into a ship, and passed over, and came into His Own city." The Lord, the Maker of the world, and of all things that are therein, having been pleased for our sakes to prison Himself in our flesh, began to have an human home, and to be a citizen of a Jewish city; Himself the Father of all, to have parents; and all, that His love might invite, His charity draw, His tenderness bind, His gentleness persuade them whom His Kingship had scared, His awfulness scattered, and His power terrified out of His dominion.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. The Lord said unto the sick * of the palsy: Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. And immediately, he that had been sick of the palsy arose, * and took up his bed whereon he lay, glorifying God; and all the people, when they saw it gave praise to God.

Nineteenth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

O ALMIGHTY and most merciful God, of Thy bountiful goodness keep us, we beseech Thee, from all things that may hurt us; that we, being ready both in body and soul, may cheerfully accomplish those things that Thou wouldest have done. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxii. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS spake by parables unto the chief priests and Pharisees, and said: The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (38*th on the Gospels.*)

I remember that I have often said that, in the Holy Gospel, the Church as she now is, is called the kingdom of heaven, for the kingdom of heaven is indeed the assembly of the righteous. The Lord hath said by the mouth of His Prophet: "The heaven is My throne." (Isa. lxvi. 1.) Solomon saith: "The throne of wisdom is the soul of the righteous."[1] And Paul saith that Christ is "the power of God and the wisdom of God." (1 Cor. i. 24.) From these passages we may clearly gather that if wisdom be God, and wisdom's throne be the soul of the righteous, and God's throne be the heaven, then the soul of the righteous is heaven. Hence also the Psalmist saith, speaking of holy preachers: "The heavens declare the glory of God." (xviii. 2.)

Eighth Lesson.

THE kingdom of heaven, therefore, is the Church of the righteous, even of them whose hearts seek not for anything upon earth, but who sigh so continually after the things which are above, that God doth already reign in them as He doth in heaven. Let it then be said, "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son. Ye already understand, my loving friends,[2] who is that Royal Father of a Royal Son. It is indeed no other than He to Whom the Psalmist saith: "Give the King Thy judgments, O God, and Thy righteousness unto the King's son." (lxxi. 2.) "Which made a marriage for his son." God the Father made a marriage for God the Son, when He wedded Him to the manhood in the womb of the Virgin, when He willed that He Who is God before all ages, should in the end of the ages become Man.

Ninth Lesson.

THE marriage union is the union of two persons, but God forbid that we should imagine that the One Person of our Redeemer JESUS Christ, Who is both God and Man, is formed by a union of an human person with a Divine Person. We profess concerning Him that He is of, and in two natures, but we shrink from the blasphemy of saying that He is compounded of two persons. It will therefore be clearer and safer to say that the marriage which the Father made for His Royal Son was the wedding Him, through the mystery of the Incarnation, to His mystic Bride the Holy Church. The womb of the Maiden Mother was the marriage-chamber in which this union took place. Hence it is that the Psalmist saith: "In the sun hath He set His tabernacle, Who is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber." (xviii. 6.[1])

[2] Intelligit charitas vestra.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Tell them which are bidden: * Behold, I have prepared my dinner; Come unto the marriage. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. And the King came in * to see the guests; and he saw there a man which had not on a wedding garment. And he saith unto him: Friend, how camest thou in hither, not having a wedding garment?

Twentieth Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Lord, to Thy faithful people pardon and peace, that they may be cleansed from all their sins, and serve Thee with a quiet mind. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (iv. 46.)

AT that time: There was a certain nobleman, whose son was sick at Capernaum. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (28th on the Gospels.)

MY brethren; the passage from the Holy Gospel, which ye have just now heard, standeth in need of no explanation. But lest I should seem to pass the same by in idle silence, I will say somewhat thereon, but that rather by way of exhortation than of explanation. Indeed, there seemeth to me to be but one point which calleth for explanation, and that point is this: Wherefore was it that when the nobleman went unto the Lord, and besought Him that He would come down and heal his son, "JESUS said unto him: Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe"? The very fact that he had come to beseech Christ to heal his son, putteth it beyond all doubt that this nobleman believed; if he had not believed Him to be a Saviour, he would not have asked Him to save his son. Wherefore then "said JESUS unto him: Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe"—since he was one who had not seen, and yet had believed?

Eighth Lesson.

BUT bethink you what was his prayer, and then shall ye understand clearly wherein his faith was shaky. He "besought Him that He would come down and heal his son." He asked for the bodily presence of Him Who is spiritually always present everywhere. He believed not therefore enough in Christ, for he thought that He could not heal unless He were bodily present. Had his faith been perfect, he would doubtless have known that God is everywhere.

Ninth Lesson.

HIS was therefore a grievously imperfect faith, in attributing the virtue not to Christ's Majesty, but to His bodily presence. Thus it was that his faith was still unsound, even while he was asking for his son's health. For, though he believed concerning Him unto Whom he came that He was mighty to save, yet he thought also that at that moment He was absent from his dying child. But the Lord, being asked to go, showed that, wherever He is called on, He is there, and being He Who, by a simple act of will, brought all things into being, gave health by a simple command.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. There was a certain nobleman whose son was sick * at Capernaum. When he heard that JESUS was come into Galilee, he besought Him that He would heal his son.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. So the father knew * that it was at the same hour in the which JESUS said: Thy son liveth. And himself believed, and his whole house.

Twenty-first Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

LORD, we beseech Thee to keep Thine household in continual godliness, that, through Thy protection, it may be free from all adversities, and devoutly given to serve Thee in good works, to the glory of Thy Name. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xviii. 23.)

AT that time: JESUS spake unto His disciples this parable: The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a certain king, which would take account of his servants. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. iii. Comment. on Matth. xviii.)

It is a way much in use with the Syrians, and especially with the inhabitants of Palestine, to illustrate their discourse with parables, that what their hearers may not be able to catch so easily when spoken plainly, they may lay hold on by dint of comparisons and examples. Thus it was that the Lord, by an allegory about a Royal master and a servant who owed him ten thousand talents, and who obtained by entreaty forgiveness of the debt, taught Peter how it was his duty to forgive his fellow-servants their comparatively trifling offences. For if that Royal master so readily forgave his servant his debt of ten thousand talents, should not his servants much more forgive lesser debts unto their fellows?

[1] Alexandrian version.

Eighth Lesson.

TO put this more clearly, let us take a case. If one of us were to commit adultery, or murder, or sacrilege, our sin, great like a debt of ten thousand talents, would be forgiven us in answer to prayer, if we also from our heart forgive our brethren their trespasses against us. But if we refuse to forgive a slight, and keep up unceasing enmity because of an unkind word, how just doth it appear that we should be cast into prison, and entail on ourselves, by the example of our own deeds, that our great debt should not be forgiven unto us.

Ninth Lesson.

"SO likewise shall My heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their trespasses." God's awful purpose can be turned and changed; but if we will not forgive unto our brethren small things, God will not forgive us great things. And if we forgive them, it must be from our hearts. Any one can say:—I have nothing against such-an-one; he knoweth what he hath done, and God will judge him for it; I do not care what he doeth; I have forgiven him. But the Lord maketh His sentence clear, and destroyeth such a mockery of peace as this, where He saith: "So likewise shall My heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their trespasses."

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. The lord said unto his servant: Pay me * that thou owest. But the servant fell down and besought him, saying: Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O thou wicked servant, I forgave thee all * that debt, because thou desiredst me. Shouldest not thou also have had compassion on thy fellow-servant, even as I had pity on thee? Alleluia.

Twenty-second Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

O GOD, our Refuge and Strength, Who art the author of all godliness, be ready, we beseech Thee, to hear the devout prayers of Thy Church, and grant that those things which we ask faithfully, we may obtain effectually. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxii. 15.)

AT that time: The Pharisees went and took counsel how they might entangle JESUS in His talk. And so on.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.] (Comm. on Matth. Can. 23.)

The Pharisees had oftentimes been put to confusion, and were not able to find any ground to accuse Him out of anything that He had hitherto said or done. His words and works are, of necessity, faultless, but still, from spite, they set themselves to seek in every direction for some cause to accuse Him. He was calling all to turn away from the corruptions of the world, and the superstitious practices of devotion invented by men, and to fix their hopes upon the kingdom of heaven. They therefore arranged a question calculated to entrap Him into an offence against civil government, namely:—"Is it lawful to give tribute unto Cæsar or not?"

Eighth Lesson.

"BUT JESUS perceived their wickedness,"—for in sooth there is nothing hidden in the heart of man, but what God seeth it,—"and said: Why tempt ye Me, ye hypocrites? Show Me the tribute-money. And they brought unto Him a penny. And He saith unto them: Whose is this image and superscription? They say unto Him: Cæsar's. Then saith He unto them: Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's, and unto God the things that are God's." How wonderful is this answer! How perfect the fulfilment of the Divine Law herein prescribed! So beautifully doth He here strike the balance between caring not for the things of the world, on the one hand, and the offence of injuring Cæsar, on the other, that He proveth the perfect freedom of minds, however devoted to God, to discharge all human cares and duties, by commanding them to render unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's.

Ninth Lesson.

IF we have nothing which is Cæsar's, then we have nothing which we are bound to render unto him. But if we are concerned with the things which are his, if we are entrusted by him with the use of delegated power, if we are subject to him as paid servants to take care of property which is not our own, there can be no dispute but that it is our duty to render unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's. But unto God all of us are bound always to render the things that are God's, that is to say, our body, soul, and will. These are things which we hold from Him, and whereof He is the Author and Maker. It is therefore simply just that they, who acknowledge that they owe to Him their being and creation, should render to Him all that they are.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Master, we know that Thou art true, * and teachest the way of God in truth. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's, * and unto God the things that are God's. Alleluia.

Note. If there should be only twenty-three Sundays after Pentecost, then the following Office will be used on the Saturday before the Twenty-third, or if the Saturday be occupied by an Office of Nine Lessons, then on the nearest preceding day not so occupied; but, failing any such day in the week beginning on the Twenty-second Sunday, the displaced Office will be commemorated on the Saturday. See the Pye, ch. iv. section 4.

Twenty-third Lord's Day after Pentecost.

Prayer.

O LORD, we beseech Thee, absolve Thy people from their offences, that through Thy bountiful goodness we may all be delivered from the bands of those sins, which by our frailty we have committed. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (ix. 18.)

AT that time: While JESUS spake these things unto the multitudes, behold, there came a certain ruler, and worshipped Him, saying: Lord, my daughter is even now dead. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. i. Comment. on Matth. ix.)

The eighth miracle took place upon the occasion when a certain ruler, desiring not to be kept out of the mystery of the true circumcision, besought Christ to recall his daughter to life. But a woman, which was diseased with an issue of blood, thrust herself in, and her cure occupieth the eighth place, so that the resurrection of the ruler's daughter is postponed and made the ninth in enumeration—even as it is written in the Psalms: "Æthiopia shall soon stretch forth her hands unto God." (lxvii. 32.) And again: "Blindness in part is happened to Israël, until the fulness of the Gentiles is come in; and so all Israël shall be saved." (Rom. xi. 25, 26.)

Eighth Lesson.

"AND, behold, a woman, which was diseased with an issue of blood, twelve years, came behind Him, and touched the hem of His garment." In the Gospel according to Luke (viii. 42) it is written that the ruler's daughter was about twelve years of age. Note therefore that this woman, who typifies the Gentiles, had been diseased for the same time that the Jewish nation, typified by the ruler's daughter, had been living in faith. We see not clearly the hideousness of evil, until we compare it with good.

Ninth Lesson.

THIS woman with the issue of blood came not to the Lord in an house or in a city, for such as she were by the Law banished out of cities, (Lev. xv. 25,) but in the way, as He walked; so that the Lord healed one, even while He was on the road to heal another. Whence also the Apostles said: It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you: but, seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles." (Acts xiii. 46.)

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. For she said within herself: * If I may but touch the hem of His garment, I shall be whole.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. But JESUS turned Him about, * and when He saw her, He said: Daughter, be of good comfort; thy faith hath made thee whole. Alleluia.

Note. The next Office is invariably used upon the Sunday next before Advent. If therefore there be more than 24 Sundays after Pentecost, the super-abundant Sundays are furnished with Offices taken from the Sundays omitted after the Epiphany, thus: If there be 25 Sundays after Pentecost, the Office of the 24*th will be taken from the* 6*th Sunday after the Epiphany; if* 26, the 25*th will be taken from the* 6*th, and the* 24*th from the* 5*th; if* 27, the 26*th from the* 6*th, the* 25*th from the* 5*th, and the* 24*th from the* 4*th; if* 28, the 27*th from the* 6*th, the* 26*th from the* 5*th, the* 25*th from the* 4*th, and the* 24*th from the* 3*rd.*

The Lord's Day next before Advent.

Prayer.

STIR up, we beseech Thee, O Lord, the wills of Thy faithful people, that they, plenteously bringing forth the fruit of good works, may of Thee be plenteously rewarded. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxiv. 15.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: When ye shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the Prophet, stand in the Holy Place,—(whoso readeth, let him understand,)—And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. iv. Comm. on Matth. xxiv.)

This injunction to whoso readeth, to understand, showeth that there is here something mysterious. In Daniel we read as followeth: "And in the midst of the week the sacrifice and the oblations shall be taken away; and in the temple there shall be the abomination of desolation, even until the consummation of the time; and a consummation shall be given to the desolation."[1] (ix. 27.) It is of this same thing that the Apostle speaketh, when he saith[1] that a man of iniquity, even an adversary, shall be exalted against whatsoever is called God, or is worshipped: so that he shall even dare to stand in the temple of God, and to show himself as God; whose coming shall, according to the working of Satan, destroy and [2] banish away from God all who shall receive him.

---

[1] This quotation does not accord with the present authorised Latin Bible, where the passage runs thus: "And in the midst of the week victim and sacrifice shall fail; and in the temple there shall be the abomination of desolation; and the desolation shall last until the consummation and the end,"

Eighth Lesson.

THIS prophecy may be understood either (first) simply of Antichrist, (secondly) of the statue of Cæsar, which Pilate set up in the Temple, or (thirdly) of the statue of Hadrian on horse-back,[3] which hath stood, even until our own day, upon the site of the Holy of Holies. In the Scriptures of the Old Testament "abomination" is a word very often used for an idol, and the farther title "of desolation" is added to identify an idol erected upon the site of the desolate and ruined temple.

Ninth Lesson.

BUT we may also understand by the abomination of desolation, any bad doctrine; and when we see such a thing get a standing in the Holy Place,—that is, in the Church,—and showing itself that it is God,—that is, pretending that it is His revealed truth,—then will be the time when it will be our duty to flee from Judea into the mountains,—that is to say, to leave the letter, which passeth away, and all guise of Jewish superstition, and to hie us unto the everlasting hills, from whence God doth right wondrously cause His light to shine forth. (Ps. lxxv. 5.) Then will it be our duty to find ourselves under a roof and in an house, wherethrough the fiery darts of the wicked one can never pierce to smite us, and not to come down to take anything out of the house of our old conversation, or to have regard unto those things which are behind; but rather to sow in the field of the spiritual Scriptures, that we may reap thereof a bountiful harvest; neither to have two coats, that thing forbidden to Apostles. (Matth. x. 10.)

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. When ye shall see the abomination of desolation, * spoken of by Daniel the Prophet, stand in the Holy Place,—(whoso readeth, let him understand)—

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Amen I say unto you, this generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled: * heaven and earth shall pass away, but My words shall not pass away, saith the Lord.

Third Sunday after the Epiphany.

Prayer.

ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, mercifully look upon our infirmities, and in all our dangers and necessities stretch forth the right hand of Thy Majesty to help and defend us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, One God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (viii. 1.)

AT that time: When JESUS was come down from the mountain, great multitudes followed Him: and, behold, there came a leper and worshipped Him. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. i. Comm. on Matth. viii.)

When the Lord was come down from the mountain, great multitudes followed Him. They were not able to follow Him when He went up. And first there came a leper. This poor creature's disease had prevented him from hearing the Saviour's long sermon on the Mount. Let it be noted that he is the first person specially named as being healed. The second was the Centurion's servant; the third was Peter's wife's mother, who was sick of a fever at Capernaum; the fourth were they who were brought unto Christ as being troubled with evil spirits, from whom He, by His word, cast out the evil spirits, at the same time that He healed all that were sick.

Eighth Lesson.

"AND, behold, there came a leper, and worshipped Him, saying:—" Properly after preaching and doctrine cometh occasion for a sign, that the power of the miracle might confirm in the hearers the truth of the teaching that had gone before.

"Lord, if Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean." He that prayeth the Lord to have the will, doubteth not but that He hath the power.

"And JESUS put forth His Hand, and touched him, saying: I will; be thou clean." As soon as the Lord put forth His Hand the leprosy departed. Let us remark how lowly and unbragging is the Lord's language. The leper had said, "If Thou wilt;" the Lord answereth, "I will." The leper, "Thou canst make me clean,"—the Lord, "Be thou clean." Most Latin readers, misled by the identity of form in that language between the Present Infinitive Active and the Second Person Singular Present Imperative Passive of the Verb, read Christ's answer as if it were, "I will to make thee clean." This is wrong. The sentences are separate. First cometh the expression of volition, "I will," then the command, "Be thou clean."

Ninth Lesson.

"AND JESUS saith unto him: See thou tell no man." What need was there to tell what his body showed?

"But go thy way, show thyself to the Priest." There were divers reasons why Christ should send him to the Priest. First, for humility's sake, that He might show reverence to God's Priest. Then there was a command in the law, that they that were cleansed of leprosy, should make an offering to the Priests. Moreover, that, when the Priests saw the leper cleansed, they might either believe in the Saviour, or refuse to believe; if they believed, that they might be saved, and, if they believed not, that they might have no excuse. Lastly, that He might give no ground for the accusation, that was so often brought against Him, that He was unobservant of the law.

[1] The rest of this Lesson is a sort of allusion to, rather than even a loose quotation from, 2 Thess. ii., with which however it does not quite agree even in sense.

[2] Ad Dei solitudinem redigat. There is no such phrase in St Paul.

[3] But St Jerome himself mentions (Com. on Isa. ii. 8) that Hadrian set up on the desolated site of the Temple an idol of Jupiter Capitolinus, and to this it would seem more natural to apply the text than to the mere historical statue of the Emperor. The idol was removed under Constantine.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. When JESUS was come down from the mountain, * behold, there came a leper, and worshipped Him, saying: Lord, if Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean. And JESUS put forth His Hand, and touched him, saying: I will; be thou clean.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Lord, if Thou wilt, * Thou canst make me clean: and JESUS saith to him: I will; be thou clean.

Fourth Sunday after the Epiphany.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who knowest us to be set in the midst of so many and great dangers, that, by reason of the frailty of our nature, we cannot always stand upright; grant to us such health of mind and body, that by Thy strength and protection we may overcome all evils, whereby for our sins we are justly afflicted. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, One God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (viii. 23.)

AT that time: When JESUS was entered into a ship. His disciples followed Him; and, behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea, insomuch that the ship was covered by the waves: but He was asleep. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. i. Comm. on Matth. viii.)

The fifth sign that He did was when He took ship at Capernaum, and commanded the winds and the sea: the sixth, when, in the country of the Gergesenes, He suffered the devils to enter into the swine: the seventh, when, as He came into His own city, He cured the man sick of the palsy lying on a bed. The first man sick of the palsy that He cured was the centurion's servant.

Eighth Lesson.

"BUT He was asleep; and His disciples came to Him, and awoke Him, saying: Lord, save us." There is a type of this in the history of Jonah, who, when the storm arose, was lying fast asleep, and whom the sailors woke to help them; who also saved the sailors, by commanding them to throw him into the sea, the said casting of him into the sea being, as we know, a figure of Christ's Passion.

"Then He arose and rebuked the winds and the sea." From these words we understand that all things, which have been made, are sentient to their Maker. All things which He rebuketh or commandeth, hear His voice. This is not the error of the heretics who will have it that everything is quick, but part of the majesty of the Creator, Who maketh to feel Him things, which we cannot make to feel us.

Ninth Lesson.

"BUT the men marvelled saying: What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey Him?" It was not His disciples that marvelled, but the sailors, and the others that were in the ship. If, however, any one willeth to withstand this our interpretation, and to maintain that it was the disciples who marvelled, we are ready to answer them, that they who knew not before the power of the Saviour, deserved to be stripped of the title of disciples, and to be called simply "the men."

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. When JESUS was entered into a ship, * there arose a great tempest in the sea: and His disciples awoke Him, saying: Lord, save us: we perish.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Lord, save us: * we perish: give the word, O God, and let there be a great calm!

Fifth Sunday after the Epiphany.

Prayer.

O LORD, we beseech Thee to keep Thy family in continual godliness, that they who do lean only upon the hope of Thy heavenly grace, may evermore be defended by Thy mighty power. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xiii. 24.)

AT that time: JESUS put forth unto the multitudes this parable: The Kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Quæst. Evan. Matth. xi., Bk. 4.)

When the Shepherds of the Church wax careless, and since the Apostles sleep the sleep of death, cometh the devil, and soweth them whom the Lord calleth "a seed of evil-doers." Now, are these "seed of evil-doers" the heretics, or Catholics of bad lives? It is possible to call even the heretics a "seed of evil-doers," because they have sprung up from the seed of the Gospel, and been begotten in the Name of Christ, though afterwards, they have turned after crooked ways, and lying doctrines.

Eighth Lesson.

BUT whereas it is written that they were sown in the midst of the wheat, we ought haply to understand that they are of one communion with the righteous. Nevertheless, forasmuch as the Lord saith, "The field is the world," (and not, the Church,) we may well understand that the "seed of evil doers" are the heretics, since in this world they are mingled together with the good, not in one common Communion, but only under one common name of Christian. But they which are of one faith with the good seed, and yet are themselves worthless, may more fitly be likened to straw than to tares, since the straw springeth from one soil and one root with the good ear.

Ninth Lesson.

HOWEVER, as touching the net cast into the sea, and enclosing a great multitude of fishes, both bad and good, we may well understand that by the bad are meant Catholics of bad lives. For the sea is one thing, whereby we may understand to be signified the world; and the net another, which seemeth to signify our faith, or the Communion of one Church. Between heretics and sinful Catholics there is this difference, that heretics believe a lie, and sinful Catholics believe the truth, but live not as they believe.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? * From whence then hath it tares? And he saith unto them: An enemy hath done this.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The master saith: Gather ye together first the tares, * and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn.

Sixth Sunday after the Epiphany.

Prayer.

GRANT us, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, ever to think such things as be reasonable, and in every word and work of ours, to do always that is well pleasing in Thy sight. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, One God, world without end. Amen.

Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xiii. 31.)

AT that time: JESUS spake this parable unto the multitude: The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard-seed, which a man took and sowed in his field. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Book ii. Comment. on Matth. xiii.)

The kingdom of heaven is the proclamation of the Gospel, and that knowledge of the Scriptures, which leadeth unto life, and whereof it is said to the Jews, "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." (Matth. xxi. 43.) Therefore is this kingdom like to a grain of mustard-seed, which a man took and sowed in his field. By the man that sowed it in his field, many understand to be meant the Saviour, because He is the Sower That soweth in the souls of believers; others understand every man that soweth good seed in his own field, that is, in himself and in his own heart.

Eighth Lesson.

WHO is he that soweth, but our own mind and soul, which take the grain from preaching, and by nourishing it in the soil, cause it to sprout in the field of our own breast? The preaching of the Gospel is the least of all doctrines. He that preacheth, for his first lesson, God made man, Christ dead, and the stumbling-block of the Cross, receiveth at first but little credit. Compare such teaching as this with the doctrines of the Philosophers, with their books, their magnificent eloquence, and their rounded sentences, and thou shalt see how the grain of the Gospel, when it is sown, is the humblest of all seeds.

Ninth Lesson.

BUT when the doctrines of men grow up, there is therein nothing piercing, nothing healthy, nothing lifegiving. The plant is drooping, and delicate, and soft. There are herbs and grass whereof it may truly be said that "the grass withereth and the flower fadeth." (Isa. xl. 8.) But the grain of Gospel seed, though, when it was sown, it seemed to be the least of all seeds, when once it is rooted in the soul of man, or in the whole world, groweth not into an herb, but becometh a tree: so that the birds of the air (whereby we may understand, either the souls of believers, or the [angelic] powers bound to the service of God,) come and lodge in the branches thereof. I consider that the branches of the Gospel tree, which groweth from the grain of mustard-seed, are the divers developments of doctrine, on which the birds above mentioned find resting-places.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. The kingdom of heaven * is like to a grain of mustard-seed, which is the least of all seeds, but, when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The kingdom of heaven * is like unto leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal till the whole was leavened.

The Common of Saints.

OFFICES FOR THE FEASTS OF THE SAINTS, ACCORDING TO THE CLASS TO WHICH EACH SAINT BELONGS, AND COMMON TO ALL THE SAINTS OF EACH CLASS RESPECTIVELY.

I. Apostles' Eves.

The Office is of the Week-day, begins at Mattins, and ends at None. What is not of the Week-day and what is not specially given in its own place is as follows.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xv. 12.)

AT that time: JESUS said to His disciples: This is My commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (27th on the Gospels.)

All the holy words of the Lord are full of His commandments. Why, then, speaketh the Lord of the commandment to love one another as if He gave no other commandment? "This," saith He, "is My commandment, That ye love one another." Is it not because love is the one object of all His commandments, and all His commandments are one? For, even as a tree, having but one root, bringeth forth many branches, so, if the root be love, many virtues do spring therefrom. Neither is the branch of good works green, if it abide not in the root of love.

Second Lesson.

THEREFORE the commandments of the Lord are manifold, and yet one. Manifold, indeed, by the diversity of working, but one, as concerning the root of love. And how it behoveth us to keep fast hold on that root of love, we know from Him, Who in sundry places of His holy Scripture, moveth us to love our friends in Him, and our enemies for Him. He truly abideth in love, who loveth his friend in God, and his enemy for God. For there are some who love their neighbour indeed, but by an affection engendered of kinship and of the flesh: such love the Scripture forbiddeth not: but it is one thing to love our neighbour with that love whereto nature doth freely move us, and another thing to love him with that love whereto we are obliged, if we would do whatsoever the Lord commandeth us.

Third Lesson.

HE, then, that loveth his neighbour naturally, loveth him indeed, but attaineth not unto that great reward of love, for he loveth him, not after the spirit, but after the flesh. Therefore, when the Lord saith: "This is My commandment, That ye love one another," He saith also, "as I have loved you,"—even as though He said openly, "Love ye one another, with that aim wherewith I have loved you." And in this matter, dearly beloved brethren, it behoveth us to watch; for he that hateth us of old time, even while he draweth our mind to love the things which are seen and temporal, rouseth up against us our neighbour who is weaker than we are, to take from us that which we love.

Prayer at Lauds and during the day.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that the worshipful Feast of Thy blessed Apostle, [here insert the name of the Saint,] on the eve whereof we now stand, may avail us to the increase both of godliness toward Thee, and of health to our own souls. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

On the eve of St Matthew (Sept. 20) is said, "Thy blessed Apostle and Evangelist Matthew." The Long Preces are said at Lauds and Prime, and the corresponding short ones at Terce, Sext, and None, kneeling.

II. For Apostles, Evangelists, and Martyrs,

Whether one or many, whose Feasts are kept within Easter-tide.[1]

Everything as on Sundays, except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Last Psalm.

O praise the LORD, &c., (Ps. cxvi. p. 105.)

Hymn for Apostles and Evangelists.[2]

WHEN Christ by His own servants slain
Had died upon the bitter Cross,
The Apostles, of their joy bereft,
Were weeping their dear Master's loss :

Meanwhile an Angel at the tomb
To holy women hath foretold,
"The faithful flock with joy shall soon
Their Lord in Galilee behold."

Who, as they run the news to bring,
Lo, straightway Christ Himself they meet,
All radiant bright with heavenly light,
And, falling, clasp His sacred feet.

To Galilee's lone mountain height
The Apostolic band retire,
There, blest with their dear Saviour's sight,
Enjoy in full their soul's desire.

O JESU, from the death of sin
Keep us, we pray ; so shalt Thou be
The everlasting Paschal joy
Of all the souls new-born in Thee.

To God the Father, with the Son,
Who from the grave immortal rose ;
And Thee, O Paraclete, be praise,
While age on endless ages flows.
Amen.

Hymn for one Martyr.[3]

O GOD, of Thy soldiers
the Portion and Crown,
Spare Thy people, who hymn
the Praise of the Blest ;
Earth's bitter joys,
its lures and its frown,
He scanned them and scorned,
and so is at rest.

The Martyr, he ran
all valiantly o'er
An highway of blood
for the prize Thou hast given.
We kneel at Thy feet
and meekly implore,
That our pardon may wait
on his triumph in heaven.

Within Easter-tide.

Praise the Father, the Son
Who immortal arose,
And the Spirit while age upon ages flows. Amen.

From Ascension to Pentecost, instead of the last verse, is said :—

To Jesus returning
now Victor to heaven,
With Father and Spirit
praise ever be given.

Hymn for many Martyrs.[4]

O THOU, the Martyrs' glorious King,
Of Confessors the crown and prize ;
Who dost to joys celestial bring
Those who the joys of earth despise ;

By all the praise Thy Saints have won ;
By all their pains in days gone by ;
By all the deeds which they have done ;
Hear Thou Thy suppliant people's cry.

Thou dost amid Thy Martyrs fight ;
Thy Confessors Thou dost forgive ;
May we find mercy in Thy sight,
And in Thy sacred presence live.

To God the Father, with the Son,
Who from the grave immortal rose ;
And Thee, O Paraclete, be praise,
While age on endless ages flows.
Amen.

Verse. [5] O ye Saints and righteous, rejoice in the Lord. Alleluia.

Answer. God hath chosen you for His own inheritance. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The everlasting light * shall shine upon Thy Saints, O Lord, even unto everlasting. Alleluia.

MATTINS.

Invitatory for Apostles and Evangelists. The Lord, He is the King of the Apostles. * O come, let us worship Him. Alleluia.

Invitatory for one or many Martyrs. [6] Let the Saints rejoice in the Lord. * Alleluia.

Hymn for Apostles and Evangelists, and for one Martyr, as at Vespers.

Hymn for many Martyrs.[7]

SING we the Martyrs blest,
Their blood for JESUS pour'd ;
Sing we their glorious victories,
And infinite reward.

Treading the world beneath,
Spurning the body's pain,
'Twas theirs, in Martyrdom's brief space,
Eternal joys to gain.

Consign'd to raging flames
Or ruthless beasts a prey ;
Their tender flesh by savage hooks
Torn piece by piece away ;

Their vitals hanging forth ;
Unmoved they still endure ;
Unmoved continue, in the grace
Of endless life secure.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Only one Antiphon and three Psalms are said.

Antiphon. [1] The righteous shall stand * in great boldness before the face of such as have afflicted them. Alleluia.

The Psalms for Apostles and Evangelists are as in their proper office, viz.:

Ps. xviii. The heavens declare, &c., (p. 10.)
Ps. xxxiii. I will bless the LORD, &c., (p. 44.)
Ps. xliv. My heart is overflowing, &c., (p. 54.)

The Psalms for one or many Martyrs are as in their proper office, viz.:

Ps. i. Blessed is the man, &c., (p. 2.)
Ps. ii. Why do the heathen, &c., (p. 3.)
Ps. iii. LORD, how are they increased, &c., (p. 3.)

Verse. O ye Saints and righteous, rejoice in the LORD. Alleluia.
Answer. God hath chosen you for His own inheritance. Alleluia.

The Lessons are either proper to the Feast, or from Scripture according to the Season.

First Responsory.

[2] Blessed is the man that feareth the LORD—Alleluia—that delighteth greatly in His commandments. Alleluia, Alleluia, Alleluia.
Verse. Glory and riches shall be in his house, and his righteousness endureth for ever.
Answer. That delighteth greatly in His commandments. Alleluia, Alleluia, Alleluia.

Second Responsory.

[3] Your sorrow—Alleluia—shall be turned into joy. Alleluia, Alleluia.
Verse. The world shall rejoice, and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow—
Answer. Shall be turned into joy. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Third Responsory.

[4] Precious in the sight of the LORD—Alleluia—is the death of His Saints. Alleluia.
Verse. [5] The Lord keepeth all their bones, not one of them shall be broken.
Answer. Is the death of His Saints. Alleluia.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. Is the death of His Saints. Alleluia.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Only one Antiphon is said.

Antiphon. [6] Behold, how they are numbered * among the children of God, and their lot is among the Saints. Alleluia.

The Psalms for Apostles and Evangelists are as in their proper office, viz.:

Ps. xlvi. O clap your hands, &c., (p. 55.)
Ps. lx. Hear my cry, &c., (p. 64.)
Ps. lxiii. Hear my voice, &c., (p. 64.)

The Psalms for one Martyr are as in their proper office, viz.:

Ps. iv. When I called, &c., (p. 116.)
Ps. v. Give ear to my words, &c., (p. 49.)
Ps. viii. O LORD, our Ruler, &c., (p. 4.)

The Psalms for many Martyrs are as in their proper office, viz.:

Ps. xiv. LORD, who shall abide, &c., (p. 6.)
Ps. xv. Preserve me, O Lord, &c., (p. 7.)
Ps. xxiii. The earth is the LORD'S, &c., (p. 26.)

Verse. The everlasting light shall shine upon Thy Saints, O Lord—Alleluia.
Answer. Even unto everlasting. Alleluia. Alleluia.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan] (xxii.)

DEARLY beloved brethren, it is very meet and right that after the gladness of Easter, which we have celebrated in the Church, we should mingle our own joy with the joy of the holy Martyrs; yea, that we should tell of the glory of the Lord's rising again, to them that have been made partakers of the Lord's sufferings. It truly must needs be that they which have been partakers of His sufferings, should be also of His joy. For thus saith the blessed Apostle: "As ye are partakers of the sufferings, so shall ye be also of the consolation." (2 Cor. i. 7.) And again: "If we suffer, we shall also reign with Him." (2 Tim. ii. 12.) He, therefore, that endureth sorrow for Christ, must needs also have glory with Christ.

Fourth Responsory.

The everlasting light shall shine upon Thy Saints, O Lord. Even unto everlasting. Alleluia.
Verse. [7] Everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness.
Answer. Even unto everlasting. Alleluia.

Fifth Lesson.

I SAY again, let us tell to the holy Martyrs what the grace of the Lord's Passover is: let us tell them that, even as He hath opened the bars of His own grave, even so shall their graves also be opened: let us tell them that, even as in His dead Body the Veins grew warm and quick again, even so shall their limbs, that now are cold, flush with the heat of an eternal vigour. That power which brought again our Lord from the dead will bring His Martyrs too. For as they have followed Him in His sufferings, so shall they follow Him also in His newness of life. It is written in the Psalms: "Thou hast shown Me the path of life" (xv. 12.) This is said of the Resurrection in the Person of the Saviour, as of Him Who, after that He died, came up again from hell, and began to have that path of life which was not known before.

[4] Ps. cxv. 6.
[5] Ps. xxxiii. 21.
[6] Wisd. v. 5.
[7] Isa. xxxv. 10.

Fifth Responsory for Apostles and Evangelists.

[1] With great power gave the Apostles witness of the Resurrection of our Lord JESUS Christ. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. They were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness.

Answer. Witness of the Resurrection of our Lord JESUS Christ. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Fifth Responsory for one or many Martyrs.

[2] God will comfort—Alleluia—His servants. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. [3] The LORD will judge His people, and will comfort—

Answer. His servants. Alleluia.

Sixth Lesson.

FOR, before that Christ came, that path of life was not known, which none had risen from the dead to tread. But, since the Lord hath risen, it is known, and many have trodden it after the Lord. Touching them, the holy Evangelist saith: "Many bodies of the saints which slept arose with Him, and went into the holy city." (Matth. xxvii. 52, 53.)[4] Wherefore, when the Lord riseth again and saith: "Thou hast shown Me the path of life," we also can now say to Him: "Thou hast shown us the path of life." For He hath shown us the path of life, Who hath shown us the way that leadeth unto life. He hath shown me the path of life, Who hath taught me faith, mercy, righteousness, and chastity; for these are the ways that lead unto life eternal.

Sixth Responsory for Apostles and Evangelists.

[5] These are the new lambs, who have proclaimed — Alleluia: they came but just now to the well: they are all filled with light. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. [6] They stand before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands.

Answer. They are all filled with light. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. They are all filled with light. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Sixth Responsory for one or many Martyrs.

[7] Come forth, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, and behold the Martyrs with the crowns wherewith the Lord crowned them in the day of His feasting, and of His gladness. Alleluia.

Verse. [8] For He hath strengthened the bars of thy gates; He hath blessed thy children within thee.

Answer. In the day of His feasting, and of His gladness. Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. In the day of His feasting, and of His gladness. Alleluia.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Only one Antiphon is said.

Antiphon. The everlasting light * shall shine upon Thy Saints, O Lord, even unto everlasting. Alleluia.

The Psalms for Apostles and Evangelists are as in their proper office, viz.:

Ps. lxxiv. Unto Thee, O God, &c., (p. 73.)

Ps. xcvi. The LORD reigneth, &c., (p. 85.)

Ps. xcviii. The LORD reigneth, be the people, &c., (p. 89.)

The Psalms for one Martyr are as in their proper office, viz.:

Ps. x. In the LORD, &c., (p. 5.)

Ps. xiv. LORD, who shall abide, &c., (p. 6.)

Ps. xx. The king shall joy, &c., (p. 10.)

The Psalms for many Martyrs are as in their proper office, viz.:

Ps. xxxii. Rejoice in the LORD, &c., (p. 43.)

Ps. xxxiii. I will bless the LORD, &c., (p. 44.)

Ps. xlv. God is our refuge, &c., (p. 55.)

Verse. Everlasting joy upon their heads. Alleluia.

Answer. They shall obtain joy and gladness. Alleluia.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xv. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: I am the true vine, and My Father is the husbandman. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Tract 80, on John.)

Dearly beloved brethren, this passage of the Gospel, wherein the Lord saith that He is the vine, and that His disciples are the branches, is to be taken in that sense wherein it is also said, that He is the Head of the Church, (Eph. v. 23), and that we are the members of Him (30) Who is the Mediator between God and men, the man Christ JESUS (1 Tim. ii. 5). The vine and his branches are of one and the same nature. Therefore, seeing that He was God, of which nature we are not, He was made man, to the end that He might have in Himself this vine, that is, the manhood, whereof we men can be made branches.

[2] Cf. Isa. li. 3.

[3] Ps. cxxxiv. 14.

[4] The quotation is anything but exact.

[5] Cf. Gen. xxix. 10. Jacob, opening the well to the flock, seems to be taken as a type of our Lord opening Baptism to His followers.

[6] Cf. Apoc. vii. 9.

[7] Cf. Cant. iii. 11.

[8] Ps. cxlvii. 2.

Seventh Responsory.

[1] I am the true vine, ye are the branches. He that abideth in Me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you.

Answer. He that abideth in Me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Eighth Blessing.

He (or they) whose feast-day we are keeping,

Be our Advocate (or Advocates) with God.

Eighth Lesson.

WHY saith He: "I am the true vine?" As touching this word "true," hath He not here regard to that other parable of a vine, the like figure whereto He doth here apply to Himself? (Jer. ii. 21.) Here is He called a vine, not plainly, but in parable, as also He is called elsewhere a sheep, (Isa. liii. 7, Acts viii. 32,) a lamb, (John i. 36,) a lion, (Apoc. v. 5,) a rock, (1 Cor. x. 4,) a corner-stone, (Eph. ii. 20,) and other things of the like kind. But these things are in themselves that which they seem to be, albeit He is called by their names, not plainly, but in a parable, and herein are they different from that vine, whereof in this place He taketh on Him the name. For when He saith: "I am the true vine," doth He not make distinction between Himself, and that which indeed seemed to be a vine, but to which it is said: "How art thou turned into the degenerate plant of a strange vine unto Me?" (Jer. ii. 21.) For by what title shall that plant be called other than a false vine, whereto they looked that she should bring forth grapes, and she brought forth thorns?[2]

Eighth Responsory.

[3] Her Nazarites are become pure, Alleluia: they reflect the glory of God, Alleluia. They are whiter than milk. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. They are purer than snow, they are whiter than milk, they are more ruddy in body than coral,[4] their polishing is of sapphire.

Answer. They are whiter than milk. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. They are whiter than milk. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Ninth Lesson.

HE saith: "I am the true vine, and My Father is the husbandman." Is the vine one with the husbandman? These words then are to be taken in that sense wherein He also saith: "My Father is greater than I." (John xiv. 28.) In this sense is He the vine, and the Father is the husbandman. But again, in regard to those words: "I and the Father are one," and again: "and My Father is the husbandman," we understand that They are not the vine and the husbandman, after the manner of a vine, and the husbandman that from without doth care for and keep it, but after the manner of a vine and Him That from within doth make it to bring forth fruit. For "neither is he that planteth anything, neither he that watereth: but God that giveth the increase." (1 Cor. iii. 7.) But Christ is God, for "the Word was God." (John i. 1.) Therefore He and the Father are one: and, albeit "the Word was made flesh," (John i. 14), which, before, He was not, He ceased not to be still That Which He was.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. [5] Thy Saints, O Lord, * shall grow as the lily, Alleluia: they shall come up before Thee with a pleasant savour like balm, Alleluia.

Second Antiphon. In the heavenly kingdoms, * there is the dwelling of the saints, Alleluia: there shall be their rest for ever and ever. Alleluia.

Third Antiphon. In the shadow [of Thy wings,] * O Lord, Thy Saints cried and said: Alleluia, Alleluia, Alleluia.

Fourth Antiphon. O ye spirits and souls of the righteous, * give praise to our God. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Fifth Antiphon. [6] The righteous shall shine forth * as the sun, in the presence of God. Alleluia.

Chapter. (Wisd. v. 1.)

THE righteous shall stand in great boldness before the face of such as have afflicted them, and made no account of their labours.

Hymn for Apostles and Evangelists.[7]

NOW daily shines the sun more fair,
Recalling that blest time,
When Christ on His Apostles shone
In radiant light sublime.

They in His Body see the Wounds,
Like stars divinely glow;
Then forth, as His true witnesses,
Throughout the world they go.

O Christ! Thou King most merciful!
Our inmost hearts possess;
So may our canticles of praise
Thy name for ever bless.

Keep us, O JESU! from the death
Of sin; and deign to be
The everlasting Paschal joy
Of all newborn in Thee.

Hymn for one Martyr.[1]

MARTYR of unconquer'd might!
Follower of th' Incarnate Son!
Who, victorious in the fight,
Hast celestial glory won;

By the virtue of thy prayer,
Let no evil hover nigh;
Sin's contagion drive afar;
Waken drowsy lethargy.

Loosen'd from the fleshly chain
Which detained thee here of old,
Loose us from the bonds of sin,
From the fetters of the world.

Glory to th' Incarnate Son,
Who from death immortal rose;
Glory to the Trine in One,
While the flood of ages flows.
Amen.

Hymn for many Martyrs, "O Thou the Martyrs' glorious King," as at First Vespers.

Verse. Precious in the sight of the LORD—Alleluia.
Answer. Is the death of His Saints. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Come forth, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, * and behold the Martyrs with the crowns wherewith the Lord crowned them, in the day of His feasting and of His gladness. Alleluia, Alleluia.

The Prayers for the Apostles and Evangelists are all special.

1. Prayer for one Martyr, who was a Bishop.

MERCIFULLY consider our weakness, O Almighty God, and, whereas by the burden of our sins we are sore let and hindered, may it please Thee, that the prayers of Thy blessed and glorious Martyr and Bishop (here insert his name) may shield us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

2. Another Prayer for the same.

O GOD, Who year by year dost gladden us by the solemn feast-day of Thy blessed Martyr and Bishop, (here insert his name,) mercifully grant, that we who keep his birthday, may ever feel the joyful effects of his protection. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

3. Prayer for a Martyr not a Bishop.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that we who keep the birthday of Thy blessed Martyr, (here insert his name,) may be so holpen by his prayers, that we may ever grow more and more in love toward Thy holy Name. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

4. Another for the same.

GRACIOUSLY hear us, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, and, at the petition of Thy blessed Martyr, (here insert his name,) be mercifully pleased to deliver us from all things which may hurt our bodies, and from all evil thoughts which may defile our souls. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

5. Prayer for many Martyrs, who were Bishops.

O LORD, we beseech Thee, that the feast of Thy blessed Martyrs and Bishops (here insert their names) may keep us, and their worshipful prayers commend us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

6. Prayer for many Martyrs, not Bishops.

O GOD, by Whose mercy we here keep the birthday of Thy holy Martyrs, (here insert their names,) grant us hereafter to rejoice in their blessed company for all eternity. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

7. Another for the same.

O GOD, Who, year by year, dost gladden us by the solemn feast-day of Thy holy Martyrs, (here insert their names,) mercifully grant, that we who rejoice because of their worthy deeds, may be also stirred up to follow after their example. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Other Lessons for the Feasts of Martyrs on Easter-tide.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Epistle of St Cyprian, Bishop [of Carthage,] and himself a Martyr, to the Martyrs and Confessors.[1] (Bk. ii. ep. 6.)

HOW shall I praise you, O Martyrs so brilliantly victorious? Can the voice of man's praise add anything to the glory of your manful heart and unshaken faithfulness? Ye have borne all the hardness of the torment, and have attained unto the excellent height of glory: the tormentors have not worn you out, nay, ye rather have worn out the tormentors. When they that kill the body would give you no rest from suffering, ye suffered until ye gained the crown. And the torment waxing still more dread, waxed not to the casting down of your strong faith, but to the sooner sending God's men home to God.

Fifth Lesson.

THEY that stood by looked in wonder at your heavenly conflict, that battle of God, that wrestling of spirit, that combat of Christ. There they saw His servants standing with voice unshaken, with spirit unbroken, strong in God's strength, naked indeed, as to the arms of this world, but clothed on with the armour of God, and equipped with the fiery weapons of faith. There they that were tormented stood braver than they that tormented them. Their bruised and mangled bodies overcame the instruments of cruelty that bruised and mangled them. The bloody stripes, so often laid on, could not beat down the impregnable castle of their faith, even when the covering of their bowels was broken, and that which was tormented in God's servants was no longer limbs but wounds. The blood that ran down, ran down to quench the rage of persecution, noble blood, that can put out the flames and fire of hell.

Sixth Lesson.

O WHAT a spectacle was that in the eyes of the Lord! O how noble! O how mighty! O how precious in the sight of God were His soldiers' loyalty and faithfulness! Even as it is written in the Psalms, the Holy Ghost therein at once speaking to us and warning us: "Precious in the sight of the LORD is the death of His Saints." O what a precious death is his, who maketh purchase of life that can never die, at the price of his own blood, and seizeth on the crown, when courage hath no more left to meet! O how joyful was Christ! How gladly fought He in such servants as these,—in these how gladly did He triumph, the Keeper of their faith,—and, in the end, to them how gladly did He give that reward which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it! (Apoc. ii. 17.) He it was, Who was there when they fought,—He it was, Who raised them up to be the champions and defenders of His holy Name,—He, who gave them the strength,—He, Who nerved them. He, That by death hath once conquered for us, liveth now for ever to conquer in us.

---

[1] Who were then suffering in the persecution of Decius.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xv. 5.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that abideth in Me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without Me ye can do nothing. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Tract 81 on John.)

Lest any man should so take these words, "the same bringeth forth much fruit," as to think that the branch can of itself bring forth any fruit whatsoever, the Lord saith further, "without Me ye can do," not only "small things," but "nothing." Whether, then, it be little or much, there can be nothing done, save through Him, without Whom we can do nothing: for if the branch bring forth fruit, albeit but little, it is through Him That purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit. And if the branch abide not in the vine, and draw not his sap from the vine's root, it can bring forth no fruit whatsoever of itself. And as CHRIST would not have been the vine, if He had not been man, He could not have given grace to His branches, if He had not been God.

Eighth Lesson.

WITHOUT the sap of grace the branch cannot live, and it is within the power of his own free will to choose death rather than life. "If a man abide not in Me," saith the Lord, "he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered, and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned." So much the more worthy as is the branch of the vine, if it abide in the vine, so much the baser is it, if it abide not in the vine. Then is it as the vine-branches whereof the Prophet Ezekiel saith (xv. 3, 4) that wood shall not be taken thereof to do any work, and it is meet for no work. The branch hath choice of two things, the vine, or the fire: if it abide not in the vine, it shall be cast into the fire; if, then, it would not be cast into the fire, let it abide in the vine.

Ninth Lesson.

"IF ye abide in Me," saith the Lord, "and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you." And what can they will that abide in Christ, save the things of Christ? What can they will that abide in the Saviour save such things as tend to salvation? Since we are in Christ we will one thing, and since we are as yet in this world, we will another. Since we are yet in this world, it befalleth us to seek some things, whereof we know not that they be inexpedient for us. But far be it from us to think that we shall obtain them, if we abide in Christ, for, when we seek from Him, He giveth not, save that which is expedient for us.

For Simple Feasts of one or many Martyrs in Easter-tide.

Absolution.

May the Almighty, &c.

First Blessing.

May His blessing be upon us.
Who doth live and reign for ever.

First Lesson from Scripture according to the Season, being either the first part, or, if the Saint or Saints have two Lessons, the whole read as one, at will.

First Responsory.

On Mondays and Thursdays.

Blessed is the man, &c., (First Responsory in the preceding Office, p. 577.)

On Tuesdays and Fridays

The everlasting light, &c., (Fourth Responsory in the preceding Office, p. 577.)

On Wednesdays.

I am the true vine, &c., (Seventh Responsory in the preceding Office, p. 579.)

Second Blessing.

He (or they) whose feast-day we are keeping,
Be our Advocate (or Advocates) with God.

Second Lesson is the first of the Legend of the Saint or Saints, if there be two; if not, it is the second from Scripture, to which the third may be added at will.

Second Responsory.

On Mondays and Tuesdays.

Your sorrow, &c., (Second Responsory in the preceding Office, p. 577, with this addition:)

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Shall be turned into joy. Alleluia, Alleluia.

On Tuesdays and Fridays.

God will comfort, &c., (Fifth Responsory for Martyrs in the preceding Office, p. 578, with this addition:)

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. His servants. Alleluia.

On Wednesdays.

Her Nazarites, &c., (Eighth Responsory in the preceding Office, p. 579.)

Third Blessing.

May He That is the Angels' King
To that high realm His people bring.

Third Lesson is the whole or second part of the Legend of the Saint or Saints, if there is one, or else the special Lesson assigned.

Then the Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said, and so end Mattins.

The rest of the Office is as on a Semidouble, as just given; it ends at None, inclusive; Preces are said at Prime, and the Cross is Paschally commemorated at Lauds.

III. For Apostles and Evangelists,

Whose Feasts are kept out of Easter-tide.

Everything as on Sundays except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Hymn from Lauds.

The Prayer is always Proper.

Last Psalm.

O praise the LORD, &c., (Ps. cxvi., p. 105.)

Verse. [1] Their sound is gone out through all the earth.

Answer. And their words to the ends of the world.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [2] For they will deliver you up to the councils, and they will scourge you in their synagogues, and ye shall be brought before kings and governors for My sake, for a testimony against them and the Gentiles.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Lord, He is the King of the Apostles. * O come, let us worship Him!

Hymn.[3]

THE Lord's eternal gifts,
The Apostles' mighty praise,
Their victories, and high reward,
Sing we in joyful lays.

Lords of the Churches they;
Triumphant Chiefs of war;
Brave Soldiers of the Heavenly Camp;
True Lights for evermore.

Theirs was the Saint's high faith;
And quenchless hope's pure glow;
And perfect charity, which laid
The world's fell tyrant low.

In them the Father shone;
In them the Son o'ercame:
In them the Holy Spirit wrought,
And filled their hearts with flame.

Praise to the Father, Son,
And Spirit, One and Three;
As evermore hath been before,
And shall for ever be. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Only three Psalms are said.

First Antiphon. Their sound is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the ends of the world.

---

[1] Ps. xviii. 5.

[2] Matth. x. 17, 18.

[3] Part of an hymn by St Ambrose, or by one of the Ambrosian school; slightly altered; translation by the Rev. E. Caswall.

Psalm XVIII.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David," with the same further obscure superscription, as in Pss. xii. and xiii.]

THE heavens declare the glory of God, * and the firmament showeth His handy-work.

Day unto day uttereth speech, * and night unto night showeth knowledge.

There is no speech nor language, * where their voice is not heard.

Their sound is gone out through all the earth: * and their words to the ends of the world.

He hath set His tabernacle in the sun:[1] * which is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber.

He rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race: * his going forth is from the end of the heaven.

And his circuit unto the ends of it: * and there is nothing hid from the heat thereof.

The law of the LORD is perfect, converting the soul: * the testimony of the LORD is sure, making wise the simple.

The statutes of the LORD are right, rejoicing the heart: * the commandment of the LORD is clear, giving light unto the eyes.

The fear of the LORD is holy, enduring for ever and ever: * the judgments of the LORD are true, righteous altogether.

More to be desired are they than gold and store of precious stones, * sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb.

Verily, Thy servant keepeth them: * in keeping of them there is great reward.

Who can understand his errors? Cleanse Thou me from secret faults: * preserve Thy servant also from the sins of others.

If they get not dominion over me, then shall I be undefiled: * and I shall be cleansed from the great transgression.

Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of mine heart, * be acceptable in Thy sight for ever,

O LORD mine Helper, * and my Redeemer!

Second Antiphon. The righteous cry, and the LORD heareth.

Psalm XXXIII.

[Intituled "Of David, when he changed his behaviour before Abimelech, who drove him away and he departed." This incident is thus described in 1 Kings (Sam.) xxi. 10. "And David arose and fled that day for fear of Saul, and went to Achish" (otherwise called Abimelech) "the King of Gath. And the servants of Achish said unto him: Is not this David the King of the land? Did they not sing one to another of him in dances saying, 'Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands'? And David laid up these words in his heart, and was sore afraid of Achish the King of Gath. And he changed his behaviour before them, and feigned himself mad in their hands, and scrabbled on the doors of the gate, and let his spittle fall down upon his beard. Then said Achish to his servants: Lo, ye see the man is mad; wherefore have you brought him to me? Have I need of madmen, that ye have brought this fellow to play the madman in my presence? Shall this fellow come into mine house? xxii. David therefore departed thence, and escaped to the cave of Adullam." This Psalm is A B C Darian.]

I WILL bless the LORD at all times: * His praise shall continually be in my mouth.

My soul shall make her boast in the LORD: * the humble shall hear thereof, and be glad.

O magnify the LORD with me: * and let us exalt His Name together.

I sought the LORD, and He heard me, * and delivered me from all my distress.

Draw near unto Him, and be lightened, * and your faces shall not be ashamed.

This poor man cried, and the LORD heard him, * and saved him out of all his troubles.

The angel of the LORD encampeth round about them that fear Him, * and delivereth them.

O taste and see that the LORD is good: * blessed is the man that trusteth in Him.

O fear the LORD, all ye His Saints: * for there is no want to them that fear Him.

The mighty lack and suffer hunger: * but they that seek the LORD shall not want any good thing.

Come, ye children, hearken unto me: * I will teach you the fear of the LORD.

What man is he that desireth life, * that loveth to see good days?

Keep thy tongue from evil, * and thy lips from speaking guile.

Depart from evil and do good: * seek peace and pursue it.

The eyes of the LORD are upon the righteous: * and His ears are open unto their cry.

But the face of the LORD is against them that do evil, * to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth.

The righteous cry and the LORD heareth, * and delivereth them out of all their troubles.

The LORD is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart, * and saveth such as be of a contrite spirit.

Many are the afflictions of the righteous: * but the LORD will deliver them out of all.

The Lord keepeth all their bones: * not one of them shall be broken.

The death of sinners is grievous: * and they that hate the righteous shall be guilty.

The LORD redeemeth the souls of His servants: * and none of them that trust in Him shall be guilty.

Third Antiphon. Thou shalt make them princes over all the earth: they shall be mindful of Thy Name, O Lord.

Psalm XLIV.

[This Psalm has a long superscription, the exact meaning of which is not now certain. It seems to have been a marriage-song written to be sung by the Korahites. The Targum ascribes it to the time of Moses, but it seems rather to belong to that of the Jewish Monarchy.]

---

[1] So the LXX., as well as the Vulgate. Cf. Ps. cii. 19; ciii. 2, 3. The sense seems to be that the physical source of the light and life of this system is represented as a kind of celestial counterpart of the tabernacle, which was the centre of the Divine authority as revealed upon earth. The Hebrew, however, which is supported by St Jerome, reads, "In them (i.e., the starry heavens) hath He set a tabernacle for the sun," and this reading seems to commend itself to Archbishop Kenrick, who suggests that the "tabernacle" may signify the region below the horizon, into which the sun retires nightly, as into a tent, to sleep, and from which he issues in renewed glory every morning. Targum:—"In them hath He set splendour as a tabernacle for the sun."

MINE heart is overflowing with a good matter: * I speak of my works unto the king.

My tongue is the pen * of a ready writer.

Thou art fairer than the children of men, grace is poured into thy lips: * therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

Gird thy sword upon thy thigh, * O most mighty!

In thy comeliness, and thy beauty, * go forward, fare prosperously, and reign,

Because of truth, and meekness, and righteousness: * and thy right hand shall lead thee wonderfully.

Thine arrows are sharp—(the people shall fall under thee)—* into the heart of the King's enemies.

[1] Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: * the sceptre of Thy kingdom is a right sceptre.

Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity: * therefore, God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows.

Thy garments smell of myrrh, and aloes, and cassia, out of the ivory palaces, * whereby kings' daughters among thine honourable women have made thee glad.

Upon thy right hand did stand the queen in a vesture of gold, * bedecked with divers colours.

Hearken, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear: * forget also thine own people, and thy father's house:

And the King shall greatly desire thy beauty: * for He is the Lord thy God,[2] and Him shall they worship.

And the daughters of Tyre shall entreat thy favour * with gifts, even all the rich among the people.

The King's daughter is all glorious within, * in a vesture of gold, clad in divers colours.

After her shall virgins be brought unto the King: * her fellows shall be brought unto thee.

With gladness and rejoicing shall they be brought: * they shall enter into the King's palace.

Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children: * thou shalt make them princes over all the earth.

They shall be mindful of thy name, * unto all generations.

Therefore shall the people praise thee for ever, * yea, for ever and ever.

Verse. Their sound is gone out through all the earth.

Answer. And their words to the ends of the world.

The following Lessons are not read if Proper Lessons are assigned instead.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Paul to the Corinthians (iv. 1.)

LET a man so account of us as of the ministers of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God. It is required of stewards here, that a man be found faithful. But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's judgment: yea, I judge not mine own self. For I know nothing against myself: yet am I not hereby justified: but He that judgeth me is the Lord. Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come: Who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God.

First Responsory.

[3] Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves, saith the Lord; be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves.

Verse. [4] While ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light.

Answer. Be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves.

Second Lesson.

AND these things, brethren, I have in a figure transferred to myself and to Apollos for your sakes, that ye might learn in us not to think of men above that which is written, that no one of you be puffed up for one against another. For who maketh thee to differ from another? And what hast thou that thou didst not receive? Now, if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it? Now ye are full, now ye are rich: ye have reigned as kings without us: and I would to God ye did reign, that we also might reign with you. For I think that God hath set forth us the Apostles last, as it were appointed to death: for we are made a spectacle unto the world, and to Angels, and to men.

Second Responsory.

[5] Take My yoke upon you, saith the Lord, and learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly in heart; for My yoke is easy, and My burden is light.

Verse. And ye shall find rest unto your souls.

Answer. For My yoke is easy, and My burden is light.

Third Lesson.

WE are fools for Christ's sake, but ye are wise in Christ: we are weak, but ye are strong: ye are honourable, but we are despised. Even unto this present hour we both hunger, and thirst, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no certain dwelling-place, and labour, working with our own hands: being reviled, we bless: being persecuted, we suffer it: being defamed, we entreat: we are made as the filth of the earth, and are the off-scouring of all things unto this day. I write not these things to shame you, but as my beloved sons, I warn you. For though ye have ten thousand instructors in Christ; yet have ye not many fathers. For in Christ JESUS I have begotten you through the Gospel.

[1] So are these words translated in Heb. i. 8, 9.

[2] The word "God" is not in the Hebrew, and the original meaning, addressed to the bride, is, "He is thy lord, and bow thou to him." So also St Jerome."

[3] Matth. x. 16.

[4] John xii. 36.

[5] Matth. xi. 29.

Third Responsory.

[1] When ye stand before kings and governors, take no thought how or what ye shall speak; for it shall be given you in that same hour, what ye shall speak.

Verse. For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father, Which speaketh in you.

Answer. For it shall be given you in that same hour, what ye shall speak.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. For it shall be given you in that same hour, what ye shall speak.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The princes of the people are gathered together with the God of Abraham.

Psalm XLVI.

[Intituled "A Psalm of the sons of Korah," with another (now uncertain) direction.]

O CLAP your hands, all ye people: * shout unto God with the voice of triumph.

For the LORD Most High is terrible: * He is a great King over all the earth.

He hath subdued the people under us, * and the nations under our feet.

He hath chosen His own inheritance for us, * the excellency of Jacob, whom He loved.[2]

God is gone up with a shout, * and the LORD with the sound of a trumpet.

Sing praises to our God, sing praises: * sing praises unto our King, sing praises.

For God is the King of all the earth: * sing ye praises with understanding.

God reigneth over the heathen: * God sitteth upon the throne of His holiness.

The princes of the people are gathered together with the God of Abraham: * for the mighty ones of the earth are greatly exalted.

Second Antiphon. Thou hast given the heritage to those that fear Thy Name, O Lord.

Psalm LX.

[Intituled "of David." It has also a musical (?) superscription now of uncertain meaning.]

HEAR my cry, O God: * attend unto my prayer.

From the ends of the earth I cried unto Thee: * when mine heart was overwhelmed, Thou didst lift me up upon a rock.

Thou didst lead me, for Thou hast been a shelter for me, * a strong tower from the enemy.

I will abide in Thy tabernacle for ever: * I will make my refuge in the covert of Thy wings.[2]

For Thou, O God, hast heard my vows: * Thou hast given the heritage to those that fear Thy name.

Thou wilt prolong the King's life: * and his years to many generations.

He shall abide before God for ever: * who will seek for His mercy and truth?

So will I sing praise unto Thy name for ever: * that I may daily perform my vows.

Third Antiphon. They declared the work of God, and understood His doings.

Psalm LXIII.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David" with a farther superscription of meaning now uncertain.]

HEAR my voice, O God, in my prayer: * preserve my life from fear of the enemy.

Thou hast hidden me from the secret counsel of the wicked, * from the insurrection of the workers of iniquity.

For they whet their tongue like a sword: * they bend their bow, even bitter words, that they may shoot in secret at the perfect.

Suddenly do they shoot at him and fear not: * they encourage themselves in evil purpose.

They commune of laying snares privily: * they say: Who shall see them?

They search out iniquities: * they accomplish a diligent search.

Man shall attain to thoughts that are very deep: * but God shall [still] be exalted.

The arrows of babes have pierced them: * and their tongues are weakened against them.

All that saw them were moved: * and all men feared,

And declared the work of God, * and understood His doings.

The righteous shall be glad in the LORD, and shall trust in Him: * and all the upright in heart shall glory.

Verse. [3] Thou shalt make them princes over all the earth.

Answer. They shall be mindful of Thy Name, O Lord.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (30*th on the Gospels.*)

IT is written: "By His Spirit the Lord hath garnished the heavens." (Job xxvi. 13.) Now the garniture of the heavens are the godly powers of preachers, and this garniture, what it is, Paul teacheth us thus:—"To one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom, to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit, to another the working of miracles, to another prophecy, to another discerning of spirits, to another divers kinds of tongues, to another the interpretation of tongues. But all these worketh that one and the self-same Spirit, dividing to every man severally as He will. (1 Cor. xii. 8.)

---

[1] Matth. x. 18-20.

[2] SLH.

[3] Ps. xliv. 17, 18.

Fourth Responsory.

[1] I saw men standing together, clad in shining raiment, and the Angel of the Lord spake unto me, saying: These men are holy, for they are the friends of God.

Verse. [2] I saw a strong Angel of God fly into the midst of heaven, saying with a loud voice—

Answer. These men are holy, for they are the friends of God.

Fifth Lesson.

SO much power then as have preachers, so much garniture have the heavens. Wherefore again it is written: "By the word of the LORD were the heavens made." (Ps. xxxii. 6.) For the Word of the Lord is the Son of the Father. But, to the end that all the Holy Trinity may be made manifest as the Maker of the heavens, (that is, of the Apostles,) it is straightway added touching God the Holy Ghost: "and all the host of them by the Breath of His mouth." Therefore the might of the same heavens is the might of the Spirit, for they had not braved the powers of this world, unless the strength of the Holy Ghost had comforted them. For we know what manner of men the Teachers of the Holy Church were before the coming of this Spirit: and since He came we see in Whose strength they are made strong.

Fifth Responsory.

[3] Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for My sake; rejoice, and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven.

Verse. [4] When men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of Man's sake.

Answer. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven.

Sixth Lesson.

VERILY, if we ask of the damsel that kept the door, she will tell us what was the measure of weakness and of strength in that Shepherd[5] of the Church nigh to whose most holy body we are now sitting, before that the Spirit came. He was so stricken by the words of one woman, that for fear of death, he denied Life. And we may well remember that Peter denied in captivity Him, Whom the thief confessed, even when He was lifted up upon the Cross. But let us hear what that craven was after that the Spirit came. When the rulers and elders were gathered together, the Apostles were beaten, and commanded not to speak at all nor teach in the name of JESUS. And Peter answered with great boldness, "We ought to obey God rather than men." (Acts v. 42.)

Sixth Responsory.

These are they which have conquered, and are become the friends of God, who recked not of the commandments of princes, and earned the everlasting reward. And now have they crowns on their heads, and palms in their hands.

Verse. [6] These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb.

Answer. And now have they crowns on their heads, and palms in their hands.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And now have they crowns on their heads, and palms in their hands.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Note that between Septuagesima and Easter the word "Alleluia" in the following Antiphons is omitted.

First Antiphon. The horns of the righteous shall be exalted. [Alleluia.]

Psalm LXXIV.

[Intituled "A Psalm—A Song of Asaph," with a superscription of meaning now uncertain, but, in part, indicating the tune "Destroy not." The Targum says that it was composed as a thanksgiving at the time when David said "Destroy not thy people," and the occasion meant is probably that of the plague provoked by David's numbering of the people, as related in the last chapter of 2 Kings (Sam.)]

UNTO Thee, O God, will we give thanks: * we will give thanks and call upon Thy name.

We will declare Thy wondrous works: * when I shall take a set time, I will judge uprightly.

The earth and all the inhabitants thereof are dissolved: * I bear up the pillars of it.[7]

I said unto the wicked: Deal not wickedly: * and to the evil-doers: Lift not up your horn on high.

Lift not up your horn on high: * speak not wickedness against God.

For neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the desert mountains: * for God is the judge:

He putteth down one, and setteth up another: * for in the hand of the LORD there is a cup of strong wine full of mixture.[8]

And he turneth it this way and that: surely the dregs thereof are not wrung out: * all the wicked of the earth shall drink them.

But I will declare for ever: * I will sing praises to the God of Jacob.

All the horns of the wicked also will I break: * and the horns of the righteous shall be exalted.

Second Antiphon. Light is sprung up for the righteous. Alleluia: and gladness for the upright in heart. [Alleluia.]

Psalm XCVI.

[The Vulgate and the LXX. have the superscription "[A Psalm] of David when his country was re-established"—perhaps meaning after the usurpation of Absolom.]

THE LORD reigneth; let the earth rejoice: * let the multitude of isles be glad thereof.

Clouds and darkness are round about Him: * righteousness and judgment are the foundation of His throne.

A fire shall go before Him, * and burn up His enemies round about.

His lightnings enlightened the world: * the earth saw and trembled.

The hills melted like wax at the presence of the LORD, * at the presence of the Lord of the whole earth.

The heavens declared His righteousness, * and all the people saw His glory.

Confounded be all they that worship graven images, * and that boast themselves of idols.

Worship Him, all ye His Angels! * Zion heard, and was glad.

And the daughters of Judah rejoiced, * because of Thy judgments, O LORD!

For thou, LORD, art high above all the earth: * Thou art exalted far above all gods.

Ye that love the LORD, hate evil: * the Lord preserveth the souls of His saints; He delivereth them out of the hand of the wicked.

Light is sprung up for the righteous, * and gladness for the upright in heart.

Rejoice in the LORD, ye righteous, * and give thanks to the memorial of His holiness!

Third Antiphon. They kept His testimonies, and the ordinance that He gave them. [Alleluia.]

Psalm XCVIII.

[The Vulgate and the LXX. ascribe this Psalm to David.]

THE LORD reigneth, be the people never so impatient: * He sitteth upon the Cherubim, be the earth never so unquiet.

The LORD is great in Zion: * and He is high above all people.

Let them praise Thy great and terrible Name, for it is holy: * and the King's majesty loveth judgment.

Thou dost establish equity: * Thou executest judgment and righteousness in Jacob.

Exalt ye the LORD our God, and worship at His footstool: * for it is holy.

Moses and Aaron among His priests, * and Samuel among them that call upon His name.

They called upon the LORD, and He answered them. * He spake unto them in the cloudy pillar:

They kept His testimonies, * and the ordinance that He gave them.

Thou answeredst them, O LORD our God! * O God, Thou forgavest them, though Thou tookest vengeance of their inventions.

Exalt the LORD our God and worship at His holy hill: * for the LORD our God is holy.

Verse. [1] O God, Thy friends are exceeding honourable.

Answer. Their power is waxen right strong.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xix. 27.)

AT that time: Peter said unto JESUS: Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed Thee: what shall we have therefore? And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. iii. on Matth. xix.)

Peter was a fisherman, he was not rich, he earned his bread by his hand and skill, and nevertheless he is thus bold, and saith confidently: "We have forsaken all." And because it sufficeth not to forsake only, he addeth that which to do is to be perfect: "and followed Thee." "We have done that which Thou hast commanded us, what reward therefore wilt Thou give us?" "And JESUS said unto them: Amen I say unto you, that ye which have followed Me, in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israël." He said not, "Ye which have forsaken all," for this did even Crates the philosopher,[2] and they which have set nothing by riches are many, but, "Ye which have followed Me." This did the Apostles, and this do believers do.

Seventh Responsory.

These are they who while yet they lived in the flesh, planted the Church in their own blood; [3] they drank of the Lord's cup, and became the friends of God.

Verse. Their sound is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the ends of the world.

Answer. They drank of the Lord's cup, and became the friends of God.

Eighth Blessing.

He (or they) whose feast-day we are keeping,
Be our Advocate (or Advocates) with God.

Eighth Lesson.

"IN the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of His glory, and when the dead shall rise again from corruption incorruptible, (1 Cor. xv. 53,) ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones of judgment, condemning the twelve tribes of Israël, because, when ye believed in Me, they would not. (John iii. 18.) And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for My Name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life." This place agreeth well with that other where the Saviour saith: "I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law; and a man's foes shall be they of his own household." (Matth. x. 34.) Every one, therefore, that hath set no store by affection, and riches, and the pleasures of the world, for Christ's faith's sake, and the preaching of the Gospel, shall receive an hundred-fold, and shall inherit everlasting life.

---

[1] Ps. cxxxviii. 17.

[2] A Greek cynic, remarkable for his self-denial, who flourished at Athens about B.C. 300.

[3] Cf. Matth. xx. 22, 23.

Eighth Responsory.

These men are saints, whom the Lord hath chosen in love unfeigned, and hath given them glory everlasting. These are they by the light of whose teaching the Church is glorified, even as the moon is glorified by the light of the sun.

Verse. [1] The saints through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness.

Answer. By the light of whose teaching the Church is glorified, even as the moon is glorified by the light of the sun.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. By the light of whose teaching the Church is glorified, even as the moon is glorified by the light of the sun.

Ninth Lesson.

BY reason of these words, "an hundredfold," some will have it that there shall be a thousand years after the resurrection, wherein they that have forsaken all things shall receive an hundredfold of those things which they have forsaken, and shall inherit everlasting life. Such men consider not that though in other things this were worthy, as touching wives it is unseemly: for it becometh us not to think that he that hath forsaken one wife in this world, shall receive an hundred wives in that which is to come. But the meaning is this, that every one that for the Saviour's sake hath forsaken earthly things, shall receive spiritual things: which things, being rightly weighed against earthly things, are as though an hundredfold were weighed against one.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. [2] This is My commandment, * That ye love one another, as I have loved you.

Second Antiphon. [2] Greater love hath no man than this, * that a man lay down his life for his friends.

Third Antiphon. [2] Ye are My friends, * if ye do whatsoever I command you, saith the Lord.

Fourth Antiphon. [3] Blessed are the peace-makers, blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.

Fifth Antiphon. [4] In your patience * possess ye your souls.

Chapter. (Eph. ii. 19.)

BRETHREN, now ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the Saints, and of the household of God: and are built upon the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets, JESUS Christ Himself being the chief corner-stone.

Hymn.[5]

NOW let the earth with joy resound,
And Heaven the chant re-echo round;
Nor Heaven nor earth too high can raise,
The great Apostles' glorious praise.

O ye who, throned in glory dread,
Shall judge the living and the dead!
Lights of the world for evermore!
To you the suppliant prayer we pour.

Ye close the sacred gates on high;
At your command apart they fly:
O loose for us the guilty chain
We strive to break, and strive in vain.

Sickness and health your voice obey;
At your command they go or stay:
From sin's disease our souls restore;
In good confirm us more and more.

So when the world is at its end,
And Christ to judgment shall descend,
May we be called those joys to see,
Prepared from all eternity.

Praise to the Father, with the Son,
And Holy Spirit, Three in One;
As ever was in ages past,
And so shall be while ages last.
Amen.

Verse. [6] They declared the work of God.

Answer. And understood His doings.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. [7] Ye which have forsaken all, and have followed Me, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life.

SECOND VESPERS.

First Antiphon. The LORD hath sworn, and will not repent: Thou art a Priest for ever.

Ps. cix. The LORD said, &c., (p. 100.)

Second Antiphon. That the Lord may set him with the princes of His people.

Ps. cxii. Praise the LORD, O ye His servants, &c., (p. 101.)

Third Antiphon. O Lord, Thou hast loosed my bonds: I will offer to Thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving.

Psalm CXV.

[In the Hebrew this Psalm is a continuation of the last. The Vulgate and the LXX. prefix "Alleluia."]

I BELIEVED, therefore have I spoken: * but I was greatly afflicted.

I said in my haste: * All men are liars.

What shall I render unto the LORD * for all His benefits toward me?

I will take the cup of salvation, * and call upon the name of the LORD.

I will pay my vows unto the LORD in the presence of all His people. * Precious in the sight of the LORD is the death of His Saints.

O LORD, truly I am Thy servant: * I am Thy servant, and the son of Thine handmaid:

Thou hast loosed my bonds. * I will offer to Thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and will call upon the name of the LORD.

I will pay my vows unto the LORD, in the presence of all His people: * in the courts of the LORD's house, in the midst of thee, O Jerusalem!

[Here the Hebrew appends "Alleluia," which the Vulgate and the LXX. prefix to the next Psalm.]

Fourth Antiphon. They went forth weeping, sowing their seed.

Psalm CXXV.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees."]

WHEN the LORD turned again the captivity of Zion, * we were like them that come again from sickness.

Then was our mouth filled with laughter, * and our tongue with singing.

Then said they among the heathen: * The LORD hath done great things for them.

The LORD hath done great things for us: * whereof we are glad.

Turn again our captivity, O LORD, * as the streams in the south.

They that sow in tears * shall reap in joy.

They go forth weeping, * sowing their seed;

They shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, * bringing their sheaves with them.

Fifth Antiphon. O God, Thy friends are honourable; their power is waxen right strong.

Psalm CXXXVIII.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David," with a musical (?) direction, the meaning of which is not now certain.]

O LORD, Thou hast searched me, and known me: * Thou knowest my down-sitting and mine up-rising:

Thou understandest my thoughts afar off. * Thou searchest my path, and my line,

And art acquainted with all my ways: * before there is a word on my tongue.

Lo, O LORD, Thou knowest all things both new and old: * Thou hast made me, and laid Thine hand upon me.

Such knowledge is too wonderful for me: * it is high, and I cannot attain unto it.

Whither shall I go from Thy Spirit? * or whither shall I flee from Thy presence?

If I ascend up into heaven, Thou are there: * if I go down into hell, Thou art there.

If I take the wings of the morning, * and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea;—

Even there shall Thine hand lead me, * and Thy right hand shall hold me.

If I say: Surely the darkness shall cover me: * even the night shall be light about me in my pleasures.

For the darkness is not darkness to Thee: and the night shineth as the day: * the darkness and the light to Thee are both alike.

For Thou didst form my reins: * Thou hast upholden me from my mother's womb.

I will praise Thee, for Thy greatness is terrible: * marvellous are Thy works: and that my soul knoweth right well.

My bones were not hid from Thee, when Thou madest me in secret: * nor my substance in the lower parts of the earth.

Thine eyes beheld my substance yet being imperfect: and in Thy book all were written: * day by day were they to be fashioned, when as yet there was none of them.

But to me, O God, Thy friends are exceeding honourable: * their power is waxen right strong.

If I should count them, they are more in number than the sand: * I arose, and am still with Thee.

Surely Thou wilt slay the wicked, O God: * depart from me, ye bloody men.

For ye say in thought: * In vain shall Thy people take Thy cities.

Do not I hate them, O LORD, that hate Thee? * and am not I grieved at those that rise up against Thee?

I hate them with perfect hatred: * they are to me as enemies.

Search me, O God, and know mine heart: * try me and know my thoughts.

And see if there be any wicked way in me: * and lead me in the way everlasting.

Chapter, Hymn, and Verse and Answer from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Wax valiant in fight, and strive against the old serpent: and ye shall receive an everlasting kingdom. Alleluia.

Other Lessons for the Feasts of the Apostles.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Exposition of the Eighty-sixth Psalm by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.]

"HER foundation is in the holy mountains: the LORD loveth the gates of Zion." Wherefore hath the city twelve foundations, and in them the names of the Prophets and of the Apostles of the Lamb?[1] Because their authority is the foundation whereon our weakness resteth. Wherefore are they the gates?[2] Because through them we enter in unto the kingdom of God, since they have preached the same unto us, and when we enter in through their preaching, we enter in by Christ, Who is Himself The Door. (John x. 7.) And, whereas it is written that the city hath twelve gates, and, again, that Christ is the one Door, Christ is all the twelve, for He is in all the twelve: and therefore were twelve Apostles chosen. There lieth a great mystery in the signification of this number, Twelve. "Ye shall sit," saith the Lord, "upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israël."

Fifth Lesson.

IF then there be set there twelve thrones of judgment, (Ps. cxxi. 5,) Paul, in that he is the thirteenth Apostle, hath not where to sit, nor wherein to judge. Nevertheless, he hath said of himself that he will judge not men only, but angels. "Know ye not," saith he, "that we shall judge angels?" (1 Cor. vi. 3,)—that is, the fallen angels. Then might they have answered him: "Wherefore boastest thou thyself to be a judge? For where is thy seat? The Lord hath said that for the twelve Apostles there shall be twelve thrones: one of the twelve, even Judas, is indeed fallen, but holy Matthias is chosen into his place; for the twelve thrones there are still twelve to sit thereon: first find whereon thou shalt sit, and afterward give thyself out for a judge." Let us see, then, what is the meaning of these twelve thrones. By them is signified in a mystery the whole world, since the Church shall be through all the earth, whence this building is called to be built up together in Christ.

Sixth Lesson.

THEREFORE is it said that there shall be twelve thrones, because from all quarters shall there come men to be judged; even as it is said that the city hath twelve gates, because from all quarters shall the nations of them which are saved, enter into it. So, not the twelve only, and the Apostle Paul, but all, as many as shall judge, have part in these twelve thrones, this signifying, that they shall judge all men; even as all that enter into the city, have part in her twelve gates. For there are four quarters of the world, the East, and the West, and the North, and the South: of which four quarters is mention often made in the Scriptures. From the four winds shall the elect be gathered together, as saith the Lord in the Gospel: "And He shall send His Angels with a great sound of a trumpet; and they shall gather together His elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." (Matth. xxiv. 31.) From the four winds, therefore, is the Church called together; and how are they called? Everywhere are they called in the Trinity; for they are called no otherwise than by baptizing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. (Matth. xxvii. 19.) Now four being multiplied by three is twelve.

---

[1] A sort of quotation from or allusion to Apoc. xxi. 14, but there the Prophets are not mentioned.

[2] Apoc. xxi. 12, says that on the gates were written the names of the twelve tribes of Israël.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xix. 27.)

AT that time: Peter said unto JESUS: Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed Thee: what shall we have therefore? And so on.

Homily by the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow and Doctor of the Church]. (Homily for St Benedict's Birth-day.)

"If thou wilt be perfect," saith Christ, "go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and come and follow Me: and thou shalt have treasure in heaven." (Matth. xix. 21.) Yea, treasure that passeth not away! Unto such saith JESUS, at the questioning of Peter: "Amen I say unto you, that ye which have followed Me, in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israël." He taught them, which work for His Name's sake in this life, to look for their reward in another life: that is, in the regeneration. "In the regeneration!"—when we who have been born dying creatures into a dying life, shall in the resurrection be born again into an undying life.

Eighth Lesson.

AND soothly, it is a just retribution, that they, who, while they were yet here, have for Christ's sake set no store by being great among men, should there by Christ be singularly glorified to be the assessors of His judgment-seat, even they whom nothing here could turn aside from being the followers of His footsteps. Nevertheless, let there be no man that believeth that the twelve Apostles only, among whom Matthias holdeth that place from which Judas by transgression fell, (Acts i. 25,) that they only shall judge, even as the twelve tribes of Israël shall not alone be judged: for then were the tribe of Levi, which is the thirteenth, unjudged.

Ninth Lesson.

MOREOVER, then, were Paul, who is the thirteenth Apostle, deprived of all part in the judgment; whereas he saith of himself: "Know ye not that we shall judge angels? How much more things that pertain to this life?" But it behoveth us to know that every one who hath forsaken all and followed Christ, as did the Apostles, shall also come with Him to judgment, even as every man shall stand at His judgment seat. And the Scriptures use often to signify all by this number twelve; by the twelve thrones of the Apostles are signified the thrones of all them that shall judge; and by the twelve tribes of Israël, the whole number of them that shall be judged.

Other Lessons for the Feasts of Evangelists.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel (i. 1.)

AND it came to pass in the thirtieth year, in the fourth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I was among the captives by the river of Chebar, that the heavens were opened, and I saw visions of God. In the fifth day of the month, which was the fifth year of King Jehoiachim's captivity, the word of the LORD came unto Ezekiel, the son of Buzi, the Priest, in the land of the Chaldeans, by the river Chebar, and the hand of the LORD was there upon him. And I looked, and, behold, a whirlwind came out of the North, a great cloud, and a fire infolding itself, and a brightness was about it, and out of the midst thereof, (that is, out of the midst of the fire,) as the colour of amber.

Second Lesson.

ALSO in the midst thereof the likeness of four living creatures; and this was their appearance, they had the likeness of a man. And every one had four faces, and every one had four wings. Their feet were straight feet, and the sole of their feet was like the sole of a calf's foot, and they sparkled like the colour of glowing brass. And they had the hands of a man under their wings on their four sides, and they had faces and wings on four sides. And the wings of one were joined to the wings of another; they turned not when they went; they went every one straight forward.

Third Lesson.

AS for the likeness of their faces, they four had the face of a man and the face of a lion on the right side, and they four had the face of an ox on the left side, and they four had the face of an eagle above. Thus were their faces, and their wings were stretched upward, two wings of every one were joined one to another, and two covered their bodies; and they went every one straight forward. Whither the spirit was to go, they went, and they turned not when they went.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Exposition of the Book of the Prophet Ezekiel by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Hom. 3, Bk. i.)

THE Prophet writeth very minutely touching the four holy living creatures, whom he saw in the spirit as being to come. He saith: "Every one had four faces, and every one had four wings." What signifieth the face save likeness whereby we are known? or wings, save the power to fly? since it is by the face that man is known from man, and by their wings that the birds' bodies are carried up into the air. So the face pertaineth to certitude,[1] and the wings to contemplation. With certitude we are known of God Almighty, Who saith: "I am the Good Shepherd, and know My sheep, and am known of Mine." (John x. 14.) And again: "I know whom I have chosen." (xiii. 18.) And by contemplation, whereby we rise above ourselves, we as it were fly heavenwards.

Fifth Lesson.

"EVERY one had four faces"—four faces, that is, and one body. If thou seek to know what Matthew teacheth concerning the Incarnation of the Lord, he teacheth no other doctrine than teacheth Mark, or Luke, or John. If thou seek to know what John teacheth, it is beyond all doubt that his doctrine is the doctrine of Matthew, and Mark, and Luke. If thou ask concerning Mark, he hath that which hath Matthew, and John, and Luke. If thou wilt know of Luke, know that he teacheth as doth Matthew, and Mark, and John. Therefore every one hath four faces, for God knoweth and seeth in them but one faith, which thou mayest see in each and in all.

Sixth Lesson.

"AND every one had four wings." For they do all with one accord preach our Lord JESUS Christ, the Son of Almighty God: toward Whose Godhead lifting up the eyes of their mind, they do lift the wings of contemplation, and do fly. In the Evangelists, the face pertaineth to the Lord's Manhood, and the wings to His Godhead: for they turn their face toward Him Whom they see in bodily shape: but when they say that He is, as touching His Godhead, Incomprehensible, and Incorporeal, the wings of their contemplation do, in a manner, carry them in flight heavenward. Because, then, they have all one faith in the Incarnation, and all equally look by contemplation toward the Godhead: it is well written of them, "Every one had four faces, and every one had four wings."

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (x. 1.)

AT that time: The Lord appointed other seventy-two also, and sent them two and two before His face into every city and place, whither He Himself would come. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (17*th on the Gospels.*)

Dearly beloved brethren, our Lord and Saviour doth sometimes admonish us by words, and sometimes by works. Yea, His very works do themselves teach us: for that which He doth silently His example still moveth us to copy. Behold how He sendeth forth His disciples to preach by two and two: since there are two commandments to love, that is, a commandment to love God, and a commandment to love our neighbour: and where there are not two, the one, being alone, hath not whereon to do the Lord's commandment. And no man can properly be said to love himself: for love tendeth outward toward our neighbour, if it be the love whereto the Gospel doth oblige us.

Eighth Lesson.

BEHOLD, the Lord sendeth forth His disciples to preach by two and two: and thus doing, He doth silently teach us that whosoever loveth not his neighbour, such an one it behoveth not to take upon him the office of a preacher. Well also is it said that He sent them before His face into every city and place whither He Himself would come. The Lord followeth His preachers: first cometh preaching, and then the Lord Himself cometh to the house of our mind, whither the word of exhortation hath come before: and so cometh the truth into our mind.

Ninth Lesson.

THEREFORE to preachers saith Isaiah: "Prepare ye the way of the LORD, make straight an highway for our God." (xl. 3.) And again the Psalmist saith: "Spread a path before Him That rideth upon the West." (lxvii. 4.) The Lord rideth upon the West; above that from which in death He veiled His glory hath He royally exalted that glory that excelleth, even the glory of His rising again. He rideth upon the West, Who, being risen again from the dead, is throned high above the death to which He bowed. Before Him, therefore, That rideth upon the West, we spread a path, when we set forth His glory before the eyes of your mind, to the end that He Himself may come after, and Himself enlighten the same your minds by His presence and His love.

[1] Text, ad fidem.

IV. For Feasts of One Martyr,

Which are kept out of Easter-tide.

Everything as on Sundays, except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Last Psalm.

O praise the LORD, &c., (Ps. cxvi., p. 105.)

Hymn.[1]

O GOD, of Thy soldiers
the Portion and Crown,
Spare Thy people, who hymn
the Praise of the Blest;
Earth's bitter joys,
its lures and its frown,
He scanned them and scorned,
and so is at rest.

Thy Martyr, he ran
all valiantly o'er
An highway of blood
for the prize Thou hast given.
We kneel at Thy feet
and meekly implore,
That our pardon may wait
on his triumph in heaven.

Honour and praise
To the Father and Son
And the Spirit be done
Now and always. Amen.

Verse. [2] Thou hast crowned him with glory and honour, O Lord.
Answer. And madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [3] This man is holy, * for he hath striven for the law of his God even unto death, and hath not feared for the words of the ungodly: for he had his foundation upon a strong rock.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Lord He is the King of the Martyrs. * O come, let us worship Him!

Hymn as at First Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Only three Psalms are said.

First Antiphon. His delight * was in the law of the LORD day and night.

Ps. i. Blessed is the man, &c., (p. 2.)

Second Antiphon. The Lord hath set him * upon His holy hill, to declare His decree.

Ps. ii. Why do the heathen, &c., (p. 3.)

Third Antiphon. I cried unto the LORD * with my voice, and He heard me out of His holy hill.

Ps. iii. LORD, how are they increased, &c., (p. 3.)

Verse. Thou hast crowned him with glory and honour, O Lord.
Answer. And madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands.

The following Lessons are not read if other Lessons are assigned instead, (either special, or from Scripture according to the Season,) or if the Martyr whose Feast is being kept was not a Bishop. In the latter case, failing other Lessons, are read those from Rom. viii. 12, given on p. 603.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Acts of the Apostles (xx. 17.)

FROM Miletus Paul sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the Church. And when they were come to him, he said unto them: Ye know, from the first day that I came into Asia, after what manner I have been with you at all seasons, serving the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears, and temptations, which befell me by the lying-in-wait of the Jews: how I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have showed you, and have taught you publicly, and from house to house, testifying both to the Jews and also to the Gentiles, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord JESUS Christ. And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there; save that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me at Jerusalem. But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself: so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord JESUS, to testify the Gospel of the grace of God.

First Responsory.

This man is holy, for he hath striven for the law of his God even unto death, and hath not feared for the words of the ungodly; for he had his foundation upon a strong rock.
Verse. [4] This is he which loved not his life in this world, and is come unto an everlasting kingdom.
Answer. For he had his foundation upon a strong rock.

Second Lesson.

AND now, behold, I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more. Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men. For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God. Take heed unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you Bishops to shepherd the Church of God, which He hath purchased with His Own Blood. I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock; also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them. Therefore watch, and remember that, by the space of three years, I ceased not to warn every one of you night and day with tears.

[1] Abridged from an hymn of the Ambrosian school; translation by Cardinal Newman.

[2] Ps. viii. 7.

[3] Ecclus. iv. 33; 1 Macc. ii. 62; Matth. vii. 25.

[4] Cf. John xii. 25.

Second Responsory.

[1] The righteous shall grow as the lily; yea, he shall flourish in the presence of the Lord for ever.

Verse. [2] Those that be planted in the house of the LORD, shall flourish in the courts of the house of our God.

Answer. Yea, he shall flourish in the presence of the Lord for ever.

Third Lesson.

AND now I commend you to God, and to the word of His grace, Which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified. I have coveted no man's silver, or gold, or apparel, as ye yourselves know: for these hands have ministered unto my necessities, and to them that were with me. I have showed you all things, how that so labouring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord JESUS, how He said: It is more blessed to give than to receive. And when he had thus spoken, he kneeled down, and prayed with them all. And they all wept sore, and fell on Paul's neck, and kissed him, sorrowing most of all for the words which he spake, that they should see his face no more. And they accompanied him unto the ship.

Third Responsory.

This is he which knew righteousness, and saw great wonders, and made his prayer unto the Most High; and he is numbered among the Saints.

Verse. This is he which loved not his life in this world, and is come unto an everlasting kingdom.

Answer. And he is numbered among the Saints.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And he is numbered among the Saints.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. O ye sons of men, * know that the LORD hath set apart him that is holy for Himself.

Psalm IV.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David," with a musical (?) direction of (now) uncertain meaning.]

WHEN I called, the God of my righteousness heard me: * Thou hast enlarged me when I was in distress:

Have mercy upon me, * and hear my prayer.

O ye sons of men, how long will ye be dull of heart? * Why will ye love vanity, and seek after leasing? [3]

But know that the LORD hath set apart for Himself him that is holy: * the LORD will hear me when I call unto Him.

Be ye angry and sin not: * what ye speak in your heart, repent upon your bed.[3]

Offer the sacrifices of righteousness, and put your trust in the LORD. * There be many that say: Who will show us any good?

LORD, Thou hast set upon us the light of Thy countenance. * Thou hast put gladness in my heart,

More than in the time that their corn, and wine, and oil * increased.

I will both lay me down in peace, * and sleep,

For Thou, LORD, only * makest me to dwell in safety.

Second Antiphon. O LORD, Thou hast compassed him * with Thy favour as with a shield.

Psalm V.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David," with a musical (?) superscription.]

GIVE ear unto my words, O LORD, * consider my supplication.

Hearken unto the voice of my cry, * my King and my God!

For unto Thee will I pray. * O LORD, in the morning Thou shalt hear my voice:

In the morning will I stand before Thee and look up. * For Thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness:

Neither shall the evil dwell with Thee, * nor the unrighteous stand in Thy sight:

Thou hatest all workers of iniquity. * Thou shalt destroy all them that speak leasing:

The LORD abhorreth the bloody and deceitful man. * But as for me, in the multitude of Thy mercy

I will come into Thine house: * I will worship toward Thine holy temple in Thy fear.

Lead me, O LORD, in Thy righteousness, * because of mine enemies; make my way straight before Thy face.

For there is no faithfulness in their mouth: * their inward part is very wickedness.

Their throat is an open sepulchre; they flatter with their tongue. * Judge Thou them, O God!

Let them fall by their own counsels; cast them out in the multitude of their transgressions, * for they have rebelled against Thee, O Lord!

And let all those that put their trust in Thee, rejoice: * let them ever shout for joy, because Thou dwellest in them:

Let them also that love Thy Name be joyful in Thee. * For Thou wilt bless the righteous.

---

[1] Hos. xiv. 6; Isa. xvii. 11, &c.

[2] Ps. xci. 14.

[3] SLH.

O LORD, Thou hast compassed us * with Thy favour as with a shield.

Third Antiphon. Thou hast crowned him * with glory and honour in all the earth.

Psalm VIII.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David." It has also a title which seems to show that it was a song for the vintage.]

O LORD, our Lord, * how excellent is Thy Name in all the earth!

For Thy glory is exalted * above the heavens.

[1] Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast Thou perfected praise because of Thine enemies, * that Thou mightest destroy the enemy and the avenger.

When I consider Thine heavens, the work of Thy fingers: * the moon and the stars which Thou hast ordained:

What is man, that Thou art mindful of him? * or the son of man, that thou visitest him?

Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, Thou hast crowned him with glory and honour, * and madest him to have dominion over the works of Thine hands.

Thou hast put all things under his feet, * all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field.

The fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, * that pass through the paths of the sea.

O LORD, our Lord, * how excellent is Thy Name in all the earth!

Verse. O Lord, Thou hast set a crown of precious stones—
Answer. Upon his head.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (44th on the Saints.)

THE illustrious day whereon the blessed Martyr N. (here insert his name) conquered, doth this day come round to us again: and as the Church doth rejoice with him in his glory, so doth she set before us his footsteps to be followed. For if we suffer, we shall also reign with him. In his glorious battle we have two things chiefly to consider: the hardened cruelty of the tormentor, and the unconquered patience of the Martyr: the cruelty of the tormentor, that we may abhor it; the patience of the Martyr, that we may imitate it. Hear what the Psalmist saith, complaining against sin: "Fret not thyself because of the evil-doers, for they shall soon dry up like the grass." (xxxvi. 1.) But touching the patience which is to be shown against the evil-doers, hear the word wherewith the Apostle moveth us: "Ye have need of patience, that ye may receive the promise." (Heb. x. 36.)

Fourth Responsory.

[2] The Lord made him honourable, and defended him from his enemies, and kept him safe from those that lay in wait for him, and gave him perpetual glory.

Verse. He went down with him into the pit, and left him not in bonds.

Answer. And gave him perpetual glory.

Fifth Lesson.

SO the patience of the blessed Martyr was crowned, and the unchastened spite of the tormentor is given over to everlasting torture. Christ's glorious champion looked for this during his battle, and shrank not from prison. Like his Head, he bore reproach, underwent mocking, and feared not for scourges: and as many sufferings as for Christ's sake he bore before he died, so many offerings did he make unto Him of himself. He had drunk in the Apostles' word and kept it deep in him: "The sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us," (Rom. viii. 18,) "for our light affliction which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." (2 Cor. iv. 17.) Being lifted up above earthly things by the love of this promise, and tasting beforehand the sweetness of the heavenly peace, he was unspeakably moved, and said with the Psalmist: "What have I in heaven, and what is there upon earth that I desire beside Thee? My flesh and my heart faileth: Thou art the God of my heart, and God is my portion for ever." (lxxii. 26.)

Fifth Responsory.

[3] O Lord, Thou hast given him his heart's desire, and hast not withholden the request of his lips.

Verse. For Thou hast prevented him with the blessings of sweetness: Thou hast set a crown of precious stones upon his head.

Answer. And hast not withholden the request of his lips.

Sixth Lesson.

FOR he considered, as far as man's weakness is able, through this darkness, to fix the eyes of his mind upon the eternal things, what is the gladness of the city above: and being not able to tell it, he cried out wondering: "What have I in heaven?" As though he would have said: "It passeth my strength, it passeth the power of my utterance, it goeth beyond the reach of my understanding, what is that beauty, what is that glory, what is that exaltation, wherein, when He hath hidden us from the troubling of men, in the secret of His presence, our Lord JESUS Christ shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto His glorious Body!" (Ps. xxx. 21, Phil. iii. 21.) In sight of this perfect liberty he shrank from no danger, and quailed before no suffering: and if he could have died a thousand times, he would not have thought himself to have bought it at a price high enough.

[1] This verse was quoted by our Lord, concerning those who cried Hosannah on Palm Sunday, Matt. xxi. 16.

[2] Wisd. x. 11-14, substituting "Lord" for "Wisdom."

[3] Ps. xx. 2, 3.

Sixth Responsory.

[1] The Lord hath put on him a robe of honour, and put about his head a crown of joy.

Verse. With the bread of life and understanding hath the Lord fed him, and given him the water of health and wisdom to drink.

Answer. And put about his head a crown of joy.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And put about his head a crown of joy.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The righteous LORD * loveth righteousness: His countenance doth behold uprightness.

Psalm X.

[Intituled "Of David." There is also a superscription perhaps musical, but now of uncertain meaning.]

IN the LORD put I my trust; how say ye to my soul, * Flee as a bird to the mountain?

For lo, the wicked bend their bow, they make ready their arrows in the quiver, * that they may privily shoot at the upright in heart.

For they have destroyed that which Thou hast established: * and what hath the righteous done?

The LORD is in His holy temple: * the LORD's throne is in heaven.

His eyes behold the poor: * His eyelids try the children of men.

The LORD trieth the righteous and the wicked: * but he that loveth iniquity hateth his own soul.

Upon the wicked He shall rain snares: * fire, and brimstone, and an horrible tempest, this shall be the portion of their cup.

For the righteous LORD loveth righteousness: * His countenance doth behold uprightness.

Second Antiphon. He shall dwell * in Thy tabernacle, He shall rest upon Thy holy hill.

Psalm XIV.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David."]

LORD, who shall abide in Thy tabernacle? * who shall dwell in Thine holy hill?

He that walketh uprightly, * and worketh righteousness.

He that speaketh the truth in his heart, * he that deceiveth not with his tongue.

He that hath not done evil to his neighbour, * nor taken up a reproach against his neighbour.

In whose eyes a vile person is despised: * but he honoureth them that fear the LORD.

He that sweareth to his neighbour, and deceiveth him not, * he that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent.

He that doeth these things, * shall never be moved.

Third Antiphon. O Lord, Thou hast set a crown * of precious stones upon his head.

Psalm XX.

[This Psalm also bears the same title as the xviiith.]

THE king shall joy in Thy strength, O LORD: * and in Thy salvation how greatly shall he rejoice!

Thou hast given him his heart's desire, * and hast not withholden the request of his lips.[2]

For Thou hast met him with the blessings of sweetness: * Thou hast set a crown of precious stones upon his head.

He asked life of Thee: * and Thou gavest him length of days for ever and ever.

His glory is great in Thy salvation: * honour and great majesty shalt Thou lay upon him.

For Thou wilt give him to be a blessing for ever: * Thou shalt make him exceeding glad with Thy countenance.

For the king trusteth in the LORD, * and, through the mercy of the Most High, he shall not be moved.

Thine hand shall find out all thine enemies: * thy right hand shall find out all those that hate thee.

Thou shalt make them as a fiery oven in the time of thine anger: * the LORD shall cut them off in His wrath, and the fire shall devour them.

Their fruit shalt thou destroy from the earth, * and their seed from among the children of men.

For they intended evil against thee: * they imagined a device, which they were not able to perform.

Therefore shalt thou cast them behind thee: * thou shalt leave their faces lying in thy track.

Be Thou exalted, O LORD, in Thine own strength: * we will sing and praise Thy power.

Verse. [3] His glory is great in Thy salvation.

Answer. Honour and great majesty shalt Thou lay upon him.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xiv. 26.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto the multitudes: If any man come to Me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be My disciple. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great,] (37th on the Gospels.)

Dearly beloved brethren, if we consider what and how great things are promised unto us in heaven, all things which are upon earth grow poor to our mind. For when this world's goods are reckoned against the gladness above, they are found to be a clog rather than an help. This present life being compared to life eternal, ought rather to be called death than life. For what is the daily failing of our corruption but, as it were, a creeping death? But what tongue is there that can tell, or what understanding that can comprehend how great is the rejoicing in the city above, where they have part with the choirs of Angels, where they stand with the most blessed spirits before the glory of the Creator, where they see the face of God present, where they behold the Incomprehensible Light, where they have no fear of death, and where they rejoice eternally incorruptible?

[1] Altered from Ecclus. vi. 32; xv. 3.

[2] SLH.

[3] Ps. xx. 4.

Seventh Responsory.

[1] A crown of gold upon his head, wherein is engraved Holiness, an ornament of honour, a costly work.

Verse. For Thou hast prevented him with the blessings of sweetness, Thou hast set a crown of precious stones upon his head.

Answer. Wherein is engraved Holiness, an ornament of honour, a costly work.

Eighth Blessing.

He whose feast-day we are keeping
Be our Advocate with God.

Eighth Lesson.

WHEN we hear these things our hearts burn within us; and we long to be already there, where we hope to rejoice for ever. But we cannot attain unto great rewards, save through great labour. Therefore saith the excellent preacher Paul: "He is not crowned, except he strive lawfully." (2 Tim. ii. 5.) The greatness of the reward doth delight our mind; let not the throes of the struggle dishearten us. Therefore the Truth saith unto every one that cometh unto Him: "If any man come to Me, and hate not his father and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be My disciple."

Eighth Responsory.

This is a Martyr indeed, who shed his blood for Christ's Name's sake; who feared not for the threats of judges, nor sought to be great with the glory of this world, but pressed on unto the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. [2] The Lord guided the righteous in right paths, and showed him the kingdom of God.

Answer. Who feared not for the threats of judges, nor sought to be great with the glory of this world, but pressed on unto the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Who feared not for the threats of judges, nor sought to be great with the glory of this world, but pressed on unto the kingdom of heaven.

Upon a few occasions, instead of the above, the following is the Eighth Responsory.

[3] O Lord, Thou hast prevented him with the blessings of sweetness; Thou hast set a crown of precious stones upon his head.

Verse. He asked life of Thee, and Thou gavest him length of days for ever and ever.

Answer. Thou hast set a crown of precious stones upon his head.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Thou hast set a crown of precious stones upon his head.

Ninth Lesson.

BUT it may be asked how we are commanded in one place to hate our parents, and them that are near us in the flesh, and in another place to love even our enemies. And, verily, the Truth hath said, as touching a wife: "What God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." (Matth. xix. 6.) And Paul saith: "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the Church." (Eph. v. 25.) Behold, the disciple commandeth a man to love his wife, and the Master saith: "If any man hate not his wife, he cannot be My disciple." Doth the judge, then, order one proclamation, and the crier make another? or can the man both love and hate? If we consider well the force of the commandment, we shall be able in wisdom to do both. Let us love wife, and kindred, and neighbour, as touching their nearness in the flesh; but as touching the way of God, if they withstand us therein, let us not know them, but hate them and flee from them.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. [4] Whosoever shall confess Me * before men, him will I confess also before My Father.

Second Antiphon. [5] He that followeth Me * walketh not in darkness, but shall have the light of life, saith the Lord.

Third Antiphon. [6] If any man serve Me, * let him follow Me; and where I am, there shall also My servant be.

Fourth Antiphon. [6] If any man serve Me, * him will My Father, Who is in heaven, honour.

Fifth Antiphon. [6] Father, I will * that where I am, there shall also My servant be.

Chapter. (James i. 12.)

BLESSED is the man that endureth temptation: for, when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which God hath promised to them that love Him.

Hymn.[7]

MARTYR of unconquer'd might,
Follower of th' Incarnate Son!
Who, victorious in the fight,
Hast celestial glory won;

By the virtue of thy prayer,
Let no evil hover nigh;
Sin's contagion drive afar;
Waken drowsy lethargy.

Loosen'd from the fleshly chain
Which detain'd thee here of old,
Loose us from the bonds of sin,
From the fetters of the world.

Glory to the Father be :
Glory to th' Incarnate Son ;
Glory, Holy Ghost, to Thee,
While eternal ages run. Amen.

Verse. [1] The righteous shall flourish like the palm-tree.

Answer. He shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. [2] He that hateth his life * in this world, shall keep it unto life eternal.

If the Prayer is not special there is said one of the following, which is also used throughout the whole Office of the Saint.

1. Prayer for one Martyr, who was a Bishop.

MERCIFULLY consider our weakness, O Almighty God, and whereas by the burden of our sins we are sore let and hindered, may it please Thee, that the prayers of Thy blessed and glorious Martyr and Bishop (here insert his name) may shield us. Through our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, One God, world without end. Amen.

2. Another Prayer for the same.

O GOD, Who year by year dost gladden us by the solemn feast-day of Thy blessed Martyr and Bishop (here insert his name,) mercifully grant that we who keep his birthday, may ever feel the joyful effects of his protection. Through our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

3. Prayer for a Martyr not a Bishop.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that we who keep the birthday of Thy blessed Martyr, (here insert his name,) may be so holpen by his prayers, that we may ever grow more and more in love toward Thy holy Name. Through our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

4. Another for the same.

GRACIOUSLY hear us, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, and, at the petition of Thy blessed Martyr, (here insert his name,) be mercifully pleased to deliver us from all things which may hurt our bodies, and from all evil thoughts which may defile our souls. Through our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, Verse and Answer, and Prayer from Lauds.

Psalm CXV.

[In the Hebrew this Psalm is a continuation of the last. The Vulgate and the LXX. prefix "Alleluia."]

I BELIEVED, therefore have I spoken: * but I was greatly afflicted.

I said in my haste: * All men are liars.

What shall I render unto the LORD * for all His benefits toward me?

I will take the cup of salvation, * and call upon the name of the LORD.

I will pay my vows unto the LORD in the presence of all His people. * Precious in the sight of the LORD is the death of His Saints.

O LORD, truly I am Thy servant: * I am Thy servant, and the son of Thine handmaid:

Thou hast loosed my bonds. * I will offer to Thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and will call upon the name of the LORD.

I will pay my vows unto the LORD, in the presence of all His people: * in the courts of the LORD's house, in the midst of thee, O Jerusalem!

Hymn as at First Vespers.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [1] If any man will come after Me, * let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me.

Other Lessons for Feasts of One Martyr.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Exposition of the hundred-and-eighteenth Psalm by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (21st Sermon.)

"PRINCES have persecuted me without a cause; but my heart standeth in awe of Thy word." These are rightly the words of a martyr, who beareth unjustly the torments of the persecutors, who hath robbed no man, who hath violently oppressed no man, who hath shed the blood of no man, who hath imagined to defile the bed of no man, who is debtor to the laws in nothing, and who is punished more grievously than if he were a robber: who speaketh righteousness, and there is none that will hear: who speaketh salvation, and all men fight against him: who is able to say: "When I spoke unto them, they fought against me without a cause." (Ps. cxix. 7.) They fight against him without a cause, who can lay no sin to his charge; they fight against him as an evildoer, who is by their own acknowledgment righteous: they fight against him as a warlock, who glorieth in the name of the Lord, and who doeth all things well because he doeth all things for God's sake.

Fifth Lesson.

THEY fight against him in vain who is accused of ungodliness among the ungodly and the unfaithful, because he teacheth Faith. Verily, him that is fought against without a cause it behoveth to be strong and patient. Wherefore then saith he: "My heart standeth in awe of Thy word?" Awe is the mark of the weak, the timid, and the fearful. But there is also a weakness unto salvation, there is a fear which is an holy fear. "O fear the LORD, all ye His Saints." (Ps. xxxiii. 10.) And again: "Blessed is the man that feareth the LORD." (Ps. cxi. 1.) And wherefore is he blessed? because he "delighteth greatly in His commandments."

Sixth Lesson.

THINK, then, how the martyr standeth between two dangers. On the one hand the wild beasts, roaring for his blood, do indeed strike terror; he heareth the hissing of the plates of white-hot metal, and seeth surging up the flames of the fiery furnace; behind him is the clanking of fetters, and beside him the executioner, stained with fresh blood; think of him there, face to face with the apparatus of death—but think again—of what thinketh he? Of the Law of God, of the everlasting fire, of the eternal flames, wherein the unbelieving shall burn for ever, of that torture whereof the agony is for ever new. And then indeed his heart faileth for fear, lest by giving way under torment here, he should give himself up to everlasting torment hereafter: then indeed he trembleth, when Faith maketh to glitter before his eyes the awful sword of the judgment to come. And in this, the faithful trembling of the true-hearted, are there not both unshaken hope of the eternal things, and awe of the things of God?

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xvi. 24.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (32nd on the Gospels.)

Our Lord and Redeemer came into the world a new Man, and gave the world new commandments. For against the ways of our old life, brought and bred up in sin, He set the contrast of His new life. It was the old way, according to the knowledge of the carnal man, for every man to keep his own goods, and, if he were able to do it, to take his neighbour's goods also, and, if he were not able to take them, at least to lust after them. But the Heavenly Physician hath medicines wherewith to meet all the diseases of sin. For, even, as by the art of the physician, things hot are healed by things cold, and things cold by things hot, so doth our Lord set against sin holiness, ordaining for the lecherous purity, for the miserly munificence, for the hot-tempered meekness, and for the proud lowliness.

---

[1] Matth. xvi. 24.

Eighth Lesson.

SO the Lord, when He would give a new commandment unto them that came to Him, said: "Whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be My disciple," (Luke xiv. 33,) — as though He had said openly: "All ye that according to the old man lust after your neighbour's goods, must, according to the zeal of the new man, give away even that which is your own." But let us hear again what He saith in this place: "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself." First He saith that we must deny to ourselves that which is our own, and now that we must even deny ourselves to ourselves. Perchance it is not hard for a man to give up that which is his own, but it is exceeding hard to give up himself. To deny himself his possessions is little: but to deny himself himself is a denial exceeding great.

Ninth Lesson.

YET when we come unto Him the Lord will have us deny to ourselves even ourselves, since as many of us as are entered into the battle of faith, are entered into a contention against evil spirits. But the evil spirits have nothing of their own in this world, and therefore must we wrestle with them, naked with naked. For if he that is clothed, wrestle with him that is naked, he faileth swiftly, because he hath whereon he that is naked taketh hold. And what are all things earthly but things wherewith the soul is clothed upon? whosoever therefore will wrestle with Satan, let him cast away his clothes, lest he be thereby endangered.

Again other Lessons for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (x. 26.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: There is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed, and hid, that shall not be known. And so on.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.] (Comm. on Matth. Chap. 10.)

The Lord pointeth to the day of judgment, that day wherein the hidden counsels of the hearts shall be made manifest, and those things which are dark now shall be the subject of all men's knowledge. Therefore He warneth us not to fear threats, nor persuasions, nor the power of such as fight against us; since in the day of judgment it will be manifest that all these things are null and void. "And what I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light; and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the house-tops." We read not that the Lord's use was to speak by night, or to tell His doctrine in darkness, but that to the carnal all His words were darkness, and to the unbelieving all His discourse night.

Eighth Lesson.

THEREFORE willeth He that that which He hath spoken, should be freely proclaimed in faith and in confession. Therefore commandeth He that that which He hath told in darkness shall be spoken in light, and that that which He hath made to be heard in the ear should be preached upon the house-tops, that is, with loud and high words. For it behoveth us ever to make God known, and to speak in the light of Apostolic preaching the dark things of the Gospel message, having no fear of them which have power over bodies, but none over our souls, but rather fearing God, Which is able to destroy both body and soul in hell.

Ninth Lesson.

"FEAR not them which kill the body." Therefore we need fear nothing which may chance to our bodies, nor sorrow because of the destruction of the flesh, when, according to the laws of our nature and that from whence we are taken, we are unclothed upon, and become a pure spirit. And, since it behoveth us who are rooted in such a doctrine, freely and constantly to confess God, even were it only because of the alternative whereby we are bound, He saith further: "Whosoever shall confess Me before men, him will I confess also before My Father, Which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny Me before men, him will I also deny before My Father, Which is in heaven." Such witnesses as He hath seen us to have been here to His name before men, such a Witness shall we find Him to be hereafter to our names before His Father Which is in heaven.

For Simple Feasts of One Martyr.

Kept out of Easter-tide.

The Office is as on a Semi-double, with the following exceptions.

FIRST VESPERS.

The Office is of the Week-day, till the Chapter exclusive.

The Office of the Saint begins with the Chapter, which, as also the Hymn, Verse and Answer, Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin, and Prayer are all as given, (p. 594.) The Common Commemorations are said or not according to the season.

At Compline are said Preces.

MATTINS.

The Invitatory and Hymn are as just given.

Then follow the Week-day Psalms, with their own Antiphons.

On Mondays and Thursdays.

Verse. Thou hast crowned him with glory and honour, O Lord.
Answer. And madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands.

Absolution.

Graciously hear, &c.

On Tuesdays and Fridays.

On Wednesdays.

Verse. His glory is great in Thy salvation.
Answer. Honour and great majesty shalt Thou lay upon him.

Absolution.

May the Almighty, &c.

First Blessing.

May His blessing be upon us,
Who doth live and reign for ever.

First Lesson from Scripture according to the Season, being either the first part, or, if the Saint have two Lessons, the whole read as one, at will.

First Responsory.

On Mondays and Thursdays.

This man is holy, &c., (First Responsory in the preceding Office.)

On Tuesdays and Fridays.

The Lord made him honourable, &c., (Fourth Responsory in the preceding Office.)

On Wednesdays.

A crown of gold, &c., (Seventh Responsory in the preceding Office.)

Second Blessing.

He whose feast-day we are keeping.
Be our Advocate with God.

Second Lesson is the first of the Legend of the Saint, if there be two; if not, it is the second from Scripture, to which the third may be added at will.

Second Responsory.

On Mondays and Thursdays.

The righteous shall grow, &c., (Second Responsory in the preceding Office;) with this addition:

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. Yea, he shall flourish in the presence of the Lord for ever.

On Tuesdays and Fridays.

O Lord, Thou hast given him, &c., (Fifth Responsory in the preceding Office;) with this addition:

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. And hast not withholden the request of his lips.

On Wednesdays.

This is a martyr indeed, &c. Or, O Lord, Thou hast prevented, &c., (Eighth Responsory in the preceding Office.)

Third Blessing.

May He That is the Angels' King.
To that high realm His people bring.

Third Lesson is the whole or the second part of the Legend of the Saint, if there is one, or else the special Lesson assigned.

Then the Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said, and so end Mattins.

The rest of the Office is as on a Semidouble, as just given; it ends at None, inclusive; Preces are said at Prime, and the Common Commemorations are made at Lauds or not, according to the season.

V. For Feasts of Many Martyrs,

Kept out of Easter-tide.

Everything as on Sundays, except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Last Psalm.

O praise the LORD, &c., (Ps. cxvi., p. 105.)

Hymn.[1]

THE triumphs of the martyred saints
The joyous lay demand,
The heart delights in song to dwell
On that victorious band:
Those whom the senseless world abhorred,
Who cast the world aside,
Deemed fruitless, worthless, for the sake
Of Christ, their Lord and Guide.

For Thee they braved the tyrant's rage,
The scourge's cruel smart:
The wild beast's claw their bodies tore,
But vanquished not the heart:
Like lambs before the sword they fell,
Nor cry nor plaint expressed:
For patience kept the conscious mind,
And armed the fearless breast.

[1] Author unknown (sixth to ninth century); hymn altered at some places; translation by the late Dr Mant.

What tongue can tell Thy crown prepared
To wreathe the martyr's head?
What voice Thy robe of white to clothe
His limbs with torture red?
Vouchsafe us, Lord, if such Thy will,
Clear skies and seasons calm:
If not, the martyr's cross to bear,
And win the martyr's palm. Amen.

Verse. [1] Be glad in the LORD, and rejoice, ye righteous.

Answer. And shout for joy, all ye that are upright in heart.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [2] For theirs is the kingdom of heaven, who loved not their lives in this world, and have attained unto the reward of the kingdom, and have washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Lord, He is the King of the Martyrs. * O come, let us worship Him!

Hymn.[3]

NOW, comrades, sing we the strife and the victory,
Sing we the triumph, the joy, and the majesty,
Fain be our lips when the theme for their utterance
Tells of martyrdom glorified.

Wisdom was theirs which was reckoned as foolishness,
Lost on a world which esteemed their end honourless
While in the might of Thy Spirit they followed Thee,
Jesus, heaven's eternal King.

Courage was theirs which no mocking nor threatening
Daunted, nor all the inventions of cruelty
Broke, when the conquerors, strong under agony,
Crushed the power of the torturer.

Mute as the lamb that is led to the slaughtering
Died they, no cry and no violence uttering:
Peace in their hearts from the peace of eternity
Only witnessing all was well.

Glory is theirs and unspeakable happiness,
Bright with the light of unaltering blessedness,
Stored up in heaven for such as have died for Thee
By our minds inconceivable.

Praise be to Thee, their faith's Author and Finisher,
Only-begotten with Him Who begetteth Thee,
And to the Spirit, Who, with Thee, coequally
Reigns eternally magnified. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Only three Psalms are said.

First Antiphon. By the rivers of water * hath the Lord planted the vineyard[4] of the righteous, and in His Law do they meditate day and night.

Ps. i. Blessed is the man, &c., (p. 2.)

Second Antiphon. [5] As gold in the furnace * hath the Lord tried His chosen ones, and received them for ever as a burnt-offering.

Ps. ii. Why do the heathen, &c., (p. 3.)

Third Antiphon. [5] Though the elect be punished * in the sight of men, yet is their hope full of immortality for ever.

Ps. iii. LORD, how are they increased, &c., (p. 3.)

Verse. Be glad in the LORD, and rejoice, ye righteous.

Answer. And shout for joy, all ye that are upright in heart.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Epistle of Blessed Paul the Apostle to the Romans (viii. 12.)

BRETHREN, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh. For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear, but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry: Abba! (Father.) For the Spirit Itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God. And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorified together. For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God.

First Responsory.

God shall wipe away all tears from the eyes of His Saints, and there shall be no more [6] sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away.

Verse. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat.

Answer. For the former things are passed away.

Second Lesson. (28.)

AND we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called to be Saints, according to His purpose. For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the First-born among many brethren. Moreover, whom He did predestinate, them He also called: and whom He called, them He also justified: and whom He justified, them He also glorified. What then shall we say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? He That spared not His own

[1] Ps. xxxi. 11.

[2] Cf. Matth. v. 10; John xii. 25; Apoc. vii. 14.

[3] The original is a hymn of the Ambrosian school, perhaps by St Ambrose himself.

[4] Cf. Isa. v. 7.

[5] Wisd. iii. 6, 4.

[6] In Apoc. xxi. 4, from which this beautiful Responsory is taken, the words are, "And there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, &c." The mention of "death" seems to be omitted because the Church will not apply that word to the glorious transit of her Martyrs, which she habitually styles their "natalitia," or Birthday Festival.

Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things? Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God That justifieth. Who is He that condemneth? It is Christ JESUS, That died, yea, rather, That is risen again, Who is even at the right hand of God, Who also maketh intercession for us.

Second Responsory.

These men are holy, who have gloriously shed their blood for the Lord's sake, yea, who loved Christ in their lives, and were made like unto Him in their flesh, and therefore they have earned crowns of victory.

Verse. One spirit, and one faith was in them.

Answer. And therefore they have earned crowns of victory.

Third Lesson.

WHO then shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or persecution, or sword? As it is written: For Thy sake we are killed all the day long, we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter.[1] Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors, through Him That loved us. For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor Principalities, nor Powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor might, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ JESUS our Lord.

Third Responsory.

They gave their bodies for God's sake to death; and gained the everlasting crown.

Verse. [2] These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes in the Blood of the Lamb.

Answer. And gained the everlasting crown.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And gained the everlasting crown.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [3] I will give unto My Saints a place * in the kingdom of My Father, every one by his own name, saith the Lord.

Psalm XIV.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David."]

LORD, who shall abide in Thy tabernacle? * who shall dwell in Thine holy hill?

He that walketh uprightly, * and worketh righteousness.

He that speaketh the truth in his heart, * he that deceiveth not with his tongue.

He that hath not done evil to his neighbour, * nor taken up a reproach against his neighbour.

In whose eyes a vile person is despised: * but he honoureth them that fear the LORD.

He that sweareth to his neighbour, and deceiveth him not, * he that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent.

He that doeth these things, * shall never be moved.

Second Antiphon. To the Saints that are in the earth * Thou hast made all my counsels admirable.

Psalm XV.

[Intituled a work "of David," but the specifically descriptive word is not now of certain meaning.]

PRESERVE me, O Lord, for in Thee do I put my trust: * I have said unto the LORD: Thou art my God, for Thou hast no need of my goods.

To the Saints that are in His land, * He hath made all my will admirable.

Their sorrows are multiplied, * that hasten after [a strange god].

In their assemblies for bloodshedding will I have no part: * nor mention their names with my lips.

The LORD is the portion of mine inheritance, and of my cup: * Thou art He That shalt restore mine inheritance unto me.

The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places: * yea, I have a goodly heritage.

I will bless the LORD, Who hath given me counsel: * my reins also instruct me in the night seasons.

I have set the LORD always before my face: * because He is at my right hand, I shall never be moved.

Therefore mine heart is glad, and my tongue rejoiceth: * my flesh also shall rest in hope,

For Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell: * neither wilt Thou suffer Thine Holy One to see corruption.

Thou hast shown me the path of life, Thou shalt fill me with joy in Thy presence: * at Thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore.

Third Antiphon. [4] The Saints that wait upon the LORD * shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles, they shall fly and not faint.

Psalm XXIII.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David." The Vulgate and the LXX. add "for the first day of the week."]

THE earth is the LORD'S and the fulness thereof; * the world, and they that dwell therein.

For He hath founded it upon the seas, * and established it upon the floods.

Who shall ascend into the mountain of the LORD? * or who shall stand in His holy place?

He that hath clean hands and a pure heart, * who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully unto his neighbour.

He shall receive a blessing from the LORD, * and mercy from the God of his salvation.

---

[1] Ps. xliii. 22.

[2] Apoc. vii. 14.

[3] Cf. John xiv. 2.

[4] Isa. xl. 31.

This is the generation of them that seek Him, * that seek the face of the God of Jacob.[1]

Lift up your gates, O ye princes, and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors! * and the King of glory shall come in.

Who is this King of glory? * The LORD strong and mighty, the LORD mighty in battle.

Lift up your gates, O ye princes, and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors! * and the King of glory shall come in.

Who is this King of glory? * The LORD of hosts, He is the King of glory.[1]

Verse. [2] Let the righteous rejoice before God.

Answer. Yea, let them exceedingly rejoice.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (47th on the Saints.)

DEARLY beloved brethren, as often as we keep the Feasts of the holy Martyrs, we look to obtain of the Lord, by their intercession, such good things in this life that thereby we, following them, may gain better in that which is to come. For they only do truly keep Holiday on the Feasts of the Martyrs, who follow after the Martyrs' example. These Feasts of the Martyrs are the Martyrs' preaching, whereby to stir us up to imitate what we are not loath to honour.

Fourth Responsory.

[3] Thy Saints, O Lord, have passed a wonderful way, serving Thy commandments, that they might be found without hurt in the midst of the mighty waters. Dry land appeared, and, out of the Red Sea, a way without impediment.

Verse. [4] He smote the rock, and the waters gushed out, and the streams overflowed.

Answer. Dry land appeared, and, out of the Red Sea, a way without impediment.

Fifth Lesson.

BUT we, who would fain rejoice with the Saints, would fain not share with them the persecution of the world. Whosoever will not take ensample of the holy Martyrs, as far as lieth in him, such an one cannot attain unto their blessedness. Thus preacheth the Apostle Paul, when he saith: "As ye are partakers of the sufferings, so shall ye be also of the consolation." (2 Cor. i. 7.) Yea, the Lord Himself saith in the Gospel: "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated Me before it hated you." (John xv. 18.) He will not be of the body, who will not be hated with the Head.

Fifth Responsory.

The Saints of God shrank not from the stripes of the executioners, but died for Christ's Name's sake; that they might be made joint-heirs in the house of the Lord.

Verse. They gave their bodies for God's sake to death.

Answer. That they might be made joint-heirs in the house of the Lord.

Sixth Lesson.

BUT some man will say: "And who is he that can tread in the footsteps of the blessed Martyrs?" To such an one I answer that, by the Lord's help, we are able, if we so will, to tread in the footsteps, not of the blessed Martyrs only, but even of the same Lord Himself. Hearken, not to me, but to the same Lord, Who crieth unto all men: "Learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly in heart." (Matth. xi. 29.) Hear also with what words the Apostle Peter warneth us: "Christ suffered for us, leaving us an example, that we should follow His steps." (1 Pet. ii. 21.)

Sixth Responsory.

[5] As gold in the furnace hath the Lord tried His chosen ones, and received them as a burnt-offering, and yet a while, and they shall be regarded; for the grace of God, and His peace, are with His chosen.

Verse. They that put their trust in Him shall understand the truth: and such as be faithful in love shall abide with Him.

Answer. For the grace of God, and His peace, are with His chosen.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. For the grace of God, and His peace, are with His chosen.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [6] The righteous live * for evermore; their reward also is with the Lord.

Psalm XXXII.

[The Vulgate and the LXX. ascribe this psalm "to David."]

REJOICE in the LORD, O ye righteous: * praise is comely for the upright.

Praise the LORD with harp: * sing unto Him with the psaltery of ten strings.

Sing unto Him a new song: * play skilfully unto Him with a loud noise.

For the word of the LORD is right: * and all His works are done in truth.

He loveth mercy and judgment: * the earth is full of the goodness of the LORD.

By the word of the LORD were the heavens made, * and all the host of them by the breath of His mouth.

He gathereth the waters of the sea together as an heap: * He layeth up the depths in storehouses.

Let all the earth fear the LORD: * let all the inhabitants of the world stand in awe of Him.

[1] SLH.

[2] Ps. lxvii. 4.

[3] Wisd. xix. 5-7; Neh. ix. 11.

[4] Ps. lxxvii. 20.

[5] Wisd. iii. 6-9.

[6] Wisd. v. 16.

For He spake, and it was done: * He commanded, and it was made.

The Lord bringeth the counsel of the heathen to nought: * He maketh the devices of the people of none effect, and setteth aside the counsel of princes.

But the counsel of the Lord standeth for ever, * the thoughts of His heart to all generations.

Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord, * the people He hath chosen for His own inheritance.

The Lord looketh from heaven: * He beholdeth all the sons of men.

From the set place of His habitation * He looketh upon all the inhabitants of the earth.

He fashioneth the heart of every one of them: * He considereth all their works.

There is no king saved by the multitude of an host: * a mighty man is not delivered by much strength.

An horse is a vain thing for safety: * by his great strength he shall not escape.

Behold, the eyes of the Lord are upon them that fear Him, * and upon them that hope in His mercy.

To deliver their soul from death, * and to feed them in time of famine.

Our soul waiteth for the Lord: * for He is our help and our shield.

For our heart shall rejoice in Him: * because we have trusted in His holy Name.

Let Thy mercy, O Lord, be upon us, * according as we hope in Thee.

Second Antiphon. They gave up their bodies unto death * rather than serve idols: and therefore have they crowns on their heads and palms in their hands.[1]

Psalm XXXIII.

[Intituled "Of David, when he changed his behaviour before Abimelech, who drove him away and he departed." This incident is thus described in 1 Kings (Sam.) xxi. 10. "And David arose and fled that day for fear of Saul, and went to Achish" (otherwise called Abimelech) "the King of Gath. And the servants of Achish said unto him: Is not this David the King of the land? Did they not sing one to another of him in dances saying, 'Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands'? And David laid up these words in his heart, and was sore afraid of Achish the King of Gath. And he changed his behaviour before them, and feigned himself mad in their hands, and scrabbled on the doors of the gate, and let his spittle fall down upon his beard. Then said Achish to his servants: Lo, ye see the man is mad; wherefore have you brought him to me? Have I need of madmen, that ye have brought this fellow to play the madman in my presence? Shall this fellow come into mine house? xxii. David therefore departed thence, and escaped to the cave of Adullam." This Psalm is A B C Darian.]

I WILL bless the Lord at all times: * His praise shall continually be in my mouth.

My soul shall make her boast in the Lord: * the humble shall hear thereof, and be glad.

O magnify the Lord with me: * and let us exalt His Name together.

I sought the Lord, and He heard me, * and delivered me from all my distress.

Draw near unto Him, and be lightened, * and your faces shall not be ashamed.

This poor man cried, and the Lord heard him, * and saved him out of all his troubles.

The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear Him, * and delivereth them.

O taste and see that the Lord is good: * blessed is the man that trusteth in Him.

O fear the Lord, all ye His Saints: * for there is no want to them that fear Him.

The mighty lack and suffer hunger: * but they that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing.

Come, ye children, hearken unto me: * I will teach you the fear of the Lord.

What man is he that desireth life, * that loveth to see good days?

Keep thy tongue from evil, * and thy lips from speaking guile.

Depart from evil and do good: * seek peace and pursue it.

The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous: * and His ears are open unto their cry.

But the face of the Lord is against them that do evil, * to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth.

The righteous cry and the Lord heareth, * and delivereth them out of all their troubles.

The Lord is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart, * and saveth such as be of a contrite spirit.

Many are the afflictions of the righteous: * but the Lord will deliver them out of all.

The Lord keepeth all their bones: * not one of them shall be broken.

The death of sinners is grievous: * and they that hate the righteous shall be guilty.

The Lord redeemeth the souls of His servants: * and none of them that trust in Him shall be guilty.

Third Antiphon. Behold, how great with God is the reward * of His Saints:[2] yea, they who died for Christ's sake shall live for ever and ever.

Ps. xlv. God is our refuge, &c., (p. 55.)

Verse. The righteous live for evermore.

Answer. Their reward also is with the Lord.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xxi. 9.)

AT that time: Jesus said unto His disciples: When ye shall hear of wars and commotions, be not terrified: for these things must first come to pass; but the end is not by and by. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (35th on the Gospels.)

Our Lord and Redeemer willeth us to know what shall be the signs that the end of the world is at hand, to the end that ye may be the less terrified, when that cometh whereof ye have already had warning. Darts strike less which are seen coming: and the plagues of the earth will be to us more bearable, if we are harnessed against them with the shield of foreknowledge. Behold, how He saith: "When ye shall hear of wars and commotions be not terrified: for these things must first come to pass; but the end is not by and by." It behoveth us to ponder these words of our Redeemer, wherein He warneth us of suffering, from without, and from within. Wars are the work of a foreign enemy, commotions of the citizens. Therefore, that He may let us know that we shall be troubled from within and from without, He showeth that our wrestling shall be in part against strangers, and in part against our brethren.

---

[1] Apoc. vii. 9.

[2] Matth. v. 12.

Seventh Responsory.

Because of the covenant of the Lord, and the laws of their fathers, the Saints of God abode in brotherly love, for one spirit and one faith was ever in them.

Verse. [1] Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

Answer. For one spirit and one faith was ever in them.

Eighth Blessing.

They whose feast-day we are keeping
Be our Advocates with God.

Eighth Lesson.

BUT, when these woes come, the end is not by and by. And He saith further: "Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; and great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and pestilences, and famines, and fearful sights and great signs shall there be from heaven." Before the last tribulation cometh, shall come many other tribulations: and, by the many woes which shall come first, shall be foreshadowed the everlasting woe which shall come in the end. And therefore, after wars and commotions, the end is not yet by and by: many woes must come first, to give warning of the woe that hath no end.

Eighth Responsory.

O ye My Saints, who, being in the flesh, didst have striving — I will render unto you a reward of your labours.[2]

Verse. [3] Come, ye blessed of My Father, inherit the kingdom!

Answer. I will render unto you a reward of your labours.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. I will render unto you a reward of your labours.

On the Feasts of Martyrs who were brothers the following is the Second or Eighth Responsory.

Theirs is a brotherhood indeed, whose tie no storms availed to sever: together they followed the Lord in the shedding of their blood. Together they set at nought the Royal Palace; together they attained unto the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

Answer. Together they set at nought the Royal Palace; together they attained unto the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Together they set at nought the Royal Palace; together they attained unto the kingdom of heaven.

Ninth Lesson.

BUT, forasmuch as the signs and troubles whereof the Lord speaketh are so manifold, we must needs shortly consider each: for, of necessity, we must suffer some things from heaven, some from the earth, some from the powers of nature, and some from men. For where He saith: "Nation shall rise against nation"—He speaketh concerning the troubling of men: where: "great earthquakes shall be in divers places"—concerning wrath from above: where: "and pestilences"—concerning the frailty of the body: where: "and famines"—concerning the barrenness of the earth: where: "fearful signs from heaven," and tempests—concerning commotions of the air. As, then, all things shall have an end, so, before the end, shall all things be troubled: and we who have sinned and come short in all things, shall in all things be afflicted, that it may be fulfilled that is written: "and the world shall fight with Him against the unwise." (Wisd. v. 21.)

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. O how many torments have all the Saints suffered, * that they might attain safely unto the palm of martyrdom!

Second Antiphon. The Saints have attained unto the kingdom, * with palms in their hands; they have earned crowns of Majesty from the Lord's hand.

Third Antiphon. [4] The bodies of the Saints are buried in peace, * and their name liveth for evermore.

Fourth Antiphon. O all ye Martyrs of the Lord, bless ye the Lord * for ever.

Fifth Antiphon. O ye Martyrs, * praise ye the LORD from the heavens, praise Him with the dance —[Alleluia.]

Note that between Septuagesima and Easter this last word "Alleluia" is omitted.

The Chapter. (Wisd. iii. 1.)

THE souls of the righteous are in the hand of God, and the torment of death shall not touch them. In the sight of the unwise they seemed to die: but they are in peace.

[3] Matth. xxv. 34.

[4] Ecclus. xliv. 14.

Hymn for many Martyrs.[1]

O THOU, the Martyrs' glorious King,
Of Confessors the crown and prize;
Who dost to joys celestial bring
Those who the joys of earth despise!

By all the praise Thy Saints have won;
By all their pains in days gone by;
By all the deeds which they have done;
Hear Thou Thy suppliant people's cry.

Thou dost amid Thy Martyrs fight;
Thy Confessors Thou dost forgive;
May we find mercy in Thy sight,
And in Thy sacred presence live.

To God the Father glory be,
And to His sole-begotten Son;
And glory, Holy Ghost, to Thee!
While everlasting ages run. Amen.

Verse. [2]Let the Saints be joyful in glory.

Answer. Let them sing aloud upon their beds.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. [3]Even the very hairs of your head are all numbered: * fear not therefore; ye are of more value than many sparrows.

If the Prayer is not special there is said one of the following, which is also used throughout the whole Office of the Saints.

Prayer for many Martyrs, who were Bishops.

O LORD, we beseech Thee, that the feast of Thy blessed Martyrs and Bishops (here insert their names) may keep us, and their worshipful prayers commend us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Prayer for many Martyrs, not Bishops.

O GOD, by Whose mercy we here keep the birthday of Thy holy Martyrs, (here insert their names,) grant us hereafter to rejoice in their blessed company for all eternity. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Another for the same.

O God, Who, year by year, dost gladden us by the solemn feast-day of Thy holy Martyrs, (here insert their names,) mercifully grant, that we who rejoice because of their worthy deeds, may be also stirred up to follow after their example. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

PRIME.

Antiphon. O how many torments, &c., (First Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter at the end. (Wisd. iii. 7.)

THE righteous shall shine, and run to and fro like sparks among the stubble. They shall judge the nations, and have dominion over the people, and their Lord shall reign for ever.

[2] Ps. cxlix. 5.

[3] Luke xii. 7.

[4] Ps. xxxi. 11.

Verse. Let the Saints be joyful in glory.

Answer. Let them sing aloud upon their beds.

SECOND VESPERS.

First Antiphon. These men are holy, * for they have given up their bodies unto death for the sake of the covenant of their God, and have washed their robes in the Blood of the Lamb.

Second Antiphon. [1] The Saints through faith subdued kingdoms, * wrought righteousness, obtained promises.

Third Antiphon. [2] The youth of the Saints shall be renewed * like the eagle's: they shall grow as the lily in the city of the Lord.

Fourth Antiphon. God shall wipe away all tears from the eyes of His Saints: * and there shall be no more sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away.

Fifth Antiphon. In the heavenly kingdoms, * there is the dwelling of the Saints: there shall be their rest for ever and ever.

Psalm CXV.

[In the Hebrew this Psalm is a continuation of the last. The Vulgate and the LXX. prefix "Alleluia."]

I BELIEVED, therefore have I spoken: * but I was greatly afflicted.

I said in my haste: * All men are liars.

What shall I render unto the LORD * for all His benefits toward me?

I will take the cup of salvation, * and call upon the name of the LORD.

I will pay my vows unto the LORD in the presence of all His people. * Precious in the sight of the LORD is the death of His Saints.

O LORD, truly I am Thy servant: * I am Thy servant, and the son of Thine handmaid: Thou hast loosed my bonds. * I will offer to Thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and will call upon the name of the LORD.

I will pay my vows unto the LORD, in the presence of all His people: * in the courts of the LORD's house, in the midst of thee, O Jerusalem!

[Here the Hebrew appends "Alleluia," which the Vuglate and the LXX. prefix to the next Psalm.]

Chapter, and Verse and Answer from Lauds.

Hymn from First Vespers.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. In heaven do rejoice the souls of the Saints * who have followed the steps of Christ; and because they shed their blood for the love of Christ, therefore shall they be made glad for ever with Christ.

Other Lessons for the Feasts of Many Martyrs.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (1st on the Martyrs. Tom. iii.)

EVERY man knoweth how, by the good Providence of God, the divers glories of His Martyrs are held in such esteem by His people, that the same His Saints in all places receive worthy honour, and before us is set, by the favour of Christ, the noble ensample of their courage: thus are we stirred up to consider, on the occasion of these Holidays, how great glory doth abide them in heaven, whose birthdays are thus kept upon earth: thereby, also, we are roused to strive to be like them, brave, godly, and true: so that, in the strength of Christ, we, like them, may wrestle with, and conquer our enemy, and, when we have gained the same victory that they gained, may with them at last be glorified in the kingdom of heaven.

Fifth Lesson.

FOR what man is there willing to share their reward, that if he do not first lay hold on their steadfastness, follow after the ensample of their faith, and imitate their brave patience, can either seek or find their glory by likeness to their lives? But whosoever doth so follow them, let him not doubt but that, though in very deed he gain not the crown of martyrdom, he is yet able by good works to make himself meet therefor. For we have a most merciful God, Which either giveth Martyrdom unto such as be willing, or, without Martyrdom, doth make them joint heirs with the Saints in the kingdom of God.

Sixth Lesson.

FOR even as afflictions unman the ungodly, so do trials harden the righteous. Even thus did the Saints strive against sin; but the work braced their muscles, and in death they were more than conquerors. Of such as run in a race, no man saith that they are strong, unless they run, and none can be crowned, unless he conquer. No soldier prevaileth against his enemy, unless he fight; or winneth the Emperor's favour, unless he have warred. Christian! the needful arms are thine! In thy hands are the strong weapons, wherewith thou canst conquer the enemy!

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (vi. 17.)

AT that time: JESUS came down from the mountain, and stood in the plain, and the company of His disciples, and a great multitude of people out of all Judea, and Jerusalem, and from the sea coast of Tyre and Sidon. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. v. on Luke vi.)

Mark well how JESUS goeth upward with His disciples, and downward to the multitude. How should the multitude behold Christ, save in a lower place? Such go not up to the things which are above; such attain not to the things which are high. And when Jesus cometh down, He findeth such as are diseased: for such like go not up to the heights. Hence also Matthew saith that there were there "all sick people," (iv. 23.) Of these every man had need of healing, that, when he had received strength, by and by, he might go up into the mountain. And therefore, being Himself come down, He healeth them in the plain, that is to say, He calleth them away from their lust, and freeth them of their blindness. He cometh down to our wounds, to the end that by a certain use of His nature, and by the abundance thereof, He might make us joint-heirs of the kingdom of heaven.

[1] Heb. xi. 33.

[2] Ps. cii. 5; lxxi. 16; Isa. xxxv. 1.

Eighth Lesson.

"BLESSED be ye poor, for your's is the kingdom of God." Saint Luke giveth us but four of the Lord's Beatitudes, and Saint Matthew eight: but in those eight are contained these four, and in these four those eight. For in these four are embraced the cardinal virtues: and in those eight they are set forth in a number full of mystery. It is written at the head of more than one of the Psalms that they are "for the octave," and thou hast received the commandment: "Give a portion to seven, and also to eight"—to seven or eight what? Perchance degrees of blessedness. For as this eighth [Beatitude] doth name the most glorious realization of our hope—["the kingdom of Heaven"]—so doth it also name the most royal exertion of our strength—["blessed are they which are persecuted."][1]

Ninth Lesson.

BUT let us first consider the fuller of the forms of these Beatitudes. "Blessed be ye poor, for your's is the kingdom of God." Both of the Evangelists give to this Beatitude the first place. Yea, surely, for poorness, at least in spirit, is the first in order, the mother, and procreatrix of virtues; since he that setteth no store by temporal things, winneth toward eternal things; neither is any man able to gain the kingdom of heaven, on whom the love of this present world doth so press, that he cannot rid himself thereof.

Another Homily.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xii. 1.)

AT that time: Jesus said unto His disciples: Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy. And so on.

Homily by the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow and Doctor of the Church.] (Bk. iv. on Luke, Cap. lii.)

Touching this leaven the Apostle warneth us: "Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." (1 Cor. v. 8.) For even as a little leaven doth infect the whole lump wherein it is put, and the savour thereof doth spread all abroad therein, so doth hypocrisy, when once it hath tainted the soul, drive out from it all sincerity and truth. The meaning, therefore, of this passage is this: "Beware, lest ye be as the hypocrites, for yet a little while, and all men shall see that ye are good, and they are evil."

Eighth Lesson.

AS touching what followeth: "For there is nothing covered that shall not be revealed, neither hid, that shall not be known. Therefore, whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light." These words are true, not only as concerning the world which is to come, wherein the secrets of all hearts shall be made manifest, but even as concerning this present world, since now that which the Apostles spake and suffered in the darkness of persecution, and the gloom of dungeons, is, since that the Church is glorified, told of them for a memorial of them, wherever their acts are read throughout the whole world. "Be not afraid of them that kill the body," for they that persecute the righteous, when they have killed the body, "after that, have no more that they can do." Truly, it is a childish folly which maketh such men to cast the dead limbs of the martyrs to birds and beasts, while yet they have no strength to withstand the Almight of God, whereby He will surely quicken the same limbs and raise them up again.

---

[1] The latter half of this Lesson, from the words "It is written," &c., is one of the most difficult passages in the Breviary, and seems to require a short note, especially as it is so often recited in the Church Service. (1.) "For the octave" is meant as a translation of the Hebrew words "Al-hashsh'mínith," found in the superscription of Pss. vi. and xi. The real meaning of these words seems to have been lost for at least two thousand years, and conjectures on the subject have exercised the various ingenuity of the learned, who are widely disagreed. It is, however, a pretty general idea that the phrase is a technical musical direction, and has something to do with the number 8. Gesenius believes it to correspond to the Italian "basso," and to imply a composition intended for men's voices. (2.) Eccles. xi. begins thus: "Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days. Give a portion to seven, and also to eight; for thou knowest not what evil shall be upon the earth." This latter verse the Rev. T. P. Dale, in his profound translation and Commentary upon Ecclesiastes, renders, "Give a share all round, and to some one else beside, for thou dost not know what sort of mischief shall be in the earth," and he says, "It is equivalent to our 'everybody and some one else.'" The whole would seem to be an exhortation to almsgiving full even to abundance: seven, as the "perfect" number, being chosen to imply a full number generally. Cf. Job v. 19; Micah v. 5; Matth. xviii. 22. (3.) benedictionibus. Sicut enim spei nostræ octava perfectio est, ita octava summa virtutum est." The translator confesses to great uncertainty as to the meaning, but, upon full and repeated consideration, at the interval of years, he is inclined to think that "octava" agrees with "benedictio" understood, and that the paraphrase in the text is the most probable sense.

Ninth Lesson.

OF persecutors there are two kinds: first, of such as do openly rage in cruelty against us; and, secondly, of such as do seek, by cunning wiliness and lying, to beguile us. Against both these the Saviour willeth to guard and strengthen us, in one place warning us to be not afraid of them that kill the body, and, in another place, to beware of the leaven of the Pharisees: since, when we are dead, neither the cruelty of the one class, nor the falsehood of the other, will be able any more to touch us. "Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings?" If God, saith the Lord, if God cannot forget the least of the works of His hands that hath life, the little birds that fly hither and thither in the air, if He cannot forget them, wherefore should ye, who are made in the image and likeness of your Maker, wherefore should ye be afraid of them that kill the body? He that is the careful Lord of the beasts, which think not, how much more shall He be careful of man which hath a reasonable soul?

For Simple Feasts of Many Martyrs.

The Office is as on a Semi-double, with the following exceptions.

FIRST VESPERS.

The Office is of the Week-day, till the Chapter, exclusive.

The Office of the Saints begins with the Chapter, which, as also the Hymn, Verse and Answer, Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin, and Prayer are all as just given, (pp. 602, 603.) The Common Commemorations are said or not according to the season.

At Compline are said Preces.

MATTINS.

The Invitatory and Hymn are as just given.

Then follow the Week-day Psalms, with their own Antiphons.

On Mondays and Thursdays.

Verse. Be glad in the Lord, and rejoice, ye righteous.

Answer. And shout for joy, all ye that are upright in heart.

Absolution.

Graciously hear, &c.

On Tuesdays and Fridays.

Verse. Let the righteous rejoice in the presence of God.

Answer. Yea, let them be exceeding glad.

Absolution.

May His loving-kindness, &c.

On Wednesdays.

Verse. The righteous live for evermore.

Answer. Their reward also is with the Lord.

Absolution.

May the Almighty, &c.

First Blessing.

May His blessing be upon us,
Who doth live and reign for ever.

First Lesson from Scripture, according to the Season, being either the first part, or, if the Saints have two Lessons, the whole read as one, at will.

First Responsory.

On Mondays and Thursdays.

God shall wipe away, &c., (First Responsory in the preceding Office.)

On Tuesdays and Fridays.

Thy Saints, O Lord, &c., (Fourth Responsory in the preceding Office.)

On Wednesdays.

Because of the covenant, &c., (Seventh Responsory in the preceding Office.)

Second Blessing.

They whose feast-day we are keeping,
Be our Advocates with God.

Second Lesson is the First of the Legend of the Saint, if there be two; if not, it is the Second from Scripture, to which the Third may be added, at will.

Second Responsory.

On Mondays and Thursdays.

These men are holy, &c., (Second Responsory in the preceding Office,) with the following addition:

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And therefore they have earned crowns of victory.

On Tuesdays and Fridays.

The Saints of God shrank not, &c., (Fifth Responsory in the preceding Office,) with the following addition:

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. That they might be made joint-heirs in the house of the Lord.

On Wednesdays.

O ye, My Saints, &c., (Eighth Responsory in the preceding Office.)

Third Blessing.

May He That is the Angels' King.
To that high realm His people bring.

Third Lesson is the whole or the Second part of the Legend of the Saints, if there is one, or else the special Lesson assigned.

Then the Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God," &c., is said, and so end Mattins.

The rest of the Office is as on a Semi-double, as just given; it ends at None, inclusive; Preces are said at Prime, and the Common Commemorations are made at Lauds or not, according to the season.

VI. For Feasts of one Bishop and Confessor,

Whether kept in Easter-tide or not.

Everything as on Sundays, except what is otherwise given here. In Easter-tide the word Alleluia, here given in brackets [ ], is occasionally added.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Last Psalm.

O praise the LORD, &c., (Ps. cxvi., p. 105.)

Hymn.[1]

1.

SAFE now for ever, JESU'S true Confessor,
Whose happy festal here His people keep,
Doth of his labours for his mighty Blesser,
Rich harvest reap.

2.

Gentle was he, wise, pure, and lowly-hearted,
Sober and modest, ever foe to strife,
While in his frame there flowed as yet unparted
Currents of life.

3.

Ofttimes hath He Whose face he sees in heaven,
Being entreated for His servant's sake,
To us on earth the same for healer given
Sick whole to make.

4.

Wherefore our choir, in thankfulness adoring,
Lifteth its voice with melody of laud,
While he on high for us his prayer is pouring,
Unto his God.

5.

Glory and honour, virtue and salvation
Be unto Him, Who, in His might divine,
Ruleth supremely over all creation,
One and yet Trine. Amen.

Verse. [2] The Lord loved him and beautified him. [Alleluia.]

Answer. He clothed him with a robe of glory. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O thou Priest and Bishop, * thou worker of mighty works, thou good shepherd over God's people, pray for us unto the Lord. [Alleluia.]

For Doctors.

O right excellent Teacher, Light of the Holy Church, N. (here insert his name) blessed lover of the Divine Law, pray for us to the Son of God. [Alleluia.]

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Lord, He is the King of the Confessors. * O come, let us worship Him. [Alleluia.]

Hymn as at First Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Only three Psalms are said, and in Easter-tide all under one Antiphon, viz., the first, "Blessed is the man."

First Antiphon. Blessed is the man * that doth meditate in the law of the Lord: his delight is therein day and night, and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper. [Alleluia.]

Ps. i. Blessed is the man, &c., (p. 2.)

Second Antiphon. Blessed and holy is he * that putteth his trust in the Lord, that declareth the decree of the Lord, and is set upon His holy hill.

Ps. ii. Why do the heathen, &c., (p. 3.)

Third Antiphon. Thou, O Lord, art my glory, * Thou art a shield for me: Thou art the Lifter-up of mine head, and Thou hast heard me out of Thy holy hill.

Ps. iii. LORD, how are they increased, &c., (p. 3.)

Verse. The Lord loved him and beautified him. [Alleluia.]

Answer. He clothed him with a robe of glory. [Alleluia.]

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Paul to Timothy (iii. 1.)

THIS is a true saying: If a man desire the office of a Bishop, he desireth a good work. A Bishop, then, must be blameless, the husband of one wife, sober, prudent, of good behaviour, modest, given to hospitality, apt to teach, not given to wine, no striker, but patient; not a brawler, not covetous; one that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity. For if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God? Not a novice, lest, being lifted up with pride, he fall into the condemnation of the devil. Moreover, he must have a good report of them which are without, lest he fall into reproach, and the snare of the devil.

First Responsory.

[3] Well done, thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faith-

[1] Hymn of the Middle Ages, after the manner of the Ambrosian school, but very much altered; translation by the Rev. Dr Littledale, except the first verse, and the third.

ful over a few things. I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents; behold, I have gained beside them five talents more.

Answer. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord. [Alleluia.]

Second Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Epistle to Titus (i. 7.)

FOR a Bishop must be blameless, as the steward of God: not proud, not soon angry, not given to wine, no striker, not given to filthy lucre: but a lover of hospitality, courteous, sober, just, holy, temperate, holding fast the faithful word, as he hath been taught: that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers. For there are many unruly, vain talkers, and deceivers, specially they of the circumcision, whose mouths must be stopped: who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

Second Responsory.

[1] Behold an high priest, who in his days pleased God: therefore the Lord assured him by an oath that He would multiply his seed among His people. [Alleluia.]

Verse. He hath made him a blessing unto all nations, and hath established His covenant upon his head.

Answer. Therefore the Lord assured him by an oath that He would multiply his seed among His people. [Alleluia.]

Third Lesson. (ii. 1.)

BUT speak thou the things which become sound doctrine: that the aged men be sober, chaste, temperate, sound in faith, in charity, in patience. The aged women likewise, that they be in behaviour as becometh holiness, not false accusers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things; that they may teach the young women to be sober, to love their husbands, to love their children, to be discreet, chaste, sober, keepers at home, good, obedient to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed. Young men likewise exhort to be sober-minded. In all things show thyself a pattern of good works, in doctrine, in uncorruptness, in gravity, sound speech, that cannot be condemned: that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of us.

Third Responsory.

[2] The LORD hath sworn and will not repent: Thou art a Priest for ever after the order of Melchisedek. [Alleluia.]

Verse. The LORD said unto my Lord: Sit Thou at My right hand.

Answer. Thou art a Priest for ever after the order of Melchisedek. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Thou art a Priest for ever after the order of Melchisedek. [Alleluia.]

SECOND NOCTURN.

In Easter-tide all the three Psalms following are said under one Antiphon, viz., the first.

First Antiphon. When His holy one called, * the Lord heard him, yea, the Lord heard him, and gave him peace. [Alleluia.]

Psalm IV.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David," with a musical (?) direction of (now) uncertain meaning.]

WHEN I called, the God of my righteousness heard me: * Thou hast enlarged me when I was in distress:

Have mercy upon me, * and hear my prayer.

O ye sons of men, how long will ye be dull of heart? * Why will ye love vanity, and seek after leasing?[3]

But know that the LORD hath set apart for Himself him that is holy: * the LORD will hear me when I call unto Him.

Be ye angry and sin not: * what ye speak in your heart, repent upon your bed.[3]

Offer the sacrifices of righteousness, and put your trust in the LORD. * There be many that say: Who will show us any good?

LORD, Thou hast set upon us the light of Thy countenance. * Thou hast put gladness in my heart,

More than in the time that their corn, and wine, and oil * increased.

I will both lay me down in peace, * and sleep,

For Thou, LORD, only * makest me to dwell in safety.

Second Antiphon. Let all those that put their trust in Thee rejoice, O Lord, for Thou hast blessed the righteous; * Thou hast compassed him with Thy favour as with a shield.

Psalm V.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David," with a musical (?) superscription.]

GIVE ear unto my words, O LORD, * consider my supplication.

Hearken unto the voice of my cry, * my King and my God!

For unto Thee will I pray. * O LORD, in the morning Thou shalt hear my voice:

In the morning will I stand before Thee and look up. * For Thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness:

Neither shall the evil dwell with Thee, * nor the unrighteous stand in Thy sight:

Thou hatest all workers of iniquity. * Thou shalt destroy all them that speak leasing:

The LORD abhorreth the bloody and deceitful man. * But as for me, in the multitude of Thy mercy

I will come into Thine house: * I will worship toward Thine holy temple in Thy fear.

Lead me, O LORD, in Thy righteousness, * because of mine enemies; make my way straight before Thy face.

For there is no faithfulness in their mouth: * their inward part is very wickedness.

Their throat is an open sepulchre; they flatter with their tongue. * Judge Thou them, O God!

Let them fall by their own counsels; cast them out in the multitude of their transgressions, * for they have rebelled against Thee, O Lord!

And let all those that put their trust in Thee, rejoice: * let them ever shout for joy, because Thou dwellest in them:

Let them also that love Thy Name be joyful in Thee. * For Thou wilt bless the righteous.

O LORD, Thou hast compassed us * with Thy favour as with a shield.

Third Antiphon. O LORD, our Ruler, * how excellent is Thy Name in all the earth! Who hast crowned Thine holy one with glory and honour, and madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands.

Psalm VIII.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David." It has also a title which seems to show that it was a song for the vintage.]

O LORD, our Lord, * how excellent is Thy Name in all the earth!

For Thy glory is exalted * above the heavens.

[1] Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast Thou perfected praise because of Thine enemies, * that Thou mightest destroy the enemy and the avenger.

When I consider Thine heavens, the work of Thy fingers: * the moon and the stars which Thou hast ordained:

What is man, that Thou art mindful of him? * or the son of man, that Thou visitest him?

Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, Thou hast crowned him with glory and honour, * and madest him to have dominion over the works of Thine hands.

Thou hast put all things under his feet, * all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field.

The fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, * that pass through the paths of the sea.

O LORD, our Lord, * how excellent is Thy Name in all the earth!

Verse. [2] The Lord hath chosen him for a Priest unto Himself. [Alleluia.]

Answer. To offer up unto Him the sacrifice of praise. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Maximus, Bishop [of Turin.] (59th Hom., being the 2nd on St Eusebius of Vercelli.)

IT is idle to strive to add anything to the praise of our holy and most blessed Father N., (here insert the name of the Saint whose Feast is being kept,) whose Feast is this day kept. The beauty of his life ought not to be the subject of panegyrics, so much as the object of imitation. The Scripture saith: "A wise son is the glory of his father," [3]—truly then will he be honoured by such as, by doing after his ensample, show themselves to be his children —"for in Christ JESUS hath he begotten us through the Gospel." (1 Cor. iv. 15.)

Fourth Responsory.

[4] I have found David My servant, with My holy oil have I anointed him; for My hand shall help him [Alleluia.]

Verse. The enemy shall prevail nothing against him, nor the son of wickedness afflict him.

Answer. For My hand shall help him. [Alleluia.]

Fifth Lesson.

WHATSOEVER, therefore, of virtue and grace there may be in this holy people, all the bright streams thereof do flow from him, as from a most clear fountain. By his manly chastity, by his sternly noble temperance, by the graceful courtesy which marked him, he drew all men's love to God: and by his eminent ministry in his Bishoprick he hath left behind him in his disciples, many heirs of his priesthood.

Fifth Responsory.

[4] I have laid help upon one that is mighty, and have exalted one chosen out of My people; for My hand shall help him. [Alleluia.]

Verse. I have found David My servant, with My holy oil have I anointed him.

Answer. For My hand shall help him. [Alleluia.]

Sixth Lesson.

IT is very meet and right that upon this day, which is made a joyful day for us because it is the day whereon our blessed Father N., (here insert his name,) passed away to heaven, I say it is very meet and right that on this day we should sing that verse of the Psalms: "The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance." (cxi. 7.) His memory is rightly honoured among men who is at this present making glad among Angels. The word of God saith: "Judge none blessed before his death," (Ecclus. xi. 30,) as though it were said, "Judge him blessed when life is ended, praise him when he is made perfect." For there are two main reasons why it is better to praise a dead man than a living, since, if thou call him holy and worthy after his death, thou dost it when neither canst thou be corrupted by being a flatterer, nor he by being flattered.

---

[1] This verse was quoted by our Lord, concerning those who cried Hosannah on Palm Sunday, Matthew xxi. 16.

[2] Cf. Ecclus. xlv. 20.

[3] There does not appear to be any such passage in Scripture. Prov. x. 1 is something like it.

[4] Ps. lxxxviii. 21, 20.

Sixth Responsory.

This is he which wrought great wonders before God, and the whole earth is full of his teaching. [1] May he pray for all people, that their sins may be forgiven unto them! [Alleluia.]

Verse. This is he which loved not his life in this world, and hath attained unto the kingdom of heaven.

Answer. May he pray for all people, that their sins may be forgiven unto them! [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. May he pray for all people, that their sins may be forgiven unto them! [Alleluia.]

THIRD NOCTURN.

In Easter-tide all the three Psalms following are said under one Antiphon, viz., the first.

First Antiphon. Lord, this Thy Saint * shall dwell in Thy tabernacle, and this that hath worked righteousness shall abide upon Thy holy hill. [Alleluia.]

Psalm XIV.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David."]

LORD, who shall abide in Thy tabernacle? * who shall dwell in Thine holy hill?

He that walketh uprightly, * and worketh righteousness.

He that speaketh the truth in his heart, * he that deceiveth not with his tongue.

He that hath not done evil to his neighbour, * nor taken up a reproach against his neighbour.

In whose eyes a vile person is despised: * but he honoureth them that fear the LORD.

He that sweareth to his neighbour, and deceiveth him not, * he that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent.

He that doeth these things, * shall never be moved.

Second Antiphon. He asked life of Thee, * and Thou, O Lord, gavest it: honour and great majesty hast Thou laid upon him: Thou hast set a crown of precious stones upon his head.

Psalm XX.

[This Psalm also bears the same title as the xviiith.]

THE king shall joy in Thy strength, O LORD: * and in Thy salvation how greatly shall he rejoice!

Thou hast given him his heart's desire, * and hast not withholden the request of his lips.[2]

For Thou hast met him with the blessings of sweetness: * Thou hast set a crown of precious stones upon his head.

He asked life of Thee: * and Thou gavest him length of days for ever and ever.

His glory is great in Thy salvation: * honour and great majesty shalt Thou lay upon him.

For Thou wilt give him to be a blessing for ever: * Thou shalt make him exceeding glad with Thy countenance.

For the king trusteth in the LORD, * and, through the mercy of the Most High, he shall not be moved.

Thine hand shall find out all thine enemies: * thy right hand shall find out all those that hate thee.

Thou shalt make them as a fiery oven in the time of thine anger: * the LORD shall cut them off in His wrath, and the fire shall devour them.

Their fruit shalt thou destroy from the earth, * and their seed from among the children of men.

For they intended evil against thee: * they imagined a device, which they were not able to perform.

Therefore shalt thou cast them behind thee: * thou shalt leave their faces lying in thy track.

Be Thou exalted, O LORD, in Thine own strength: * we will sing and praise Thy power.

Third Antiphon. He shall receive * a blessing from the LORD, and mercy from the God of his salvation: for this is the generation of them that seek the Lord.

Psalm XXIII.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David." The Vulgate and the LXX. add "for the first day of the week."]

THE earth is the LORD's and the fulness thereof; * the world, and they that dwell therein.

For He hath founded it upon the seas, * and established it upon the floods.

Who shall ascend into the mountain of the LORD? * or who shall stand in His holy place?

He that hath clean hands and a pure heart, * who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully unto his neighbour.

He shall receive a blessing from the LORD, * and mercy from the God of his salvation.

This is the generation of them that seek Him, * that seek the face of the God of Jacob.[2]

Lift up your gates, O ye princes, and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors! * and the King of glory shall come in.

Who is this King of glory? * The LORD strong and mighty, the LORD mighty in battle.

Lift up your gates, O ye princes, and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors! * and the King of glory shall come in.

Who is this King of glory? * The LORD of hosts, He is the King of glory.[2]

Verse. [3] Thou art a Priest for ever. [Alleluia.]

Answer. After the order of Melchisedek. [Alleluia.]

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxv. 14.)

AT that time: JESUS spake unto His disciples this parable: A man, travelling into a far country, called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (9th on the Gospels.)

Dearly beloved brethren, this Lesson from the Holy Gospel moveth us to take good heed lest we, who are seen in this world to have received more than others, should thereby bring ourselves into greater condemnation from the Maker of this world. To whom much is given, of the same is much required. Therefore, let him that receiveth much, strive to be all the more lowly, and all the more ready to do God service, for his very gifts' sake, knowing that he will be obliged to give account thereof. Behold, a man, travelling into a far country, calleth his own servants, and delivereth unto them talents, to the end that they may trade therewith. After a long time, the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them, and to them that have done well He rendereth a reward of their labours, but that servant which was careless of his master's work He condemneth.

Seventh Responsory.

The Lord loved him and beautified him; He clothed him with a robe of glory, and crowned him at the gates of Paradise. [Alleluia.]

Verse. The Lord hath put on him the breast-plate of faith,[1] and hath adorned him.

Answer. And crowned him at the gates of Paradise. [Alleluia.]

Eighth Blessing.

He whose feast-day we are keeping
Be our Advocate with God.

Eighth Lesson.

WHAT other, then, is that man travelling into a far country but our Redeemer, Who is gone up from us into heaven in that Flesh Which He had taken into Himself? For the earth is the home of the Flesh, Which travelleth into a far country—when our Redeemer giveth It a place in heaven. But that man travelling into a far country delivered unto his servants his goods; and so doth our Redeemer give spiritual gifts unto His faithful people. "And unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one." There are five bodily senses; that is, sight, hearing, taste, smell, and touch. By the five talents therefore are signified the five senses, that is, outward knowledge. By the two, wit and work. And by the figure of the one talent, understanding, which is alone.

Eighth Responsory.

[2] Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning, and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding. [Alleluia.]

Verse. [3] Watch therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come.

Answer. And ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding. [Alleluia.]

Eighth Responsory for Doctors.

[4] In the midst of the congregation did the Lord open his mouth. And filled him with the spirit of wisdom and understanding. [Alleluia.]

Verse. He made him rich with joy and gladness.

Answer. And filled him with the spirit of wisdom and understanding. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And filled him with the spirit of wisdom and understanding. [Alleluia.]

Ninth Lesson.

"AND so he that had received five talents, gained other five talents"—for some there be who, while yet they are not able to go on unto things inward and mystic, do yet so desire our Fatherland which is above, that they teach well all whom they can, and of those very outward things which they have received make gain double. These are they which keep themselves clean from the unruly motions of the flesh, and from the lust of the world, and from the delight of things which are seen, and, by their preaching, keep other men also clean from all these things. And some there are who receive, as their two talents, the power to think and the power to work. These are they which inwardly understand dark things, and outwardly work wonders. And these, since they preach unto others, both through their understanding and their works, gain, as it were, double, for the talents which they have received.

BEHOLD an high priest, who in his days pleased God, and was found righteous, and in the time of wrath he made a propitiation.

Hymn.[1]

JESU, the world's Redeemer, hear!
Thy Bishops' fadeless crown, draw near!
Accept with gentler love to-day
The prayers and praises that we pay!

The day that crowned with deathless fame
This meek Confessor of Thy Name,
Whose yearly feast, in solemn state,
Thy faithful people celebrate.

The world, and all its boasted good,
As vain and passing, he eschewed;
And therefore, with Angelic bands,
In endless joys for ever stands.

Grant then that we, O gracious God,
May follow in the steps he trod;
And freed from ev'ry stain of sin,
As he hath won, may also win.

To Thee, O Christ, our loving King,
All glory, praise, and thanks we bring:
All glory, as is ever meet,
To Father and to Paraclete. Amen.

Verse. [2]The Lord guided the just in right paths. [Alleluia.]

Answer. And showed him the kingdom of God. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Well done, thou good and faithful servant; * thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things, saith the Lord. [Alleluia.]

If the Prayer is not special, there is said one of the following, which is also used throughout the whole Office of the Saint.

Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that the worshipful Feast of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop N., (here insert his name,) may avail us to the increase both of godliness toward Thee, and healthfulness to our own souls. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Another Prayer.

HEAR, O Lord, we beseech Thee, the prayers which we offer Thee on this the solemn Feast-day of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop N., (here insert his name,) and, for the sake of him who so nobly served Thee, forgive us our trespasses. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

For Doctors.

O GOD, Who didst give unto Thy people Thy blessed servant N., (here insert his name,) to feed them with the bread of eternal life, grant, we beseech Thee, that even as on earth he showed unto us Thy lively word, so in heaven we may worthily be holpen by the succour of his prayers to Thee on our behalf. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

The same Prayer throughout the day.

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Verse and Answer from Lauds.
Hymn from First Vespers.

Last Psalm.

Psalm CXXXI.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees." It reads like a Processional for some translation of the Sacred Ark, perhaps that described in 3 (1) Kings vii. (Saturday before 8th Sunday after Pentecost.)]

LORD, remember David, * and all his meekness:

How he sware unto the LORD: * he vowed a vow unto the God of Jacob;—

Surely I will not come into the tabernacle of mine house, * nor go up into my bed;

I will not give sleep to mine eyes, * or slumber to mine eyelids;

I will not give the temples of mine head any rest, until I find out a place for the LORD, * an habitation for the God of Jacob.

[1] Lo, we heard of it at Ephratah: * we found it in the fields of "the Wood."

We will go into His tabernacle: * we will worship in His footprints.

Arise, O LORD, into Thy rest, * Thou and the ark of Thine holiness.

Let Thy priests be clothed with righteousness, * and let Thy Saints shout for joy.

For Thy servant David's sake, * turn not away the face of Thine Anointed.

The LORD hath sworn in truth unto David, and He will not turn from it: * Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne.

If thy children will keep My covenant, * and My testimony that I shall teach them,

Then their children for ever * shall sit upon thy throne.

For the LORD hath chosen Zion: * He hath chosen it for His habitation.

This is My rest for ever: * here will I dwell, for I have chosen it.

I will abundantly bless her widows: * I will satisfy her poor with bread.

I will clothe her Priests with salvation: * and her Saints shall shout aloud for joy.

There will I make the horn of David to bud: * I have ordained a lamp for Mine Anointed.

His enemies will I clothe with shame: * but upon him shall My sanctification flourish.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The Lord loved him * and beautified him; He clothed him with a robe of glory, and crowned him at the gates of Paradise. [Alleluia.]

But if the Saint were a Pope, the following is said instead:

Being made the Chief Bishop, * he dreaded not earthly things, but pressed on gloriously unto the kingdom of heaven. [Alleluia.]

For Doctors.

O right excellent Teacher, Light of the Holy Church, N. (here insert his name) blessed lover of the Divine Law, pray for us to the Son of God. [Alleluia.]

---

[1] This verse relates to the fetching of the ark from Kirjath-jearim, (literally "The town-of-the-woods,") which stood at the borders of the territory of Ephraim, here called Ephratah. See 2 Kings (Sam.) vi. (Thursday, 5th week after Pentecost.)

Other Lessons for Feasts of One Bishop and Confessor.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Maximus, Bishop [of Turin.] (59*th Homily, being the* 2*nd on St Eusebius of Vercelli.*)

OUR Blessed Father N., (here insert the name of the Saint whose Feast is being kept,) is safe now, and we may safely praise his great deeds. He that kept such a manful hand upon the tiller of faith, hath now cast the anchor of hope in moorings of great calm, and brought his ship, heavy laden with heavenly riches and everlasting merchandise, safe into the haven where he would be. Thus fareth it now with him who never fainted, but for so long time held up ever the shield of the fear of God against all that did beset him. What was his whole life but one long fight against an enemy that never slept?

Fifth Lesson.

O HOW many blinded souls there were, that had wandered away from the path of the Truth, and were hanging from the edge of the precipice over the pit, when he gave them sight again, and opened their eyes that they might see Christ! How many deaf ears were there, stopped up with unbelief and condemnation, when he opened them to hear that voice of commandment that speaketh from heaven, and gave them that precious hearing that heareth God calling us to be forgiven, so that they obeyed, and answered! How many wounded spirits were there, to whom his tongue, persuading them and praying for them like the tongue of an angel, brought health again!

Sixth Lesson.

O HOW God wrought in him to cleanse and pardon, by discipline and exhortation, many a stricken soul, long distempered, and as it seemed, incurably foul with sin, covered all over with virulent leprosy! How many souls there were, dwelling in living bodies, but dead, and crushed and buried under the sense of sin, whom he quickened again for God, by calling them to amendment as to light, souls dead to God, in which that great follower of his Lord killed sin by the same Lord's life-giving death.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxiv. 42.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Watch, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. And so on.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.] (Comment. on Matth. chap. 26.)

To the end that we may know that our ignorance of that day whereof no man knoweth is not without use, the Lord moveth us to watch for the coming of the thief, to be ever instant in prayer, and ever busy in such works as He commandeth. He showeth how that the devil is that thief who watcheth ever how he may spoil our goods, breaking into the house of our body; that, while we are dwelling therein careless and heavy with sleep, he may dig through our walls with the arms of his craft and temptations. Us, therefore, it behoveth to be ready, who have ever our ignorance concerning that day to be unto us a reason of watchfulness.

Eighth Lesson. (Chap. 27.)

"WHO then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his Lord hath made ruler over His household?" Although the Lord doth move us all in common to weary not in carefulness and watching, He layeth more especially upon the rulers of His people, that is, the Bishops, this duty, to look always for His coming. For such an one is that faithful and wise servant, made ruler over his Lord's household, who ever seeketh such things as be convenient and useful for the people unto him committed. Such an one, if he hear this word, and do that which he is commanded, that is, if he strengthen by seasonable and sound doctrine such things as be weak, if he bind together that which is sundered, if he make straight again what is become crooked, and give to the household the lively Word which is able to feed them unto life eternal, if such an one do thus, and meanwhile the hour which he knoweth not come upon him, he shall obtain glory of the Lord, as a faithful steward and an useful overseer: that is, he shall have glory with God, for in all things he shall have of that which is best.

Ninth Lesson.

BUT if that servant despise the longsuffering of God, Which waiteth to give salvation unto all men, and begin to wax wanton against his fellow-servants, and to give himself over to the evil and the vices of this present world, having all his care for the worship of his belly: the Lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for Him, and shall cut him off from the goods wherewith he was entrusted, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites, in everlasting punishment, because he hath disobeyed the commandments, because he hath minded the things of this present world, because he hath lived the life of an heathen, because being unmindful of the judgment to come, he hath afflicted with hunger, and thirst, and stripes, the flock committed to his care.

If it should be that several Bishops and Confessors are to be honoured by one Feast, the Office is the same as that just given, except as follows:

1. In the Common Prayer the words "Thy Blessed Confessor and Bishop N." are altered into "Thy blessed Confessors and Bishops N. and N."

2. In the Sermons by St Maximus of Turin everything said of the Saint in the Singular Number is altered into the

Plural. For example: "Our Blessed Fathers N. and N. are safe now, and we may safely praise their great deeds. They that kept such manful hands upon the tiller, &c. &c. &c."

3. The following Lessons may be read in the First Nocturn.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (xliv. 1.)

LET us now praise famous men, and our fathers that begat us. The Lord hath wrought great glory by them through His great power from the beginning. Such as did bear rule in their kingdoms, men renowned for their power and their understanding, showing forth among the Prophets the dignity of Prophets, and still ruling over the people that now is, and by the strength of wisdom instructing the people in most holy words. Such as by their skill sought out musical tunes, and published canticles of the Scriptures.

Second Lesson.

MEN rich in virtue, studying comeliness, living at peace in their houses. All these were honoured in their generations, and were the glory of their times. They that were born of them have left a name behind them, that their praises might be reported. And some there be which have no memorial; who are perished as though they had never been; who also were born as though they had not been born, and their children after them.

Third Lesson.

BUT these were merciful men, whose righteousness hath not been forgotten: with their seed shall continually remain a good inheritance, their children have an holy heritage: their seed also abideth firm in the covenant, and their children for their sakes remain for ever. Their seed, and their glory, shall not be blotted out. Their bodies are buried in peace, but their name liveth for evermore. Let the people tell of their wisdom, and the congregation show forth their praise.

For a Simple Feast of a Bishop and Confessor.

The Office is as on a Semi-double, with the following exceptions.

FIRST VESPERS.

The Office is of the Week-day, till the Chapter, exclusive. The Office of the Saint begins with the Chapter, which, as also the Hymn, Verse and Answer, Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin, and Prayer are all as just given, (p. 612 et seq.) The Common Commemorations are said or not according to the season.

At Compline are said Preces.

MATTINS.

The Invitatory and Hymn are as just given.

Then follow the Week-day Psalms, with their own Antiphons.

On Mondays and Thursdays.

Verse. The Lord loved him and beautified him. [Alleluia.]

Answer. He clothed him with a robe of glory. [Alleluia.]

Absolution.

Graciously hear, &c.

On Tuesdays and Fridays.

Verse. The Lord hath chosen him for a Priest unto Himself. [Alleluia.]

Answer. To offer up unto Him the sacrifice of praise. [Alleluia.]

Absolution.

May His loving-kindness, &c.

On Wednesdays.

Verse. Thou art a Priest for ever. [Alleluia.]

Answer. After the order of Melchisedek. [Alleluia.]

Absolution.

May the Almighty, &c.

First Blessing.

May His blessing be upon us,
Who doth live and reign for ever.

First Lesson from Scripture, according to the Season, being either the first part, or, if the Saint have two Lessons, the whole read as one, at will.

First Responsory.

On Mondays and Thursdays.

Well done, &c., (First Responsory in the preceding Office.)

On Tuesdays and Fridays.

I have found David, &c., (Fourth Responsory in the preceding Office.)

On Wednesdays.

The Lord loved him, &c., (Seventh Responsory in the preceding Office.)

Second Blessing.

They whose feast-day we are keeping,
Be our Advocates with God.

Second Lesson is the First of the Legend of the Saint, if there be two; if not, it is the Second from Scripture, to which the Third may be added at will.

Second Responsory.

On Mondays and Thursdays.

Behold an high priest, &c., (Second Responsory in the preceding Office,) with this addition:

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Therefore the Lord assured him by an oath that He would multiply his seed among His people. [Alleluia.]

On Tuesdays and Fridays.

I have laid help, &c., (Fifth Responsory in the preceding Office,) with the following addition:

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. For My hand shall help him. [Alleluia.]

On Wednesdays.

Let your loins, &c., (Eighth Responsory in the preceding Office.)

Third Blessing.

May He That is the Angels' King,
To that high realm His people bring.

Third Lesson is the whole or the second part of the Legend of the Saint, if there be one, or else the special Lesson assigned.

Then the Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said, and so end Mattins.

The rest of the Office is as on a Semi-double, as just given; it ends at None, inclusive; Preces are said at Prime, and the Common Commemorations are made at Lauds or not, according to the season.

VII. For Feasts of a Confessor not a Bishop,

Whether kept in Easter-tide or not.

Everything as on Sundays, except what is otherwise given here. In Easter-tide the word Alleluia, here given in brackets [ ], is occasionally added.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Last Psalm.

O praise the LORD, &c., (Ps. cxvi., p. 105.)

Hymn. This is the day, &c., or,

1.

SAFE now for ever, JESU'S true Confessor,
Whose happy festal here His people keep,
Doth of his labours for his mighty Blesser,
Rich harvest reap.

2.

Gentle was he, wise, pure, and lowly-hearted,
Sober and modest, ever foe to strife,
While in his frame there flowed as yet unparted
Currents of life.

3.

Ofttimes hath He Whose face he sees in heaven,
Being entreated for His servant's sake,
To us on earth the same for healer given
Sick whole to make.

4.

Wherefore our choir, in thankfulness adoring,
Lifteth its voice with melody of laud,
While he on high for us his prayer is pouring,
Unto his God.

5.

Glory and honour, virtue and salvation
Be unto Him, Who, in His might divine,
Ruleth supremely over all creation,
One and yet Trine. Amen.

Verse. The Lord loved him and beautified him. [Alleluia.]

Answer. He clothed him with a robe of glory. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [1] I will liken him unto a wise man, * which built his house upon a rock. [Alleluia.]

For Doctors.

O right excellent Teacher, Light of the Holy Church, N. (here insert his name) blessed lover of the Divine Law, pray for us to the Son of God. [Alleluia.]

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Lord, He is the King of the Confessors. * O come, let us worship Him. [Alleluia.]

Hymn as at First Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Only three Psalms are said, and in Easter-tide all under one Antiphon, viz., the first, "Blessed is the man."

First Antiphon. Blessed is the man * that doth meditate in the law of the Lord: his delight is therein day and night, and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper. [Alleluia.]

Ps. i. Blessed is the man, &c., (p. 2.)

Second Antiphon. Blessed and holy is he * that putteth his trust in the Lord, that declareth the decree of the Lord, and is set upon His holy hill.

Ps. ii. Why do the heathen, &c., (p. 3.)

Third Antiphon. Thou, O Lord, art my glory, * Thou art a shield for me: Thou art the Lifter-up of mine head, and Thou hast heard me out of Thy holy hill.

Ps. iii. LORD, how are they increased, &c., (p. 3.)

Verse. The Lord loved him and beautified him. [Alleluia.]

Answer. He clothed him with a robe of glory. [Alleluia.]

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Wisdom (iv. 7.)

THOUGH the righteous be prevented with death, yet shall he be in rest. For honourable age is not that which standeth in length of time, nor that is measured by number of years: but wisdom is the grey hair unto men, and an unspotted life is old age. He pleased God, and was beloved of Him, so that living among sinners, he was translated. He was taken away speedily, lest that wickedness should alter his understanding, or deceit beguile his soul. For the bewitching of naughtiness doth obscure things that are honest, and the wandering of concupiscence doth undermine the simple mind. He, being made perfect in a short time, fulfilled a long time: for his soul pleased the Lord: therefore hasted He to take him away from among the wicked.

First Responsory.

Well done, thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Lord, Thou deliveredst unto me five talents; behold, I have gained beside them five talents more.

Answer. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord. [Alleluia.]

---

[1] Matth. vii. 24.

Second Lesson.

THIS the people saw, and understood it not, neither laid they this up in their minds, that the grace of God and His mercy are with His Saints, and that He hath respect unto His chosen. Thus the righteous that is dead doth condemn the ungodly which are living, and youth that is soon perfected, the many years of the unrighteous. For they shall see the end of the wise, and shall not understand what God in His counsel hath decreed of him, and to what end the Lord hath set him in safety. They shall see him and despise him: but the Lord shall laugh them to scorn. And they shall thereafter fall without honour, and be a reproach among the dead for evermore: for when they are puffed up, He shall rend them, and they shall be speechless, and He shall shake them from the foundation, and they shall be utterly laid waste.

Second Responsory.

[1] The righteous shall grow as the lily; yea, he shall flourish in the presence of the Lord for ever. [Alleluia.]

Verse. [2] Those that be planted in the house of the LORD, shall flourish in the courts of the house of our God.

Answer. Yea, he shall flourish in the presence of the Lord for ever. [Alleluia.]

Third Lesson.

AND they shall be in sorrow, and their memorial shall perish. When they cast up the accounts of their sins they shall come with fear, and their own iniquities shall convince them to their face. (v.) Then shall the righteous stand in great boldness before the face of such as have afflicted them, and made no account of their labours. When they see it, they shall be troubled with terrible fear, and shall be amazed at the strangeness of their salvation, and they, repenting and groaning for anguish of spirit, shall say within themselves: These were they whom we had sometimes in derision, and a proverb of reproach. We fools accounted their life madness, and their end to be without honour. Behold, how they are numbered among the children of God, and their lot is among the Saints.

Third Responsory.

This is he which knew righteousness, and saw great wonders, and made his prayer unto the Most High; and he is numbered among the Saints. [Alleluia.]

Verse. This is he which loved not his life in this world, and is come unto an everlasting kingdom.

Answer. And he is numbered among the Saints. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And he is numbered among the Saints. [Alleluia.]

SECOND NOCTURN.

In Easter-tide all the three Psalms following are said under one Antiphon, viz., the first.

First Antiphon. When His holy one called, * the Lord heard him; yea, the Lord heard him, and gave him peace. [Alleluia.]

Psalm IV.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David," with a musical (?) direction of (now) uncertain meaning.]

WHEN I called, the God of my righteousness heard me: * Thou hast enlarged me when I was in distress:

Have mercy upon me, * and hear my prayer.

O ye sons of men, how long will ye be dull of heart? * Why will ye love vanity, and seek after leasing?[3]

But know that the LORD hath set apart for Himself him that is holy: * the LORD will hear me when I call unto Him.

Be ye angry and sin not: * what ye speak in your heart, repent upon your bed.[3]

Offer the sacrifices of righteousness, and put your trust in the LORD. * There be many that say: Who will show us any good?

LORD, Thou hast set upon us the light of Thy countenance. * Thou hast put gladness in my heart,

More than in the time that their corn, and wine, and oil * increased.

I will both lay me down in peace, * and sleep,

For Thou, LORD, only * makest me to dwell in safety.

Second Antiphon. Let all those that put their trust in Thee rejoice, O Lord, for Thou hast blessed the righteous; * Thou hast compassed him with Thy favour as with a shield.

Psalm V.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David," with a musical (?) superscription.]

GIVE ear unto my words, O LORD, * consider my supplication.

Hearken unto the voice of my cry, * my King and my God!

For unto Thee will I pray. * O LORD, in the morning Thou shalt hear my voice:

In the morning will I stand before Thee and look up. * For Thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness:

Neither shall the evil dwell with Thee, * nor the unrighteous stand in Thy sight:

Thou hatest all workers of iniquity. * Thou shalt destroy all them that speak leasing:

The LORD abhorreth the bloody and deceitful man. * But as for me, in the multitude of Thy mercy

I will come into Thine house: * I will worship toward Thine holy temple in Thy fear.

Lead me, O LORD, in Thy righteousness, * because of mine enemies; make my way straight before Thy face.

[1] Hos. xiv. 6; Isa. xvii. 11, &c.

[2] Ps. xci. 14.

[3] SLH.

For there is no faithfulness in their mouth: * their inward part is very wickedness.

Their throat is an open sepulchre; they flatter with their tongue. * Judge Thou them, O God!

Let them fall by their own counsels; cast them out in the multitude of their transgressions, * for they have rebelled against Thee, O Lord!

And let all those that put their trust in Thee, rejoice: * let them ever shout for joy, because Thou dwellest in them:

Let them also that love Thy Name be joyful in Thee. * For Thou wilt bless the righteous.

O Lord, Thou hast compassed us * with Thy favour as with a shield.

Third Antiphon. O Lord, our Ruler, * how excellent is Thy Name in all the earth! Who hast crowned Thine holy one with glory and honour, and madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands.

Psalm VIII.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David." It has also a title which seems to show that it was a song for the vintage.]

O LORD, our Lord, * how excellent is Thy Name in all the earth!

For Thy glory is exalted * above the heavens.

[1] Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast Thou perfected praise because of Thine enemies, * that Thou mightest destroy the enemy and the avenger.

When I consider Thine heavens, the work of Thy fingers: * the moon and the stars which Thou hast ordained:

What is man, that Thou art mindful of him? * or the son of man, that Thou visitest him?

Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, Thou hast crowned him with glory and honour, * and madest him to have dominion over the works of Thine hands.

Thou hast put all things under his feet, * all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field.

The fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, * that pass through the paths of the sea.

O Lord, our Lord, * how excellent is Thy Name in all the earth!

Verse. [2] The mouth of the righteous speaketh wisdom. [Alleluia.]

Answer. And his tongue talketh judgment. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (On St Philogonius, Tom. iii.)

THE blessed N., (here insert the name of the Saint whose Feast is being kept,) whose Feast we are this day keeping, doth justly call on our tongue to tell what great deeds he wrought. To-day did that blessed servant of God pass into that higher life, which is a life of peace, a life where there is no trouble. To-day his ship reached that harbour where-after wreck is to be dreaded no more. He hath felt trouble and anguish of spirit for the last time. And wherefore marvel we that that place is one where the mind is vexed no more, when we remember that Paul saith even to men living here in this life—"Rejoice evermore, pray without ceasing?" (1 Thess. v. 16, 17.)

Fourth Responsory.

[3] The Lord made him honourable, and defended him from his enemies, and kept him safe from those that lay in wait for him, and gave him perpetual glory. [Alleluia.]

Verse. He went down with him into the pit, and left him not in bonds.

Answer. And gave him perpetual glory. [Alleluia.]

Fifth Lesson.

HERE there are sicknesses, here there are strivings, here there are untimely deaths, here there are lies, here there are jealousies, here there are troubles, here there is anger, here there are lustings, here there are pit-falls unnumbered, here there are daily cares, here one evil followeth after another, and all bring vexation. And yet Paul hath it that even here a man may rejoice evermore, if he will but raise his head above the flood of earthly things, and order his life aright. How much better shall we fare when we have passed away from all these things, and all these things are taken away from us, when we shall have no ill-health, nor disease, nor matter wherein to sin, when that hard thing, right of property, shall exist no more, whereby all unrighteousness cometh into this life, and strifes unnumbered are begotten.

Fifth Responsory.

The Lord loved him and beautified him: He clothed him with a robe of glory, and crowned him at the gates of Paradise. [Alleluia.]

Verse. The Lord hath put on him the breast-plate of faith,[4] and hath adorned him.

Answer. And crowned him at the gates of Paradise. [Alleluia.]

Sixth Lesson.

IN this verily do I most chiefly rejoice, for the happiness of that holy servant of God, in that, being taken away hence, and having found here no abiding city, he is become a citizen of that other city, which is the city of the living God: from the Church here he is gone, but he is come unto the Church of the first-born, which are written in heaven, (Heb. xii. 22, 23); he keepeth holiday with us no more, but he is passed to where he holdeth high festival with Angels. And what be that city, and that Church, and that festival above, Paul biddeth us know, saying: "Ye are come unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and unto the Church of the first-born which are written in heaven, and to an innumerable company of Angels."

[2] Ps. xxxvi. 30.

[3] Wisd. x. 11-14, substituting "Lord" for "Wisdom."

[4] 1 Thess. v. 8.

Sixth Responsory.

[1] This is he which did according unto all that God commanded him; and God said unto him: Enter thou into My rest; for thee have I seen righteous before Me among all people. [Alleluia.]

Verse. This is he which loved not his life in this world, and is come unto an everlasting kingdom.

Answer. For thee have I seen righteous before Me among all people. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. For thee have I seen righteous before Me among all people. [Alleluia.]

THIRD NOCTURN.

In Easter-tide all the three Psalms following are said under one Antiphon, viz., the first.

First Antiphon. Lord, this Thy Saint * shall dwell in Thy tabernacle, and this that hath worked righteousness shall abide upon Thy holy hill. [Alleluia.]

Psalm XIV.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David."]

LORD, who shall abide in Thy tabernacle? * who shall dwell in Thine holy hill?

He that walketh uprightly, * and worketh righteousness.

He that speaketh the truth in his heart, * he that deceiveth not with his tongue.

He that hath not done evil to his neighbour, * nor taken up a reproach against his neighbour.

In whose eyes a vile person is despised: * but he honoureth them that fear the Lord.

He that sweareth to his neighbour, and deceiveth him not, * he that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent.

He that doeth these things, * shall never be moved.

Second Antiphon. He asked life of Thee, * and Thou, O Lord, gavest it: honour and great majesty hast Thou laid upon him: Thou hast set a crown of precious stones upon his head.

Psalm XX.

[This Psalm also bears the same title as the xviiith.]

THE king shall joy in Thy strength, O Lord: * and in Thy salvation how greatly shall he rejoice!

Thou hast given him his heart's desire, * and hast not withholden the request of his lips.[2]

For Thou hast met him with the blessings of sweetness: * Thou hast set a crown of precious stones upon his head.

He asked life of Thee: * and Thou gavest him length of days for ever and ever.

His glory is great in Thy salva tion: * honour and great majesty shalt Thou lay upon him.

For Thou wilt give him to be a blessing for ever: * Thou shalt make him exceeding glad with Thy countenance.

For the king trusteth in the Lord, * and, through the mercy of the Most High, he shall not be moved.

Thine hand shall find out all thine enemies: * thy right hand shall find out all those that hate thee.

Thou shalt make them as a fiery oven in the time of thine anger: * the Lord shall cut them off in His wrath, and the fire shall devour them.

Their fruit shalt thou destroy from the earth, * and their seed from among the children of men.

For they intended evil against thee: * they imagined a device, which they were not able to perform.

Therefore shalt thou cast them behind thee: * thou shalt leave their faces lying in thy track.

Be Thou exalted, O Lord, in Thine own strength: * we will sing and praise Thy power.

Third Antiphon. He shall receive * a blessing from the Lord, and mercy from the God of his salvation: for this is the generation of them that seek the Lord.

Psalm XXIII.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David." The Vulgate and the LXX. add "for the first day of the week."]

THE earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof; * the world, and they that dwell therein.

For He hath founded it upon the seas, * and established it upon the floods.

Who shall ascend into the mountain of the Lord? * or who shall stand in His holy place?

He that hath clean hands and a pure heart, * who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully unto his neighbour.

He shall receive a blessing from the Lord, * and mercy from the God of his salvation.

This is the generation of them that seek Him, * that seek the face of the God of Jacob.[2]

Lift up your gates, O ye princes, and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors! * and the King of glory shall come in.

Who is this King of glory? * The Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle.

Lift up your gates, O ye princes, and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors! * and the King of glory shall come in.

Who is this King of glory? * The Lord of hosts, He is the King of glory.[2]

Verse. [3] The law of his God is in his heart. [Alleluia.]

Answer. None of his steps shall slide. [Alleluia.]

[2] SLH.

[3] Ps. xxxvi. 31.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xii. 35.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (13*th on the Gospels.*)

Dearly beloved brethren, the words of the Holy Gospel, which have just been read, lie open before you, and, lest their very plainness should make them seem to some to be hard, we will go through them with such shortness as that neither may they which understand not remain unenlightened, nor they which understand be wearied. The Lord saith: "Let your loins be girded about." Now, we gird our loins about, when by continency we master the lustful inclination of the flesh. But, forasmuch as it sufficeth not for a man to abstain from evil deeds, if he strive not to join thereto the earnest doing of good works, it is immediately added: "And your lights burning." Our lights burn when, by good works, we give bright example to our neighbour; concerning which works the Lord saith: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father Which is in heaven." (Matth. v. 16.)

Seventh Responsory.

This is he which wrought great wonders before God, and praised the Lord with all his heart. May he pray for all people, that their sins may be forgiven unto them! [Alleluia.]

Verse. Behold a man without blame, a worshipper of God in truth, keeping himself clean from every evil work, and abiding still in his innocency.

Answer. May he pray for all people, that their sins may be forgiven unto them! [Alleluia.]

Eighth Blessing.

He whose feast-day we are keeping
Be our Advocate with God.

Eighth Lesson.

HERE, then, are two commandments, to gird our loins about, and to keep our lights burning—the cleanness of purity in our body, and the light of the truth in our works. Whoso hath the one and not the other, pleaseth not thereby our Redeemer; that is, he pleaseth Him not which doth good works, but bridleth not himself from the pollutions of lust, neither he which is eminent in chastity, but exerciseth not himself in good works. Neither is chastity a great thing without good works, nor good works anything without chastity. And if any man do both, it remaineth that he must look by hope toward our Fatherland above, and not have for his reason wherethrough he turneth himself away from vice, the love of honour in this present world.

Eighth Responsory.

Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning, and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come.

Answer. And ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding. [Alleluia.]

Eighth Responsory for Doctors.

In the midst of the congregation did the Lord open his mouth. And filled him with the spirit of wisdom and understanding. [Alleluia.]

Verse. He made him rich with joy and gladness.

Answer. And filled him with the spirit of wisdom and understanding. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And filled him with the spirit of wisdom and understanding. [Alleluia.]

Ninth Lesson.

"AND ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding: that, when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately." The Lord cometh at the hour of judgment: He knocketh when, by the pains of sickness, He biddeth us know that death is nigh. To Him open we immediately, if we receive Him in love. Whoso feareth to leave this body, will not open to the Judge when He knocketh, for he dreadeth to see that Judge, Whom he knoweth that he hath despised. But whosoever knoweth that his hope and works are built upon a good foundation, when he heareth the Judge knock, openeth to Him immediately, for to such an one that coming is blessed,—yea, when the hour of death is at hand, such an one haileth with gladness a glorious reward.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. [1] Lord, Thou deliveredst unto me five talents: * behold, I have gained beside them five talents more. [Alleluia.]

Second Antiphon. [2] Well done, thou good servant, * thou hast been faithful in a very little, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord. [Alleluia.]

Third Antiphon. [3] A faithful and wise servant * whom his Lord hath made ruler over His household. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Antiphon. [4] Blessed is that servant * whom his Lord, when He cometh and knocketh at the door, shall find watching. [Alleluia.]

Fifth Antiphon. [1]Thou good and faithful servant, * enter thou into the joy of thy Lord. [Alleluia.]

Chapter. (Ecclus. xxxi. 8.)

BLESSED is the man that is found without blemish, and hath not gone after gold, neither hath put his trust in riches, nor in treasure. Who is he, and we will call him blessed? For wonderful things hath he done in his life.

Hymn.[2]

JESUS! Eternal Truth sublime!
Through endless years the Same!
Thou Crown of those who through all time
Confess Thy Holy Name!

Thy suppliant people, through the prayer
Of Thy blest Saint, forgive;
For his dear sake Thy wrath forbear,
And bid our spirits live.

Again returns the sacred day
With heavenly glory bright,
Which saw him go upon his way
Into the realms of light.

All objects of our vain desire,
All earthly joys and gains,
To him were but as filthy mire;
And now with Thee he reigns.

Thee, JESUS, his all-gracious Lord,
Confessing to the last,
He trod beneath him Satan's fraud,
And stood for ever fast.

In holy deeds of faith and love,
In fastings and in prayers,
His days were spent; and now above
Thy heavenly Feast he shares.

Then for his sake Thy wrath lay by,
And hear us while we pray;
And pardon us, O Thou Most High!
On this his festal day.

All glory to the Father be,
And Sole Incarnate Son;
Praise, Holy Paraclete, to Thee,
While endless ages run. Amen.

Verse. The Lord guided the just in right paths. [Alleluia.]

Answer. And showed him the kingdom of God. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Well done, thou good and faithful servant; * thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord. [Alleluia.]

Prayer.

O GOD, Who, year by year, dost gladden us by the solemn Feast-day of Thy blessed Confessor (here insert his name,) mercifully grant unto all who keep his birthday, grace to follow after the pattern of his godly conversation. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Another Prayer.

O LORD, mercifully hear the supplications which we offer unto Thee on this the solemn Feast-day of Thy blessed Confessor (here insert his name,) and, forasmuch as we put no trust in our own righteousness, grant that we may be holpen by his prayers who walked with Thee. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

For Doctors.

O God, Who didst give unto Thy people Thy blessed servant N. (here insert his name) to feed them with the bread of eternal life, grant, we beseech Thee, that even as on earth he showed unto us Thy lively word, so in heaven we may worthily be holpen by the succour of his prayers to Thee on our behalf. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

The same Prayer throughout the day.

[1] An elegiac couplet.

Other Lessons for Feasts of a Confessor not a Bishop.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (xxxi. 8.)

BLESSED is the man that is found without blemish, and hath not gone after gold, neither hath put his trust in riches nor in treasure. Who is he, and we will call him blessed? For wonderful things hath he done in his life. Whoso hath been tried thereby, and found perfect, the same shall have glory for ever; who might offend, and hath not offended; or done evil, and hath not done it. His goods are established in the Lord, and all the congregation of the Saints shall declare his alms.

Second Lesson. (xxxii. 18.)

WHOSO feareth the Lord will receive His discipline: and they that seek Him early shall find His blessing. He that seeketh the law shall be filled therewith: but the hypocrites shall be offended thereat. They that fear the Lord shall find righteous judgment, and shall kindle justice as a light. (28.) He that believeth God taketh heed to the commandments: and he that trusteth in Him shall fare never the worse. (xxxiii. 1.) There shall no evil happen unto him that feareth the Lord: but in temptation God will keep him, and deliver him from evil. A wise man hateth not the commandments and judgments, neither is he tossed to and fro therein as a ship in a storm. A man of understanding trusteth in the law of God, and the law is faithful unto him.

Third Lesson. (xxxiv. 14.)

THE spirit of those that fear God is precious, and is blessed in His sight. For their hope is in Him that saveth them, and the eyes of God are upon them that love

Him. Whoso feareth the Lord shall fear nothing, nor be afraid, for He is his hope. Blessed is the soul of him that feareth the Lord. To Whom doth he look? And Who is his strength? The eyes of the Lord are upon them that fear Him, He is their mighty protection, and strong stay; a defence from heat, and a cover from the sun at noon, a preservation from stumbling, and an help from falling. He raiseth up the soul, and lighteneth the eyes; He giveth health, and life, and blessing.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Moral [Reflection]s upon Job, written by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Bk. x. Chap. xvi. on Job xii.)

THE simplicity of the righteous is made a subject of derision. The wisdom of this world hideth our true feelings by artifice, and useth language to conceal our thoughts; this is the wisdom which demonstrateth the truth of falsehood, and showeth the falsehood of the truth. This kind of shrewdness the young acquire by practice, and children pay for the learning it. Those who are good at this look down upon their neighbours; those who are bad at it are humble and timid, and wonder at it in others; they regard this astuteness too, wrong though it be, with wistful admiration, under softened epithets. Unstraightforwardness is called good breeding. The principles of the world teach those who entertain them, to try and rise to distinction, and when they have attained the bubble of glory which is so soon to pass away, to feel it sweet to have at their feet them on whom they may wreak rich revenge. These principles teach a man, as long as he is strong enough, to give way to nobody else, and, if he hath no chance by force, to try and attain his object by diplomacy.

Fifth Lesson.

THE wisdom of the righteous is the contrary of all this. They seek to avoid deception, to give their thoughts a clear expression in their words, to love the truth because it is the truth, to avoid falsehood, and rather to suffer than to inflict evil. Such are they who seek not to avenge themselves for wrong, and deem it gain to be despised for the truth's sake. This their simplicity is made a subject of derision, for such as are wise in this world believe the purity of their virtue to be simple foolery. Whatsoever is done innocently, they consider without doubt stupid. Such works as the truth approveth are idiotic, when tried by carnal standards of wisdom. After all, what stupider thing is there in this world than to express our real thoughts in our words, to keep nothing quiet by skilful tact, to repay no injuries, to pray for them which curse us, to seek poverty, to give up property, to strive not with such as take from us, to turn the other cheek to the smiter?

Sixth Lesson. (Ch. xvii.)

"A LAMP despised in the thoughts of the rich, is ready for the time appointed." (Job xii. 5.)[1] It often happeneth that one of the elect, who is on his way to be happy for ever, is crushed down here by repeated misfortunes. He reposeth in no luxury of possessions, no distinction marketh him as honourable among men, no admiring followers court him, no rich dress maketh comely his bodily appearance. Everybody seeth in him a person to be looked down upon, and his reputation is that of one unworthy of the world's favour. And yet, that is a man who, to the eyes of the Judge Who seeth in secret, is glorious through virtue, whose life is radiant with worth. He disliketh to be honoured, and doth not refuse to meet with contempt. He bringeth abstinence to bear on his body, and his luxury is spiritual richness in love. He trieth to keep his feelings patient, and when he hath to stand up for righteousness' sake, is glad to be despised. He feeleth from his heart for the afflicted, and the prosperity of the godly giveth him as much pleasure as if it were his own. He is careful inwardly to digest the food of the Holy Word. When he is inquired of, he doth not know how to give a double answer.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xii. 32.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. And so on.

Homily by the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow and Doctor of the Church.] (Bk. iv. Ch. 54 on Luke xii.)

The elect are called a little flock, perchance because the reprobate are far more in number than they, but, more probably, because they love to be lowly, since it is God's will that however much His Church should grow in numbers, she should grow with lowliness even unto the end of the world, and should enter lowly into that kingdom which is hers by His promise. That kingdom He promiseth to her here, when He biddeth her to seek only the kingdom of God, and, to comfort her in her travail, He doth so sweetly and so graciously say that her Father will give it to her.

Eighth Lesson.

"SELL that ye have and give alms." Fear not, He saith, lest, while ye fight for the kingdom of God, ye should lack such things as are needful for this life, nay rather, sell even that which ye have, and give alms. This doth, whosoever for the Lord's sake leaveth all that he hath, and then worketh with his hands, that so he may have to eat, and withal to give alms. In this doth the Apostle boast himself, saying: "I have coveted no man's silver, or gold, or apparel, as ye yourselves know: for these hands have ministered unto my necessities, and to them that were with me. I have showed you all things, how that so labouring ye ought to support the weak." (Acts xx. 33, 34, 35.)

---

[1] I.e., the just man seems to shine now but dimly, but at the same time he shall shine in splendour.—Abp. Kenrick.

Ninth Lesson.

"PROVIDE yourselves bags which wax not old"—that is to say, by almsgiving, the reward thereof remaineth for ever. Nevertheless, we must not think here that this commandment forbiddeth the Saints to keep money for their own use, and for helping of the poor. The Lord Himself, to Whom Angels ministered, had a bag, and kept therein that which the faithful people gave unto Him (John xii. 6,) to relieve therewith the need of His disciples, and other poor folk. But we are commanded not to serve God for gain, nor to work unrighteousness for fear of poverty.

If it should be that several Confessors not Bishops are to be honoured by one Feast, the Office is the same as that just given, except the following:

1. In the Common Prayer the words "Thy blessed Confessor N." are altered into "Thy blessed Confessors N. and N.," and the word "his" into "their."
2. In the Sermon by St John Chrysostom everything said in the Singular Number is altered into the Plural. For example: "The blessed N. and N., whose Feast we are this day keeping, do justly call, &c., &c."

For Abbats the Office is as above, except the following:

Prayer.

O LORD, we beseech Thee, that the prayers of Thy blessed Abbat N. (here insert his name) may commend us unto Thee, and that what for our own worthiness we cannot obtain, Thou mayest grant us through his help. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xix. 27, with the Homily of St Jerome upon the same, (p. 588.)

Other Lessons.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xi. 25.)

AT that time JESUS answered and said: I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (10*th Sermon on the Words of the Lord.*)

"Come unto Me, all ye that labour!" And wherefore labour we all, but because we are frail, sickly, dying creatures, burdened with earthen vessels which distress us? But if these fleshly vessels be distressful, let the open expanse of love be free and wide. "Come unto Me, all ye that labour!"—and why? That we may labour no more. His promise is an instant promise, for He calleth such as are labouring. Perchance they will ask Him what shall be their reward? "And I," saith He, "will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me"—not how to make the world, not how to create all things visible and invisible, not to work wonders in the earth, nor to raise the dead—but—"for I am meek and lowly in heart."

Eighth Lesson.

WILT thou be great? Begin by being little. Dost thou think to raise up a lofty building? Then lay the foundations thereof in lowliness. The greater soever, and the more massy, be that which any man thinketh to build, so much the deeper doth he dig his foundation. And when the house is built, it towereth heavenward; but he which layeth the foundation goeth down into the earth. The building, therefore, is low before it is high, and, after it is low, it riseth high to the roof.

Ninth Lesson.

WHAT is the roof of the house on which we labour? Whither do its spires rise? I answer you at once; to the presence of God. You see how high it is, yea, what it is to see God. He that will, understandeth what I say, and he heareth. What is promised you is to see God, God, the True, God, the Supreme. Blessed is he who seeth Him by Whom he is seen. Such as worship false gods see them easily, but they see them who have eyes and see not. But unto us it is promised that we shall see that God Who liveth and seeth. (Gen. xvi. 14.)

Other Lessons.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xix. 27.)

AT that time: Peter said unto JESUS: Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed Thee: what shall we have therefore? And so on.

Homily by the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow and Doctor of the Church.] (For St Benedict's Birthday.)

In the judgment to come, the elect will be in two classes. One class are they who have forsaken all, and followed the Lord: and these shall judge along with Him. The other class are they who have not equally forsaken all that they had, but who have been careful daily to give alms of their goods to the poor of Christ: these shall be the subjects of judgment, and these are they who shall then hear these words: "Come, ye blessed of My Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: for I was an hungered, and ye gave Me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave Me drink." (Matth. xxv. 34, 35.)

Eighth Lesson.

OF the reprobate also we gather, from the words of the Lord, that there will be two classes. One class are they who, being made partakers in the mystery of Christian faith, have neglected to show their faith by their works: these are they to whom it will be said at the judgment: "Depart from Me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels: for I was an-hungered, and ye gave Me no meat." (41.) The other class are they who either have never received the faith and mysteries of Christ, or who, having received, have apostatised, and abandoned it: and touching these it is said: "But he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only-begotten Son of God." (John iii. 18.)

Ninth Lesson.

AND now that we have touched for a moment, with fear and just dread, upon these things, let us rather turn our hearing to the right joyful promises of our Lord and Saviour. Let us look what His so great, beautiful, and fatherly love will give to such as follow Him; not the reward of life everlasting only, but gifts exceeding precious in this life also. "Every one," saith He, "that hath forsaken houses or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for My Name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life." For every one that shall forsake earthly affections and goods, to go and be Christ's disciple, the further he goeth on in Christ's love, the more shall he find who will rejoice to give him a place in their hearts, and to minister to him of their substance.

VIII. For Doctors of the Church.

The Office is that of a Bishop and Confessor, or of a Confessor not a Bishop, (pp. 612 and 621) according as the particular Doctor was a Bishop or not, with the differences marked in those two Offices, and the following.

Lessons.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (xxxix. 1.)

HE that is wise will seek out the wisdom of all the antient, and be occupied in prophecies. He will keep the sayings of the renowned men, and where subtil parables are, he will be there also. He will seek out the secrets of grave sentences, and be conversant in dark parables. He will serve among great men, and appear before princes. He will travel through strange countries, for he will try the good and the evil among men.

Second Lesson.

HE will give his heart to resort early to the Lord that made him, and will pray before the most High. He will open his mouth in prayer, and make supplication for his sins. If the great Lord will, He will fill him with the spirit of understanding, and he shall make the utterances of his wisdom to distil as the rain, and shall give thanks unto the Lord in his prayer. He shall direct his counsel and knowledge, and in His secrets shall he meditate.

Third Lesson.

HE shall show forth that which he hath learnt, and shall glory in the law of the covenant of the Lord. Many shall commend his understanding, and it shall not be blotted out for ever. His memorial shall not depart away, and his name shall live from generation to generation. Nations shall show forth his wisdom, and the Church shall declare his praise.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Moral [Reflection]s on Job, written by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Bk. ix. ch. vi.)

[1] IN the Book of Job (ix. 9), it is written that it is God "which maketh Arcturus, Orion, and Hyades." Now if by the constellation Orion be mystically signified the spiritual constellation of the holy Martyrs, whom can we understand to be named after them under the title of the Hyades, but the Doctors of the Holy Church? When the glorious constellation of the Martyrs had set, and the light of the faith grew stronger, then appeared the constellation of the Doctors in the firmament of the Church, even in that spring-time when the winter of unbelief was past, and the Sun of truth rose higher to shine on the hearts of His faithful ones. The storms of persecution were gone, and the long nights of unbelief were over; then rose the Doctors to shine on the Church, when the spring-time of belief promised her a brighter year.

---

[1] The first and part of the second sentence is here inserted for the sake of the sense.

Fifth Lesson.

IT beseemeth well that the holy Doctors be figured by Hyades, for these stars are so styled from the Greek word "hyetos," and "hyetos" signifieth rain. The Hyades are therefore named after rain, because when they rise they undoubtedly bring rain. Well, then, do we apply the name of the Hyades to those who, when they rise to shine in the firmament of the universal Church, make the rain of holy preaching to fall upon the parched ground of man's heart. For if the word of preaching had not been as rain, then had Moses never said: "My doctrine shall drop as the rain," (Deut. xxxii. 2,) nor had the Truth said by Isaiah: "I will also command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it," (v. 6,) nor yet these words which we have just quoted: "Therefore the rain-stars have been withholden."[1]

Sixth Lesson.

AT the same time that the Hyades come bringing rain, the sun daily riseth higher in the heavens: thus do we, seeing the learning of the Doctors, and having our minds saturated with the rain of preaching, grow warmer in faith. And when the hot heavens shine fiery over her, the wet earth tendeth to harvest: thus do we, when the fire of holy learning burneth bright in our heart, tend to bring forth the fruit of good works. When, day by day, we learn more of the knowledge of heavenly things, a spring-time of inward light is opening within us, a new Sun is irradiating our mind, and, as we know Him better by the words of His Teachers, He doth daily Himself shine the more therein. As the end of the world groweth nearer, the knowledge of things heavenly will grow greater, and continue to develop with time.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (v. 13.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Bk. i. on the Lord's Sermon on the Mount, ch. vi. tom. 4.)

The Lord showeth how that such men are to be esteemed but fools as do so run after things temporal, either through lust for abundance thereof, or through dread of lack of the same, as to lose those things which are eternal, and which, as men cannot give them, so likewise neither can they take them away. If, therefore, the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? This is as much as to say: Ye are they by whom the stale mass of mankind is to be sweetened; if ye, therefore, through shrinking from the trials of persecutions, which endure but for a moment, do yourselves cast away that kingdom which is everlasting, who will there be to correct your backsliding, seeing that ye be they, and none other, whom God hath chosen to correct the backslidings of all others?

Eighth Lesson.

"IT is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men." He that suffereth persecution is not thus trodden under foot of men; he that in good sooth is trodden under foot of men, is he which, through fear of persecution, hath lost his savour. No man can be trodden upon, unless he be beneath him which treadeth upon him; but he cannot be beneath his tormentor, who, suffer he how grievously soever in his body upon earth, hath still his heart in heaven.

Ninth Lesson.

"YE are the light of the world." They whom the Lord hath, just above, called the salt of the earth, the same doth He now call the light of the world. By the earth, whereof they were said to be the salt, we have not understood to be signified that earth whereupon we walk with our bodily feet, but the men which dwell upon the earth, or sinners, for the sweetening and correction of whose stinking corruption the Lord hath sent His Apostles, as it were, as so much salt. And so here also, by the world we are to understand, not the heavens and the earth, but the men which are in the world, or which love the world for the enlightening of whom the Apostles have been sent.

"A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid"—that is, set upon the heights of the same plain and great righteousness, whereof the mountain upon the which the Lord taught was itself a figure.

Another Homily for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (v. 13.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Ye are the salt of the earth. But if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? And so on.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.] (Comment. on Matth. v.)

"Ye are the salt of the earth. But if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men." There is, I take it, no such thing as salt of the earth. How, then, can the Apostles be called the salt of the earth? But the true meaning of these words will be made plain, when we consider the duty of Apostles, and the nature of salt itself. Now, salt is a compound of the elements of water and fire, out of the which two things in salt there is made one.

---

[1] Quamobrem prohibitæ sunt stellæ pluviarum. This would appear to have been a copyist's blunder in St Gregory's Bible for "Quamobrem prohibitæ sunt stillæ pluviarum—Therefore the rain-drops have been withholden."—Jer. iii. 3.

Eighth Lesson.

THIS thing, therefore, thus made to serve in divers ways the use of men, doth keep from corruption bodies whereon it is sprinkled, and doth readily yield to all the senses the perception of its inborn savour. And thus are the Apostles, seeing that they are the preachers of the kingdom of heaven, and in a certain sense the sowers of the seed of life everlasting, since that Word of God which they scatter hath power to make this mortal put on immortality. Meetly then are they called salt, the savour of whose teaching doth keep sweet the receiver thereof even unto life everlasting.

Ninth Lesson.

BUT the nature of salt is to be ever the same, and unchanging, and, on the other hand, the nature of man hath this weakness, to be changeable. He only is blessed who hath continued even unto the end in all the works which God hath commanded. Therefore doth the Lord warn them whom He calleth the salt of the earth, that they are behoven to remain strong in that strength which He hath given unto them, lest, becoming themselves savourless, they should be impotent to season others; losing the freshness of their own saltness, be unable to stop the corruption round about them; and so the Church cast them out of her buttery, and they and those that they should have salted, be together trodden under foot of such as enter in.

A Third Homily for the Third Nocturn.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (v. 13.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Ye are the salt of the earth. But if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (15*th on Matth.*)

Consider how that the Lord saith: "Ye are the salt of the earth," by the which figure He showeth what a necessary of life is the Gospel. By this figure, He hath us to know that they unto whom He spake have an account to render, not of their own life only, but for the whole world. Not unto two cities, saith the Lord, nor unto ten, nor unto twenty, nor unto one people, as I sent the Prophets, send I you. But I send you unto every land and sea, even unto the whole world, lying groaning, as it is, under the burden of divers sins.

Eighth Lesson.

THESE words, "Ye are the salt of the earth," show unto us the whole nature of man as savourless and stinking with the strong corruption of sin. And therefore demandeth He of His Apostles such qualities as are most needful and useful to the furthering the salvation of many. He that is gentle and lowly, tender and just, shutteth not up all these good things in his own heart, but openeth these bright fountains that they may gush forth for the use of his neighbour. He whose heart is pure, and who seeketh peace, suffering persecution for the truth's sake, doth still lead a life for the good of the commonwealth.

Ninth Lesson.

THINK not, saith the Lord, that the struggle is easy whereunto ye shall be led, neither shall your reckoning be of light matters. Ye are the salt of the earth. Have ye then salted that which is corrupted? Nay, for it is impossible that that which is once corrupted can be made sound again by the rubbing it with salt. This it is not asked of them to do. But their work is to sprinkle with salt, and to keep fresh thereafter, such things as the Lord hath given over into their charge, and which He Himself hath made new, and freed from all taint, before giving them. To make sound after the corruption of sin, is the work of Christ's power alone; to preserve from falling away again, is the duty and the toil commanded to the Apostles.

IX. For Feasts of the Blessed Virgin Mary.[1]

All as on Sundays, except the following.

The "Alleluias" in brackets [ ] are only inserted during Paschal-time.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Ps. cix. The Lord said, &c., (p. 100.)

Ps. cxii. Praise the Lord, O ye His servants, &c., (p. 101.)

Psalm CXXI.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees, of David."]

I WAS glad when they said unto me: * Let us go into the house of the Lord.

Our feet have been wont to stand * within thy gates, O Jerusalem!

Jerusalem is builded as a city * that is compact together:

Whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord, * the testimony of Israël, to give thanks unto the name of the Lord.

For there are set thrones for judgment, * the thrones for the house of David.

Pray for the peace of Jerusalem: * they shall prosper that love thee.

Peace be within thy walls, * and prosperity within thy palaces.

For my brethren and companions' sakes, * I will now say—Peace be within thee!

Because of the house of the Lord our God, * I will seek thy good.

Psalm CXXVI.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees, of Solomon." The LXX. omits the ascription to Solomon.]

EXCEPT the Lord build the house, * they labour in vain that build it:

Except the Lord keep the city, * the watchman waketh but in vain.

It is vain for you to rise up early, * rise up when ye are rested, ye that eat the bread of sorrow:

For He giveth His beloved sleep. Lo, children are an heritage of the Lord, * the fruit of the womb is His reward.

As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man, * so are the children of the out-cast.

Happy is the man that hath his desire satisfied with them: * he shall not be ashamed when he speaketh with his enemies in the gate.

Psalm CXLVII.

[In the Hebrew this is the continuation of the preceding Psalm. The Vulgate and the LXX. prefix "Alleluia," and the LXX. adds "of Haggai and Zechariah."]

PRAISE the Lord, O Jerusalem! * praise thy God, O Zion!

For He hath strengthened the bars of thy gates: * He hath blessed thy children within thee:

He maketh peace in thy borders: * and filleth thee with the finest of the wheat.

He sendeth forth His commandment upon earth: * His word runneth very swiftly.

He giveth snow like wool: * He scattereth the hoar-frost like ashes.

He casteth forth His ice like morsels: * who can stand before His cold?

He sendeth out His word, and melteth them: * He causeth His wind to blow, and the waters flow.

He declareth His word unto Jacob, * His statutes and His judgments unto Israël.

He hath not dealt so with any nation: * neither hath He made known to them His judgments.

[The Hebrew adds "Alleluia," which the Vulgate and the LXX. prefix to the next Psalm.]

Hymn.[2]

HAIL, thou "Star-of-Ocean,"[3]
  Portal of the sky,
Ever-Virgin Mother
  Of the Lord Most High!

Oh, by Gabriel's AVE
  Uttered long ago,
EVA's name reversing,[4]
  'Stablish peace below!

Break the captive's fetters—
  Light on blindness pour—
All our ills expelling,
  Every bliss implore—

Show thyself a Mother—
  Offer Him our sighs,
Who, for us Incarnate,
  Did not thee despise.

Virgin of all virgins!
  To thy shelter take us—
Gentlest of the gentle!
  Chaste and gentle make us.

Still as on we journey,
  Help our weak endeavour,
Till with thee and Jesus,
  We rejoice for ever.

Through the highest heaven
  To the Almighty Three,
Father, Son, and Spirit,
  One same glory be. Amen.

Verse. Holy Virgin, my praise by thee accepted be. [Alleluia.]

Answer. Give me strength against thine enemies. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O Holy Mary, be thou an help to the helpless, a strength to the fearful, a comfort to the sorrowful; * pray for the people, plead for the clergy, make intercession for all women vowed to God; may all that are keeping this thine holy Feast-day feel the might of thine assistance. [Alleluia.]

---

[1] It is now usual to insert this Common Office into Breviaries, but it is placed last of all, after the Office for the Consecration of Churches.

[2] Authorship and date unsettled; translation by the Rev. E. Caswall.

[3] Apparently meant for a translation of MRYM. See note in the Office of her name, between September 8 and September 9.

[4] I.e., Eva, written backwards, reads Ave (Hail). This quaint conceit is clearer in the translation than in the Latin.

The words, "Are keeping this thine holy Feast-day," are very often altered on the different Festivals, which alterations will be found in their own places.

At Compline the last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Holy Virgin Mary, * Mother of God, pray for us. [Alleluia.]

Hymn.[1]

THE God Whom earth, and sea, and sky
Adore, and laud, and magnify,
Who o'er their threefold fabric reigns,
The Virgin's spotless womb contains.

The God, Whose will by moon and sun,
And all things in due course is done,
Is borne upon a maiden's breast,
By fullest heavenly grace possessed.

How blest that Mother in whose shrine
That great Artificer Divine,
Whose hand contains the earth and sky,
Vouchsafed, as in His ark, to lie!

Blest, in the message Gabriel brought;
Blest, by the work the Spirit wrought;
From whom the great Desire of earth
Took human Flesh and human birth.

All honour, laud, and glory be,
O Jesu, Virgin-born, to Thee!
All glory, as is ever meet,
To Father and to Paraclete. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Only three Psalms are said, and in Easter-tide all under one Antiphon, viz., the first, "Blessed art thou among women."

First Antiphon. [2] Blessed art thou among women, * and blessed is the fruit of thy womb. [Alleluia.]

Psalm VIII.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David." It has also a title which seems to show that it was a song for the vintage.]

O LORD, our Lord, * how excellent is Thy Name in all the earth!

For Thy glory is exalted * above the heavens.

[3] Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast Thou perfected praise because of Thine enemies, * that Thou mightest destroy the enemy and the avenger.

When I consider Thine heavens, the work of Thy fingers: * the moon and the stars which Thou hast ordained:

What is man, that Thou art mindful of him? * or the son of man, that Thou visitest him?

Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, Thou hast crowned him with glory and honour, * and madest him to have dominion over the works of Thine hands.

Thou hast put all things under his feet, * all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field.

The fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, * that pass through the paths of the sea.

O LORD, our Lord, * how excellent is Thy Name in all the earth!

Second Antiphon. [4] O Holy Mother of God, * thou hast yielded a pleasant odour like the best myrrh.

Psalm XVIII.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David," with the same further obscure superscription, as in Pss. xii. and xiii.]

THE heavens declare the glory of God, * and the firmament showeth His handy-work.

Day unto day uttereth speech, * and night unto night showeth knowledge.

There is no speech nor language, * where their voice is not heard.

Their sound is gone out through all the earth: * and their words to the ends of the world.

He hath set His tabernacle in the sun:[5] * which is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber.

He rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race: * his going forth is from the end of the heaven.

And his circuit unto the ends of it: * and there is nothing hid from the heat thereof.

The law of the LORD is perfect, converting the soul: * the testimony of the LORD is sure, making wise the simple.

The statutes of the LORD are right, rejoicing the heart: * the commandment of the LORD is clear, giving light unto the eyes.

The fear of the LORD is holy, enduring for ever and ever: * the judgments of the LORD are true, righteous altogether.

More to be desired are they than gold and store of precious stones, * sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb.

Verily, Thy servant keepeth them: * in keeping of them there is great reward.

Who can understand his errors? Cleanse Thou me from secret faults: * preserve Thy servant also from the sins of others.

If they get not dominion over me, then shall I be undefiled: * and I shall be cleansed from the great transgression.

Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of mine heart, * be acceptable in Thy sight for ever,

O LORD mine Helper, * and my Redeemer!

Third Antiphon. Sing for us again and again before this maiden's bed * the tender idylls of the play.

---

[1] From an hymn ascribed to Venantius Fortunatus; translation by the late Rev. Dr Neale.

[2] Luke i. 42.

[3] This verse was quoted by our Lord, concerning those who cried Hosannah on Palm Sunday, Matthew xxi. 16.

[4] Ecclus. xxiv. 20.

[5] So the LXX., as well as the Vulgate. Cf. Ps. cii. 19; ciii. 2, 3. The sense seems to be that the physical source of the light and life of this system is represented as a kind of celestial counterpart of the tabernacle, which was the centre of the Divine authority as revealed upon earth. The Hebrew, however, which is supported by St Jerome, reads, "In them (i.e., the starry heavens) hath He set a tabernacle for the sun," and this reading seems to commend itself to Archbishop Kenrick, who suggests that the "tabernacle" may signify the region below the horizon, into which the sun retires nightly, as into a tent, to sleep, and from which he issues in renewed glory every morning. Targum:—"In them hath He set splendour as a tabernacle for the sun."

Psalm XXIII.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David." The Vulgate and the LXX. add "for the first day of the week."]

THE earth is the LORD'S and the fulness thereof; * the world, and they that dwell therein.

For He hath founded it upon the seas, * and established it upon the floods.

Who shall ascend into the mountain of the LORD? * or who shall stand in His holy place?

He that hath clean hands and a pure heart, * who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully unto his neighbour.

He shall receive a blessing from the LORD, * and mercy from the God of his salvation.

This is the generation of them that seek Him, * that seek the face of the God of Jacob.[1]

Lift up your gates, O ye princes, and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors! * and the King of glory shall come in.

Who is this King of glory? * The LORD strong and mighty, the LORD mighty in battle.

Lift up your gates, O ye princes, and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors! * and the King of glory shall come in.

Who is this King of glory? * The LORD of hosts, He is the King of glory.[1]

Verse. In thy comeliness and thy beauty. [Alleluia.]

Answer. Go forward, fare prosperously, and reign. [Alleluia.]

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Proverbs of Solomon (viii. 12.)

I, WISDOM, dwell with prudence, and find out knowledge of witty inventions. The fear of the LORD is to hate evil; pride, and arrogancy, and the evil way, and the double mouth, do I hate. Counsel is mine, and sound wisdom; understanding is mine; mine is strength. By me kings reign and princes decree justice. By me princes rule, and nobles command righteousness. I love them that love me, and those that seek me early shall find me.

First Responsory.

O how holy and how spotless is thy virginity! I am too dull to praise thee; for thou hast borne in thy breast Him Whom the heavens cannot contain. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb.

Answer. For thou hast borne in thy breast Him Whom the heavens cannot contain. [Alleluia.]

Second Lesson.

RICHES and honour are with me, yea, durable riches and righteousness. My fruit is better than gold and precious stones, and my revenue than choice silver. I walk in the way of righteousness, in the midst of the paths of judgment; that I may cause those that love me to inherit substance, and that I may fill their treasures. The LORD possessed me in the beginning of His ways, before His works of old. I was set up from everlasting, or ever the earth was. When there were no depths, I was already conceived; when there were no fountains abounding with water, before the mountains were settled in their strength, before the hills, was I brought forth.

Second Responsory.

Rejoice with me, all ye that love the Lord, for while I was yet a little one, I pleased the Most High. And I have brought forth from my bowels God and man. [Alleluia.]

Verse. [2] All generations shall call me blessed, since the Lord hath regarded the lowliness of His handmaiden.

Answer. And I have brought forth from my bowels God and man. [Alleluia.]

Third Lesson. (34.)

BLESSED is the man that heareth me, watching daily at my gates, and waiting at the posts of my doors. Whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall obtain salvation from the LORD; but he that sinneth against me wrongeth his own soul. All they that hate me love death. (ix. 1.) Wisdom hath builded her house; she hath hewn out her seven pillars. She hath killed her beasts; she hath mingled her wine: she hath also furnished her table. She hath sent forth her maidens unto the citadel, and unto the walls of the city, to cry out: Whoso is simple, let him come unto me. And unto them that want understanding, she saith: Come, eat of my bread, and drink of the wine which I have mingled.

Third Responsory.

Blessed art thou, O Virgin Mary, who hast carried the Lord, the Maker of the world. Thou hast borne Him Who created thee, and thou abidest a virgin for ever. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Hail, Mary, full of grace. The Lord is with thee.

Answer. Thou hast borne Him Who created thee, and thou abidest a virgin for ever. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Thou hast borne Him Who created thee, and thou abidest a virgin for ever. [Alleluia.]

SECOND NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time all the Psalms are said under the first Antiphon.

First Antiphon. In thy comeliness and thy beauty, * go forward, fare prosperously, and reign. [Alleluia.]

[2] Luke i. 48.

Psalm XLIV.

[This Psalm has a long superscription, the exact meaning of which is not now certain. It seems to have been a marriage-song written to be sung by the Korahites. The Targum ascribes it to the time of Moses, but it seems rather to belong to that of the Jewish Monarchy.]

MINE heart is overflowing with a good matter: * I speak of my works unto the king.

My tongue is the pen * of a ready writer.

Thou art fairer than the children of men, grace is poured into thy lips: * therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

Gird thy sword upon thy thigh, * O most mighty!

In thy comeliness, and thy beauty, * go forward, fare prosperously, and reign,

Because of truth, and meekness, and righteousness: * and thy right hand shall lead thee wonderfully.

Thine arrows are sharp—(the people shall fall under thee)—* into the heart of the King's enemies.

[1]Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: * the sceptre of Thy kingdom is a right sceptre.

Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity: * therefore, God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows.

Thy garments smell of myrrh, and aloes, and cassia, out of the ivory palaces, * whereby kings' daughters among thine honourable women have made thee glad.

Upon thy right hand did stand the queen in a vesture of gold, * bedecked with divers colours.

Hearken, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear: * forget also thine own people, and thy father's house.

And the King shall greatly desire thy beauty: * for He is the Lord thy God,[2] and Him shall they worship.

And the daughters of Tyre shall entreat thy favour * with gifts, even all the rich among the people.

The King's daughter is all glorious within, * in a vesture of gold, clad in divers colours.

After her shall virgins be brought unto the king: * her fellows shall be brought unto thee.

With gladness and rejoicing shall they be brought: * they shall enter into the King's palace.

Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children: * thou shalt make them princes over all the earth.

They shall be mindful of thy name, * unto all generations.

Therefore shall the people praise thee for ever, * yea, for ever and ever.

Second Antiphon. God shall give her the help of His countenance; * God is in the midst of her, she shall not be moved.

Psalm XLV.

[This Psalm has a superscription of uncertain meaning, but of which part seems to imply that it was to be sung by treble voices, from the choir of the Korahite family. And the Targum ascribes it, but apparently by a mere guess, to the time when Korah and his fellow-rebels were destroyed by an earthquake in the wilderness, but "the children of Korah died not" (Num. xxvi. 10, 11).]

GOD is our refuge and strength, * our help in trouble, which is come upon us exceedingly.

Therefore will we not fear, though the earth be removed, * and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea;

Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled; * though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof.[3]

[There is] a river, the streams whereof make glad the city of God: * the Most High hath hallowed His Tabernacle.

God is in the midst of her, she shall not be moved: * God shall help her right early.

The heathen raged, and the kingdoms were moved: * He uttered His voice, the earth melted.

The Lord of hosts is with us: * the God of Jacob is our refuge.[3]

Come and behold the works of the Lord, what wonders He hath wrought in the earth; * He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth.

He breaketh the bow and cutteth the weapons in sunder: * and burneth the shields in the fire.

Be still, and know that I am God: * I will be exalted among the heathen, and I will be exalted in the earth.

The Lord of hosts is with us: * the God of Jacob is our refuge.[3]

Third Antiphon. O Holy Mother of God: * all we who dwell in thee are in gladness.

Psalm LXXXVI.

[Intituled "A Psalm. A Song of the sons of Korah." The Targum adds that it was based upon words of the ancients, perhaps meaning that the two first verses before the SLH were an ancient saying to which the rest was a later addition.]

HER foundation is in the holy mountains: the Lord loveth the gates of Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob!

Glorious things are spoken of thee, * O city of God![3]

I will make mention of Rahab[4] and Babylon * that know me.

Behold the "Strangers,"[5] and Tyre, and the people of Ethiopia, * these were there—

And of Zion shall it not be said: This and that man was born in her, * and the Highest Himself hath established her?[6]

The Lord shall make count, when He writeth up the people [and the princes,][1] * of all that are in her.[2]

---

[1] So are these words translated in Heb. i. 8, 9.

[2] The word "God" is not in the Hebrew, and the original meaning, addressed to the bride, is, "He is thy lord, and bow thou to him." So also St Jerome.

[3] SLH.

[4] That is "the Insolent One," namely, Egypt.

[5] I.e., the Philistines.

[6] Is the meaning that Jerusalem shall be illustrious as the birth-place of all kinds of distinguished persons? The Targum, curiously enough, says that the persons meant are David and Solomon, whereas David is a native of Bethlehem.

All they that dwell in thee * are in gladness.

Verse. God shall give her the help of His countenance. [Alleluia.]

Answer. God is in the midst of her, she shall not be moved. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (Found in Metaphrastes.)

THE Son of God chose for His Mother not a woman of wealth, not a woman of substance, but that blessed maiden whose soul was bright with grace. It was because Blessed Mary had preserved a superhuman chastity, that she conceived the Lord Jesus Christ in her womb. Let us then fly to the most holy maiden, who is Mother of God, that we may gain the help of her patronage. Yea, all ye that be virgins, whosoever ye be, run to the Mother of the Lord. She will keep for you by her protection your most beautiful, your most precious, and your most enduring possession.

Fourth Responsory.

[3] I was exalted like a cedar in Lebanon, and as a cypress-tree upon Mount Zion. Like the best myrrh I yielded a pleasant odour. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Like cinnamon and sweet balsam.

Answer. I yielded a pleasant odour. [Alleluia.]

Fifth Lesson.

VERILY, dearly beloved brethren, the Blessed Virgin Mary was a great wonder. What thing greater or more famous than she, hath ever at any time been found, or can be found? She alone is greater than heaven and earth. What thing holier than she hath been, or can be found? Neither Prophets, nor Apostles, nor Martyrs, nor Patriarchs, nor Angels, nor Thrones, nor Lordships, nor Seraphim, nor Cherubim, nor any other creature, visible or invisible, can be found that is greater or more excellent than she. She is at once the hand-maid and the parent of God, at once virgin and mother.

Fifth Responsory.

[4] Who is this that cometh up like the sun? This, comely as Jerusalem? The daughters of Zion saw her, and called her blessed; the queens also, and they praised her. [Alleluia.]

Verse. [5] And about her it was as the flower of roses in the spring of the year, and lilies of the valleys.

Answer. The daughters of Zion saw her and called her blessed; the queens also, and they praised her. [Alleluia.]

Sixth Lesson.

SHE is the Mother of Him Who was begotten of the Father before all ages, and Who is acknowledged by Angels and men to be Lord of all. Wouldst thou know how much nobler is this virgin than any of the heavenly powers? They stand before Him with fear and trembling, veiling their faces with their wings, but she offereth humanity to Him to Whom she gave birth. Through her we obtain the remission of sins. Hail, then, O Mother! heaven! damsel! maiden! throne! adornment, and glory, and foundation, of our Church! cease not to pray for us to thy Son and our Lord Jesus Christ! that through thee we may find mercy in the day of judgment, and may be able to obtain those good things which God hath prepared for them that love Him, by the grace and goodness of our Lord Jesus Christ; to Whom, with the Father, and the Holy Ghost, be ascribed all glory, and honour, and power, now, and for ever and ever. Amen.

Sixth Responsory.

When the Lord beheld the daughter of Jerusalem adorned with her jewels, He greatly desired her beauty; and when the daughters of Zion saw her, they cried out that she was most blessed, saying: Thy name is as ointment poured forth. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Upon thy right hand did stand the Queen in a vesture of gold wrought about with divers colours.

Answer. And when the daughters of Zion saw her, they cried out that she was most blessed. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Saying, Thy name is as ointment poured forth. [Alleluia.]

THIRD NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time all three Psalms are said under the first Antiphon.

First Antiphon. Joy to thee, * O Virgin Mary, thou hast trampled down all the heresies in the whole world. [Alleluia.]

Psalm XCV.

[In 1 Par. (Chron.) xvi. it is stated that David gave this Psalm to Asaph and his brethren upon the day that the ark was brought to Jerusalem. The text is there given somewhat differently, and the whole forms the second part of one Psalm, of which the first part consists of the first fifteen verses of Ps. civ. The Vulgate and the LXX. note that it was sung at the rebuilding of the Temple after the Captivity.]

O SING unto the Lord a new song: sing unto the Lord, all the earth.

---

[1] Displaced from the beginning of the next verse.

[2] SLII.

[3] I.e., Wisdom. Ecclus. xxiv. 17, 20.

[4] Cant. viii. 5; vi. 10, 4, 8.

[5] Ecclus. l. 8.

Sing unto the LORD, and bless His Name: * show forth His salvation from day to day.

Declare His glory among the heathen, * His wonders among all people.

For the LORD is great, and greatly to be praised: * He is to be feared above all gods.

For all the gods of the heathen are devils: * but the LORD made the heavens.

Praise and beauty are before Him: * holiness and majesty are in His sanctuary.

Give unto the LORD, O ye kindreds of the people, give unto the LORD glory and honour: * give unto the LORD the glory due unto His name.

Bring sacrifices, and come into His courts: * O worship the LORD in His holy temple!

Let all the earth fear before Him. * Say among the heathen, The LORD reigneth!

He hath established the world also, that it shall not be moved: * He shall judge the people righteously.

Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad, let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof: * let the fields be joyful and all that is therein.

Then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice before the LORD, for He cometh, * for He cometh to judge the earth.

He shall judge the world with righteousness: * and the people with His truth.[1]

Second Antiphon. Holy Virgin, my praise by thee accepted be; * give me strength against thine enemies.

Psalm XCVI.

[The Vulgate and the LXX. have the superscription "[A Psalm] of David when his country was re-established"—perhaps meaning after the usurpation of Absolom.]

THE LORD reigneth; let the earth rejoice: * let the multitude of isles be glad thereof.

Clouds and darkness are round about Him: * righteousness and judgment are the foundation of His throne.

A fire shall go before Him, * and burn up His enemies round about.

His lightnings enlightened the world: * the earth saw and trembled.

The hills melted like wax at the presence of the LORD, * at the presence of the Lord of the whole earth.

The heavens declared His righteousness, * and all the people saw His glory.

Confounded be all they that worship graven images, * and that boast themselves of idols.

Worship Him, all ye His Angels! * Zion heard, and was glad.

And the daughters of Judah rejoiced, * because of thy judgments, O LORD!

For thou, LORD, art high above all the earth: Thou art exalted far above all gods.

Ye that love the LORD, hate evil: * the Lord preserveth the souls of His saints; He delivereth them out of the hand of the wicked.

Light is sprung up for the righteous, * and gladness for the upright in heart.

Rejoice in the LORD, ye righteous, * and give thanks to the memorial of His holiness!

Third Antiphon during most of the year. After thy delivery thou still remainest a virgin * undefiled; Mother of God, pray for us.

Third Antiphon, during Advent and on the Feast of the Annunciation. The angel of the Lord announced unto Mary, * and she conceived of the Holy Ghost.

Psalm XCVII.

[Intituled "A Psalm." The Vulgate and the LXX. ascribe it to David.]

O SING unto the LORD a new song: * for He hath done marvellous things.

His right hand, and His holy arm, * hath gotten Him the victory.

The LORD hath made known His salvation: * His righteousness hath He openly showed in the sight of the heathen.

He hath remembered His mercy, * and His truth towards the house of Israël.

All the ends of the earth have seen * the salvation of our God.

Make a joyful noise unto the LORD, all the earth, * make a loud noise and rejoice, and sing praise.

Sing unto the LORD with the harp, with the harp and the voice of a psalm. * With trumpets and sound of cornet,

Make a joyful noise before the LORD, the King. * Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof, the world and they that dwell therein.

Let the floods clap their hands, let the hills be joyful together before the LORD. * For He cometh to judge the earth:

With righteousness shall He judge the world, * and the people with equity.

Verse. God hath chosen her and fore-chosen her. [Alleluia.]

Answer. He hath made her to dwell in His tabernacle. [Alleluia.]

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xi. 27.)

AT that time: as JESUS spake unto the multitudes, a certain woman of the company lifted up her voice and said unto Him: Blessed is the womb that bare Thee. And so on.

Homily by the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow and Doctor of the Church.] (Bk. iv. ch. 49 on Luke xi.)

---

[1] In 1 Par. (Chron.) xvi. the Psalm continues:—"O give thanks unto the LORD, for He is good: for His mercy endureth for ever. And say ye: Save us, O God of our salvation, and gather us together, and deliver us from the heathen, that we may give thanks to Thy holy Name, and glory in Thy praise. Blessed be the LORD God of Israël for ever and ever. And all the people said: 'Amen' and praised the LORD"—possibly in Ps. cxxxv.

It is plain that this was a woman of great earnestness and faith. The Scribes and Pharisees were at once tempting and blaspheming the Lord, but this woman so clearly grasped His Incarnation, and so bravely confessed the same, that she confounded both the lies of the great men who were present, and the faithlessness of the heretics who were yet to come. Even as the Jews then, blaspheming the works of the Holy Ghost, denied the very Son of God Who is of one substance with the Father, so afterwards did the heretics, by denying that Mary always a Virgin did, under the operation of the Holy Ghost, supply flesh to the Only-begotten One of God, when He was about being born in an human Body, even so, I say, did the heretics deny that the Son of Man should be called a true Son, Who is of one substance[1] with His Mother.

Seventh Responsory.

O Holy Virgin Mary, happy indeed art thou, and right worthy of all praise, for out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness, even Christ our God. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Pray for the people, plead for the clergy, make intercession for all women vowed to God. May all that are keeping this thine holy Feast-day feel the might of thine assistance.

Answer. For out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness, even Christ our God. [Alleluia.]

Eighth Blessing.

She whose feast-day we are keeping—
Mary, blessed Maid of maidens,
Be our advocate with God.

Eighth Lesson.

BUT if we shall say that the Flesh, Wherewith the Son of God was born in the flesh, was something outside[2] of the flesh of the Virgin His Mother, without reason should we bless the womb that bare Him, and the paps which He hath sucked. But the Apostle saith: "God sent forth His Son, made of a woman, made under the law," (Gal. iv. 4,) and they are not to be listened to who read this passage: "Born of a woman, made under the law." He was made of a woman, for He was conceived in a virgin's womb, and took His Flesh, not from nothing, not from elsewhere, but from the flesh of His Mother. Otherwise, and if He had not been sprung of a woman, He could not with truth be called the Son of man. Let us therefore, denying the doctrine of Eutyches, lift up our voice, along with the Universal Church, whereof that woman was a figure, let us lift up our heart as well as our voice from the company, and say unto the Saviour: "Blessed is the womb that bare Thee, and the paps which Thou hast sucked!" Blessed Mother! of whom one[3] hath said:

Thou art His Mother Who reigns o'er earth and o'er heaven for ever.

Eighth Responsory.

All generations shall call me blessed. For He That is Mighty, even the Lord, hath done to me great things; and Holy is His Name. [Alleluia.]

Verse. And His mercy is on them that fear Him, from generation to generation.

Answer. He That is Mighty, even the Lord, hath done to me great things, and Holy is His Name. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. He That is Mighty, even the Lord, hath done to me great things, and Holy is His Name. [Alleluia.]

Ninth Lesson.

"YEA, rather, blessed are they that hear the Word of God and keep it." How nobly doth the Saviour say "Yea" to the woman's blessing, declaring also that not only is she blessed who was meet to give bodily birth to the Word of God, but that all they who spiritually conceive the same Word by the hearing of faith, and, by keeping it through good works, bring it forth and, as it were, carefully nurse it, in their own hearts, and in the hearts of their neighbours, are also blessed. Yea, and that the very Mother of God herself was blessed in being for a while the handmaid of the Word of God made Flesh, but that she was much more blessed in this, that through her love she keepeth Him for ever.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. While the King sitteth at his table, * my spikenard sendeth forth the smell thereof. [Alleluia.]

Second Antiphon. [4] His left hand is under my head, * and his right hand doth embrace me. [Alleluia.]

Third Antiphon. [5] I am black but comely, * O ye daughters of Jerusalem. Therefore the King hath loved me, and brought me into his chamber. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Antiphon. [6] Lo! the winter is past, * the rain is over and gone. Rise up, my love, and come away. [Alleluia.]

Fifth Antiphon. O Holy Mother of God! thou art become beautiful * and gentle in thy gladness. [Alleluia.]

Chapter. (Ecclus. xxiv. 14.)

[7] I WAS created from the beginning, before the world; and I shall never fail. In the holy tabernacle I served before him.

Hymn.[1]

O GLORIOUS Virgin, ever blest,
All daughters of mankind above,
Who gavest nurture from thy breast
To God, with pure maternal love.

What we had lost through sinful Eve
The Blossom sprung from thee restores,
And, granting bliss to souls that grieve,
Unbars the everlasting doors.

O Gate, through which hath passed the King!
O Hall, whence light shone through the gloom!
The ransomed nations praise and sing
The Offspring of thy virgin womb.

Praise from mankind and heaven's host,
To JESUS of a Virgin sprung,
To Father and to Holy Ghost,
Be equal glory ever sung. Amen.

Verse. Grace is poured into thy lips. [Alleluia.]
Answer. Therefore God hath blessed thee for ever. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. [2]O Mary! Blessed art thou that hast believed, * for there shall be a performance of those things which were told thee from the Lord. Alleluia.

Between Septuagesima and Easter omit Alleluia.

Prayer throughout the Office, if there be none special.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Lord God, unto all Thy servants, that they may remain continually in the enjoyment of soundness both of mind and body, and by the glorious intercession of the Blessed Mary, always a Virgin, may be delivered from present sadness, and enter into the joy of Thine eternal gladness. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

PRIME.

The last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

Antiphon. While the King, &c., (First Antiphon at Lauds.)

In the Short Responsory instead of the Verse, "Thou that sittest, &c.," is said:

Verse. Thou that wast born of the Virgin Mary.

Chapter at the end. (Ecclus. xxiv. 19.)

IN the broad ways I gave a sweet smell like cinnamon and aromatic balm; I yielded a pleasant odour like the best myrrh.

TERCE.

The last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

SECOND VESPERS.

The same as the First, except the following:

Verse. Holy Virgin, my praise by thee accepted be. [Alleluia.]

Answer. Give me strength against thine enemies. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. All generations shall call me blessed, * for God hath regarded the lowliness of His hand-maiden. [Alleluia.]

At Compline the last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

Note. The above-mentioned alterations of the last verses of the Hymns at Compline, Prime, Terce, Sext, None, and Compline, and in the Verse in the Short Responsory at Prime, are made every day within the Octaves of the Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, and that even when the Office of the day is not of her.

Here follows in the original the Office of the Blessed Virgin as a Simple for Saturdays, but it is here omitted, as upon all Saturdays upon which it could occur the Votive Office of the Immaculate Conception is obligatory in England upon all persons bound to the recitation of the Divine Office.

X. For Virgins,

Whether one or many, Martyr or not Martyr.

All as on Sundays, except the following.

The Psalms are the same as in the Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, except the Third Psalm of the Second Nocturn, which is Psalm XLVII., "Great is the Lord, &c.," (p. 55).

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, Hymn, and Prayer from Lauds.

For One Virgin.

Verse. [1] In thy comeliness and thy beauty. [Alleluia.]

Answer. Go forward, fare prosperously, and reign. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Come, Bride of Christ, and take the everlasting crown * which the Lord hath prepared for thee. [Alleluia.]

For Many Virgins.

Verse. [2] After her shall virgins be brought unto the King. [Alleluia.]

Answer. Her fellows shall be brought unto thee. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [3] Trim your lamps, O ye wise virgins! * Behold the Bridegroom cometh! Go ye out to meet Him! [Alleluia.]

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Lord He is the King of the Virgins. * O come, let us worship Him! [Alleluia.]

Hymn.[4]

I.

CHILD of the Virgin, Maker of Thy Mother,
Virgin-engendered, of the Virgin Son,
Virgin is she of whom we sing another
Victory won.

If the Saint be not a Martyr the 2nd and 3rd verses are omitted.

Double the palm of triumph which she beareth,
Strove she to vanquish woman's fear of death:
Quelled now the hand of death and hell appeareth
Her feet beneath.

3.

Death won no conquest, nor the thousand terrors,
Kindred of death—fierce torments bravely borne:
Gave she her blood: that blood the radiance mirrors
Of life's new morn.

4.

When she pleads for us, at her sweet petition,
That we may sing with conscience pure of sin,
From debt of guilt O grant us Thy remission
And peace within.

5.

Glory to Thee, O Father, Son, and Spirit,
Glory co-equal on the throne on high,
Equal in power, in unity of merit,
Eternally. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time all three Psalms are said under the first Antiphon.

First Antiphon. [1] O how lovely and glorious * is the generation of the chaste! [Alleluia.]

Second Antiphon. Sing for us again and again before this maiden's bed * the tender idylls of the play.[2]

Third Antiphon. [3] Return, return, O Shulammith! * Return, return, that we may look upon thee.

Verse. In thy comeliness and thy beauty—[Alleluia.]

Answer. Go forward, fare prosperously, and reign. [Alleluia.]

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Paul to the Corinthians (vii. 25.)

CONCERNING virgins I have no commandment of the Lord: yet I give my judgment, as one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord, to be faithful. I suppose, therefore, that this is good for the present need, that it is good for a man so to be. Art thou bound unto a wife? Seek not to be loosed. Art thou loosed from a wife? Seek not a wife. But and if thou marry, thou hast not sinned. And if a virgin marry, she hath not sinned. Nevertheless, such shall have trouble in the flesh. But I spare you. But this I say, brethren: The time is short—it remaineth that both they that have wives be as though they had none; and they that weep, as though they wept not; and they that rejoice, as though they rejoiced not; and they that buy, as though they possessed not; and they that use this world, as not abusing it. For the fashion of this world passeth away.

First Responsory for a Virgin and Martyr.

Come, Bride of Christ, and take the everlasting crown, which the Lord hath prepared for thee, even for thee who for the love of Him hast shed thy blood, and art entered with Angels into His garden.[4] [Alleluia.]

Verse. Come, O My chosen one, and I will establish My throne in thee, for the King hath greatly desired thy beauty.[5]

Answer. And thou art entered with Angels into His garden.[4] [Alleluia.]

First Responsory for a Virgin not a Martyr.

Come, O My chosen one, and I will establish My throne in thee, for the King hath greatly desired thy beauty. [Alleluia.]

Verse. In thy comeliness and thy beauty, go forward, fare prosperously, and reign.[6]

Answer. For the King hath greatly desired thy beauty. [Alleluia.]

Second Lesson.

BUT I would have you without carefulness. He that is unmarried careth for the things that belong to the Lord, how he may please God. But he that is married careth for the things that are of the world, how he may please his wife, and he is divided. The unmarried woman, and the virgin careth for the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and in spirit. But she that is married careth for the things of the world, how she may please her husband. And this I speak for your own profit: not that I would cast a snare upon you, but for that which is seemly, and which giveth occasion to attend upon the Lord without distraction.

Second Responsory.

[6] Grace is poured into thy lips; therefore God hath blessed thee for ever. [Alleluia.]

Verse. In thy comeliness and thy beauty, go forward, fare prosperously, and reign.

Answer. God hath blessed thee for ever. [Alleluia.]

Third Lesson.

IF any man think that he behaveth himself unseemly toward his virgin, if she pass the flower of her age, and need so require, let him do what he will—he sinneth not, and if she marry. Nevertheless, he that standeth steadfast in his heart, having no necessity, but hath power over his own will, and hath so decreed in his heart, that he will keep his virgin, doeth well. So then, he that giveth his virgin in marriage doeth well; and he that giveth her not, doeth better. The wife is bound by law as long as her husband liveth. But if her husband have fallen asleep, she is free; she may marry whom she will—only, in the Lord. But she will be happier if she so abide, after my judgment — and I also think that I have the Spirit of God.

[1] Wisd. iv. 1.

[2] Drama. The Song of Solomon (the form of which is dramatic,) seems to be the play referred to.

[3] Cant. vi. 13. The translation follows the Hebrew and Latin as to the proper name. The Breviary text has "Sunamitis," which seems to be either a misprint or a conjectural emendation, founded on the belief that the name is a local designation from the town of Shunem (cf. 3 (1) Kings i. 3, &c.) But this town, teste Eusebio, was also called "Sulem," and is now known as "Sôlam." However, the most common view has been that the name is a feminine form of Solomon, (cf. in English, John and Jane, Francis and Frances, &c.) Vide Gesenius sub vocibus. It is found in the New Testament, under the form of "Salome." Mark xv. 40, xvi. 1.

[4] Latin: paradisus.

[5] Ps. xliv. 12, 5, 3.

[6] Ps. xliv. 12, 5, 3.

Third Responsory.

In thy comeliness and thy beauty, go forward, fare prosperously, and reign. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Grace is poured into thy lips, therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

Answer. Go forward, fare prosperously, and reign. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Go forward, fare prosperously, and reign. [Alleluia.]

SECOND NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time all three Psalms are said under the first Antiphon.

First Antiphon. In thy comeliness and thy beauty, * go forward, fare prosperously, and reign. [Alleluia.]

Second Antiphon. God shall help her with His countenance; * God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved.

Third Antiphon. [1] Many waters cannot * quench love.

Verse. God shall help her with His countenance. [Alleluia.]

Answer. God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. i. on Virgins.)

THIS day is a maiden's Birthday. The love of virginity provoketh us to say somewhat touching maidenhood, lest, if we pass thereby, we should seem to cast a slur on that which was her chief strength. Virginity is not to be praised because it is a grace which is poured forth in Martyrs, but because it is a grace which maketh Martyrs. But what understanding of man can rightly grasp this excellency which riseth above the laws of nature herself? What natural voice can pourtray a thing which is supernaturally noble? It is a reflection on earth of a glory whose home is in heaven. And it is but that which we may justly look for, when we see her who hath her Husband in heaven, live a life whose model is the life of heaven.

Fourth Responsory.

Because of truth, and meekness, and righteousness; and thy right hand shall lead thee wonderfully. [Alleluia.]

Verse. In thy comeliness, and thy beauty, go forward, fare prosperously, and reign.

Answer. And thy right hand shall lead thee wonderfully. [Alleluia.]

Fifth Lesson.

IT was maidenhood that pierced beyond the clouds, the atmosphere, the Angels, and the stars, and came upon the Word of God in the very bosom of the Father, and sucked Him into her heart. For who, that hath once found such blessedness, would leave it again? "For thy name is as ointment poured forth, therefore do the virgins love thee," and draw thee after them. (Cant. i. 3.) Lastly, it is not I, but the Lord by Whom it is said that they which neither marry nor are given in marriage are as the angels of God in heaven. (Matth. xxii. 30.) Let no man therefore marvel that they which be married unto the Lord of angels should be likened themselves to angels.

Fifth Responsory.

[2] Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Because of truth, and meekness, and righteousness.

Answer. Therefore God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness. [Alleluia.]

Sixth Lesson.

WHO would deny that this is a life which hath come down from heaven, seeing it is a life whereof it is not easy to find an ensample before God came down to dwell in a Body of clay? Then was it a virgin which conceived Him in her womb, and the Word was made Flesh, that Flesh might be made God. Some will say: Concerning Elias also, we find not that he shared in the lusting after a bodily coming-together. Yea; and therefore it is that he was carried up in a fiery chariot into heaven; therefore is it that he is seen with the Lord amid all the glory of the Transfiguration; therefore it is that he is to come as a Forerunner of the Lord's coming again.

Sixth Responsory.

After her shall virgins be brought unto the King, her fellows shall be brought unto thee with gladness and rejoicing. [Alleluia.]

Verse. In thy comeliness and thy beauty, go forward, fare prosperously, and reign.

Answer. They shall be brought unto thee with gladness and rejoicing. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. They shall be brought unto thee with gladness and rejoicing. [Alleluia.]

---

[1] Cant. viii. 7.

[2] Ps. xliv. 9.

THIRD NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time all three Psalms are said under the first Antiphon.

First Antiphon. [1] I am black but comely, * O ye daughters of Jerusalem; therefore hath the King loved me, and brought me into his chamber. [Alleluia.]

Second Antiphon. [1] Draw me after thee; * we will run after the savour of thy good ointments; thy name is as oil poured forth.

Third Antiphon. Come, Bride of Christ, * and take the everlasting crown which the Lord hath prepared for thee.

Verse. God hath chosen her, and fore-chosen her. [Alleluia.]

Answer. He hath made her to dwell in His tabernacle. [Alleluia.]

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxv. 1.)

AT that time: Jesus said to His disciples: The Kingdom of heaven shall be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the Bridegroom and the Bride. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (12th on the Gospels.)

Dearly beloved brethren; oftentimes do I warn you to fly corrupt conversation, and to keep yourselves unspotted from the world. But the portion which is this day read from the Holy Gospel doth oblige me to say that even to these good things which ye do, ye must needs take all careful heed. Look ye well to it, that, when ye work righteousness, ye do it not as seeking the praise and admiration of men, for if the lust of praise do once creep in, that which seemeth so fair without, loseth its reward within. Behold how the Redeemer speaketh of these ten virgins. He calleth them all virgins, yet entered not all of them into the door of blessedness, for there were some of them who sought outwardly the honour of virginity, but would take no oil within their vessels with their lamps.

Seventh Responsory.

This is one of those wise virgins, whom the Lord found watching, for when she took her lamp, she took oil with her. And when the Lord came, she went in with him to the marriage. [Alleluia.]

Verse. At midnight there was a cry made: Behold! the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him!

Answer. And when the Lord came, she went in with Him to the marriage. [Alleluia.]

Eighth Blessing.

She (or they) whose feast-day we are keeping,

Be our Advocate (or Advocates) with God.

Eighth Lesson.

BUT, first of all, it is for us to ask: What is the kingdom of Heaven? And wherefore shall the same be likened unto ten virgins, whereof, albeit five were wise, yet five were foolish? For if the kingdom of heaven be such that there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie, (Apoc. xxi. 27,) how can it be like unto five virgins which were foolish? But we must know that, in the word of God, the kingdom of heaven doth oftentimes signify the Church as she now is, touching the which the Lord saith in another place: "The Son of Man shall send forth His Angels, and they shall gather out of His kingdom all things that offend." (Matth. xiii. 41.) In that kingdom of Blessedness, wherein peace shall have her perfect reign, there shall be nothing found that offendeth for the angels to gather out.

Eighth Responsory.

At midnight there was a cry made: Behold! the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him! [Alleluia.]

Verse. Trim your lamps, O ye wise virgins.

Answer. Behold! the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him! [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Behold! the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him! [Alleluia.]

Ninth Lesson.

THE body of every man doth consist of five senses, and five being doubled, is ten. Forasmuch, therefore, as the whole body of the faithful doth consist of two sexes, the Holy Church is likened unto ten virgins. And forasmuch as in the Church the good are for the present mingled with the bad, and the reprobate with the elect, it is rightly said that, of the ten virgins, five are wise and five are foolish. There are many who have self-control, which do keep themselves from lusting after things outward, whose hope beareth them to things inward, who chastise the flesh, who long with intense home-sickness for their Fatherland which is in heaven, who seek an eternal reward, and who will not to receive for their labours the praise of men. These are they who reckon their glory, not in the mouths of men, but in the testimony of their own conscience. And many there be likewise who afflict the body by self-control, and yet who seek for their self-control applause from men.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. This is one of the wise virgins, * one chosen out of the number of the careful. [Alleluia.]

Second Antiphon. This is one of the wise virgins, * whom the Lord found watching. [Alleluia.]

Third Antiphon. [2] This is one which hath not known the sinful bed, * she shall have fruit in the visitation of holy souls. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Antiphon. Come, O my chosen one, * and I will establish My throne in thee. [Alleluia.]

Fifth Antiphon. She is beautiful * among the daughters of Jerusalem. [Alleluia.]

Chapter. (2 Cor. x. 17.)

BRETHREN, he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord. For not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth.

Hymn.[1]

JESU, the Virgin's Crown, do Thou
Accept us, as in prayer we bow;
Born of that Virgin, whom alone
The Mother and the Maid we own.

Amongst the lilies Thou dost feed,
With Virgin choirs accompanied;
With glory decked, the spotless brides
Whose bridal gifts Thy love provides.

They, wheresoe'er Thy footsteps bend,
With hymns and praises still attend;
In blessed troops they follow Thee,
With dance, and song, and melody.

We pray Thee therefore to bestow
Upon our senses here below,
Thy grace, that so we may endure
From taint of all corruption pure.

All laud to God the Father be:
All laud, Eternal Son, to Thee:
All laud, as is for ever meet,
To God the Holy Paraclete. Amen.

For One Virgin.

Verse. Grace is poured into thy lips. [Alleluia.]

Answer. Therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

For many Virgins.

Verse. After her shall virgins be brought unto the King. [Alleluia.]

Answer. Her fellows shall be brought unto thee. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias.

For one Virgin. [2] The kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchantman * seeking goodly pearls, who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it. [Alleluia.]

For many Virgins. Trim your lamps, O ye wise virgins! * Behold! the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him! [Alleluia.]

Prayer for a Virgin and Martyr.

O GOD, Who, amidst the wondrous work of Thy Divine power, dost make even weak women to be more than conquerors in the uplifting of their testimony, mercifully grant unto all us which do keep the Birthday of Thy blessed handmaiden and witness N. (here mention her name) grace to follow her steps to Thee-ward. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Another Prayer for a Virgin and Martyr.

O LORD, we pray Thee that Thy blessed handmaiden and witness N., (here mention her name,) in whom Thou hast ever been well pleased, because of her worthy maidenhood and her mighty showing-forth of Thy power, may entreat Thy pardon on our behalf. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Prayer for a Virgin not a Martyr.

GRACIOUSLY hear us, O God of our salvation, and grant that as the Birthday of Thy blessed handmaiden N. (here mention her name) doth make us happier, so the fruit of her godly earnestness may make us better. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Prayer for many Virgins, Martyrs.

GRANT unto us, we beseech Thee, O Lord, our God, that we may ever call to mind, with all worship and thanksgiving, the victory of Thy holy Virgin Martyrs NN., (here mention their names,) and although we know that our mind cannot comprehend Thee Who art this day their exceeding great reward, give us always the grace humbly to worship Thee. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Other Lessons for Virgins.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (li. 1.)

I WILL thank Thee, O Lord and King, and Praise Thee, O God my Saviour. I will give praise unto Thy Name; for Thou hast been mine Helper and Defender, and hast preserved my body from destruction, and from the snare of the slanderous tongue, and from the lips that forge lies, and hast been mine Helper against mine adversaries. And hast delivered me, according to the multitude of the mercies of Thy Name, from them that roared against me, and that were ready to devour me: out of the hands of such as sought after my life, and from the gates of trouble that were open all around me; from the choking of the fire that compassed me, so that when I stood in the midst of the flame I was not scorched: from the depth of the belly of hell, from an unclean tongue, and from lying words, and from an unjust king, and from an unrighteous tongue.

Second Lesson.

MY soul shall praise the Lord even unto death, for my life was near to the hell beneath. They compassed me on every side, and there was no man to help me. I looked for the succour of men, but there was none. Then thought I upon Thy mercy, O Lord, and upon Thine acts of old; how Thou deliverest such as wait for Thee, O Lord, and savest them out of the hands of the people.

Third Lesson.

THOU hast lifted up my dwelling on earth, and I prayed for deliverance from death. I called upon the Lord, the Father of my Lord, that He would not leave me in the days of my trouble, and in the time of the proud, when there was no help. I will praise Thy Name continually, and will sing praise with thanksgiving; for that my prayer was heard. For Thou savedst me from destruction, and deliveredst me from the evil time. Therefore will I give thanks, and praise Thee, and bless the Name of the Lord.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the holy Martyr Cyprian, Bishop [of Carthage,] concerning the rules and clothing of Virgins. (2.)

I AM now to address myself to virgins, and as their condition is one of such glorious exaltation, I am the more behoven to be careful. This mass of consecrated virginity is the flower upon the plant of the Church. It is the charm and loveliness of spiritual grace. It is a generation of gladness. It is a work of praise and honour, untouched and uncorrupted. It is the image of God reflecting the holiness of the Lord. It is the brightest portion of the flock of Christ. It is the joy of our holy Mother the Church, and the rich blossom of her glorious fruitfulness, and every addition to the number of her virgins is an increase of her gladness. To these I speak, them I exhort, more in tenderness than in authority. Not that I, who am so worthless, and little, and feel so keenly the lowliness of mine own estate, would speak as finding any fault to reprove, but because when I feel the tenderest care, I feel the most nervous dread of any troubling by the wicked one.

Fifth Lesson.

THIS is not an unreasonable care, nor a groundless dread, which looketh to the way of salvation and keepeth the life-giving commandments of the Lord, to the end that they, who have consecrated themselves to Christ, who have turned their back for ever upon the pleasure of the flesh, who have vowed themselves God's own in body as well as in mind, may finish the work for which so vast a reward awaiteth them; that they may desire no more to seem fair and pleasing in any eyes but those of the Lord, from Whose hand they look to receive the wage of their continence, as He Himself hath said: "All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given. For there are some eunuchs which were so born from their mother's womb; and there are some eunuchs which were made eunuchs of men; and there be eunuchs which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it." (Matth. xix. 11, 12.)

Sixth Lesson.

AND yet again, the voice of an Angel hath proclaimed what is the reward of continence. "These are they which were not defiled with women; for they are virgins. These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth." (Apoc. xiv. 4.) Neither is it to man only that the Lord hath promised this glorious reward for virginity. He passeth not by women, but, since the woman is made out of the man, and taken and formed from him, God in His Holy Scriptures useth mostly to address Himself to the race in the form wherein He originally created it, for they are twain in one flesh, and when mankind is spoken of, womankind also is signified. But if continence be a following of Christ, and virginity have her aim in the kingdom of heaven, what concern have such with earthly finery, or with self-adorning, whereby, while they seek to please men, they offend God?

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xix. 3.)

AT that time: the Pharisees came unto JESUS, tempting Him and saying unto Him: Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for any cause? And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (63*rd on Matthew.*)

Seeing that directly to exhort them unto virginity was well-nigh more than they could bear, our Lord seeketh to draw them to the desire thereof, taking occasion by the needfulness of a law against divorce. Then He showeth that virginity is possible, saying: "There are some eunuchs which were so born from their mother's womb; and there are some eunuchs which were made eunuchs of men; and there be eunuchs which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake." In these words He persuadeth them indirectly to choose virginity, while He teacheth them that such a gift is not so good as to be impossible.

Eighth Lesson.

THIS His doctrine He establisheth somewhat thus. Supposing that thou hadst been born a eunuch by nature, or hadst been made a eunuch by the cruelty of men, so that thou hadst no sexual enjoyment, and hadst no credit for having none, what wouldest thou do? Give God thanks therefore, that thou dost, for a reward and a crown, what such others suffer with no reward and no crown—yea, and that, rather a lighter burden than the same, and that not only because thou hast the joy of hope, and of knowing that thou doest well, but also because thou art not so battered by storms of desire as they are.

Ninth Lesson.

WHEN, therefore, He had spoken of such as are eunuchs by nature, or by mutilation, and are eunuchs vainly and uselessly, unless they also bridle their thoughts, and of such as deny themselves for the kingdom of heaven's sake, He added: "He that is able to receive it, let him receive it," that He might make them the readier by showing the very sternness of the work, and, in His unspeakable goodness, He would not include any such precept within the requirements of the law, and, by saying this, showeth it to be the more possible, that He might increase the desire of freely choosing it.

Simple Office for Virgins.

The Office is as on a Semi-double, with the following exceptions.

Verse. In thy comeliness and thy beauty. [Alleluia.]

Answer. Go forward, fare prosperously, and reign. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [1] The kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchantman, seeking goodly pearls; * who, when he had found one pearl of great price, gave up all that he had and bought it. [Alleluia.]

MATTINS.

Invitatory. For the confession of Blessed N. * (here insert her name), let us praise our God.

Hymn.

WHEN she pleads for us, at her sweet petition,
That we may sing with conscience pure of sin,
From debt of guilt, O grant us Thy remission
And peace within.

Glory to Thee, O Father, Son, and Spirit,
Glory co-equal on the throne on high!
Equal in power, in unity of merit
Eternally! Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time all three Psalms are said under the First Antiphon.

First Antiphon. O how lovely and glorious is the generation * of the chaste. [Alleluia.]

Second Antiphon. His left hand is under my head, * and his right hand doth embrace me.

Third Antiphon. Return, return, O Shulammith, * return, return, that we may look upon thee.

Verse. In thy comeliness and thy beauty. [Alleluia.]

Answer. Go forward, fare prosperously, and reign. [Alleluia.]

Lessons for a Martyr from Ecclus. li. 1, (p. 646.)

For a Woman not a Martyr.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Proverbs of Solomon (xxxi. 10.)

WHO can find a virtuous woman? For her price is far above the rarest merchandise. The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her, so that he shall have no need of spoil. She will do him good and not evil, all the days of her life. She seeketh wool and flax, and worketh wisely with her hands. She is like the merchant's ship, she bringeth her food from afar; she riseth also, while it is yet night, and giveth meat to her household, and a portion to her maidens. She considereth a field, and buyeth it; with the fruit of her hands she planteth a vineyard. She girdeth her loins with strength, and strengtheneth her arms.

First Responsory.

Come, O My chosen one, and I will establish My throne in thee, for the King hath greatly desired thy beauty. [Alleluia.]

Verse. In thy comeliness and thy beauty, go forward, fare prosperously, and reign.

Answer. For the King hath greatly desired thy beauty. [Alleluia.]

Second Lesson.

SHE tasteth and perceiveth that her merchandise is good. Her candle goeth not out by night. She layeth her hands to hard work, and her fingers hold the distaff. She spreadeth out her hands to the poor, yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy. She is not afraid of the cold of snow for her household, for all her servants are clothed with double garments. She maketh for herself coverings of tapestry: her clothing is fine linen and purple. Her husband is known in the gates, when he sitteth among the elders of the land. She maketh linen and selleth it, and delivereth girdles unto the Canaanite.[2]

Second Responsory.

Grace is poured into thy lips; therefore God hath blessed thee for ever. [Alleluia.]

Verse. In thy comeliness and thy beauty, go forward, fare prosperously, and reign.

Answer. God hath blessed thee for ever. [Alleluia.]

Third Lesson.

STRENGTH and honour are her clothing; and she will laugh in the latter day. She openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness. She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness. Her children arise up, and call her blessed; her husband, and he praiseth her. Many daughters have gotten riches, but thou excellest them all. Favour is deceitful, and beauty is vain: a woman that feareth the LORD, she shall be praised. Give her of the fruit of her hands, and let her own works praise her in the gates.

Third Responsory.

In thy comeliness and thy beauty, go forward, fare prosperously, and reign. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Grace is poured into thy lips, therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

Answer. Go forward, fare prosperously, and reign. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Go forward, fare prosperously, and reign. [Alleluia.]

SECOND NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time all three Psalms are said under the First Antiphon.

First Antiphon. In thy comeliness and thy beauty, * go forward, fare prosperously, and reign. [Alleluia.]

Second Antiphon. God shall help her with His countenance: * God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved.

Third Antiphon. Many waters cannot * quench love.

Verse. God shall help her with His countenance. [Alleluia.]

Answer. God is in the midst of her: she shall not be moved. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book upon Widows by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Near the end.)

I BEHOLD the field of the Church, that the same is a fruitful field, somewhile smiling with the brightness of virginity, somewhile golden with the ripe harvest of widowhood, somewhile rich with the crop of marriage. These things be diverse, but they be the fruits of the same field. There are not so many choice lilies as stalks of bearded grain, ears for the harvest, and there are more places in the soil fitted once to receive seed than there are places which, when they have yielded a crop, are fitted again to be ploughed. Good, then, is widowhood, which the judgment of an Apostle hath so often commended, widowhood, which is the teacher of faith and of purity.

Fourth Responsory.

Because of truth, and meekness, and righteousness; and thy right hand shall lead thee wonderfully. [Alleluia.]

Verse. In thy comeliness and thy beauty, go forward, fare prosperously, and reign.

Answer. And thy right hand shall lead thee wonderfully. [Alleluia.]

Fifth Lesson.

THEREFORE, they who worship adultery and uncleanness in their gods made celibacy and widowhood punishable. They who lusted after abominations, taxed self-control. The pretence was the desire of fruitfulness, but the aim was to abolish virginity, the resolution of chastity. When a soldier hath served his time he layeth down his arms, leaveth his trade, and retireth him to his own lands, that as well himself may rest after the toils of life, as that the hope of rest to come may make others the more ready to undergo work. So also the aged labourer leaveth it for others to guide the handle of the plough, and withdraweth from the weariness of his younger days' labour to essay the task of an old man's thoughtful supervision. It is easier to prune vines, than to stamp them out, to check the first wild outburst of their vigour, and to curtail the wantonness of their young growth, so teaching, even by the ensample of the vineyard, that chastity, which keepeth itself within the bearing of but a few children.

Fifth Responsory.

Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Because of truth, and meekness, and righteousness.

Answer. Therefore God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness. [Alleluia.]

Sixth Lesson.

LIKE to these is a widow, a veteran retiring to rest upon the earned rewards of her chastity, and who, albeit she layeth down the arms of wifehood, still ruleth the order of all her household; albeit she be at rest from bearing burdens, she is careful in the marriage of her youngers, and with the wisdom of age chooseth what study is the most useful, what fruit is the richest, what wedlock is the meetest. And so, if the government of the field be given more to the elder than to the younger, wherefore shouldest thou hold that a wife is more useful than a widow? But if they which persecuted the faith persecuted also widowhood, then, surely, in the eyes of them which hold the faith, must widowhood be looked upon as a reward, rather than shrunk from as a punishment.

Sixth Responsory.

Favour is deceitful, and beauty is vain: a woman that feareth God she shall be praised. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Give her of the fruit of her hands, and let her own works praise her in the gates.

Answer. A woman that feareth God, she shall be praised. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. A woman that feareth God, she shall be praised. [Alleluia.]

THIRD NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time are said under the First Antiphon.

First Antiphon. I am black but comely, * O ye daughters of Jerusalem; therefore hath the King loved me, and brought me into His chamber. [Alleluia.]

Second Antiphon. Draw me after thee: * we will run after the savour of thy good ointments, thy name is as oil poured forth.

Third Antiphon. Come, Bride of Christ, * and take the everlasting crown, which the Lord hath prepared for thee.

Verse. God hath chosen her, and fore-chosen her. [Alleluia.]

Answer. He hath made her to dwell in His Tabernacle. [Alleluia.]

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xiii. 44.)

AT that time: JESUS spake unto His disciples this parable: The kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (11th on the Gospels.)

Dearly beloved brethren, the kingdom of heaven is likened unto the things of earth, to the end that by the mean of things which we know, our mind may rise to the contemplation of the things which we know not; by the ensample of things which are seen, may fix her gaze on things which are not seen; by the touch of things which she useth, may be warmed towards the things which she useth not; by things which she knoweth and loveth, to love also the things which she knoweth not. For, behold, "the kingdom of heaven is likened unto treasure hid in a field, the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and, for joy thereof, goeth and selleth all that he hath and buyeth that field."

Seventh Responsory.

She openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness. She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness. [Alleluia.]

Verse. She tasteth and perceiveth that her merchandise is good. Her candle goeth not out by night.

Answer. And she eateth not the bread of idleness. [Alleluia.]

Eighth Lesson.

AND herein we must remark that the treasure, when once it hath been found, is hidden to keep it safe. He who keepeth not hidden from the praises of men his eager striving heavenwards, doth not enough to keep the same safe from the attacks of evil spirits. In this life we are, as it were, on the way home, and the road is beset by evil spirits, as it were, by highwaymen. He, therefore, inviteth robbery who carrieth his treasure glaringly. This I say, not that our neighbour should not see our good works—since it is written: "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father Which is in heaven" (Matth. v. 16)—but that we should not seek, by what we do, to gain the praise of men. Let the outward work agree with the inward thought, that by our good works we may give an ensample to our neighbour, and still, by our intention, directed only to the pleasing God, we may also have liefer that our works were secret.

Eighth Responsory.

[1] The kingdom of this world and all the beauty of life I have esteemed as nothing, for the excellency of the love of JESUS Christ my Lord, Whom, having seen, I loved; Whom, having believed, I longed after. [Alleluia.]

Verse. My heart is overflowing with a good matter; I speak of my works unto the King.

Answer. Whom, having seen, I loved; Whom, having believed, I longed after. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Whom, having seen, I loved; Whom, having believed, I longed after. [Alleluia.]

Ninth Lesson.

THE treasure is the desire for heaven; the field wherein it is hidden is the earnest observance wherewith this desire is surrounded. Whosoever turneth his back upon the enjoyments of the flesh, and by earnest striving heavenward, putteth all earthly lusts under the feet of discipline, so that he smiteth back no more when the flesh smiteth at him, and shuddereth no more at anything that can only kill the body—whosoever doth thus, hath sold all that he had, and bought that field.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. [2] While the king * sitteth at his table, my spikenard sendeth forth the smell thereof. [Alleluia.]

Second Antiphon. [3] We will run after thee, * in the savour of thy good ointments. The virgins love them exceedingly. [Alleluia.]

Third Antiphon. [3] Lo! the winter is past, * the rain is over and gone. Rise up, my love, and come away. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Antiphon. Come, O My chosen one, * and I will establish My throne in thee. Alleluia.

Omit this Alleluia between Septuagesima and Easter.

Fifth Antiphon. She is beautiful * among the daughters of Jerusalem. [Alleluia.]

Chapter for a Martyr. (Ecclus. li. 1.)

I WILL thank Thee, O Lord and King, and praise Thee, O God my Saviour. I will give praise unto Thy Name, for Thou hast been my Helper and Defender, and hast preserved my body from destruction.

LAUD we the Saint most sweet
Shining in glory blest,
Who bore a hero's noble heart
Within a woman's breast.

Pierced with the love of Christ
The world's false love she fled:
And Heavenward with might and main
Upon her journey sped.

With fasts she pined the flesh,
But on sweet food of prayer
Feasted her spirit pure; and now
Doth joys eternal share.

O Christ our King and God!
Thou strength of all the strong!
To Whom alone all holy deeds,
And all great works belong;

For her deep plaints on high,
To us propitious be;
And in the glorious Trinity
Glory eterne to Thee. Amen.

Other Lessons for the Second Nocturn for a Martyred Woman not a Virgin.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (67*th on divers places in the New Testament.*)

THE commemorations which I love and welcome the most are the commemorations of the Martyrs, and, while I love and welcome them all, more especially do I do so when the wrestling set before us is the wrestling of a woman. The weaker the vessel, the stronger the grace, the greater the spoils, the clearer the victory; and that, not because the sex of the wrestler is frail, but because the enemy is now conquered by her through whom he once conquered.

Fifth Lesson.

BY a woman he overcame, by a woman he is overcome. A woman was once his weapon; a woman is now become the instrument of his defeat; he findeth that the weak vessel cannot be broken. The first woman sinned and died; this one died rather than sin. The first, under the delusion of a lying promise, (Gen. iii. 4,) broke the law of God; this one chose rather to keep covenant with her Benefactor, than to keep this present life. What excuse for softness and sloth can men any longer hope to make? or what forgiveness, when women bear themselves so bravely and manfully, and gird themselves up so nobly for the wrestling of godliness?

Sixth Lesson.

SHE had a weak body, and a sex which is exposed to hurt; but grace came, and made nothing of these frailties. Nothing is stronger than one in whose mind the fear of God is firmly and wilfully rooted. The enemy may threaten fire, or iron, or beasts, or anything else, but such an one taketh them all for matters not worth consideration. And thus did this blessed woman do.

Hymn.[1]

BLESSED City, heavenly Salem,
  Vision dear of peace and love,
Who, of living stones upbuilded,
  Art the joy of Heaven above,
And, with angel cohorts circled,
  As a Bride to earth dost move!

From celestial realms descending,
  Bridal glory round her shed,
To His Presence, decked with jewels,
  By her Lord shall she be led:
All her streets, and all her bulwarks,
  Of pure gold are fashioned.

Bright with pearls her portal glitters;
  It is open evermore;
And, by virtue of His merits,
  Thither faithful souls may soar,
Who for Christ's dear Name, in this world
  Pain and tribulation bore.

Many a blow and biting sculpture
  Polished well those stones elect,
In their places now compacted
  By the Heavenly Architect,
Who therewith hath willed for ever
  That His Palace should be decked.

Laud and honour to the Father,
  Laud and honour to the Son;
Laud and honour to the Spirit;
  Ever Three and ever One:
Consubstantial, Co-eternal,
  While unending ages run. Amen.

Invitatory. [3]Holiness becometh the house of God. * In her let us worship her Bridegroom, even Christ. [Alleluia.]
Hymn from Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time all three Psalms are said under the first Antiphon.

First Antiphon. Lift up your gates, O ye princes, * and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors. [Alleluia.]

Ps. xxiii. The earth is the LORD'S, &c., (p. 26.)

Second Antiphon. [4]The LORD shall be my God, * and this stone shall be called God's house.

Ps. xlv. God is our refuge, &c., (p. 55.)

Third Antiphon. [5]Moses built an altar * unto the Lord God.

Ps. xlvii. Great is the LORD, &c., (p. 55.)

Verse. Holiness becometh Thine house, O LORD,—[Alleluia.]
Answer. For ever. [Alleluia.]

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Paralipomena (vii. 1.)

NOW when Solomon had made an end of praying, the fire came down from heaven, and consumed the burnt-offerings and the sacrifices; and the glory of the LORD filled the house. And the Priests could not enter into the house of the LORD, because the glory of the LORD had filled the LORD'S house. And when all the children of Israël saw how the fire came down, and the glory of the LORD upon the house, they bowed themselves with their faces to the ground upon the pavement, and worshipped and praised the LORD, [saying:] For He is good; for His mercy endureth for ever! Then the King and all the people offered sacrifices before the LORD. And King Solomon offered a sacrifice of twenty-and-two thousand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousand sheep. So the King and all the people dedicated the house of God.

First Responsory.

When the Temple was dedicated the people sang praise, and sweet in their mouths was the sound. [Alleluia.]
Verse. [6]The LORD'S house is established in the top of the mountains; and all nations shall flow unto it.
Answer. And sweet in their mouths was the sound. [Alleluia.]

Second Lesson.

AND the Priests waited on their offices; the Levites also with instruments of music of the LORD, which David the King had made to praise the LORD—"Because His mercy endureth for ever"—singing David's hymns by their ministry. And the Priests sounded trumpets before them, and all Israël stood. Moreover, Solomon hallowed the middle of the Court that was before the house of the LORD; for there he offered burnt-offerings and the fat of the peace-offerings, because the brazen altar which Solomon had made was not able to receive the burnt-offerings and the meat-offerings and the fat. Also at the same time Solomon kept the Feast seven days and all Israël with him, a very great congregation, from the entering in of Hamath unto the River of Egypt. And in the eighth day he made a solemn assembly; for they kept the dedication of the altar seven days, and the Feast seven days.

Verse. [1] They shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing their sheaves with them.

Answer. And all nations shall flow unto it, and shall say: Glory be to Thee, O Lord! [Alleluia.]

Third Lesson.

THUS Solomon finished the house of the LORD, and the King's house, and all that came into Solomon's heart to make in the house of the LORD, and in his own house, he prosperously effected. And the LORD appeared to him by night, and said unto him: I have heard thy prayer, and have chosen this place to Myself for an house of sacrifice. If I shut up heaven that there be no rain, or if I command the locusts to devour the land, or if I send pestilence among My people; if My people, upon whom My Name is called, shall pray, and seek My face, and turn from their wicked ways, then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land. Now Mine eyes shall be open and Mine ears attent unto the prayer that is made in this place. For now have I chosen and sanctified this place, that My Name may be there for ever, and Mine eyes and Mine heart shall be there perpetually.

Third Responsory.

[2] O Lord, bless this house which I have built unto Thy Name. Whosoever shall come unto this place and pray, then hear Thou from the excellent throne of Thy glory. [Alleluia.]

Verse. O Lord, if Thy people turn and pray toward Thy sanctuary.

Answer. Hear Thou from the excellent throne of Thy glory. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Hear Thou from the excellent throne of Thy glory. [Alleluia.]

SECOND NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time all three Psalms are said under the first Antiphon.

First Antiphon. This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven. [Alleluia.]

Ps. lxxxiii. How lovely are Thy tabernacles, &c., (p. 81.)

Second Antiphon. [3] Jacob beheld a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven, and the angels of God descending on it. And he said: Surely this place is holy.

Ps. lxxxvi. Her foundation, &c., (p. 82.)

Third Antiphon. [3] Jacob set up the stone for a pillar, and poured oil upon the top of it.

Ps. lxxxvii. O LORD God of my salvation, (p. 82.)

Verse. [4] My house—[Alleluia,]

Answer. Shall be called the house of prayer. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (252*nd for the Season.*)

DEARLY beloved brethren, as often as we keep the Dedication-Feast of some Altar or Church, if we think faithfully and carefully, and live holily and righteously, that which is done in temples made with hands, is done in our soul by a spiritual building. He lied not who said: "The temple of God is holy; which temple ye are" (1 Cor. iii. 17,) and again: "Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost, Which is in you," (vi. 19.) And therefore, dearly beloved brethren, since by the grace of God, without any foregoing deserts of our own, we have been made meet to become the Temple of God, let us work as hard as we can, with His help, that our Lord may not find in His Temple, that is, in us, anything to offend the eyes of His Majesty.

Fourth Responsory.

[5] If they pray toward this place, forgive the sin of Thy people, O God, and teach them the good way wherein they should walk, and manifest forth Thy glory in this place.

Verse. [6] Give ear, O Shepherd of Israël, Thou that leadest Joseph like a flock, Thou that sittest upon the Cherubim.

Answer. Forgive the sin of Thy people, O God, and teach them the good way wherein they should walk, and manifest forth Thy glory in this place.

Fifth Lesson.

LET the Tabernacle of our heart be swept clean of vices and filled with virtues. Let it be locked to the devil, and thrown open to Christ. Yea, let us so work, that we may be able to open the door of the kingdom of heaven with the key of good works. For even as evil works are so many bolts and bars to close against us the entrance into life, so beyond doubt are good works the key thereto. And therefore, dearly beloved brethren, let each one look into his own conscience, and when he findeth the wounds of guilt there, let him first strive by prayers, fasting, or almsdeeds to purge his conscience, and so let him dare to take the Eucharist.

Fifth Responsory.

How dreadful is this place! Surely this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven. [Alleluia.]

Verse. This is the house of God, stoutly builded, well founded upon a sure rock.

Answer. Surely this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven. [Alleluia.]

Sixth Lesson.

FOR if he acknowledge his iniquity, and withdraw himself from the Altar of God, he will soon attain unto the mercy of the pardon of God, for, as he that exalted himself shall be abased, so shall he that humbleth himself be exalted. (Luke xiv. 11.) He who, as I have said, acknowledging his iniquity, withdraweth himself through lowliness from the Altar of the Church, till he have mended his life, need have but little fear that he will be excommunicated from the eternal marriage-supper in heaven.

Sixth Responsory.

Jacob rose up early in the morning, and set up the stone for a pillar, and poured oil upon the top of it, and vowed a vow unto the Lord. Surely this place is holy, and I knew it not. [Alleluia.]

Verse. And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and he said:

Answer. Surely this place is holy, and I knew it not. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Surely this place is holy, and I knew it not. [Alleluia.]

THIRD NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time the Psalms are all said under the first Antiphon.

First Antiphon. He that dwelleth in the help of the Most High * shall abide under the shadow of the God of heaven. [Alleluia.]

When "Alleluia" is not said, if the Office be Semi-double the Psalm begins with the words "Shall abide under the shadow;" if Double, with, "He will say to the LORD."

Ps. xc. He that dwelleth, &c., (p. 117.)

Second Antiphon. The Temple of the Lord is holy. * The same is God's workmanship and God's building.

Ps. xcv. O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 85.)

Third Antiphon. [1]Blessed be the glory of the LORD * from His [holy] place. Alleluia.

Omit "Alleluia" between Septuagesima and Easter.

Ps. xcviii. The LORD reigneth, &c., (p. 89.)

Verse. This is the house of God, stoutly builded. [Alleluia.]

Answer. Well founded upon a sure rock. [Alleluia.]

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xix. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS entered and passed through Jericho. And, behold, there was a man named Zacchæus, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. viii. on Luke.)

Zacchæus was little of stature, that is, he was not raised aloft among men by nobility of birth, and, like the most of the world, he possessed few merits. When he heard that the Lord and Saviour, Who had come unto His Own, and Whom His Own had not received, (John i. 11,) was coming, he desired to see Him. But the sight of JESUS is not easy; to any on the earth it is impossible. And since Zacchæus had neither the Prophets, nor yet the Law, as a gracious help to his nature, he climbed up into a sycamore tree, raising his feet above the vanity of the Jews, and straightening the crooked branches of his former life, and therefore he received JESUS to lodge within his house.

Seventh Responsory.

My house shall be called the house of prayer, saith the Lord. [2]Therein, he that asketh, receiveth; he that seeketh, findeth; and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened. [Alleluia.]

Verse. [3]Ask, and ye shall receive; seek, and ye shall find.

Answer. And to him that knocketh, it shall be opened. [Alleluia.]

Eighth Lesson.

HE did well to climb up into a tree, that a good tree might bring forth good fruits, (Matth. vii. 17,) and that the slip of the wild olive, grafted, contrary to nature, into the good olive, might bring forth the fruits of the law. (Rom. xi. 17, 24.) For the root is holy, however unprofitable the branches. Their barren beauty hath now been overshadowed by the belief of the Gentiles in the Resurrection, as by a material upgrowth. Zacchæus, then, was in the sycamore tree, and the blind man by the way-side. (xviii. 35.) For the one, JESUS stood waiting to show mercy, and asked him before He healed him, what he would that He should do for him; being unbidden of the other, He bade Himself to be his Guest, knowing how rich was the reward of receiving Him. Nevertheless, albeit He had heard no words of invitation, yet had He seen how his heart went.

[2] Luke xi. 9, 10.

[3] John xvi. 24; Matth. vii. 7.

Eighth Responsory.

[1] All thy walls are of stones most precious. The towers of Jerusalem shall be built up with jewels. [Alleluia.]

Verse. The gates of Jerusalem shall be built up with the sapphire stone, and the emerald, and all her walls round about with stones most precious.

Answer. The towers of Jerusalem shall be built up with jewels. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. The towers of Jerusalem shall be built up with jewels. [Alleluia.]

Ninth Lesson.

BUT lest we should seem haughtily to pass by the poor blind man, and to hurry on to the rich one, let us stand waiting for him, as the Lord stood and waited; let us ask of him, as Christ asked of him. Let us ask, because we are ignorant; Christ asked, because He knew. Let us ask, that we may know whence he received his cure; Christ asked, that all of us may know from one ensample wherethrough we are to earn a sight of the Lord. Christ asked, that we might believe that none, save they that confess Him, can be saved.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Holiness becometh Thine house, * O Lord, for ever. [Alleluia.]

Second Antiphon. My house * shall be called the house of prayer. [Alleluia.]

Third Antiphon. This is the Lord's house * stoutly builded, well founded upon a sure rock. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Antiphon. The Lord's house is well founded * upon a sure rock. [Alleluia.]

Fifth Antiphon. All thy walls are of stones most precious, * and the towers of Jerusalem shall be built up with jewels. [Alleluia.]

Chapter. (Apoc. xxii. 2.)

I SAW the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a Bride adorned for her husband.

Hymn.[2]

CHRIST is made the sure Foundation,
And the precious Corner-Stone,
Who, the two walls underlying,
Bound in each, binds both in one:
Holy Zion's Help for ever,
And her Confidence Alone.

All that dedicated City,
Dearly loved by God on high,
In exultant jubilation
Pours perpetual melody;
God the One, and God the Trinal,
Singing everlastingly.

To this Temple, where we call Thee,
Come, O Lord of hosts, to-day!
With Thy wonted loving-kindness
Hear Thy people as they pray;
And Thy fullest benediction
Shed within its walls for aye.

Here vouchsafed to all Thy servants
That they supplicate to gain:
Here to have and hold for ever
Those good things their prayers obtain;
And hereafter in Thy glory,
With Thy blessed ones to reign.

Laud and honour to the Father;
Laud and honour to the Son;
Laud and honour to the Spirit;
Ever Three and ever One:
Consubstantial, Co-eternal,
While unending ages run. Amen.

Verse. This is the Lord's house, stoutly builded—[Alleluia.]

Answer. Well founded upon a sure rock. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Zacchæus, make haste and come down, for to-day I must abide at thy house. * And he made haste and came down, and received Him joyfully into his house. This day is salvation come from God to this house. Alleluia.

Between Septuagesima and Easter omit "Alleluia."

Prayer.

O GOD, Who dost every year bring round unto us again the day whereon this Thine holy temple was hallowed, and bringest us again in soundness of body and mind to be present at Thine holy worship, graciously hear the supplications of Thy people, and grant that whosoever shall come into this Thine house to ask good at Thine hand, may be rejoiced in the obtaining of all his request. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

On the actual day on which the Church is dedicated, and also when the Dedication Feasts of two Churches come together, for the other Prayer, is used the following.

O GOD, Who invisibly containest all things, and yet art pleased for the salvation of men to show forth visible signs of Thy power, fill this house with the glory of Thine indwelling power; and grant that all who gather themselves together to pray in this place, may receive the good comfort of Thine help in every tribulation wherein they cry unto Thee. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Verse. Holiness becometh Thine house, O Lord—[Alleluia.]
Answer. For ever. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. How dreadful is this place. * Surely this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven. [Alleluia.]

Second Day within the Octave.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Treatise upon the Psalms, written by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (On Ps. cxxi.)

"JERUSALEM is builded as a city." Brethren, when David said that, Jerusalem was no longer in building, but already builded. He speaketh then of some city which is even now being built, and which I know not, whereunto do run in faith, the living stones, concerning whom Peter saith (I. ii. 5): "Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house," that is, an holy temple unto God. But what meaneth he by the words, "Ye also, as lively stones, are built up"? If thou believest, thou livest; but if thou believest, then art thou become a temple of God; as indeed the Apostle Paul hath it: "The temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." (1 Cor. iii. 17.)

Fifth Lesson.

THE city then is still in building.[1] Stones are being hewn out of the mountains by the hands of them that preach the truth, and are being cut square, that they may be fitted into the everlasting walls. Many stones are still in the hands of the workman, and they must not fall out of his hands if they would be meet stones, and make part of the masonry of the temple. This is that Jerusalem which is builded as a city, and her foundation is Christ. So saith the Apostle Paul: "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." (1 Cor. iii. 11.)

Sixth Lesson.

THERE the foundation is first laid in the earth, then the walls are builded up thereon, and the weight of the walls presseth downward, for the foundation is beneath them. But if our foundation be in heaven, then must we be so builded as to press, not downward, but upward. This great Church which ye behold with your bodily eyes was builded up by bodies, and because bodies builded it up, they laid the foundations thereof beneath. But we who are builded up a spiritual house, have our foundation above us. Thitherward let us run, that we may be built in, for it is of Jerusalem that it is said: "Our feet have been wont to stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem!"

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xix. 1.)

AT that time: Jesus entered and passed through Jericho. And, behold, there was a man named Zacchæus, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. viii. on Luke.)

(xviii. 43.) "And immediately [the blind man] received his sight, and followed Him, glorifying God." He could not have received his sight but by following Christ, by glorifying God, and by turning away from the world. But now let us turn to speak words of kindness to the rich. We are fain, if we can, to heal all men, and we would give no offence to the rich; and they would have ground of righteous offence if we applied to them roughly and untruly that which is said about a camel passing through the eye of a needle, or if we passed them by too quickly, as represented in Zacchæus.

Eighth Lesson.

THE rich should learn that there is nothing wrong in possessing wealth; the wrong is in those who possess wealth without knowing how to use it. Riches are indeed a stumbling-block to the wicked, but to the good they are a means of grace. Zacchæus was rich, and he was one of Christ's chosen ones; but when he gave the half of his goods to the poor, and restored four-fold anything which he had taken from any man by false accusation (for simple restoration is not enough, neither doth one who keepeth possession of ill-gotten gains, really give gifts, in that which he giveth, since it is not his plunder, but gifts out of that which is his own, that are asked for,) [when Zacchæus, I say, did these things,] he received manifold recompense.

Ninth Lesson.

IT is well mentioned that he was the chief among the publicans. Who need give up hope, when he seeth one that had acquired wealth by false accusation attain unto salvation?

"And he was rich." Know that all rich men are not misers.

"He was little of stature." The Scripture saith nothing of any man's stature, save of that of Zacchæus.[2] And wherefore? Perchance his littleness of stature was spiritual, being a mental dwarfing through sin, or a childishness in faith. He had not yet promised to make restitution; he had not yet seen Christ; and he is well called little. Whereas John was called great, (Luke i. 15,) John, who saw Christ, and the Spirit like a dove descending and abiding on Him, as he himself "bare record, saying: I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and It abode on Him." (John i. 32.)

Third Day within the Octave.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (256*th for the Season.*)

THE reason of the present gathering is the dedication of an house of prayer. That house is the house of our prayers, but the house of God is ourselves. If we are the house of God, we are being built in this world, that we may be consecrated at the end of this world. The time of building is the time of work; the time of consecration is the time of holiday-keeping. Thus it was with this building; while it was yet being put together, there was toil; now that the believers in Christ are gathered together in it, there is rejoicing. Believing is, as it were, the hewing of timbers from the forests, and stones from the mountains. Catechising and baptizing are the shaping and squaring and polishing of the stones by the hands of the workmen. And still they make not an house for the Lord, until they be mortared together with charity.

Fifth Lesson.

NONE of these beams and stones could have entered into this building, unless they had been meetly joined together, unless they had been coupled in agreement one with another, and united, as it were, in the embrace of love. When thou seest in any house that the beams and stones are well joined together, thou enterest therein boldly, fearing not that it will fall upon thee. So also, when the Lord Christ was fain to enter [into His spiritual temple, the Church,] and to dwell in us, He said, as it were to build us: "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another." (John xiii. 34.) "A new commandment I give unto you"—ye have hitherto been old; ye made Me no house; ye lay in your ruins. That ye may rise, therefore, from your ruins, love one another.

Sixth Lesson.

THINK then, my kind friends,[1] that according to what hath been foretold and promised, this house is being builded throughout the whole world. When the Jews returned from the captivity, and the house of God was builded up again, it was said in a song extracted from an older psalm: "Sing unto the LORD a new song; sing unto the LORD, all the earth."[2] That which the Psalm calleth a new song, the Lord calleth a new commandment. For wherefore should we sing a new song unless it were to tell of a new love? Since singing is lovers' wont—

"Love upon the singer's tongue
Prompts the measure that is sung."[3]

Let us love, and love unselfishly; for we love the Lord, and better than He there is nothing; let us love Him for His own sake, and ourselves in Him, as for Him.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xix. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS entered, and passed through Jericho. And, behold, there was a man named Zacchæus, which was the chief among the publicans. And he was rich. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. viii. on Luke.)

["He sought to see JESUS . . . and could not, for the press."] What is this press but the brute herd, which cannot perceive the crown of wisdom? Therefore, as long as Zacchæus remained in the herd, he could not see Christ. When he riseth above the herd, then he seeth Him; that is to say, when he had got over the stupidity of the common people, he gained a view of Him Whom he desired. "For the Lord was to pass that way." This is beautifully added—signifying that He was about to pass, either where the sycamore-tree stood, or where Zacchæus was to believe in Him—thereby at once affording a mystic type and conferring a grace. For thus had He come, to pass by way of the Jews unto the Gentiles.

Eighth Lesson.

"AND when JESUS came to the place, He looked up and saw him." For now was Zacchæus climbed up on high amid the blossom of good works, as in the boughs of a fruitful tree. And here, since we have begun to take mystic interpretations, we may remark how delightful a fruit to a believer's taste is the cheerful rest of the Lord's Day. See also, how that Zacchæus in the sycamore was like a young fig of the new season, in whom, as in other things, was fulfilled that which is written: "The fig-tree putteth forth her green figs." (Cant. ii. 13.)

---

[1] Charitas vestra.

[2] Ps. xcv. In the LXX. this Psalm is intituled "An Ode of David, when the house was built up after the captivity." It is really by David, as appears from 1 Par. (Chron.) xvi., and was composed by him as part of a Psalm for the occasion of the Ark's arrival at Jerusalem, whence it seems (according to the LXX.) to have been extracted, and used as suitable to the occasion to which they refer it.

[3] Vox hujus cantoris
Fervor est sancti amoris.

Ninth Lesson.

CHRIST came for this, that trees might bring forth, not fruit, but men. We have read elsewhere: "When thou wast under the fig-tree, I saw thee." (John i. 48.) Nathaniel was under the tree, that is, above the root; for the root is holy, and he was a righteous man. Nevertheless, Nathaniel was still underneath the tree, for he was under the law; but, Zacchæus had gone up the tree, for he was above the law; Nathaniel was Christ's privy defender, but Zacchæus was His open preacher. Nathaniel was still seeking Christ out of the law, but Zacchæus had gone above the law, by giving up his goods in order to follow the Lord.

Fourth Day within the Octave.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (256*th on the Season.*)

CONSIDER that passage in the "Song of rejoicing at the opening of the house of David,"[1] which we have just sung amid the wrecks of the masons' sheds: "Thou hast put off my sackcloth." That referreth to the wrecks; but what to the new building? "And girded me with gladness." Here is the utterance for the opening of the house: "To the end that my glory may sing praise to Thee." And who is the speaker? Tell it from his own words. Were I to explain it, I should only make it darker, therefore I will but repeat his own words, and at the sound of his speech ye shall know him forthwith, that ye may love him for his address. Who is he that can say: "O LORD, Thou hast brought up My soul from the grave"?

Fifth Lesson.

WHO is He Whose soul hath already been brought up from the grave, but He in Whose mouth are put elsewhere the words, "Thou wilt not leave My soul in hell"? This Psalm is intituled "a Song of rejoicing at the opening of the house of David," and the first thing spoken of therein is deliverance, as it is said: "I will extol Thee, O LORD, for Thou hast lifted me up, and hast not made my foes to rejoice over me." Consider that by these foes are meant the Jews, who thought that they had slain Christ, overcome in Him their enemy, and destroyed Him as they might a man mortal like other men.

Sixth Lesson.

BUT He rose again the third day, and His utterance is: "I will extol Thee, O LORD, for Thou hast lifted Me up"—in connection with which, consider the saying of the Apostle: "God hath highly exalted Him." (Phil. ii. 9.) "And hast not made My foes to rejoice over Me." They rejoiced indeed over the death of Christ, but at His Resurrection, Ascension, and preaching, some of them were cut to the heart. When He was preached, the faithful testimony of His Apostles cut some of them to the heart, and some were converted, and some were hardened, and some were confounded, but none rejoiced.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

AT that time: JESUS entered and passed through Jericho. And behold, there was a man named Zacchæus, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great,] (Bk. xxviii. of Moral [Reflections on Job], ch. 27.)

If we would be truly wise, and behold wisdom herself, we must humbly acknowledge ourselves to be fools. Let us cast away harmful wisdom, and learn praiseworthy folly. For this reason indeed is it written: "God hath chosen the foolish things of the world, to confound the wise." (1 Cor. i. 27.) And again it is said: "If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise." (iii. 18.) And unto this doth the very Gospel bear witness, wherein it is said that Zacchæus "sought to see JESUS, Who He was; and could not for the press, because he was little of stature. And he ran before, and climbed up into a sycamore tree to see Him; for He was to pass that way." For this name Sycamore, being interpreted, signifieth the "Foolish Fig."[2]

Eighth Lesson.

LITTLE Zacchæus therefore accepted the humiliation of having recourse to the sycamore—and saw the Lord. They who humbly choose to be fools in the estimation of the world, have a deep insight into the wisdom of God. The press standeth in our way, on account of our little stature, when we are fain to see the Lord; for the toilsome din of worldly business tormenteth our weak minds, so as to hinder our perceiving the light of the truth. But we climb up wisely into the sycamore tree, if we willingly give up our minds to that folly which God giveth unto us. What can be more utter folly (in this world) than not to seek for that we have lost, to leave that whereof we have been robbed in the hands of our despoilers, to take no revenge for wrongs which have been done us, yea, even to offer to him that taketh away our cloak, our coat also, and be patient?

---

[1] Ps. xxix. from which all the texts quoted are taken, except those marked otherwise.

[2] Sukamoros—which St Gregory seems to have derived from sukos, a fig, and môros, (pr. mwros,) a fool, but the derivation now generally accepted is sukos, a fig, and moros, a mulberry, as a plant combining certain characteristic features of both trees.

Ninth Lesson.

THE Lord biddeth us, as it were, to climb up into the sycamore, where He saith: "Of him that taketh away thy goods, ask them not again." (Luke vi. 30.) And again: "Whosover shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also." (Matth. v. 39.) From the boughs of this sycamore tree, the Lord is seen passing by. He may indeed, as yet, not be seen face to Face, but by this wise folly the inward eye may see the Wisdom of God, as it were, passing by, even that Wisdom Which they that are wise in their own conceit cannot see. They are mixed up in the overbearing press of their own imaginations, and have not yet found the sycamore tree whereinto to climb up, if they would see the Lord.

Fifth Day within the Octave.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (256*th for the Season.*)

"THOU hast not made my foes to rejoice over me." (Ps. xxix. 2.) Now-a-days, when Churches are filled with believers, do we imagine that this maketh the Jews to rejoice? Churches are built, consecrated, and filled; wherefore should they rejoice? Not only do they not rejoice, but they are put to confusion; and the words are fulfilled which are written: "I will extol Thee, O LORD, for Thou hast lifted me up, and hast not made my foes to rejoice over me"—Thou hast not made them to rejoice over Me, for even if they turn and believe in Me, Thou wilt make them to rejoice, not over Me, but in Me. Lest we should make overlong our exposition of our song, let us take another point. How saith Christ: "Thou hast put off My sackcloth, and girded Me with gladness"? His sackcloth was the likeness of sinful flesh.

Fifth Lesson.

THINK not lightly thereof, because He calleth it His sackcloth; the price of thy redemption was wrapped up in it. "Thou hast put off My sackcloth." Let us turn aside to look more closely at this sackcloth—"Thou hast put off My sackcloth." The sackcloth was put off when He suffered. How saith He, therefore, unto God the Father, "Thou hast put off My sackcloth"? Wilt thou hear how it is that He saith unto the Father, "Thou hast put off My sackcloth"? It is because God "spared not His Own Son, but delivered Him up for us all." (Rom. viii. 32.) By means of the Jews, who knew not what they did, He did that whereby they that knew should be redeemed, and they that gainsaid should be put to confusion. They know not what good their evil deed hath done for us. The sackcloth was hung up, amid the rejoicings of the ungodly — the persecutor rent it with his spear, and the Redeemer caused our price to spring forth.

Sixth Lesson.

LET Christ the Redeemer sing, let Judas that sold Him groan, and the Jews that bought Him blush. Judas sold Him, and the Jews bought Him, and both buyer and seller in the wicked bargain are condemned, both alike have cast themselves away. Let our Head therefore speak concerning His slain Body, His hallowed Body—let Him speak, and let us listen. "'Thou,'" saith He "'hast put off My sackcloth, and girded Me with gladness'—Thou hast put off My mortality, and hast girded Me with immortality and incorruption—'to the end that My glory may sing praise unto Thee, and not be silent.'" What meaneth this, "and not be silent"? "No more shall the lance pierce Me, and I hang silent under the blow." For "Christ being raised from the dead, dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over Him." (Rom. vi. 9.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xix. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS entered and passed through Jericho. And, behold, there was a man named Zacchæus, which was the chief among the publicans. And he was rich. And so on.

Homily by the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow, and Doctor of the Church.] (Bk. v. ch. 77 on Luke xix.)

"The things which are impossible with men, are possible with God." (xviii. 27.) For behold the camel, when he hath laid aside his load, passeth through the eye of a needle, that is to say, the rich man and the publican, when he putteth off from him the burden of his riches, and despiseth to be wealthy by unjust means, entereth into the strait gate and narrow way which leadeth unto life. He that with earnest faith desired to see the Saviour, helped the defect of his natural stature by climbing up into a tree, and thereby he earned what he longed for, but dared not to ask, even the blessedness of having the Lord to abide as a guest at his house.

Eighth Lesson.

ZACCHÆUS, whose name, being interpreted, signifieth "Justified," is a type of such from among the Gentiles as believe. The more they be harassed by the cares of this world, the more they be weighed down by the sense of sin, the humbler is their prayer. "But," [saith the Apostle Paul unto such,] "ye are washed, — but, ye are sanctified,—but, ye are justified, in the Name of the Lord JESUS, and by the Spirit of our God." (1 Cor. vi. 11.) Such desired to see the Saviour as He entered into Jericho, but could not for the press, for, albeit wishful for that grace of faith which the Saviour brought into the world, the long-used habit of sin stood in the way of the desire.

Ninth Lesson.

THE press of evil habits which rebuked the blind man, that he should hold his peace, and not cry for light, the same press hindered the publican from seeing JESUS. But even as the blind man overcame them by crying so much the more, so must he that is little of stature needs get above the obstruction of the harmful crowd, by seeking an higher place, ascending from the earth, and betaking him up into the tree, that is, the Cross. And the Cross is a Sycamore, (a tree with leaves somewhat like to those of a mulberry, but higher, whence also it is called by the Latins "Celsa," that is, the High tree,) for the name "Sycamore" signifieth, being interpreted, the "Foolish Fig," and thus is the Cross, which feedeth as with figs them that believe, but is mocked at as foolishness by them that believe not.

Sixth Day within the Octave.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (256*th for the Season.*)

THEREFORE, while I joyfully gaze upon the new walls of this holy Church, which we this day hallow unto the name of God, I find that I owe high praise to our God, and to you, my holy brethren, a suitable discourse upon the building of the house of God. But my discourse will only be suitable if it contain for your spiritual up-building,[1] that which, God inwardly building, may avail toward your souls' health. That building which we behold with our bodily eyes, wrought in these walls, must be reflected spiritually in our minds, and that finish which we see in stone and wood, it must be the work of God's grace to finish within our own bodies.

Fifth Lesson.

IN the first place, therefore, let us give thanks unto our Lord God, from Whom cometh down every good gift and every perfect gift. (James i. 17.) Let us with all the cheerfulness of our hearts praise Him for having put it into the thoughts of His faithful ones to raise unto Him this house of prayer, stirred up their love and given them help, breathed the will into them when they as yet had it not, and then enabled them to carry out their will. "For it is God Which worketh in you both to will and to do of His good pleasure." (Phil. ii. 13.) And thus it is He Himself Who hath begun, and hath finished.

Sixth Lesson.

AND forasmuch as He never suffereth good works to lie unrewarded in His sight, He will give a reward meet for so great a work to those His faithful ones, unto whose labours He hath already given His helpful blessing. And yet have we more thanks to give unto our Lord God. For this Church, which He hath caused to be builded unto His Name, He hath made more honourable with the reliques of His holy Martyrs.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xix. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS entered and passed through Jericho. And, behold, there was a man named Zacchæus, which was the chief among the publicans. And he was rich. And so on.

Homily by the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow, and Doctor of the Church.] (Bk. v. ch. 77, on Luke xix.)

"And when JESUS came to the place, He looked up, and saw him." The Saviour, passing through Jericho, came to the place whither Zacchæus had already run before, and climbed up into a sycamore-tree. Thus did He send throughout the world the preachers of His Word, in whom Himself did indeed speak and go, and so came unto those who were already high uplifted by believing in His sufferings, and fain to be blessed with the full revelation of His Godhead. "He looked up, and saw him"—for the eyes of His choice were toward one whom the grace of faith had raised above earthly desires, and who stood aloft above the unbelieving multitudes. "To look on" signifieth with God to choose or to love; whence it is said: "The eyes of the LORD are upon the righteous." (Ps. xxxiii. 16.) Even we also hasten to look at things which we love, while we turn our eyes away from what is loathsome to us.

---

[1] This sentence contains an untranslateable play upon the word "edification."

Eighth Lesson.

JESUS therefore looked on one that was fain to look on Him, chose one that chose Him, and loved one that loved Him. This progress, namely, to go on, by believing in the Lord's Incarnation, to an acknowledgment of His Godhead, is, as it were, to climb up into a sycamore-tree to catch a sight of JESUS' Face; this progress, I say, the excellent Teacher [Paul] pointeth at, when he saith: "I determined not to know anything among you, save JESUS Christ, and Him Crucified." (1 Cor. ii. 2.) And again in rebuking certain he saith: "Ye are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat," (Heb. v. 12)—herein signifying by milk the weakness of the dispensation in time, and by strong meat, the sublimity of the everlasting glory.

Ninth Lesson.

"AND [JESUS] said unto him: Zacchæus, make haste and come down, for to-day I must abide at thine house. And he made haste, and came down, and received Him joyfully." The Lord abode awhile in the house of the chief of the Pharisees—that is to say, He taught in the synagogue of the Jews; but since they spake against Him with envenomed tongues, because He washed not His hands before He sat down to eat, because He healed on the Sabbath Day, because He received publicans and sinners, because He rebuked their greed, and did other things worthy of God, He was wearied by their wickedness, and turned away and left them, saying: "Behold, your house is left unto you desolate." (Matth. xxiii. 38.) But to-day He must abide in the house of little Zacchæus—that is to say, He must rest, while the beams of the new light are bright, in the lowly hearts of the believing nations.

Seventh Day within the Octave.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (Hom. 33 on Matth. ix.)

THE Church is the common house of all. Hereinto ye first do enter, and then we, keeping the form of the disciples; and therefore, so soon as we be come in, that we may follow the rule given to them, (Luke x. 5,) we greet you all with the salutation of "Peace." Let no one then be drowsy, let no one keep his mind occupied with worldly business, when the Priests are come in for the sermon. The punishment for doing so is no light one. I had a thousand times rather be left alone in one of your own houses, when I come to visit you, than that ye should not listen unto me when I am preaching here. This would vex me more than that, for this is more your house than that.

Fifth Lesson.

FOR this is the house wherein our greatest treasures and our hopes are laid up. What is there here that is not great and wonderful? The Table here is the most precious and glorious of tables. The lamp here is the most precious and glorious of lamps, as they know who have in faith been anointed with oil therefrom, and been healed of sickness.[1] The Ambry[2] here is far the best and the most needful, for therein is laid up, not raiment, but mercy—albeit they be few that take It. The bed here is the noblest of beds, for what can be better than that pillow whereon resteth the written Word of God?[3]

Sixth Lesson.

AND in good sooth, if we were all at one, we should have none other house than this. And that I utter not herein an hard saying, witness those three thousand and five thousand who had but one house and one table and one mind. "The multitude of them that believed," saith [the author of the Acts of the Apostles] "were of one heart and of one soul" (iv. 32.) But since we are far from such perfection as theirs, and are parted in divers houses, let us strive to be like them, at least when we come together here. For albeit in other things we are poor and needy, do ye at the least welcome us kindly when we come in hither among you; and when I say, "Peace be unto you," do ye answer, not with your voices only but with your hearts, "And with thy spirit."

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xix. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS entered and passed through Jericho. And, behold, there was a man named Zacchæus, which was the chief among the publicans. And he was rich. And so on.

Homily by the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow, and Doctor of the Church.] (Continuation of the last.)

"And when they saw it, they all murmured, saying, That He was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner." It is clear that the Jews have always hated that the Gentiles should be saved. It is written: "And the next Sabbath-Day came almost the whole city together, to hear the word of God. But when the Jews saw the multitudes, they were filled with envy, and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul." (Acts xiii. 44.) And elsewhere it is told how that even the faithful brethren contended with the Prince of the Apostles, "saying, Thou wentest in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them." (xi. 3.)

Eighth Lesson.

"AND Zacchæus stood, and said unto the Lord: Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken anything from any man by false accusation I restore him four-fold." While others were blaming the sinner, Zacchæus himself stood, that is, continued in that truth of faith wherein he had begun, and showed himself to be not only a sinner converted, but even to have taken a place among the perfect. "If," saith the Lord, "thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven." (Matth. xix. 21.) If a man before his conversion have lived blamelessly, after his conversion he can give to the poor all that he hath—

Ninth Lesson.

BUT if he have had any unjust dealings, he is bound first of all, according to law, to make restitution, and not till afterwards must he give to the poor that which remaineth unto him. And thus will it become true of him also, when he keepeth nothing for himself, but hath dispersed and hath given to the poor, that "his righteousness endureth for ever." (Ps. cxi. 9.) And this is that wise folly, which the publican gathered from his sycamore-tree, like life-giving fruit, namely, to make restitution of that which he had robbed, to give away that which was his own, to hold cheap the things which are seen, to be fain even to die for the things which are not seen, to deny himself, and to will to follow in the steps of that Lord upon Whom thitherto he had not looked.

Octave-Day of the Dedication.

Double.

All as on the Feast, except the following.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Epistle of Pope St Felix IV.[1] (On Consecration, dist. i. ch. 2.)

WE read that Moses, by the command of the Lord, made and hallowed a tabernacle, with the table and altar, and other vessels and furniture thereof, for the worship of God; and we know that he hallowed the same, not only by prayers to God, but by anointing them, at the command of the Lord, with holy oil. How these things were done, and how none others but Priests anointed with holy ointment, and arrayed before the Lord in holy garments, and Levites, handled, carried, set up, and put in order these holy things, all this is to be found written in the Law of the Lord, among the ordinances which Moses wrote down at the command of the Lord.

Fifth Lesson.

IN the Books of Kings we read how David, the most godly of princes, made more splendid the worship of God, and was fain to build a temple unto the Lord, but was withheld, because of the quantity of blood which he had shed, and only gathered together treasures for that end; and how Solomon his son, at the command and with the help of God, did that which his father had desired to do, and hallowed the temple and the altar and the other things pertaining to the worship of God. "And at that time Solomon held a Feast, and all Israël with him, a great congregation, from the entering in of Hamath unto the River of Egypt, before the LORD our God seven days and seven days, even fourteen days, and on the eighth day he sent the people away." (3 Kings viii. 65, 66.)

Sixth Lesson. (Ch. 17.)

THE Feast of the Dedication of Churches and Priests is to be kept year by year, as the Lord Himself hath given us an ensample, that we should follow His steps, by coming with the rest of the people to keep the Feast of the Dedication of the Temple; as it is written: "It was at Jerusalem the Feast of the Dedication, and it was winter. And JESUS walked in the temple in Solomon's Porch." (John x. 22, 23.) That these Dedication-Feasts are to be kept for eight days, ye will find in the Third Book of Kings, after the account of the Dedication of the Temple.

In the Third Nocturn are read the Lessons from the first day omitted within the Octave.

The Proper Office of the Saints.

NOVEMBER 30.

Feast of St Andrew, Apostle.

Double of the Second Class.

All from the Common Office for Apostles, (p. 583,) except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter and Prayer from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [1] One of the two which followed the Lord was Andrew, * Simon Peter's brother. Alleluia.

A Commemoration is made of St Willibrord, then of the Week-day if in Advent.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [2] The Lord saw Peter and Andrew, * and He called them.

Second Antiphon. Follow Me, and I will make you fishers of men, * saith the Lord.

Third Antiphon. And they left their nets, * and followed the Lord their Saviour.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Paul to the Romans (x. 4.)

CHRIST is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth. For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, that the man which doeth these things shall live thereby.[3] But the righteousness which is of faith speaketh on this wise: [4] Say not in thine heart, Who shall ascend into heaven? that is, to bring Christ down from above: or, Who shall descend into the deep? that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead. But what saith the Scripture? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith which we preach: that if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord JESUS, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.

First Responsory.

[5] The Lord, walking by the Sea of Galilee, saw Peter and Andrew casting their nets into the sea, and He called them saying: Follow Me, and I will make you fishers of men.

Verse. For they were fishers, and He saith unto them—

Answer. Follow Me, and I will make you fishers of men.

Second Lesson.

FOR with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. For the Scripture saith: [6] Whosoever believeth on Him shall not be ashamed. For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek; for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon Him. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. [7] How then shall they call on Him in Whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in Him of Whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent? As it is written: [8] How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the Gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!

Second Responsory.

As soon as the blessed Andrew heard the voice of the Lord calling him, he left his nets, by the exercise and use whereof he lived, and followed Him Who giveth life everlasting.

Verse. This is that disciple who for the love of Christ hung upon the cross, and suffered for the law of his God.

Answer. And followed Him Who giveth life everlasting.

Third Lesson.

BUT they have not all obeyed the Gospel. For Isaias saith: [9] Lord, who hath believed our report? So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of Christ. But I say: Have they not heard? Yes verily, their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world.[10] But I say: Did not Israël know? First Moses saith: [11] I will provoke you to jealousy by them that are no people: and by a foolish nation I will anger you. But Isaias is very bold, and saith: [12] I was found of them that sought Me not: I was made manifest unto them that asked not after Me. But to Israël He saith: All day long I have stretched forth My hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people.

Third Responsory.

Andrew the good teacher, the friend of God, was led to the cross, and when he saw it afar off, he said: God bless thee, O cross,—be welcome to the follower of Him That hung on thee, even my Master Christ.

Verse. God bless thee, O cross,—thou art hallowed by the Body of Christ; His Members make thee goodly as with pearls.

Answer. Be welcome to the follower of Him That hung on thee, even my Master Christ.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Be welcome to the follower of Him That hung on thee, even my Master Christ.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Whom the Lord called to be His Apostle, * when he was by the sea, him also He counted worthy to be His martyr. Alleluia.

Second Antiphon. Andrew was to the Lord as a sweet savour, * which He loved exceedingly.

Third Antiphon. The blessed Andrew hung alive upon the cross for two days * for Christ's Name's sake, and, all the while, he taught the people.

Fourth Lesson.

THE Apostle Andrew was born at Bethsaida, a town of Galilee, and was the brother of Peter. He was a disciple of John the Baptist, and heard him say of Christ, "Behold the Lamb of God," (John i. 35-37, 40,) whereupon he immediately followed JESUS, bringing his brother also with him. Some while after, they were both fishing in the Sea of Galilee, and the Lord Christ, going by, called them both, before any other of the Apostles, in the words, "Follow Me, and I will make you fishers of men." They made no delay, but left their nets, and followed Him. (Matth. iv. 18-20.) After the death and Resurrection of Christ, Andrew was allotted Scythia as the province of his preaching, and, after labouring there, he went through Epirus and Thrace, where he turned vast multitudes to Christ by his teaching and miracles. Finally he went to Patras in Achaia, and there also he brought many to the knowledge of Gospel truth. Ægeas the Pro-consul resisted the preaching of the Gospel, and the Apostle freely rebuked him, bidding him know that while he held himself a judge of his fellow men, he was himself hindered by devils from knowing Christ our God, the Judge of all.

Fourth Responsory.

The man of God was led to be crucified, and the people cried with a loud voice, saying: The innocent blood of this just person is condemned without a cause.

Verse. And when they led him out to crucify him, all the people ran together and cried, saying:

Answer. The innocent blood of this just person is condemned without a cause.

Fifth Lesson.

THEN Ægeas, being angry, answered him, "Boast no more of this thy Christ. He spake words even such as thine, but they availed Him not, and He was crucified by the Jews." Whereto Andrew boldly answered that Christ had given Himself up to die for man's salvation; but the Pro-consul blasphemously interrupted him, and bade him look to himself, and sacrifice to the gods. Then said Andrew, "We have an altar, whereon day by day I offer up to God, the Almighty, the One, and the True, not the flesh of bulls nor the blood of goats, but a Lamb without spot: and when all they that believe have eaten of the Flesh Thereof, the Lamb That was slain abideth whole and liveth." Then Ægeas being filled with wrath, bound the Apostle in prison. Now, the people would have delivered him, but he himself calmed the multitude, and earnestly besought them not to take away from him the crown of martyrdom, for which he longed and which was now drawing near.

Fifth Responsory.

O precious cross, which the Members of my Lord have made so fair and goodly, welcome me from among men, and join me again to my Master, that, as by thee He redeemed me, so by thee also He may take me unto Himself.

Verse. The blessed Andrew stretched forth his hands to heaven and prayed, saying: Precious cross, be my salvation,—

Answer. That, as by thee He redeemed me, so by thee also He may take me unto Himself.

Sixth Lesson.

SOME short while after, he was brought before the judgment-seat, where he extolled the mystery of the cross, and rebuked Ægeas for his ungodliness. Then Ægeas could bear with him no longer, but commanded him to be crucified, in imitation of Christ. Andrew, then, was led to the place of martyrdom, and, as soon as he came in sight of the cross, he cried out, "O precious cross, which the Members of my Lord have made so goodly, how long have I desired thee! how warmly have I loved thee! how constantly have I sought thee! And, now that thou art come to me, how is my soul drawn to thee! Welcome me from among men, and join me again to my Master, that as by thee He redeemed me, so by thee also He may take me unto Himself." So he was fastened to the cross, whereon he hung living for two days, during which time he ceased not to preach the faith of Christ, and, finally, passed into the Presence of Him the likeness of Whose death he had loved so well. All the above particulars of his last sufferings were written by the Priests and Deacons of Achaia, who bear witness to them of their own knowledge. Under the Emperor Constantine the bones of the Apostle were first taken to Constantinople, whence they were afterwards [1] brought to Amalfi. In the Pontificate of Pope Pius II. his head was carried to Rome, where it is kept in the Basilica of St Peter.

Sixth Responsory.

[2] All day long I have stretched forth my hands upon the cross unto a disobedient and gainsaying people, which walketh in a way that is not good, but after their own sins.

Verse. [1] The LORD God to Whom vengeance belongeth, the God to Whom vengeance belongeth, hath shown Himself: lift up Thyself, Thou Judge of the earth, render a reward to the proud.

Answer. Which walketh in a way that is not good, but after their own sins.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Which walketh in a way that is not good, but after their own sins.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Suffer not Thy servant, O Lord, to be parted from Thee: * the hour is come to lay my body in the earth, and for Thee to bid me come unto Thyself.

Second Antiphon. But Andrew besought the people * not to hinder his passion.

Third Antiphon. Welcome me from among men and join me again to my Master; * that, as by thee He redeemed me, so by thee also He may take me unto Himself.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (iv. 18.)

AT that time: JESUS, walking by the Sea of Galilee, saw two brethren, Simon called Peter, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (5*th on the Gospels.*)

Dearly beloved brethren, ye hear how that Peter and Andrew, having once heard the Lord call them, left their nets, and followed their Saviour. As yet they had seen none of His miracles, as yet they had received no promise of their exceeding and eternal reward; nevertheless, at one word of the Lord they forgot all those things which they seemed to have. We have seen many of His miracles; we have received many of His gracious chastenings; many times hath He warned us of the wrath to come—and yet Christ calleth and we do not follow.

Seventh Responsory.

The holy Andrew lifted up his eyes to heaven, and prayed, and cried with a loud voice, and said: Thou art my God, Whom I have seen; suffer not the unjust judge to take me down from the cross; for now I know what the power of Thy holy Cross is.

Verse. Thou art Christ my Master, Whom I have loved, Whom I have known, Whom I have confessed: in this thing hear me.

Answer. For now I know what the power of Thy holy Cross is.

Eighth Lesson.

HE who calleth us to be converted is now enthroned in heaven; He hath broken [2] the necks of the Gentiles to the yoke of the faith, He hath laid low the glory of the world, and the wrecks thereof, falling ever more and more to decay, do preach unto us that the coming of that day when He is to be revealed as our Judge is drawing nigh: and yet, so stubborn is our mind, that we will not yet freely abandon that which, will we, nill we, we lose day by day. Dearly beloved brethren, what shall we answer at His Judgment-seat, we whom no lessons can persuade, and no stripes can break of the love of this present world?

Eighth Responsory.

When Andrew saw the cross he cried, saying: How wonderful art thou, O cross! O cross, how loveable art thou! O cross, thy bright beams enlighten the darkness of the whole world! Welcome a follower of JESUS, that, as by thee He died to redeem me, so by thee also He may take me unto Himself.

Verse. O precious cross, which the Members of my Lord have made so fair and goodly,—

Answer. Welcome a follower of JESUS, that, as by thee He died to redeem me, so by thee also He may take me unto Himself.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Welcome a follower of JESUS, that, as by thee He died to redeem me, so by thee also He may take me unto Himself.

Ninth Lesson.

SOME one perchance will ask in his heart, what Peter or Andrew had to lose by obeying the call of the Lord? Dearly beloved brethren, we must consider here rather the intention than the loss incurred by this obedience. He that keepeth nothing for himself, giveth up much; he that sacrificeth his all, sacrificeth what is to him a great deal. Beyond doubt, we cling to whatever we have, and what we have least, that we desire most. Peter and Andrew therefore gave up much when they gave up even the desire of possessing anything.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. God bless thee, precious cross, * be welcome to the follower of Him That hung on thee, even my Master Christ.

Second Antiphon. The blessed Andrew prayed and said: * O Lord, King of everlasting glory, receive me hanging on this gallows.

Third Antiphon. Andrew was the servant of Christ, * a worthy Apostle of God, the brother of Peter, and likened to Christ and to Peter in his death.

Fourth Antiphon. Christ's dear handmaid Maximilla took the body * of the Apostle and buried it with spices in an honourable place.

Fifth Antiphon. O Lord, Thou hast caused them that persecuted the just to be swallowed up in hell, * but to the just Thou hast Thyself shown the way on the tree of the cross.

Chapter. (Rom. x. 10.)

BRETHREN, with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. For the Scripture saith: Whosoever believeth on Him, shall not be ashamed.

[1] Ps. xciii. 1.

[2] Or "bent"—subdidit.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Spare unto us this just man, release unto us this holy one: * slay not the friend of God, who is just, courteous, and godly.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O LORD, we humbly beseech Thy Majesty, that even as Thou didst give Thy blessed Apostle Andrew to Thy Church to be a teacher and a ruler on earth, so, now that he is with Thee, he may continually make intercession for us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Antiphon. God bless thee, &c., (First Antiphon at Lauds.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy confessor Felix de Valois, of whom mention is made upon the 4th day of November.

Upon the same first day of December, were born into the better life—

The Prophet Nahum, who sleepeth in Begabar.

At Rome, [about the year 283,] the holy martyrs the Priest Diodorus, and the Deacon Marianus with many others, who gained the glory of martyrdom by command of the Emperor Numerian.

There likewise the holy martyrs Lucius, Rogatus, Cassian, and Candida.

On the same day, the holy martyr Ansanus, who confessed Christ at Rome, under the Emperor Diocletian, and was cast into prison; then was brought to Sienna in Tuscany, where he was beheaded, and so finished the course of his testimony [about the year 304.]

At Ameria, in Umbria, under the same Diocletian, the holy martyr Olympias; he was a man of consular rank, who had been converted by blessed Firmina, and died upon the rack [about the year 284.]

At Arbela, in Persia, the holy martyr Ananias.

At Narni, the holy martyr Proculus, Bishop [of that see,] who, after many good works, was beheaded by order of Totila, King of the Goths.

At the city of Casala, the holy martyr Evasius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Milan, holy Castritian, Bishop [of that see,] who gained great praise for his worthy acts and his godly and pious conduct of affairs during the most troublous times of the Church.

At Brescia, holy Ursicinus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Noyon, [in, probably, the year 659,] holy Eloy, Bishop [of that see,] whose marvellous life is commended by the number of signs wrought through him.

At Verdun, [in the year 591,] holy Ageric, Bishop [of that see.]

On the same day, holy Natalia, the wife of the blessed martyr Hadrian; she ministered for a long time to the holy martyrs who were kept in prison at Nicomedia under the Emperor Diocletian, and after their battle was over went to Constantinople, where she fell asleep in peace.

DECEMBER 1.

St Felix de Valois, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who by a sign from heaven didst call Thy blessed Confessor Felix out of the desert to become a redeemer of bondsmen, grant, we beseech Thee, unto his prayers, that Thy grace may deliver us from the bondage of sin, and bring us home unto our very fatherland, which is in heaven. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

HEW de Valois, who afterwards took the name of Felix, was born [in the year 1127] of the same family of the de Valois which in after times became Kingly. From his earliest childhood he gave tokens, especially by his pity toward the poor, of the holiness of his coming life. When he was still a little lad he distributed money to the poor with his own hand, with the seriousness of an old man. When he was a little bigger he used to send them dishes from the table, and took especial delight in treating poor children with the most toothsome of the sweetmeats. As a boy he took clothes off his own back more than once, to cover the naked. He begged and obtained from his uncle Theobald, Earl of Champagne and Blois, the life of a felon condemned to death, foretelling to him that this blackguard cut-throat would yet become a man of most holy life—which did indeed come to pass as he had said.

Fifth Lesson.

AFTER a praiseworthy boyhood, he began to think of withdrawing from the world in order to be alone with heavenly thoughts. But he first wished to take orders, to the end that he might clear himself of all expectation of succeeding to the crown, to which, in consequence of the Salic Law, he was somewhat near. He became a Priest, and said his first Mass with deep devotion. Then, in a little while, he withdrew himself into the wilderness, where he lived in extreme abstinence, fed by heavenly grace. Thither, by the inspiration of God, came the holy Doctor John de la Mata of Paris, and found him, and they led an holy life together for several years, until they were both warned of an Angel to go to Rome and seek a special Rule of life from the Pope. Pope Innocent III. while he was solemnly celebrating the Liturgy [on the 28th day of January, 1198,] received in a vision the revelation of the Order and Institute for the redemption of bondsmen, and he forthwith clad Felix and John in white garments marked with a cross of red and blue, made after the likeness of the raiment wherein the Angel had appeared. This Pope also willed that the new Order should bear, as well as the habit of three colours, the name of the Most Holy Trinity.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN they had received the confirmation of their rule from Pope Innocent, John and Felix enlarged the first house of their Order, which they had built a little while before at Cerfroi, in the diœcese of Meaux, in France. There Felix wonderfully devoted himself to the promotion of Regular Observance and of the Institute for the redemption of bondsmen, and thence he busily spread the same by sending forth his disciples into other provinces. Here it was that he received an extraordinary favour from the blessed Maiden-Mother. On the night of the Nativity of the Mother of God, the brethren lay all asleep, and by the Providence of God woke not to say Mattins. But Felix was watching, as his custom was, and came betimes into the Choir. There he found the Blessed Virgin in the midst of the Choir, clad in raiment marked with the Cross of his Order, the Cross of red and blue; and with her a company of the heavenly host in like garments. And Felix was mingled among them. And the Mother of God began to sing, and they all sang with her and praised God; and Felix sang with them; and so they finished the Office. So now that he seemed to have been already called away from glorifying God on earth, to glorify Him in heaven, an Angel told Felix that the hour of his death was at hand. When therefore he had exhorted his children to be tender to the poor and to slaves, he gave up his soul to God [upon the 4th day of November] in the year of Christ 1212, in the time of the same Pope Innocent III., being four-score-and-five years old, and full of good works.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 2nd day of December, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [about the year 363,] the holy virgin and martyr Bibiana, who under the profane Emperor Julian was for Christ's sake flogged to death with scourges loaded with lead.

There likewise, the holy martyrs the Priest Eusebius, the Deacon Marcellus, Hippolytus, Maximus, Adria, Paulina, Neo, Mary, Martana, and Aurelia, who suffered martyrdom under the judge Secundian, in the persecution under the Emperor Valerian [in the year 256.]

Likewise at Rome, [at the end of the 2nd century,] the holy martyr Pontian and four others.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Severus, Securus, Januarius, and Victorinus, who were there crowned with martyrdom [about the year of Christ 300.]

At Aquileia, [about the year 409,] the holy Confessor Chromatius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Imola, [in the year 450,] holy Peter, Bishop of Ravenna, styled Chrysologus, [or him of the golden words,] famous for his teaching and holiness, whose feast we keep upon the 4th day of this present month.

At Verona, [in the sixth century,] the holy confessor Lupus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Edessa, [about the year 468,] holy Nonnus, Bishop [first of that see, and afterwards of Heliopolis in Syria,] through whose prayers Pelagia the penitent was converted to Christ.

At Troas, in Phrygia, holy Bishop Silvanus, famous for miracles.

At Brescia, holy Bishop Evasius.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following.

Prayer from her office.

If in Advent, of the Week-day.

DECEMBER 2.

The Holy Virgin and Martyr Bibiana.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for one Virgin and Martyr, (p. 641,) except what is otherwise given here.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, the Giver of all good gifts, Who unto the lily of pure maidenhood in the hand of Thy servant Bibiana, didst join the palm of a glorious martyrdom, grant us, we beseech Thee, at her pleading, that our hearts and minds being joined to Thee by Thy love, we may escape all dangers which do presently beset us, and finally attain unto Thine everlasting joy. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture, according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

BIBIANA was a Roman maiden, distinguished on account of the nobility of her family, but now far more distinguished for her confession of Christ. In the reign of the foul tyrant, Julian the Apostate, her father Flavian, although he was an ex-Præfect, was branded as a slave and banished to Acquapendente, not far from Rome, where he soon died a martyr for his faith. His wife, Dafrosa, and his two daughters, Bibiana and Demetria, were first imprisoned in their own house, with the idea of starving them to death; but the mother was afterwards taken outside the city and beheaded. Bibiana and her sister Demetria, after the death of their holy parents, were stripped of all they had in the world. Apronianus, Prætor of the city, who hankered after their property, continued to persecute them, but although they were destitute of all human support, God, Who giveth bread to the hungry, fed them, and kept them in health, life, and strength, to the wonder of their enemies.

Fifth Lesson.

APRONIANUS then attacked them, to make them worship the gods of the Gentiles, and promised them the restoration of their property, the favour of the Emperor, and a great marriage for each of them, if they would give way, and, on the other hand, imprisonment, stripes, and death. But neither promises nor threats availed, for they remained firm in the faith, being resolved rather to die than to pollute themselves by doing according to the deeds of the heathen; and, as for the iniquity of the Prætor, they loathed it continually. At length the strength of Demetria gave way, and she fell down suddenly, and died in the Lord, before the eyes of her sister Bibiana. Then Bibiana was put into the hands of an artful woman named Rufina, to seduce her if possible; but she had known the law of Christ from her childhood, and kept the lily of her purity undefiled, triumphing over the efforts of that vile person, and disappointing the lust of the Prætor.

Sixth Lesson.

THEN, when Rufina saw that her false words availed not, she took to blows, and scourged Bibiana daily, but the saint was not staggered in her holy resolution. At last the Prætor, mad with baffled lust, when he found his labour was thrown away, ordered his lictors to strip her naked, hang her up by the hands to a pillar, and flog her to death with whips weighted with lead.[1] When all was over, her sacred body was thrown out for the dogs to eat. It lay two days in the Forum Tauri, but the animals would not touch it; and, at last, a Priest, named John, took it, and buried it by night beside the graves of her mother and sister, near the Licinian Palace. This is the place where there is still a church, dedicated in the name of St Bibiana. When this church was being restored by Urban VIII., the bodies of these three holy women, Bibiana, Demetria, and Dafrosa, were found, and were re-buried under the High Altar.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 3rd day of December is commemorated the birth into the better life—

In the island of San-Chan, in the Canton River, in China, holy Francis Xavier of the Society of Jesus, Apostle of the Indies, illustrious for the conversion of the Gentiles, for gifts and miracles, who died, [in the year 1552,] full of good works and labours, upon this present 2nd day of December, but his feast is kept upon the morrow by order of Alexander VII.

In Judea, the holy prophet Zephaniah [in the seventh century B.C. He is the ninth of the twelve minor prophets.]

Upon the same 3rd day of December, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyrs the Tribune Claudius, his wife Hilaria, their sons Jason and Marus, and seventy soldiers. The Emperor Numerian commanded a great stone to be tied to Claudius and that he should be cast into the river; the soldiers and the sons of Claudius he also caused to be put to death. The blessed Hilaria buried the bodies of her sons, and was praying at their grave soon after, when she was seized by the heathen, and departed hence to be ever with the Lord [about the year 257.]

At Tangier, in Morocco, [in the year 398,] the holy martyr Cassian. He had of a long time discharged the office of a public clerk when the thought came to him from heaven that it was an accursed thing to serve for the slaughter of Christians; he resigned his office therefore, and under the public profession of a Christian he earned the victory of martyrdom [in the year 398.]

Likewise in Africa, the holy martyrs Claudius, Crispin, Magina, John, and Stephen.

In Hungary, the holy martyr Agricola.

At Nicomedia, the holy martyrs Ambicus, Victor, and Julius.

At Milan, [about the year 318,] the holy Confessor Mirocles, Bishop [of that see,] of whom mention is made by holy Ambrose.

In England, holy Brian, first Bishop of Dorchester, [he was a Priest of Rome about the year 650, whose feast we keep upon the 5th day of this present month of December.]

At Chur, in Switzerland, holy Lucius, King of the Britons [of Morganweg,] who was the first British prince to receive the faith of Christ, in the time of Pope Eleutherius, [about the year 182.]

At Sienna, in Tuscany, the holy Hermit Galgan, [of the order of St Benedict. He lived on a mountain called Siepi, and died in the year 1181.]

DECEMBER 3.

St Francis Xavier, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office of a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except what is otherwise given here.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who wast pleased to make the preaching and miracles of the blessed Francis an instrument to gather in the people of the Indies into Thy Church, mercifully grant that we who venerate the glorious memory of his worthy deeds, may also have the grace to follow the pattern of his virtues. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers Commemorations are made of St Bibiana, and of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture, according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

FRANCIS was of noble family, and was born in the castle of Xavier, in the diœcese of Pampeluna, [in the year of our Lord 1506.] He was a companion of St Ignatius at Paris, and one of his earliest disciples. Under his teaching, he learnt to become so wrapt in the contemplation of divine things, that he was sometimes lifted in ecstasy off the ground, which happened to him several times when he was saying Mass in public before large congregations. He earned these refreshments of the soul by the sharpest punishment of the body. He gave up the use not only of meat and wine, but also of wheaten bread; he lived on the vilest food, and ate only once every two or three days. He used an iron scourge till his blood ran freely; he shortened the hours of his rest, and lay only on the ground.

Fifth Lesson.

THE hardness and holiness of his life had made him meet to be called to be an Apostle, and when John III., King of Portugal, asked Pope Paul III. to send to the Indies some members of the then new Society of JESUS, the Pontiff, by the advice of St Ignatius, sent Francis to enter on that vast field of labour with the powers of Apostolic Nuncio. He arrived [in India on the 6th day of May, in the year 1542.] When he began his work, it seemed as though God Himself taught him the many and difficult languages of the natives. It even happened that when he preached in one language to a mixed congregation of different nationalities, each one heard him in his own tongue wherein he was born.[1] He travelled over countless districts, always walking, and often bare-footed. He introduced the faith into Japan, and six other countries. In India he turned many hundred thousands to Christ, and regenerated many chiefs and kings in the holy font. And notwithstanding that he was doing all these great things for God's service, so deep was his lowliness that when he wrote to St Ignatius, the General of the Society, he did so on his knees.

Sixth Lesson.

GOD was pleased to support his zeal for spreading the Gospel with many and great miracles. He gave sight to a blind man. On one occasion the supply of fresh water failed when he was at sea, and five hundred sailors were in danger of perishing by thirst, but the servant of God, by the sign of the Cross, turned salt water into fresh, and they used it for a considerable time. Some of this water was also carried into different countries, and a great number of sick persons were instantaneously cured by it. He called several dead men to life, among whom was one who had been buried the day before, and who was disinterred by command of the saint; and likewise two others who were being carried to the grave, and whom he took by the hand and restored living to their parents. He had the spirit of prophecy, and foretold many things, remote both in place and time. Utterly worn out with his labours, he died full of good works in the island of San-Chan in the Canton River, [upon the 2nd day of December, in the year of our Lord 1552.] His body was buried in quick-lime, and, being again taken up, was again buried in the same, but at the end of many months it was found entirely incorrupt, and sweet, and, when cut, blood flowed freely from it. From China it was carried to Malacca, and, as soon as it reached that place, a plague, which was raging there, ceased. At length, when he had become famous throughout the whole world for new and wonderful miracles, Gregory XV. added his name to the list of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark (xvi. 15.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (29th on the Gospels.)

By the words "every creature" we may understand every tribe of the Gentiles. Of aforetime it had been said, "Go not into the way of the Gentiles," (Matth. x. 5,) but now, "Preach the Gospel to every creature," that, since the Jews had proudly rejected the preaching of the Apostles, that might become our gain which was the seal of their condemnation. But when the Eternal Truth sendeth forth His disciples to preach, what doth He but scatter seed over the field of the world? He scattereth abroad a few grains for seed, that He may afterward reap an abundant harvest in our faith.

[1] Cf. Acts ii. 8.

Eighth Lesson.

THE great harvest of faithful souls throughout the whole world would never have sprung up, if the hand of the Lord had not first scattered those chosen grains of preachers over the reasonable soil of men's minds. Then is written, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved: but he that believeth not, shall be damned." Now, perchance, thou sayest in thine heart: I believe, and therefore I shall be saved. True, if to thy faith thou dost add works. He only hath a living faith whose life doth not give the lie to his profession. It is of this that Paul speaketh, where he saith of certain vain believers, "They profess that they know God; but in works they deny Him." (Tit. i. 16.)

Ninth Lesson.

"AND these signs shall follow them that believe: In My name they shall cast out devils, they shall speak with new tongues, they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."

My brethren, these signs do not follow us. Do we, then, not believe? Nay. The truth is, these things were needful when the Church was young. That she might grow by the increase of the faithful, she needed to be nourished with miracles. So we, when we plant a young tree, continually water and tend it, till we see that it hath taken firm root in the earth: but when once it hath taken firm root, it can grow of itself. Hence Paul saith of tongues: "Tongues are for a sign, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not." (1 Cor. xiv. 22.)

At Lauds is made a Commemoration of the Week-day.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Peter Chrysologus, Archbishop of Ravenna, [in the year 450,] of whom mention is made upon the 2nd day of this present month of December.

Upon the same 4th day of December, were born into the better life—

At Nicomedia, in the persecution under the Emperor Maximin, the holy virgin and martyr Barbara. After a cruel and wasting imprisonment she endured burning with torches, the cutting off of her breasts, and other torments, and finished her testimony by the sword, [in the year 235.]

At Constantinople, [in the year 780,] the holy martyr Theophanes and his Companions.

In Pontus, [about the year 330,] the blessed Confessor Meletius, Bishop [of Sebastopol.] He was a man of extraordinary learning, but this gift was outshone in him by the mightiness of his soul and the straightforwardness of his life.

At Bologna, holy Felix, Bishop [of that see,] who had erstwhile been a Deacon of the church of Milan under holy Ambrose.

In England, holy Osmund, Bishop, [in the year 1078 of Salisbury,] whose feast we keep upon the 17th day of July, which is the day of the translation of his sacred body. [He was Count of Seez in Normandy, and, following William the Conqueror, was made Count of Dorset and Lord High Chancellor of England. He died in 1099, and was canonised by Pope Calixtus III., in the year 1458.]

At Cologne, [in the year 1075,] holy Annon, Bishop [of that see.]

In Mesopotamia, [about the year 449,] holy Maruthas, Bishop of Tagrit, who raised up again the churches of God in Persia which had been cast down in the persecution under King Isdegerd; he was famous for many miracles, and achieved honour even among his enemies. [Several of his works are extant. Tagrit is now Miafarakin.]

At Parma, [in the year 1133,] holy Bernard, Cardinal-bishop of that city, of the Congregation of the Order of St Benedict, called that of Vallombrosa.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter, inclusive.

DECEMBER 4.

St Peter Chrysologus, Archbishop [of Ravenna,] Confessor, and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except what is otherwise given here.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who by a sign from heaven didst mark out the blessed Peter Chrysologus, the excellent Teacher, to be a ruler and instructor of souls, grant, we pray Thee, that even as Thou didst give him to be a teacher of Thy lively truth on earth, so, now that he is with Thee, we may worthily have him continually to make intercession for us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O right excellent Teacher, &c.

MATTINS.

The first verse of the hymn is altered.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from 1 Tim. iii. 1, as in the Common Office, (p. 612.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

PETER, called in Greek "Chrysologos," or, "of the golden words," on account of his wonderful eloquence, was born of respectable parents at Imola, near Ravenna. He displayed a very early leaning to godliness, and became a disciple of Cornelius of Rome, Bishop of Imola. This Prelate, having experience of his learning and holiness of life, soon ordained him Deacon. On the death of the Archbishop of Ravenna, the people of that place elected a successor, and sent him, according to custom, to Rome, to be confirmed in his appointment by Pope Sixtus III. The Archbishop elect accordingly set forth, along with the ambassadors of the people of Ravenna and Cornelius, Bishop of Imola, attended by Peter the Deacon. While they were yet on the way, the holy Apostle Peter and Apollinaris the Martyr appeared to the Supreme Pontiff in a dream, leading a young man between them, whom they commanded him to make Archbishop. As soon as the embassy arrived at Rome the Pope knew in Peter the young man of his dream, chosen of God to the Archbishopric. Wherefore he set aside him that the people of Ravenna had presented, and preferred Peter to that Metropolitan Church, in the year of our Lord, 433. The ambassadors of the people of Ravenna took it ill, till they heard the vision: then they gave themselves up to the will of God, and received the new Archbishop with great reverence.

Fifth Lesson.

PETER being against his will consecrated Archbishop, arrived at Ravenna, where he was received with great joy by the Emperor Valentinian, the Empress-Mother Galla Placidia, and all the people. And this one thing he asked of them, that, as he, for the saving of their souls, had not refused to bear the heavy weight of the Archbishopric, so they would strive to follow his warnings, and live in submission to the law of God. He took the bodies of the two Saints, namely, Barbatian the Priest, and German, Bishop of Auxerre, and caused them to be embalmed with rich ointments and honourably buried, and he kept the cowl and haircloth shirt of German for a legacy for himself. At Classis, three miles from Ravenna, he built a Baptistery of extraordinary size, and several splendid churches, in honour of the blessed Apostle Andrew and other Saints. He preached a most severe sermon against the acting and dancing of guisards[1] about New Year time, in which discourse he said among other things, "He that jesteth with the devil will never rejoice with Christ." By command of Pope Leo I. he addressed an Epistle to the Council of Chalcedon against the heretic Eutyches. He also confuted Eutyches himself in another letter, which is likewise published in the new editions of the Acts of the Council, and is matter of Church History.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN he preached in public his vehemence was such that he sometimes became speechless from excitement. This happened to him once when he was preaching on the subject of the woman who had an issue of blood. (Matth. ix. 20-22.) The congregation on this occasion were so wrought up, that they filled the whole place with tears, cries, and prayers, and Peter afterwards thanked God, Who had turned his failure to the profit of their souls. When he had ruled the Church of Ravenna in holiness for about eighteen years, God gave him knowledge that the end of his labours was at hand, and he returned to his home at Imola, to die. When he arrived at Imola, he entered the church of St Cassian, and offered upon the High Altar a great circlet of gold, set with stones of great price, a golden chalice and a silver paten. Water poured out of these vessels hath often healed hydrophobia and fevers. Some of the people of Ravenna had followed the Archbishop, but he now dismissed them, with a charge to use great prudence in their choice of his successor. Then he fell to prayer, that God would mercifully receive his spirit, asking the same likewise for the sake of his patron St Cassian, and so he passed in peace to a better life, on a 2nd of December, about the year of our Lord 450. His holy body was buried, amid the sorrow and veneration of the whole city, hard by the remains of St Cassian, where it lieth even to this day, guarded with great reverence. One arm was cut off and sent to Ravenna, where it is preserved in the Ursian Church, in a reliquary of gold and precious stones.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. v. 13, with the Homily of St Austin upon the same, (p. 630.)

Eighth Responsory.

In the midst of the congregation, &c., (p. 625.)

At Lauds are made Commemorations of the Week-day and of St Barbara.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep in England the feast of the holy confessor Brian, first Bishop of Dorchester, of whom mention is made upon the 3rd day of this present month of December.

Upon the same 5th day of December, were born into the better life—

At Mutalasque, in Cappadocia, the holy Saba, Abbat [in Palestine in the year 531,] who shone in Palestine as a marvellous ensample of holiness, and toiled manfully for the Catholic faith against those that impugned the holy Council of Chalcedon [held in the year 451.]

At Thebeste, in Africa, holy Crispina, [of Thagara,] a woman of very high rank, who refused to sacrifice to idols, in the days of the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian, and was therefore beheaded by command of the Pro-consul Anolinus, [in the year 304.] Holy Augustin doth oftentimes speak in her praise.

At Thagara, in Africa, the holy martyrs Julius, Potamia, Crispin, Felix, Gratus, and seven others.

At Nice, upon the river Var, holy Bassus, Bishop [of that see, in the third century.] In the persecution under the Emperors Decius and Valerian the President Perennius caused him for Christ's faith's sake to be racked, burnt with plates of white-hot metal, beaten with cudgels and loaded scourges, cast into the fire, and when he came out therefrom unharmed, to be pierced with two nails, and so he achieved an illustrious martyrdom.

At Pavia, the holy martyr Dalmatius,

---

Bishop [of that see,] who suffered in the persecution under the Emperor Maximian, [in the year 304.]

At Pentinia, in the Abruzzi, the holy martyr Pelinus, Bishop of Brindisi. In the days of the Emperor Julian the Apostate a temple of Mars fell down in answer to his prayer, wherefore the heathen priests beat him direfully, and he earned the crown of martyrdom by eighty-five wounds, [about the year 362.]

Likewise, [in the sixth century,] the holy martyr Anastasius, whose desire for martyrdom caused him to show himself of his own will to the persecutors.

At Trier (Treves), [about the year 566,] holy Nicetius, Bishop [of that see,] a man of wonderful holiness. [Two of his works are still extant.]

At Polybotus, in Asia, holy John, called the Wonder-worker, Bishop [of that see in the time of the Emperor Leo the Isaurian.]

Vespers are of the following from the Chapter, inclusive.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From Bede, iii. 7, and the Saxon Chronicle.)

IN the year of Christ 634, the West Saxons, under their King Cynegils, received the Faith, the Word of God being preached among them by the Bishop Brian, who had come into Britain at the persuasion of Pope Honorius. He made a personal promise to this Pope that he would go into far parts of England, where no teacher had yet reached, and there sow the seed of our holy Faith. The Pope therefore commanded Asterius, Bishop of Genoa, to consecrate him a Bishop.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN Brian came to Britain, the first place he went to was the country of the West Saxons, whom he found steeped in idolatry. Among them therefore he deemed it better to abide, than to go further in search of subjects for his preaching. He converted and baptized the King and his people, and Cynegils afterwards received from the font the most holy Oswald, King of the Northumbrians, whose daughter he was about to take in marriage, and thus, by a beautiful coincidence, became first his god-father and then his son-in-law.

Sixth Lesson.

THESE two Kings joined in giving to Brian the city of Dorchester, to be his See, and thence, after building and hallowing Churches, and calling many people to God by holy labour, he passed away to be for ever with the Lord, [about the year 650.] At Dorchester he was buried, but after many years, Bishop Hedda removed his body to Winchester, where it was honourably laid in the Church of the Holy Apostles Peter and Paul.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

At Lauds, a Commemoration is made of the Week-day, and then of St Saba, with the Prayer as before.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the 6th day of December, were born into the better life—

At Myra, which is the chief city of Lycia, [in the year 324,] the holy Confessor Nicolas, Bishop [of that see,] of whom among many other signs and wonders it is recorded that when the Emperor Constantine had condemned certain persons to death and these called upon Nicolas, who was alive, and afar off, he appeared unto the Emperor, and bent him to mercy by exhortation and threats.

In Africa, the holy women Dionysia, Dativa, and Leontia, and the monk Tertius, the physician Æmilian, Boniface, and three others, who in the Vandal persecution under the Arian King Hunneric were tormented in most grievous and manifold ways for their defence of the Catholic faith, and so earned a place among Confessors of Christ, [in the year 484.]

At the same time and place, the holy martyr Majoricus, the son of holy Dionysia. He was but a little lad and was in fear of the torments, but by the looks and words of his mother, he was so strengthened that he became mightier than them all, and died under the torture; his mother took his body to her heart, and buried it in their home, and was used to pray instantly at his grave.

On the same day, the holy priest Polychronius, who was saying Mass in the time of the Emperor Constantius, when the Arians attacked him and slew him, [fourth century.]

At Granada, in Spain, the blessed martyr Peter Paschasius, Bishop of Jaen, of the order of blessed Mary of Ransom for the redemption of captives, [in the year 1300.]

At Rome, the holy virgin Asella, who, as writeth blessed Jerome, was blessed from her mother's womb, and passed her life in fastings and prayers unto a good old age. [Born about 334 and died about 410.]

Vespers from the following from the Chapter inclusive.

---

[1] Born at Mutalasca, in Cappadocia, in the year 439. Died at the Monastery now called from him at Mar Saba, between Jerusalem and the Dead Sea, December 5, 532.

DECEMBER 6.

St Nicolas, Archbishop [of Myra,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office of a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except what is otherwise given here.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who hast made the blessed Bishop Nicolas famous by countless signs and wonders, deliver us, we beseech Thee, for his sake and by his prayers, from the everlasting fires of hell. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

First Vespers, as regards St Nicolas, begin with the Chapter.

A Commemoration is made of St Brian. Prayer as in his Office, and then of the Week-Day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

NICOLAS was born at the famous city of Patara in Lycia. His parents obtained him from God by prayer, and the holiness of his life was marked even from the cradle. When he was at the breast he never would suck more than once on Wednesdays and Fridays, and that always after sunset, though he sucked freely on other days. This custom of fasting he never broke through during his whole life. While he was still a young man he lost both his father and mother, after which he gave his whole property away to the poor. One particular example is given of his Christian charity. There was a certain needy man in the city who had three marriageable daughters, for whom he could not get husbands, and so thought to make them harlots. When Nicolas heard of it, he went to the house by night and threw in by the window such a sum of money as made a dowry for one of them. This he did a second and a third time, and thus by his charity they were honourably given in marriage.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN he had given himself entirely to God he set forth for Palestine, that he might see the Holy Places, and worship therein. During this pilgrimage he embarked once on board a ship when the sky was clear and the sea calm, but he foretold a great storm, which afterwards arose and raged until the sailors were afraid; and then the saint by prayer stilled the tempest. After he had returned home, and his holy life was known to all men, God bade him go to Myra, which is the chief city of Lycia, at a time when the Bishop had just died and the Bishops of the Province were called together to choose a successor. While they deliberated, they received a warning from heaven to choose that Nicolas who should first come into the church in the morning. In obedience to that warning, Nicolas was seized at the door of the church, and with universal consent consecrated Archbishop. In his great office he was an unceasing model of purity, as he had always been, of gravity, of regularity in prayer, of watching, of abstinence, of charity, of hospitality, of meekness in exhortation, and of sternness in rebuke.

Sixth Lesson.

HE was the comforter of widows and orphans by money, by advice, and by labour. He was the deliverer of the oppressed, so mightily, that it is related that the Emperor Constantine once unjustly condemned three Tribunes to death, and these unhappy men called upon Nicolas, though living and absent, to save them, who yet appeared in a vision to the Emperor, and forced him by threats to set them free. When the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian published their edict against Christianity, Nicolas did not cease to preach the truth at Myra, wherefore he was seized by the soldiers of the Emperors, carried away from his See, and thrown into prison, where he remained until the accession of Constantine. This Prince set him free, and he returned to Myra. He betook himself to the first Council of Nice, where he was one of the 318 Bishops who condemned the heresy of Arius. He returned thence to his Bishopric, and, not long after, became aware of the approach of death. When his last moment was come, he lifted up his eyes to heaven, and, when he saw the Angels coming to meet him, he began to recite the thirtieth Psalm, "In Thee, O Lord, do I put my trust," and when he had said, "Into Thy hands I commend my spirit," he passed to the heavenly Fatherland.[1] His body was finally removed to Bari in Apulia, where it is kept with great fame and honour.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

At Lauds is made a Commemoration of the Week-day.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the eve of the Immaculate Conception of the blessed Virgin Mary.

On the same day is kept the feast of the holy Confessor Ambrose, Archbishop of Milan, and Doctor of the universal Church, the which is adorned by his holiness and teaching. [His birth into the better life, in the year 397, is recorded upon the 4th day of April. The 7th day of December is the day of his ordination to the Bishopric of Milan.]

Upon the same 7th day of December, were born into the better life—

At Alexandria, the blessed soldier Agatho. During the persecution under the Emperor Decius, there were some that would make mock of the bodies of the martyrs, and Agatho forbade them, whereupon straightway a cry of the whole mob was got up against him, he was brought before the judge, and as he stood firm in the confession of Christ he was beheaded [about the year 250.]

---

[1] In the year 342?

At Antioch, the holy martyrs Polycarp and Theodore.

At Tebourba, in Africa, the holy martyr Servus, who in the Vandal persecution under the Arian king Hunneric, was long cudgelled, repeatedly jerked up with pulleys and dropped upon flints, and scraped with sharp stones, and by this torment gained the palm of martyrdom [in the year 384.]

At Chieti, in the kingdom of Naples, [in the ninth century,] the holy Con fessor Urban, Bishop of [that see.]

At Saintes, in Gaul, [about the year 400,] the holy Abbat Martin, at whose grave by the power of God famous miracles are oftentimes wrought. [He was the founder and first Abbat of the Monastery of Sanjon.]

At Meaux, [in the year 657,] the holy virgin Fara [de Champigny, Abbess of Faremoutier, in the diocese of Meaux.]

Vespers of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

DECEMBER 7.

St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan,] Confessor and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office of one Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except what is otherwise given here.

Prayer throughout the Office. O God, Who didst give unto Thy people, &c.

FIRST VESPERS.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O right excellent Teacher, &c.

Commemoration of St Nicolas, and of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from 1 Tim. iii. 1, as in the Common Office, (p. 612.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

AMBROSE, Bishop of Milan, was the son of another Ambrose, a Roman citizen, and was born when his father was Prefect of Gaul, [about the year of our Lord 340.] A swarm of bees settled upon his face when he was in his cradle, which was considered an omen of his future eloquence. He received a liberal education at Rome. He was afterwards, under the Prefect Probus, made governor of Liguria and Æmilia, and so came with authority to Milan. Auxentius, an Arian, who had been intruded into the Bishoprick of Milan, happening to die, the most violent disputes arose about the choice of a successor. Ambrose came to the church in his official capacity, and urged upon the contending factions, in a long and powerful speech, the necessity of keeping the public peace; whereupon a child suddenly cried out, "Ambrose, Bishop," and the whole assembly took it up, and unanimously called for his election.

Fifth Lesson.

AMBROSE refused, and would not yield to their prayers, whereupon they carried their petition to the Emperor Valentinian. It was very pleasing to this Prince that those he had appointed as judges should be chosen Bishops, as also to the Prefect Probus, who had, as it were prophetically, said to him when he appointed him, "Go and govern them more like a Bishop than a Judge." When the will of the Emperor was added to the desire of the people, Ambrose yielded, and received Baptism, (for hitherto he was only a Catechumen,) Confirmation, and Communion, and then the several Orders on successive days, till on the eighth day, which was the 7th of December, [in the year 374,] the weight of the Episcopate was laid upon his shoulders. Being made Bishop, he showed himself a stout upholder of the Catholic faith, and the discipline of the Church, and turned to the truth great numbers of Arians and other heretics, and, among them, he begat in Christ JESUS that burning and shining light of the Church, Austin.

Sixth Lesson.

AFTER the murder of the Emperor Gratian, [in 383,] Ambrose was sent as an ambassador to Maximus, by whom he had been slain, and, as he refused to repent, the Bishop renounced his communion. After the massacre which the Emperor Theodosius had commanded at Thessalonica, [in 390,] he refused to permit that Prince to enter a church. The Emperor pleaded that he was no worse than David, who had been guilty of adultery and murder, to which Ambrose answered him, "As thou hast followed him in his sin, follow him also in his repentance." Then Theodosius humbly did public penance laid upon him by the Bishop. At length the Saint was worn out with his continual labour and care for the Church, (for the which also he composed many excellent books,) and foretold that the day of his death was at hand, though he had not then fallen into his last sickness. As he lay dying, Honoratus, Bishop of Vercelli, heard a voice from God three times crying to him that the hour of Ambrose's departure was come, whereupon he went to him quickly, and gave him the sacred Body of our Lord. When he had received It, the Saint, still praying, with his hands stretched out in the form of a cross, gave his spirit to God, upon the 4th day of April, in the year of Christ, 397.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. v. 13, with the Homily of St Austin, (p. 631.)

Eighth Responsory.

In the midst of the congregation, &c., (p. 625.)

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the glorious Mary, Mother of God, and always a Virgin, whom the supreme Pontiff Pius IX. did upon this day solemnly define to have been by a singular gift of God preserved unstained by original sin.

Upon the same 8th day of December, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the blessed Pope Eutychian, who with his own hands buried in divers places three hundred and forty-two martyrs, whose fellow he himself afterwards became, being crowned with martyrdom under the Emperor Numerian and buried in the cemetery of Callistus. [He succeeded Felix I. (269-274); after five days' interregnum he became Pope on Jan. 3, 275, and died on Dec. 8, 283.]

At Alexandria, the holy martyr Macarius. Under the Emperor Decius the judge dealt with him in many words to persuade him to deny Christ, but as he only professed his faith the more constantly he was burnt alive [in the year 250.]

At Treves, holy Eucharius, a disciple of the blessed Apostle Peter, and the first Bishop of that city.

In Cyprus, the holy Bishop Sophronius, who was a wonderful protector of little children, orphans, and widows, and an helper of all the poor and depressed.

In the monastery of Lisieux, the holy Abbat Romaric, who was the first man in the court of King Theodobert, but gave up the world, and became the first in monastic observance. [He was a monk of Luxeuil. He founded the Abbey of Remiremont, of which he became second Abbat in the year 627, and died on Dec. 8, 653.]

At Constantinople, the holy Hermit Patapius, famous for his graces and miracles.

At Verona, is commemorated the ordination of holy Zeno, Bishop [of that see in the fourth century.]

Vespers of the following.

DECEMBER 8.

Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Double of the First Class, with an Octave.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633,) except what is otherwise given here.

Note. When this Office is used as a Votive Office in Paschal-time the word "Alleluia" is added wherever it is here given in brackets, [ ]. The further changes required in the Votive Office are given in their places or in a Note at the end.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, Verse and Answer, and Prayer from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. All generations shall call me blessed, * for He That is mighty hath done to me great things. Alleluia.

This word "Alleluia" is omitted in Septuagesima and Sexagesima Weeks.

Commemoration of St Ambrose, (Antiphon, "O right excellent, &c.,") and of the Week-day.

COMPLINE.

The last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Let us keep the Feast of the stainless Conception of the Virgin Mary: * let us worship Christ, her Son, and her Lord and ours. [Alleluia.]

Hymn.[1]

BLEST Guardian of all virgin souls!
  Portal of bliss to man forgiven!
Pure Mother of Almighty God!
  Thou hope of earth, and joy of Heaven!

Fair Lily, found among the thorns!
  Most beauteous Dove with wings of gold!
Rod from whose tender root upsprang
  That healing Flower long since foretold!

Thou Tower, against the dragon proof!
  Thou Star, to storm-toss'd voyagers dear!
Our course lies o'er a treacherous deep;
  Thine be the light by which we steer.

Scatter the mists that round us hang,
  Keep far the fatal shoals away;
And while through darkling waves we sweep,
  Open a path to life and day.

O JESU, born of Virgin bright!
  Immortal glory be to Thee;
Praise to the Father infinite,
  And Holy Ghost eternally. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time only one Antiphon, namely the first, is said at each Nocturn.

First Antiphon. O Lord, how excellent is Thy Name * in all the earth, Who hast made Thee a worthy tabernacle in the Virgin Mary. [Alleluia.]

Second Antiphon. The Lord hath set * His tabernacle in the sun.

Third Antiphon. Even in her Conception * did Mary receive a blessing from the Lord, and mercy from the God of her salvation.

Verse. [2] It is Almighty God That girdeth me with strength. [Alleluia.]

Answer. And maketh my way perfect. [Alleluia.]

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Genesis (iii. 1.)

THE serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field which the LORD God had made. And he said unto the woman, Why hath God said,

---

[1] Translation by the Rev. E. Caswall.

[2] Ps. xvii. 33.

Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden? And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden; but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die. And the serpent said unto the woman: Ye shall not surely die. For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened: and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.

First Responsory.

[1] By one man sin entered into the world, in whom all have sinned. Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found grace with God. [Alleluia.]

Verse. [2] The Lord hath delivered thy soul from death, yea, the Lord was thy stay.

Answer. Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found grace with God. [Alleluia.]

Second Lesson.

AND the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired: and she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her, and he did eat. And the eyes of them both were opened; and they knew that they were naked, and they sewed fig-leaves together and made themselves aprons. And they heard the voice of the LORD God walking in the garden in the cool of the day; and Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the LORD God, amidst the trees of the garden.

Second Responsory.

[3] Come unto me all ye that be desirous of me, and I will declare what God hath done for my soul. [Alleluia.]

Verse. [4] As the Lord liveth, by me He hath fulfilled His mercy.

Answer. And I will declare what God hath done for my soul. [Alleluia.]

Third Lesson.

AND the LORD God called unto Adam, and said unto him: Where art thou? And he said: I heard Thy voice in the garden: and I was afraid, because I was naked, and I hid myself. And He said: Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat? And Adam said: The woman whom Thou gavest me to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat. And the LORD God said unto the woman: Wherefore hast thou done this? And she said: The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat. And the LORD God said unto the serpent: Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life: I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: she shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise her heel.

Third Responsory.

[5] My beloved is white like snow in Lebanon, her lips drop as the honeycomb. Honey and milk are under her tongue. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Come from Lebanon, My Spouse, thou shalt be crowned with a crown of grace.

Answer. Honey and milk are under her tongue. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Honey and milk are under her tongue. [Alleluia.]

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Grace is poured into her Conception, * and she is fairer than the daughters of men. [Alleluia.]

Second Antiphon. God hath holpen her right early, * the Most High hath hallowed His tabernacle.

Third Antiphon. Glorious things are spoken of thee, O City of God; * the Lord hath laid thy foundation in the holy mountains.

Verse. [6] By this I know that Thou favourest me. [Alleluia.]

Answer. Because mine enemy cannot triumph over me. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.[7]] (On the Assumption.)

WHO and what was the blessed and glorious Mary, always a Virgin, hath been revealed by God by the message of an Angel, in these words, "Hail, thou that art full of grace, the Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women." It was fitting that a fulness of grace should be poured into that Virgin who hath given to God glory and to man a Saviour, who hath brought peace to earth, who hath given faith to the Gentiles, who hath killed sin, who hath given law to life, who hath made the crooked ways straight. Verily, she is full of grace. To others grace cometh measure by measure; in Mary grace dwelleth at once in all fulness. Verily, she is full of grace. We believe that the holy Fathers and Prophets had grace; but they were not full of grace. But into Mary came a fulness of all the grace which is in Christ, albeit otherwise [than as it is in Him.] Therefore is it said: "Blessed art thou among women," that is, "Blessed art thou above all women." The fulness of blessing in Mary utterly neutralized in her any effects of the curse of Eve. In her praise Solomon writeth in the Song of Songs, (ii. 10,) "Rise up, my dove, my fair one, for the winter is past, the rain is over and gone." And again, "Come from Lebanon, my Spouse, come, thou shalt be crowned." (iv. 8.)

Fourth Responsory.

[8] I came out of the mouth of the Most High, the first-begotten before every creature. I made the unfading light to arise in the heavens. When there were no depths I was conceived. [Alleluia.]

Verse. For the Lord hath created me in righteousness, and hath held mine hand, and hath kept me.

Answer. When there were no depths I was conceived. [Alleluia.]

[6] Ps. xl. 12.

[7] To be found among his spurious works.

Fifth Lesson.

NOT unjustly then is she bidden to come from Lebanon, for Lebanon is so named on account of its stainless and glistening whiteness. The earthly Lebanon is white with snow, but the lonely heights of Mary's holiness are white with purity and grace, brilliantly fair, whiter far than snow, sparkling with the gifts of the Holy Ghost—she is undefiled like a dove, all clean, all upright, full of grace and truth. She is full of mercy, and of the righteousness that hath looked down from heaven, and therefore is she without stain because in her hath never been any corruption. She hath compassed a man in her womb, saith holy Jeremiah, but she conceived not by the will of fallen man. "The LORD," saith the Prophet, "hath created a new thing in the earth; a woman shall compass a man." (xxxi. 22.) Verily, it is a new thing. Verily, it was a new work of power, greater than all other works, when God, Whom the world cannot bear, and Whom no man shall see and live, entered the lodging of her womb, breaking not the blissful cloister of her virgin flesh. And in her body He was borne, the Infinite inclosed within her womb. And from her womb He came forth, so that it was fulfilled which was spoken of the Prophet Ezekiel, saying, "This gate shall be shut, it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter in by it; because the LORD, the God of Israël, hath entered in by it, therefore it shall be shut." (xliv. 2.) Hence also in the Song of Songs it is said of her, (iv. 12,) "A garden enclosed is my sister, my spouse, a garden enclosed, a fountain sealed, thy perfumes are a garden of delights." Verily a garden of delights, filled with the perfumes of all flowers, rich with the sweet savour of grace. And the most holy Virgin herself is a garden enclosed, whereinto sin and Satan have never entered to sully the blossoms, a fountain sealed, sealed with the seal of the Trinity. (So far the Sermon.)

Fifth Responsory.

[1] No defiled thing can fall into her; she is the brightness of the everlasting light, and the unspotted mirror of the power of God. [Alleluia.]

Verse. For she is more beautiful than the sun, and being compared with the light, she is found before it.

Answer. She is the brightness of the everlasting light, and the unspotted mirror of the power of God. [Alleluia.]

Sixth Lesson.

THE fact that the Virgin Mother of God had at the moment of her conception triumphed over the foul enemy of man, hath ever been borne out by the Holy Scriptures, by the venerable tradition of the Church, and by her unceasing belief, as well as by the common conviction of all Bishops and faithful Catholics, and by marked acts and constitutions of the Holy See. At length the Supreme Pontiff Pius IX., in compliance with the wishes of the Universal Church, determined to publish it as a truth of faith, on his own absolute and unerring authority, and accordingly, on the 8th day of December, 1854, in the Vatican Basilica, in presence of a great multitude composed of the Fathers Cardinals of the Holy Roman Church, and Bishops from all parts of the earth, he, with the consent and jubilation of the whole world, declared and defined as follows: That doctrine which declareth that the most blessed Virgin Mary was in the first instant of her Conception preserved, by a special privilege granted unto her by God, from any stain of original sin, is a doctrine taught and revealed by God, and therefore is to be held by all faithful Christians firmly and constantly.

Sixth Responsory.

[2] There appeared a great wonder in heaven: a Woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars. [Alleluia.]

Verse. [3] The Lord hath clothed her with the garments of salvation, and hath covered her with the robe of righteousness, yea, as a bride He hath adorned her with jewels.

Answer. And upon her head a crown of twelve stars. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And upon her head a crown of twelve stars. [Alleluia.]

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Holiness and beauty are in her Conception: * declare her glory among all people. [Alleluia.]

Second Antiphon. Rejoice ye all in the LORD: * and give thanks at the remembrance of His holiness.

Third Antiphon. The LORD hath made known His salvation: * the glory of His Mother hath He openly showed in the sight of the heathen.

Verse. [4] I will extol Thee, O Lord, for Thou hast lifted me up. [Alleluia.]

Answer. And hast not made my foes to rejoice over me. [Alleluia.]

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 26.)

AT that time: The Angel Gabriel was sent from God, unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David, and the virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

Homily by St German, Patriarch [of Constantinople.][5] (On the Presentation of the Blessed Virgin.)

Hail, Mary, full of grace, holier than the Saints, higher than the heavens, more glorious than the Cherubim, more honourable than the Seraphim, and the most worshipful thing that the hands of God have made.

Hail, O dove, bearing in thy beak the olive-branch of peace that telleth us of salvation from the spiritual flood, (Gen. viii. 10, 11,)—dove, blessed omen of a safe harbour, whose wings are of silver, and thy feathers of gold, shining in the bright beams of the Most Holy and Light-giving Spirit. (Ps. lxvii. 14.)

---

[1] Wisd. vii. 25, 26, 29.

[2] Apoc. xii. 1.

[3] Cf. Isa. lxi. 10.

[4] Ps. xxix. 2.

[5] The Martyrology (May 12) says, that this "holy Patriarch, illustrious for his graces and teaching, most faithfully withstood the Emperor Leo the Isaurian, when that Prince published an edict against the Holy Images. Elected to the Patriarchal throne, A.D. 715, expelled by the heretics, 730, and died May 12, 733.

Hail, thou living garden of Eden, planted towards the East by the right hand of the Most Merciful and Mighty God, wherein do grow to His glory rich lilies and unfading roses, for the healing of them that have drunk in death from the blighting and pestilential breezes of the bitter West, (Gen. ii. 8, 9); Eden, wherein hath sprung that Tree of life, Whereof if any man eat he shall live for ever. (Gen. ii. 9; iii. 22. John vi. 52.)

Hail, stately Palace of the King, most holy, stainless, purest, House of the Most High God, adorned with His Royal splendour, open to all, filled with Kingly dainties; Palace wherein is that spiritual bridal chamber, not made with hands, nor hung with divers colours, in the which the Eternal Word, when He would raise up fallen man, wedded flesh unto Himself, that He might reconcile unto the Father them who had cast themselves away.

Seventh Responsory.

[1] A garden enclosed is my sister, my spouse, a garden enclosed, a fountain sealed. O Mary, thy perfumes are a garden of delights. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Open to me, my sister, my love, my dove, my undefiled.

Answer. O Mary, thy perfumes are a garden of delights. [Alleluia.]

Eighth Lesson.

HAIL, O rich and shady Mountain of God, whereon pastured the True Lamb, Who hath taken away our sins and infirmities, (Hab. iii. 3;[2] Isa. liii. 4; John i. 29,)—mountain, whereout hath been cut without hands that Stone which hath smitten the altars of the idols, and become the head-stone of the corner, marvellous in our eyes. (Dan. ii. 34; Ps. cxvii. 22, 23.)

Hail, thou holy Throne of God, thou divinest store-house, thou temple of glory, thou bright crown, thou chosen treasure, thou mercy-seat for the whole world, thou heaven declaring the glory of God. (Ps. xviii. 2.)

Hail, thou vessel of pure gold, made to hold the manna that came down from heaven, the sweet food of our souls, even Christ. (Ex. xvi. 33; Heb. ix. 4; John vi. 49-51.)

Hail, O purest Virgin, most praiseworthy and most worshipful, hallowed treasury for the wants of all creatures; thou art the untilled earth, the unploughed field; thou art the vine full of flowers, the well overflowing with waters, Maiden and Mother; thou art the Mother that knew not a man, the hidden treasure of guilelessness, and the clear, bright star of holiness; by thy most acceptable prayers, strong from thy motherly mouth, obtain for all estates of men in the Church that they may continually tend unto Him Who is the Lord, and God, and Maker of thee, and of them, and of all, but of thee the Son also, conceived without man's intervention; obtain this, O Mother, pilot them to the harbour of peace.

Eighth Responsory.

My soul doth magnify the Lord; for He That is mighty hath done to me great things, and holy is His name. [Alleluia.]

Verse. For, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed.

Answer. For He That is mighty hath done to me great things, and holy is His name. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. For He That is mighty hath done to me great things, and holy is His name. [Alleluia.]

Ninth Lesson.

BE it thine to clothe God's priests with righteousness, and to make them shout aloud for joy (Ps. cxxxi. 9, 16,) in approved and stainless, and upright and glorious faith. Thine be it to guide in peace the sceptres of orthodox princes, even of princes who put their trust in thee to be the crown of their Majesty, and the Royal Robe of their greatness, and the firm foundation of their dominion, more than in purple, or fine gold, or pearls, or precious stones; thine be it to put under their feet the unfaithful nations, nations that blaspheme thee, and the God That was born of thee; thine be it to keep in meek obedience the people that are under them, according to the commandment of God. Behold, this is thine own city,[3] which hath thee for her towers and her foundations,—crown her with victory, gird the house of God with strength, keep undefiled the loveliness of His tabernacles,—as for them that praise thy name, be thou their deliverer from strife and bitterness of spirit. Free thou the prisoner, protect the wanderer, and if there be any that hath no refuge, be thou to him a consolation. Stretch forth thine hand and help the whole earth—so shall we year by year keep this and all thy feasts, and at last be found with thee in Christ JESUS, Who is Lord of all, and verily our God. To Him, with the Holy Father, Who is the Fountain of Life, and the co-eternal Spirit, Three Persons and One Substance, even as there is one Kingdom, be glory and strength, now and for ever. Amen.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. [4] Thou art all fair, O Mary, * there is no spot of original sin in thee. [Alleluia.]

Second Antiphon. [5] Thy raiment * is white as snow, and thy countenance as the sun. [Alleluia.]

Third Antiphon. [6] Thou art the exaltation of Jerusalem, * thou art the great glory of Israël, thou art the great rejoicing of our nation. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Antiphon. [6] O Virgin Mary, * blessed art thou of the Most High God, above all the women upon the earth. [Alleluia.]

Fifth Antiphon. [7] Draw us, * Maiden undefiled, we will run after thee in the odour of thy perfumes. [Alleluia.]

Chapter. (Prov. viii. 22.)

THE Lord possessed me in the beginning of His ways, before His works of old. I was ordained from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was. When there were no depths I was conceived.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who didst cause that a virgin should be conceived without sin, to the end that she might be made a meet dwelling-place for Thy dear Son; O God, Who through the precious death of the Same Thy Son foreseen by Thee, didst keep her clean from all stain, hear us, we beseech Thee, and grant that by her prayers, we also who are presently defiled, may finally be made pure, and so with her attain unto Thee. Through the Same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

PRIME.

Antiphon. Thou art all fair, &c., (First Antiphon at Lauds.)

In the Short Responsory, instead of "Thou That art to come into the world," is said :
Verse. Thou That wast born of the Virgin Mary.
And this is done throughout the whole Octave.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 9th of December, were born into the better life—

At Toledo, in Spain, the holy virgin and martyr Leocadia. In the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian she suffered a terrible imprisonment under Dacian, Prefect of Spain, and when she heard of the grievous torments of blessed Eulalia and the other martyrs, she knelt down in prayer and gave up her unstained spirit to Christ [in the year 303.]

At Carthage, the holy martyr Restitutus, Bishop [of that see,] concerning whom on whose solemn feast-day holy Augustine preached a discourse to the people.

Likewise, in Africa, the holy martyrs Peter, Successus, Bassian, Primitivus, and twenty others.

At Limoges, in France, [in the year 46,] the holy virgin and martyr Valeria.

At Verona, holy Proculus, Bishop [of that see, in the fourth century.] In the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian he was buffeted and cudgelled and thrust out of the city, but was at length restored to his own church and fell asleep in peace.

At Pavia, holy Syrus, the first Bishop of that city, who was eminent for the signs and powers of an apostle.

At Apamea, in Syria, blessed Julian, Bishop, who shone with holiness in the time of the Emperor Severus.

At Perigueux, in France, [about the year 586,] the holy Abbat Cyprian, a man of great holiness. [He lived as a hermit in the latter part of his life near Dordogne, at a place now called after him.]

At Nazianzus, [about the year 371,] holy Gorgonia, sister of blessed Gregory the theologian, who hath written of her graces and miracles.

At Grai, in Burgundy, [in the year 1636,] holy Peter Fourier, Canon Regular of Our Saviour, founder of the Canonesses Regular of Our Lady for the education of girls; whom, illustrious for his virtues and miracles, Leo the Thirteenth added to the roll of the Saints.

Chapter at the end. (Apoc. xii. 1.)

THERE appeared a great wonder in heaven: a Woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars.

SECOND VESPERS.

All as the First, except the following:

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. This day is a rod sprung from the root of Jesse: this day is Mary conceived without any stain of sin: this day hath she bruised the head of the old serpent. Alleluia.

In the Votive Office it is, "O holy Mary, &c.," (p. 102,) ending, "may all that keep the memory of thine holy and stainless conception, feel the might of thine assistance. [Alleluia.]"

A Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

DECEMBER 9.

Second Day within the Octave of the Immaculate Conception.

All as yesterday, except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST NOCTURN.

The Lessons are taken from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Dogmatic Bull of Pope Pius IX.

GOD is unspeakable. His ways are mercy and truth; His Will is Almighty Power; and His wisdom reacheth mightily from one end to another, and sweetly ordereth all things. (Wisd. viii. 1.) He from all eternity foresaw the sorrowful fall of man by the transgression of Adam, and, in His mysterious purpose, He decreed, before the worlds were, that the Word should be made flesh, to the end that man, who had been seduced by the fraud of the devil, might not perish, but that as in the first Adam all die, in Christ all might be made alive. (1 Cor. xv. 22.) And to this end, the Eternal Creator from the beginning, and before all ages, chose and ordained a woman to be the Mother of His Only-begotten Son, of whom He should take flesh and be born, in the blessed fulness of time. (Gal. iv. 4.) And this woman He loved with so great a love that He allowed His Will to be freely wrought in her. (1 Thess. iv. 3.)

Fifth Lesson.

WHEREFORE, He bestowed upon her, out of the treasure of the Divinity, such a wealth of gifts of grace as He hath bestowed upon none of the Angels and none of the Saints. He made her always free from any the slightest pollution of sin, so fair and so upright that no other of His works are like to her, and only Himself can we understand to excel her. Verily, this was most fitting, that this most worshipful Mother should be made bright with the brightness of uncontaminated holiness, and should conquer the old serpent by escaping altogether the stain of original sin, for she was that Mother to whom the Eternal Father was willing to give the Co-Eternal and Co-Equal Only-begotten Son of His love, to be her Son also.

Sixth Lesson.

THE Catholic Church, which, through the perpetual teaching of the Holy Ghost, is the pillar and ground of the truth, (1 Tim. iii. 15,) hath always held the original innocence of this most exalted Virgin to be bound up with her wonderful holiness, and her mighty dignity of Mother of God. This doctrine she hath felt herself to hold by the gift of God, and as part of that faith once delivered from heaven unto the Saints, (Jude 3,) and as time hath gone on, she hath continually explained, put forth, and upheld it. This belief is found strong in the earliest times, and rooted as it were in the hearts of Christ's faithful people; by the care and study of holy Bishops it hath been taught in all parts of the Catholic world; and the Church herself pointed to it when she allowed the Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary to be held as a feast, for exciting the piety and devotion of her children. In the case of the Saints the Church celebrateth only the day of their being made perfect at death, [but of her Divine Lord, of His Blessed Mother, and of St John the Baptist she venerateth the birth also, as of those sanctified in the womb.] When [therefore] she [goeth further and] maketh the case of the Blessed Virgin an exception to all others besides that of Christ, keeping holiday in honour of her conception [as well as of her birth,] it is manifest that she regardeth that Conception as altogether singular, wonderful, and different to all other conceptions, except only Christ's, namely, as holy.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 26.)

AT that time: The Angel Gabriel was sent from God, unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a Virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David, and the Virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

Homily by St Sophronius, Patriarch [of Jerusalem.][1] (On the Annunciation.)

[1] An eminent opponent of the Monothelite heretics. Elected to the Patriarchal throne, A.D. 634. Died March 11, 639 or 644.

When this blessed Angel was sent to the most pure virgin what did he say? In what words did he break the happy news of Redemption? "Hail, thou that art full of grace, the Lord is with thee." [1] [Now this word "Hail" is in the original "Chairé," which being interpreted signifieth "Rejoice."] The messenger of joy in his first word biddeth her rejoice. He knew well that his message was a message of good tidings of great joy to men, (Luke ii. 10,) yea, to all creatures,—a message of healing to all sicknesses. He knew well that his message was a message of God's light to a dark world. He knew well that it proclaimed the end of error. He knew well that it blunted the sting of death. He knew well that it broke the power of corruption. He knew well that it brought victory over hell. He knew well that it told of salvation to all the fallen children of Adam, groaning under that yoke of malediction which fell on them when they were thrust out of Eden, and banished from that happy home. Therefore, when he began to speak, he spoke in tones of rejoicing, and opened his message with sounds of gladness. Therefore made he the name of joy to herald the tidings of good, which were to be for a joy unto all people, whosoever should believe.

Eighth Lesson.

AND, of a truth, it was fitting that God's proclamation of joy should open with the accents of gladness. And this is the reason why the angel nameth joy first, because he knew the coming fruits of his message, and that his converse with the Virgin was to bring joy to the whole world. Can we find any joy or any brightness like the joy and the brightness of that salutation addressed to the Blessed Mother of gladness? Rejoice, O mother of joy more than heavenly! Rejoice, O thou that nourishest joy in the highest! Rejoice, O Lady, full of the joy of salvation! Rejoice, O thou that bringest a joy that passeth not away! Rejoice, O mysterious treasury dispensing unspeakable joy! Rejoice, O most blessed fountain, overflowing with unfailing joy! Rejoice, O store-house of God, filled with the everlasting joy of eternity! Rejoice, O fair tree, bearing fruit of life-giving joy! Rejoice, O Maiden Mother of God! Rejoice, O thou that after child-birth remainest a virgin! Rejoice, O wonder, who, after all wonders, art still the most wonderful!

Ninth Lesson.

WHO shall worthily set forth thy glory? Who shall make bold to say what thou art? Who will hold himself able to tell of all thy splendour? Thou art the exaltation of humanity; thou art made much higher than the Angels; thy brightness hath thrown the brightness of the Archangels into shadow; thou lookest down upon the lofty seats of the Thrones; thou makest the height of the Lordships to seem low; thy rank taketh precedence before the rank of the Principalities; compared with thee the Powers are weakness; thou art a Mighty one mightier than all the Mighty; thine earthly eyes see further than the contemplation of the Cherubim can reach; the Seraphim have six wings, but thy flight is nobler than their's; in a word, thou hast far excelled every other work of God; thou wast far purer than any other creature; and thou hast conceived the Creator of all creatures, carried Him in thy womb, and brought Him forth; thou hast been chosen, out of all that He has made, to be His mother.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 10th day of December, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy Pope Melchiades [who reigned 3 years, 7 months, and 62 days, from the year 310 till January 10, 314], who suffered much in the persecution under the Emperor Maximian, but fell asleep in the Lord after peace had been restored to the church.

Upon the same day the holy martyrs Carpophorus the Priest, and Abundius the Deacon. In the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian they were first most cruelly cudgelled and recommitted to prison, where they were denied food and drink, then they were racked, and suffered long imprisonment, and lastly were beheaded [in the year 303.]

At Merida, [in Estramadura,] in Spain, [in the same year,] under the Emperor Maximian, the holy virgin and martyr Eulalia, at the age of twelve years. The President Dacian commanded her to be put to many tortures for confessing Christ; at last she was hung upon the rack, and lacerated with hooks; and, burning torches being put to her sides, some of the flame and smoke went down her throat and she gave up the ghost.

Likewise at Merida, the holy virgin and martyr Julia, who was a companion of the blessed Eulalia, and the only one who clave unto her as she went to suffer.

At Alexandria, under the Emperor Gallerius Maximian, the holy martyrs Mennas, Hermogenes, and Eugraphus.

At Lentini, in Sicily, the holy soldiers, Mercury and his Companions, all martyrs, who were slain with the sword in the time of the Emperor Licinius, under the President Tertyllus.

At Ancyra, in Galatia, the holy martyr Gemellus, who, after most grievous torments under the Emperor Julian the Apostate, achieved martyrdom by the death of the cross.

At Vienne, [about the year 650,] the holy Confessor Sindulph, Bishop [of that see.]

At Brescia, holy Deusdedit, Bishop [of that see.]

At Loretto, in Picenum, is commemorated the translation [in the year 1294] of the holy house of Mary the Mother of God, wherein the Word was made flesh.

At Vespers a Commemoration is made of the Week-day and then of St Melchiades[2] Pope and Martyr. Antiphon and Verse and Answer from the Common Office, (p. 594.) Prayer, "Mercifully consider our weaknesses," &c., (p. 599.)

---

[1] The above sentence is inserted to give meaning to the rest of the Homily, which was written in Greek.

[2] Elected to succeed Eusebius, July 2, 311. Died Jan. 10, 314.

DECEMBER 10.

Third Day within the Octave of the Immaculate Conception.

All as on the Feast, except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST NOCTURN.

The Lessons are taken from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Dogmatic Bull of Pope Pius IX.

BOTH in her Offices and in the most holy Liturgy the Church hath been accustomed to apply to the creation of Mary the language in which the Holy Scriptures set forth the Eternal Generation of the Uncreated Wisdom, and that, because Mary was predestined in the decree of the Incarnation of the same Wisdom. This practice hath been received by the faithful in all quarters, and plainly showeth what hath been the mind of the Church of Rome, which is the mother and mistress of all Churches, on the subject of the sinless conception of the Virgin. Nevertheless, it is fitting to set forth in greater detail the celebrated acts of this Church, on account of that pre-eminent rank and power which all other Churches are bound to yield her, because she is the centre of Catholic truth and unity, wherein alone Doctrine is always preserved pure, and from whom all the other Churches must needs receive the tradition of the Faith.

Fifth Lesson.

THUS it hath always been one of the most striking features of the Roman Church that she hath most powerfully asserted, guarded, promoted, and vindicated the doctrine that the Virgin was conceived without sin. It hath been the boast of Our Predecessors that by their authority they instituted in the Roman Church the Feast of the Conception of Mary, and caused it to be observed with an Office and a Mass wherein her privilege of immunity from original sin was openly asserted. Our said Predecessors have done everything in their power to increase the love of the faithful for this doctrine: by granting Indulgences in its honour; by giving permission to cities, provinces, and kingdoms to choose for their Patroness the Mother of God, under her title "Conceived without sin;" by approving of Guilds, Congregations, and Associations of persons under vows, all instituted in honour of the sinless Conception; by praising the piety of those who have founded Convents, Hospitals, Altars and Churches named from this belief; and lastly, by encouraging those who have taken an oath to defend this opinion to the utmost of their power.

Sixth Lesson.

MOREOVER, Our said Predecessors with great joy ordained that the Feast of the said Conception should be observed as of the same rank as that of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin, and appointed that it should be kept with an Octave throughout the whole Church. They added this Feast to those which are commanded to be kept with solemnity, and ordered that the ceremony called a "Papal Chapel" should take place every year on this Feast in our Patriarchal Basilica of our Lady of the Snows. And above all did they rejoice in the hope of strengthening this belief in the minds of the faithful, and stirring them up to love and venerate the Virgin conceived without sin, when they granted permission to add to the Litany of Loretto the invocation, "Queen conceived without original sin," and to insert the word "stainless" into the Preface of the Mass on this Feast, that so the law of prayer might become the law of belief.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 26.)

AT that time: The Angel Gabriel was sent from God, unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David, and the virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

Homily by St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (2nd on this text.)

Rejoice, father Adam, and yet more thou mother Eve, ye that are the source of all, and the ruin of all, and the unhappy cause of their ruin before ye gave them birth. Be comforted both in your daughter, and such a daughter; but chiefly thou, O woman, of whom the first evil came, and who hast cast thy slur upon all women. The time is come for the slur to be taken away, and for the man to have nothing to say against the woman. At the first, when he unwisely began to make excuse, he scrupled not to throw the blame upon her, saying, "The woman whom Thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat." Wherefore, O Eve, betake thyself to Mary: Mother, betake thyself to thy daughter: let the daughter answer for the mother: let her take away her mother's reproach; let her make up to her father for her mother's fault: for if man be fallen by means of woman, it is by means of woman that he is raised up again.

Eighth Lesson.

WHAT didst thou say, O Adam? "The woman whom Thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat." These are wrathful words, by the which thou dost rather magnify than diminish thine offence. Nevertheless, Wisdom hath defeated thy malice. God asked thee that He might find in thee an occasion of pardon, but, in that He found it not, He hath sought and found it in the Treasure of His Own mercy. One woman answereth for another; the wise for the foolish; the lowly for the proud; for her that gave thee of the tree of death, another that giveth thee to taste of the tree of life; for her that brought thee the bitter food of sin, another that giveth thee of the sweet fruits of righteousness. Wherefore accuse the woman no more, but speak in thanksgiving, and say, "Lord, the woman whom Thou hast given me, she hath given me of the tree of life, and I have eaten; and it is in my mouth sweeter than honey, for thereby hast Thou quickened me." (Ps. cxviii. 103, 93.) Behold, it was for this that the angel Gabriel was sent to the Virgin, to the most worshipful of women, a woman more wonderful than all women, the restorer of them that went before, and the quickener of them that come after her.

Ninth Lesson.

WAS it not of this thy daughter, O Adam, that God spake when He said unto the serpent, "I will put enmity between thee and the woman"? And if thou wilt still doubt that He speaketh of Mary, hear what followeth: "She shall bruise thy head." Who won this conquest but Mary? She brought to nought the whole wiles of Satan, whether for the pollution of her body or the injury of her soul. Was it not of her that Solomon spake, where he saith, "Who shall find a virtuous woman?" (Prov. xxxi. 10.) The wise man knew the weaknesses of women, how frail they are in body, and how changeable in mind. But he had read that God had promised that the enemy, who had prevailed by means of a woman, was by a woman to be overthrown, and he believed. But he wondered greatly, and said, "Who shall find a virtuous woman?" that is to say: If our salvation, and the bringing back of that which is lost, and the final triumph over the enemy, is in the hand of a woman, it must needs be that a virtuous woman be found, meet to work in that matter.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Week-day, and then of St Melchiades. Antiphon, and Verse and Answer from the Common Office for a Martyr, (p. 594.) Prayer, "Mercifully consider our weakness, &c." (p. 599.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 11th day of December, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy Confessor Pope Damasus [of Spain], who condemned the arch-heretic Apollinaris, and restored to his papacy Peter, Pope of Alexandria, who had been driven into exile; moreover, he found the bodies of many holy martyrs, and caused to be engraved upon their tombstones verses composed by himself. [He died in the year 384.]

Likewise at Rome, the holy martyr Thrason, who fed at his own expense Christians who were in prison or sent to work in the baths, or at other public works. He was arrested by order of the Emperor Maximian, and crowned with martyrdom along with two others named Pontian and Pretextatus [about the year 293.]

At Amiens, under the same Emperor Maximian, the holy martyrs Victoricus and Fuscian. Rictiovarus the President had iron spikes driven into their nostrils and ears, and red-hot nails hammered into their temples; after which their eyes[1] were torn out, their bodies pierced with darts, and their heads cut off, and so they and holy Gentian, their host, passed away to be for ever with the Lord [in the year 303.]

[At Astrahara, near Persepolis,] in Persia, the holy martyr Barsabas, [with ten monks, whose Abbat he was, in the year 342, at the beginning of the great persecution under Sapor II.]

In Spain, the holy martyr Eutychius.

At Piacenza, holy Sabinus, Bishop of that see [in the fourth century], famous for miracles.

At Constantinople, [about the year 489,] holy Daniel the Stylite.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

DECEMBER 11.

St Damasus, Pope and Confessor.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

The Vespers begin at the Chapter.

Prayer throughout the Office.

HEAR our prayers, O Lord, and at the petition of Thy blessed Bishop and Confessor Damasus, mercifully grant us pardon and peace. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the Immaculate Conception, and of the Week-day.

COMPLINE.

The last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incaration.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

The Lessons are taken from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

DAMASUS was a Spaniard, a man of eminence and of great learning in the Scriptures, [and was elected to the Chair of Peter in the year of our Lord, 366. In 381] he convoked the First Council of Constantinople, wherein he crushed the wicked heresy of Eunomius and Macedonius. He confirmed the condemnation of the Assembly, at Rimini, which condemnation had already been pronounced by Liberius. This Assembly of Rimini was that in which, to use the language of St Jerome, Valens and Ursacius brought it about through trickery that the Faith of Nice was abrogated by mob law, and the world afterwards groaned in amazement to find itself Arian.

Fifth Lesson.

THIS Pope built two Basilicas, first, St Lawrence's, near Pompey's Theatre, which he magnificently enriched, and endowed with houses and farms; and, secondly, another, over the Catacombs on the Road to Ardea. He also consecrated the Platonia, where the bodies of St Peter and St Paul lay for some time, and decorated it with elegant inscriptions in poetry composed by himself. He wrote on the subject of virginity both in prose and verse, and likewise many other poems on various subjects.

---

[1] This passage is very peculiar, for if "tempera eorum clavis ardentibus transfixa fuissent," it must have been completely indifferent to them what might afterwards be done to their eyes, &c. The order had probably been given to put them through a certain process, which was continued to the end, although the second stage, perhaps by the intentional humanity of the executioners, had put an end to their lives.

Sixth Lesson.

HE ordained that false accusers should be punished for the offences which they had falsely laid to the charge of their neighbours. He established the usage, which already prevailed in many churches, of singing the Psalms, both by day and by night, by alternate choirs, and of adding at the end of each Psalm the words, "Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost." It was at his command that St Jerome revised the translation of the New Testament to accord with the Greek text. He ruled the Church for seventeen years, two months, and twenty-six days. He held five Advent ordinations, wherein he ordained thirty-one Priests, eleven Deacons, and sixty-two Bishops for divers Sees. At length he fell asleep in the Lord, in the reign of Theodosius the Elder, [upon the 10th day of December, in the year 384, being] aged nearly eighty years, and full of righteousness, truth, and judgment. He was buried beside his mother and sister in the Church which he had himself founded on the Road to Ardea. His reliques were afterwards taken to the Basilica of St Lawrence, which is thence sometimes called "San Lorenzo in Damaso."

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619.)

At Lauds a Commemoration of the Immaculate Conception, and of the Week-day.

PRIME, TERCE, SEXT, NONE.

The last verse of all the Hymns is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

At Prime, "Thou That wast born of the Virgin Mary."

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 12th day of December were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyr Synesius, who was ordained a Reader in the time of the blessed Pope Xystus, and converted many to Christ; he was accused before the Emperor Aurelian, and received the crown of martyrdom by being beheaded [in the year 270.]

At Alexandria, under the Emperor Decius, the holy martyrs Epimachus and Alexander; they were long kept in chains and put to divers torments, but they persevered in the faith, and at the last were burnt [in the year 250.]

Likewise at Alexandria, the holy women Ammonaria the virgin, Mercuria, Dionysia, and another called also Ammonaria. In the aforesaid persecution under the Emperor Decius, the first of these died a blessed death by the sword, after overcoming torments unheard of. The judge was ashamed to be conquered by women, and shrank from causing the application to them of the same tortures as to the first, and so conquered by their steadfastness, ordered them to be beheaded [in the year 250.]

On the same day, the holy martyrs Hermogenes, Donatus, and twenty-two others.

At Treves, [in the fourth century,] under the President Rictiovarus, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, suffered the holy martyrs Maxentius, Constantius, Crescentius, Justinus, and their Companions.

Vespers of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

DECEMBER 12.

Fifth Day within the Octave of the Immaculate Conception.

Semi-double.

All as on the Feast, except that none of the Antiphons are doubled, and whatever else is given here.

At Vespers a Commemoration of St Damasus, (Antiphon, "Being made the Chief Bishop, &c.," (p. 618) and Prayer as at his First Vespers) and of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

The Lessons are taken from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Dogmatic Bull of Pope Pius IX.

THE language used in public worship is the necessary offspring of the teaching which it expresseth, and the former can have no safety unless the latter be settled. Wherefore Our Predecessors the Roman Pontiffs, while encouraging the pious love of the faithful for the Conception of the Blessed Virgin, have taken care ceaselessly to inculcate the sinlessness of the same. They have always particularly insisted that the Feast should be observed not in honour of Mary's sanctification, a false opinion, most foreign to the mind of the Church [but which hath nevertheless been maintained by some,] but in honour of her Conception itself.

Fifth Lesson.

THE same Our Predecessors have likewise resisted the dreams of those who have imagined that in the sinless Conception there were Two Instants, and that the Church celebrateth the Second and not the First. Indeed, Our said Predecessors have considered the sinlessness of the First Instant to be as much a truth for their assertion, protection, and promulgation, as the sinlessness of the Conception at all. Hence came those words in which Our Predecessor Alexander VII. in a decree declareth the mind of the Church, and saith, "Christ's faithful people, drawn by love to His most blessed Mother, the Virgin Mary, have of a long time believed that God, at the very First Instant in which He made her soul and joined it to her body, by a special grace and privilege granted to her, through the merits of His dear Son, Christ JESUS, the Saviour of the world, Whose precious death He foreknew, cleansed her from all sin, original as well as actual; and it is in this belief, and no other, that the said faithful of Christ have always kept with devotion and joy the Feast of the said Conception."

Sixth Lesson.

IT hath always been one of the most weighty cares of Our said Predecessors the Roman Pontiffs to protect the doctrine of the sinlessness of Mary's Conception from any sort of attack or corruption. Not only have they suffered no one to condemn and traduce it, but they have gone much further, and in public and repeated declarations have averred: That that doctrine which holdeth that the Virgin was conceived without sin is a doctrine, the arguments in support of which are strong enough to enable the profession thereof to be made at the time of public worship, which is antient, which is almost universal, which is one of those which the Church of Rome encourageth and protecteth, and which is worthy even to be expressed in the Holy Liturgy itself, and in the most solemn prayers of the Church. Our said Predecessors did not stop even here, but in order to preserve the doctrine of the Virgin's sinless Conception from any injury, they strictly forbade that the opposite opinion should be maintained either in public or in private, to the end that it might at length die out under their disapprobation.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 26.)

AT that time: The Angel Gabriel was sent from God, unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a Virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David, and the Virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

Homily by St Tarasius, Patriarch [of Constantinople.][1] (On the Presentation of the Mother of God.)

O Mary, where shall I find words to praise thee? Maiden undefiled, virgin unstained, exaltation of women, glory of daughters! Holy Maiden Mother, blessed art thou among women, thy glory is in thy guilelessness, and thy name is a name of purity. In thee the curse of Adam is done away, and the debt of Eve paid. Thou art the clean offering of Abel, chosen out of the firstlings of the flock, a pure sacrifice. Thou art the hope of Enoch, that firm hope that he had in God, and was not ashamed. Thou art the grace that was in Enoch in this life, and his transit to a better. Thou art the Ark of Noah, and the bond of reconciliation with God in a new regeneration. Thou art the exceeding glory of the kingdom and Priesthood of Melchisedech. Thou art the unshaken trust of Abraham, and his faith in the promise of children that were to be. Thou art the renewed oblation and the reasonable burnt-offering of Isaac. Thou art the ladder that Jacob saw going up to heaven, and the most noble of all his children throughout the twelve tribes of Israël. According to the flesh thou art the daughter of Judah. Thou art the modesty of Joseph, and the overthrow of the old Egypt, yea, and of the Synagogue of the Jews. O purest! Thou art the book of Moses the Lawgiver, whereon the new covenant is written with the finger of God, for the new Israël, fleeing from the spiritual Egypt, even as the old law was written upon Sinai, for the old Israël, that Israël which was fed in the wilderness upon manna and water from the rock, whereof both were types of Christ, which was yet to come from thy womb, as a bridegroom from his chamber. Thou art Aaron's rod that budded. Thou art David's daughter, all glorious within, clothed in a vesture of gold, wrought about with divers colours.

Eighth Lesson.

THOU art the vision of the Prophets and the fulfilment of those things which they foretold. Thou art the gate whereof Ezekiel spake, when he prophesied, and said, "This gate shall be shut, it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter in by it; because the LORD, the God of Israël, hath entered in by it, therefore it shall be shut" (xliv. 2.) Thou art the Rod of Jesse, whereof Isaiah spake, (xi. 1,) even that Rod whose Flower is Christ, and whose offshoots shall choke out all the seedlings of sin, and fill the earth with plants of grace. Thou art the Covenant foretold by Jeremiah when he said (xxxi. 31) "Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israël, and with the house of Judah, not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers"—thereby signifying the coming of thy Son, and calling upon all nations to worship Him for their God, even to the uttermost parts of the earth. Thou art the great mountain spoken of by Daniel, the man greatly beloved, wherefrom is cut without man's hands the corner-stone, that is, Christ, which hath smitten in pieces the parti-coloured image of the old serpent. I honour thee as the unpolluted fountain, I proclaim that thou art full of grace, I praise thee as the clean and undefiled tabernacle of God. Verily, where sin abounded, grace did much more abound. As by a woman death entered into the world, by a woman came the power to rise again. The serpent gave us to eat deadly fruit, but that fall hath ended in the life-giving Bread of Immortality. Eve, our first mother, brought forth Cain the first murderer; thou, O Mary, hast brought forth Christ, the first-fruits of life and of the resurrection. Ear hath not heard the like. It hath not entered into the heart of man to conceive this new thing. Blessed be the unspeakable depths of the Wisdom of God.

Ninth Lesson.

AND now we, the people of God, a holy generation, an acceptable congregation, the nestlings of the dove of peace, children of grace, do with purified minds and unpolluted lips, praise God in the tongues of all nations in this joyful solemnity of the Virgin. This is a noble Feast wherein the Angels keep holiday and men do most fitly offer praise, even a feast wherein we echo with reverence and joy that salutation first spoken by Gabriel. Hail Mary! Hail, thou Paradise of God the Father, whence the knowledge of Him floweth in broad rivers to the ends of the earth! Hail, Dwelling-place of God the Son, whence He came forth clothed in flesh! Hail, mysterious Tabernacle of God the Holy Ghost! Hail, thou that art holier than the Cherubim! Hail, thou that art more glorious than the Seraphim! Hail, thou that art nobler than the heavens! Hail, thou that art brighter than the sun! Hail, thou that art fairer than the moon! Hail, manifold splendour of the stars! Hail, light cloud, dropping the dew of heaven! Hail, holy breeze, clearing the air of the vapours of sin! Hail, royal theme of the Prophets! Hail, sound of the Apostles gone out into all the earth! Hail, most excellent confession of the Martyrs! Hail, just hope of the Patriarchs! Hail, peculiar honour of all the Saints! Hail, source of health to dying creatures! Hail, O Queen, ambassadress of peace! Hail, stainless crown of motherhood! Hail, advocate of all under heaven! Hail, restoration of the whole world! Hail, thou that art full of grace, the Lord is with thee, even the Lord that is before thee, and from thee, and that is with us. To Him, with the Father, and the most holy and Life-giving Spirit, be ascribed all praise, now and ever, world without end. Amen.

[1] The Martyrology for Feb. 25 mentions at Constantinople, "the holy Bishop Tarasius, famous for learning and godliness, addressed to whom there exists an Epistle of Pope Adrian I. in defence of holy Images." Consecrated on a Christmas Day, about A.D. 780. Died Feb. 25, 806.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the 13th day of December, were born into the better life—

At Syracuse, in Sicily, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, the holy Virgin and martyr Lucy. By command of Paschasius the Consular she was handed over to panders to make a public mock of her chastity, but when they would have led her away they could not move her even with ropes, and not even when these were drawn by many yoke of oxen; then they poured upon her boiling pitch, rosin, and oil; but these did not hurt her, and at length she was smitten in the neck with a sword, and so finished her testimony [in the year 303.]

In Armenia, in the same persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, the holy martyrs Eustratius, Auxentius, Eugenius, Mardarius, and Orestes. Eustratius was first put to dreadful torments under Lysias, and afterwards to the like at Sebaste, along with Orestes, under the President Agricolaus, and was then cast into a furnace, wherein he gave up the ghost. Orestes was laid upon an iron bed heated with fire, and so passed away to be ever with the Lord. The others finished their testimony in divers ways in the country of the Arabraci, after enduring most cruel sufferings under the President Lysias. Their bodies were afterwards brought to Rome and honourably buried in the church of St Apollinaris.

In the island of Sulcis,[1] off the coast of Sardinia, [in the second century,] under the Emperor Hadrian, the holy martyr Antiochus.

At Cambray, in Gaul, the holy Confessor Aubert, Bishop [of that see, and of Arras. He was consecrated on March 21, 633, and died in the year 669.]

At Ponthieu, [in Gaul, in the year 669,] the holy Confessor Josse, [King of Brittany and hermit at Ponthieu.]

In the country of Strasbourg, [in the eighth century,] the holy Virgin Othilia. [First Abbess of Hohenburg, of the order of St Benedict, she was daughter of a Duke of Alsace.]

At Moulins, in Gaul, the holy widow Jeane Frances Frémiot de Chantal, [1572-1641,] foundress of the Congregation of Nuns of the Visitation of St Mary. She was eminent by her noble birth, by the holiness of her life, which she sanctified unceasingly in the four different states of maiden, wife, widow, and nun, and by the grace of working miracles, and Clement XIII. enrolled her name among those of the Saints. Her sacred body was translated to Annecy, in Savoy, and there entombed with solemn pomp in the first church of their order. Clement the XIV. ordered her feast to be kept by the Universal Church upon the 21st day of August.

Vespers of the following.

DECEMBER 13.

St Lucy, Virgin and Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Virgin and Martyr, (p. 641,) except what is given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons at the Psalms, and Prayer from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. In patience hast thou possessed thy soul, Lucy, Bride of Christ: thou hast hated the things that are in the world, and art glorified among the Angels; thou hast shed thine own blood, and conquered the Adversary.

A Commemoration is made of the Immaculate Conception, and of the Week-day.

COMPLINE.

The last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from 1 Cor. vii. 25 (p. 642.)

First Responsory.

Maiden Lucy, why seekest thou of me that which thou thyself canst presently give thy mother? For thy faith hath holpen her, and, behold, she is made whole—because thou hast made in thy virginity a pleasant dwelling-place for thy God.

Verse. Even as Christ hath by me glorified Catania, so by thee shall He glorify Syracuse.

Answer. Because thou hast made in thy virginity a pleasant dwelling-place for thy God.

Second Responsory.

I besought my Lord JESUS Christ that this fire might not take hold upon me; and I obtained from the Lord that I should not finish my testimony for yet a while.

Verse. For so much as they loved

---

[1] Now called Sant' Antioco.

me,[1] so bitterly spake they against me: but I gave myself unto prayer.[2]

Answer. And I obtained from the Lord that I should not finish my testimony for yet a while.

Third Responsory.

The Lord made her to prevail in the battle, and she was glorified in the sight of God and man: she spake wisdom before princes: and the Lord of all loved her.

Verse. God shall help her with His countenance: God is in the midst of her: she shall not be moved.

Answer. And the Lord of all loved her.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And the Lord of all loved her.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

LUCY was a maiden of Syracuse, the daughter of a noble Christian family. Her mother Eutychia, being afflicted with an issue of blood, went with her to Catania, to pray before the body of the blessed Agatha. Lucy, by her earnest prayers at the grave, obtained her mother's cure, through the intercession of Agatha, and then immediately begged her to give to Christ's poor the whole dowry which had been set apart for herself. As soon, therefore, as they returned to Syracuse, they sold the property, and distributed the money among the poor.

Fourth Responsory.

Come, Bride of Christ, &c. (First Responsory in the Common Office.)

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN this came to the ears of one to whom her parents had betrothed her against her will, he accused Lucy before Paschasius the Prefect of being a Christian. The Prefect could not move her to commit idolatry, either by his entreaties or his threats; nay, the more he strove to persuade her, so much the bolder did she become in her confession. Then, seeing that he could prevail nothing, "words," saith he, "will cease when we come to blows."[3] To whom the virgin answered, "God's servants will never want words, for the Lord Christ hath said: When ye shall stand before kings and governors, take no thought how or what ye shall speak, for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak, for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost Which speaketh in you." (Matth. x. 18-20; Mark xiii. 9-11.)

Fifth Responsory.

Grace is poured into thy lips, &c., (Second Responsory in the Common Office.)

Sixth Lesson.

THEN Paschasius asked her saying, "Is the Holy Ghost in thee?" Whereto she answered, "They that live in chastity and piety are the temples of the Holy Ghost." "Then," said he, "I will send thee to be prostituted in a brothel, and get the Holy Ghost out of thee." To whom she made reply, "Thou canst not prostitute my will. If thou cause this poor body to be violated, the crown of my soul's purity will be brighter through suffering." Then he bade them take her to the place of shame, but by the power of God it became impossible to move her. Whereupon, being inflamed with anger, he had pitch, resin, and boiling oil poured upon her, and then set on fire. But the fire did not take hold upon her. Therefore he practised many other cruelties upon her, and at last thrust a sword through her neck. When Lucy had received this wound, she began to speak of the peace of the Church, which it should enjoy after the death of Diocletian and Maximian, and presently returned her soul into the hands of God. She testified on the thirteenth day of December.[4] Her body was buried at Syracuse, but afterwards taken to Constantinople, and lastly to Venice.

Sixth Responsory.

In thy comeliness, &c., (Third Responsory in the Common Office.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xiii. 44, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 651.)

Seventh Responsory.

Because of truth, &c., (Fourth Responsory in the Common Office for Holy Women.)

Eighth Responsory.

Thou hast loved righteousness, &c., (Fifth Responsory in the Common Office for Holy Women,) to which is added:

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Therefore God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. When holy Lucy prayed, * the blessed Agatha appeared to her, and comforted the handmaid of Christ.

Second Antiphon. Maiden Lucy, * why seekest thou of me that which thou thyself canst presently give thy mother?

Third Antiphon. Maiden Lucy, * by thee shall Christ glorify Syracuse.

Fourth Antiphon. I bless Thee, O Father of my Lord JESUS Christ, because through Thy Son the fire is quenched round about me.

Fifth Antiphon. Lucy my sister, * maiden consecrated to God, why seekest thou of me that which thou thyself canst presently give thy mother?

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Lucy, Bride of Christ, thou art become as a pillar that cannot be shaken; all the people wait for thee, until thou receive the crown of life. Alleluia.

Prayer throughout the Office, "Graciously hear us, O God of our salvation, &c.," (p. 652.) "Thy blessed handmaiden and witness Lucy."

A Commemoration is made of the Immaculate Conception, and of the Week-day.

[3] There is an untranslateable pun on verba and verbera.

[4] "She died in prison of the wounds she had received, about the year 304." Alban Butler.

PRIME, TERCE, SEXT, NONE.

The last verse of all the Hymns is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

The Antiphons are taken successively from Lauds, omitting the Fourth.

At Prime, "Thou That wast born of the Virgin Mary."

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 14th day of December, were born into the better life—

At Alexandria, [in the year 250,] the holy martyrs Heron, Arsenius, and Isidore, and a lad Dioscorus. In the persecution under the Emperor Decius the judge caused Heron, Arsenius, and Isidore to be lacerated with divers torments, and, when he saw them to be all equally steadfast, to be burnt. Dioscorus was heavily whipped, but God was pleased that, for the comfort of the faithful, he should then be set at liberty.

At Antioch, the holy martyrs Drusus, Zosimus, and Theodore.

Upon the same day, [in the year 284,] the holy martyrs Justus and Abundius. Under Olybrius the President, in the persecution under the Emperor Numerian, they were cast into the fire, and when they appeared thence unburnt, they were beheaded.

At Rheims, the holy martyrs Nicasius, Bishop, [in the year 400,] of that see; the Virgin Eutropia, his sister, and their Companions, who were slain by the savage enemies of the Church [in the year 407.]

In the island of Cyprus the blessed Spiridion, Bishop [of Tremithos;] he was one of those Confessors whose right eyes were put out and their left thighs hamstrung, and were condemned to penal servitude in the mines by the Emperor Galerius Maximian. He was illustrious for the gift of prophecy, and the fame of miracles, and at the Council of Nice, [held in 325,] he confuted and converted to the faith a heathen philosopher who attacked the Christian religion, [and died after the year 347.]

At Bergamo, the holy Confessor Viator, Bishop [of that see.]

At Pavia, holy Pompey, Bishop [of that see.]

At Naples, in Campania, [in the year 596,] holy Agnello, Abbat [at Naples,] famous for the grace of miracles, who, when the city had been beleaguered, had often been seen with a flag marked with a cross, delivering it from the enemy.

At Ubeda, in Spain, the holy Confessor John of the Cross [died in 1591;] a companion of holy Teresa in reforming the Carmelites, whose feast is kept upon the 24th day of November.

At Milan, the holy Hermit Matronian.

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphons at the Psalms and Prayer from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The Holy Ghost came upon the bride of Christ in great power, so that she could not be moved.

A Commemoration is made of the Immaculate Conception, and of the Week-day.

At Compline the Hymn is altered as at the other Hours.

Note. If the Feast of St Lucy should fall upon the Third Sunday in Advent, it is merely commemorated at both Vespers and Lauds without having the Ninth Lesson, (p. 648.)

DECEMBER 14.

Seventh Day within the Octave of the Immaculate Conception.

Semi-double.

All as on the Feast, except that none of the Antiphons are doubled, and whatever else is differently given here.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

The Lessons are taken from Scripture according to the Season. If this day happen to be Ember Wednesday, they are from Proverbs viii. 12, (p. 635.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Dogmatic Bull of Pope Pius IX.

IT is known to all men, with what care this doctrine of the sinlessness of the conception of the Mother of God hath been handed down, set forth, and defended by the most distinguished Religious Orders, Theologians, Universities, and Doctors skilled in the things of God. All men know likewise how carefully Christian Bishops, even in their public teaching, have professed the doctrine that through the merits of Christ our Lord and Saviour, foreknown by God, the Holy Virgin Mary, Mother of God, was delivered from ever being the victim of original sin, but, on the contrary, had the fruits of redemption applied to her at the very moment of her Conception, and was therefore redeemed in a nobler way than others. But the weightiest fact of all is that the most holy Council of Trent, when, in accordance with the Holy Scriptures, as interpreted by the holy Fathers and the approved Councils, it decreed that all men are conceived in sin, expressly added that it did not mean thereby to say that the blessed and stainless Mary, Mother of God, did not form an exception to the rule. From this declaration of the Fathers of Trent it can clearly be drawn that there is nothing in the Bible, nothing in tradition, and nothing in the Fathers which can rightly be adduced against this prerogative of the most Blessed Virgin; nay, as far as circumstances demanded, they as much as declared her free from the original stain.

Fifth Lesson.

IN truth, this doctrine upon the Conception of the most Blessed Virgin is day by day more earnestly set forth by the graver thought of the Church, by her teaching, by her care, by her learning, and by her wisdom. It is explained, taught, confirmed, and wonderfully spread among all peoples and nations of the Catholic world. The Church hath received it from the Fathers, as a part of the original faith, attested strongly by the most ancient and venerable monuments of both the Eastern and Western Churches. Indeed, the Fathers and Ecclesiastical writers, learned in Holy Scripture, are marked by no more earnest feature than that in all their books and Scriptural Commentaries, written for the confirmation of doctrine, and the edification of the faithful, they do all in divers ways preach and teach the excelling holiness of this Virgin, her dignity, her freedom from any stain of sin, and the glory of her victory over the dark enemy of our race.

Sixth Lesson.

ALL Commentators on the Book of Genesis remark that passage where God at the very time of the Fall speaketh of the Atonement, to the confusion of the lying serpent, and the comfortable hope of man, and saith: "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed," and all the ancients teach that by this passage is meant the most merciful Saviour of mankind, namely, our Lord JESUS Christ, the Only-Begotten Son of God and His most blessed Mother the Virgin Mary, as if the enmity which both He and she felt against the devil was, in a sense, of a kind common to them Both. Christ took our nature upon Him, and is become the Mediator between God and man, (1 Tim. ii. 5,) blotting out the handwriting that was against us, nailing it to His Cross, (Col. ii. 14,) and the most Holy Virgin, by that subtle, close, and abiding tie which bindeth mother to Child, feeleth along with Him His truceless enmity to the serpent, and He, through His merits, hath granted to her that moment of victory wherein her stainless foot bruised the serpent's head.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 26.)

AT that time: The angel Gabriel was sent from God, unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David, and the virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

Homily by St Sophronius, Patriarch [of Jerusalem.] (On the Annunciation.)

Blessed indeed art thou among women, for thou hast turned the curse of Eve into a blessing; thou hast even brought a blessing upon Adam, when he lay smitten by the first sentence of death. Blessed indeed art thou among women, for thou art the mean whereby the Father's blessing hath come upon man, and delivered him from the old curse. Blessed indeed art thou among women, for by thee thy fathers have found salvation; the salutation of the Angel telleth thee that thou art about to bear them a Deliverer. Blessed indeed art thou among women, for thou, not knowing a man, conceivest a Son through Whom the whole earth shall be blessed, and bring forth thorns and thistles no more. Blessed indeed art thou among women, for thou remainest thyself no more than a woman, and yet art made Mother of God. If That holy Thing Which shall be born of thee be truly God made Man, then art thou truly Mother of God, for God is made thine Offspring.

Eighth Lesson.

"FEAR not, Mary, for thou hast found grace with God"—abiding grace. Thou hast found grace with God — exceeding grace. Thou hast found grace with God — all desirable grace. Thou hast found grace with God — greater grace than any other. Thou hast found grace with God—unfailing grace. Thou hast found grace with God—saving grace. Thou hast found grace with God—immoveable grace. Thou hast found grace with God — invincible grace. Thou hast found grace with God — everlasting grace. Before thee there have been others, many others, made wonderful in holiness, but to none hath it been given, as to thee, to be full of grace; to none hath it been given, as to thee, to attain to such divine riches; to none, as to thee, to be prevented by purifying grace; to none, as to thee, to shine from the dayspring with light from heaven; to none, as to thee, to be exalted above all things before created.

Ninth Lesson.

AND justly; for none hath ever drawn so near to God as thou hast; none hath ever been gifted by God with good gifts as thou hast; none hath ever received of God's grace as thou hast. Thou art mightier than all things which are called mighty among men; thou hast received more than the goodness of God hath conferred on any other. It is indeed because God made His home in thee that thou thus aboundest. There hath never been any save thee that hath comprehended the Incomprehensible; none save thee that hath enjoyed His presence so much; none that He hath made so ready therefor; none on whom the uncreated light hath shone so clearly; and therefore none who hath, like thee, sheltered the Lord God, the Maker and Lord of all, conceived Him in thy womb, and brought Him into the world, to redeem men lying under the Father's sentence, and to offer to them everlasting salvation. Wherefore, O Lady, I have already cried unto thee with the Angel, and I will still cry—"Hail, thou that art full of grace, the Lord is with thee! Blessed art thou among women!"

A Commemoration of the Week-day is made at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

To-morrow is the Octave of the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Upon the same day is commemorated the ordination [on December 15, about the year 340,] of holy Eusebius, Bishop of Vercelli, [he was a Reader of the Church of Rome,] who was born into the better life upon the 1st day of August, but whose feast is kept upon the 16th day of this present month of December by command of Pope Benedict XIII. [He was born about the year 315 and died about the year 371 or 375.]

Upon the same 15th day of December, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the third century,] the holy martyrs Irenæus, Antony, Theodore, Saturninus, Victor, and seventeen others who suffered for Christ's sake in the persecution under the Emperor Valerian.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Faustinus, Lucius, Candidus, Cœlian, Mark, Januarius, and Fortunatus.

Likewise in Africa, holy Valerian, Bishop [of Abbenze.] When he was more than eighty years of age the Arian king Genseric, during the Vandal persecution, sought to make him consent to give up the vessels of the church, and because he steadfastly refused so to do, he caused him to be thrust out of the city alone, and since it was forbidden to any man to allow him to come into his house or to dwell in his field, he lay a long time in the open air on the public highway, and finished the course of his blessed life, [in the year 457,] in the profession and defence of Catholic truth.

In the country of Orleans, the holy Confessor Maximin, [2nd Abbot of Michy, in the Diocese of Orleans, about the year 520.]

In the country of the Iberians, beyond the Black Sea, [in the third century,] the holy handmaiden Christiana, [the Apostle of the Iberians of the Caucasus,] who in the time of the Emperor Constantine, by the power of her miracles, brought that people to believe in Christ.

All as on the Feast, (First Vespers as the First Vespers of the Feast,) except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

A Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Dogmatic Bull of Pope Pius IX.

FROM of old time continual prayers have been offered to this Apostolic See not only by Bishops, Churchmen, and the Regular Orders, but also by Emperors and Kings, beseeching that the sinlessness of the Conception of the Mother of God might be made the subject of a Dogmatic Definition. These prayers have been still more urgently addressed in recent times to Our Predecessor, of happy memory, Gregory XVI., and to Ourselves, by the Bishops, by the Secular Clergy, by the Regular Orders, and by the most eminent Christian Princes and nations. The knowledge of these things hath caused Our heart to rejoice, and they have been the serious occupation of Our thoughts ever since, in spite of our unworthiness, the inscrutable Providence of God was pleased to set Us in this supreme Chair of Peter, and to put His Church into Our hands, for Us to govern. Since then, We have had nothing so much at heart as to yield to the desires of the Church in this matter, to the increasing of the veneration of which the most holy Virgin is already the object, and to the setting in a clearer light the singular graces with which God hath adorned her, being Ourselves especially drawn to the same by the reverence, love, and affection with which We have been from Our childhood animated towards the same most holy Virgin Mary, Mother of God.

Fifth Lesson.

AND now We trust in the Lord that the time is come to define as a truth of faith the doctrine of the stainless Conception of the most holy Virgin Mary, Mother of God, that doctrine already set forth by Holy Scripture, by the ancient tradition, by the unbroken belief of the Universal Church, by the one common opinion of the Catholic Episcopate and laity, and by the marked acts and decrees of Our Predecessors. We have weighed everything in Our mind, and We have without ceasing implored the help and light of God's Holy Spirit by earnest prayer, and We are of opinion that it is Our duty no longer to delay, but by Our Supreme Decision to settle and declare that the Virgin was conceived without sin, and thus to satisfy the godly cravings of the whole Christian world, as well as the instinct of Our own love for the said most holy Virgin, and, above all, because she is His Mother, to glorify our Lord JESUS Christ by this act, since whatever we do rightly to honour the Mother must redound to the glory of the Son.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEREFORE, having in all fasting and humbleness of heart continually implored God the Father through His Blessed Son, to hear Our own prayers and those of His whole Church, and to teach and strengthen Our mind by the power of His Holy Spirit, having begged the intercession of the Church Triumphant, and, above all, with groans called on the Holy Ghost the Comforter, We now, moved by Him, for the honour of the Holy and Undivided Trinity, for the greater praise and exaltation of the Virgin Mother of God, the glory of the Catholic Faith, and the good of Christianity, in the name and authority of our Lord JESUS Christ, of the Blessed Apostles Peter and Paul, and in Our own, declare and define that: — That doctrine which declareth that the most blessed Virgin Mary was, in the first instant of her Conception, preserved, by a special grace and privilege granted to her by Almighty God, through the merits of Christ JESUS, Saviour of mankind, which He foreknew, from any stain of original sin, is a doctrine taught and revealed by God, and therefore from this time forward must be held by all faithful Christians firmly and constantly. Wherefore if any one, which God forbid, shall at any time think in his heart any thing contrary to this Our definition, let him know that he is condemned by his own judgment, that he hath made shipwreck of the faith, and that he hath cut himself off from the body of the Church.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 26.)

AT that time: The Angel Gabriel was sent from God, unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a Virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David, and the Virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

Homily by St Epiphanius, Bishop [of Salamis-in-Cyprus.][1] (Discourse in praise of the Blessed Virgin.)

I am at a loss what words or terms I ought to employ in speaking of this illustrious and holy Virgin. She is raised above all things except God; she was made much higher than the Cherubim and Seraphim, and the whole host of heaven; neither the voices of heaven nor of earth are full enough to set forth her majesty, no, not the voices of Angels. O blessed Virgin! O pure dove and Bride of heaven! O Mary! At once the heaven, the temple, and the throne of God! Mother of the Sun that shineth both on heaven and on earth, even Christ! Bright cloud, through which the Son of Man hath come as the lightning, that lighteneth from the East even unto the West! Hail, gate of heaven, full of grace, of whom the Prophet in the Song of Songs openly speaketh in the course of his prayer, saying, "A garden enclosed is My sister, My Spouse, a garden enclosed, a fountain sealed." (iv. 12.)

Eighth Lesson.

THE Virgin is that stainless lily whence hath sprung the Rose that fadeth not, even Christ. O Holy Mother of God! Ewe without spot, that hast borne the Lamb That took flesh of thee, even Christ! O Maiden whose holiness hath dazzled the heavenly armies! There hath appeared a great sign in heaven, a woman clothed with the sun, and with the Light in her arms; a great sign in heaven, the Virgin's womb the chamber of the Son of God; a great sign in heaven, the Lord of angels made the Virgin's child. The angels accused Eve, but now they praise Mary, who hath raised Eve fallen, and restored to heaven Adam banished from Paradise. For Mary is the bridge between heaven and earth, the ambassadress who hath reconciled them in her womb.

Ninth Lesson.

WE cannot measure the grace bestowed upon this holy Virgin. Hence the salutation addressed to her by Gabriel, "Hail," thou glorious heaven, "full of grace." "Hail," Virgin adorned with many graces, yea, "full of grace." "Hail," thou vessel of gold that holdest the manna that came down from heaven, "full of grace." "Hail," thou unfailing fountain, that satisfiest the thirsty soul with sweet waters, "full of grace." Hail, holy, sinless Mother of Him That was before thee, even Christ. Hail, thou Queenly purple, mantle of the King of heaven and earth. Hail, thou Book that no man can understand, and yet which the Eternal Word, the Son of the Father, hath opened for earth to read.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy martyr Eusebius, Bishop of Vercelli, of whom mention is made also upon the 1st day of August, [when he died between the years 370 and 375,] and yesterday as for this day.

Upon the same 16th day of December, were born into the better life—

The three children Ananias, Azarias, and Misaël, whose bodies are laid in a certain cave at Babylon [in the sixth century before Christ.]

At Ravenna, the holy martyrs Valentine, a military instructor, Concordius his son, Navalis, and Agricola, who suffered for Christ's sake, [in the fourth century,] in the persecution under the Emperor Maximian.

At Nola, in Campania, in the persecution under the Emperor Decius, the holy Virgin and martyr Albina, [in the year 250.]

In Africa, many holy Virgins and martyrs, who in the Vandal persecution under the Arian king Hunneric suffered hanging, pressing, and red-hot plates, and happily brought to a close the conflict of martyrdom, [in the year 482.]

At Vienne, [in the year 875,] the blessed Confessor Ado, [monk of the Order of St Benedict,] Bishop [of Vienne.]

At Aberdeen, in Scotland,[2] [in the year 111,] holy Bean, [called first] Bishop [of that see.]

At Gaza, in Palestine, [in the year 389,] holy Bishop Irenion.

If the Octave falls on the Third Sunday in Advent, the Office is of the Season from the None of Saturday exclusive, but with Commemorations of the Octave at both Vespers and Lauds, and without Common Commemorations or Preces.

OFFICE OF THE IMMACULATE CONCEPTION AS A VOTIVE OFFICE, FOR SATURDAYS.

Pope Pius IX. permits that on all Saturdays, with certain exceptions, the Office of December 8, with certain alterations, be said instead of the Office of the day. The Saturdays excepted are:

(a) Any Saturday whatsoever upon which Nine Lessons are read, either by reason of the Week-day Office, or of any Festal Office either belonging to the day or transferred to it.

(b) The Saturdays in Advent, Lent, and the Octaves of Easter and Pentecost.

(c) All Eves.

(d) Saturdays to which the Sunday Office may be transferred according to the Pye, iv. 4, 5.

The alterations in the Office itself are—

(a) It is semi-double, with the Common Commemorations at Vespers and Lauds, and Preces at Compline and Prime. Its relations to a Simple Office on Saturday itself, or a Semi-double or Double on Friday or Sunday, (Sunday is always at least Semi-double,) are arranged in the same way as if it were a Semi-double Festival.

(b) The saying or omitting of the "Alleluia" and one or two other points are as immediately heretofore given in the Office itself. In Paschal-time

---

[1] The Martyrology (May 12) says that "he remains a wonder, on account of his eminent and varied learning and knowledge of the Scriptures, of the holiness of his life, of his zeal for the Catholic faith, of his bounty toward the poor, and of the mighty miracles which he wrought." Born about A.D. 310. Elected Bishop about 367. Died, May 12, 405.

[2] In the original, by an extraordinary mistake, Hibernia.

Prime and Compline are said in the Paschal manner.

(c) The Lessons of the First Nocturn are from Scripture according to the Season.

(d) The Lessons of the Second and Third Nocturn are—

Before Ash Wednesday, as on the Second Day within the Octave.

In Paschal-time, as on the Third day.

From the Feast of the Most Pure Heart to August, as on the Fifth Day.

From August to Advent, as on the Seventh Day.

DECEMBER 16.

St Eusebius, Bishop [of Vercelli,] Martyr.

Semi-Double.

All from the Common Office for one Martyr, (p. 594,) except what is otherwise given here.

Prayer throughout. O God, Who year by year, &c., (p. 599.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. If this day fall upon one of the Ember Days they are from Acts xx. 17, (p. 594.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

EUSEBIUS was a Sardinian by birth, first a Reader in the Roman Church, and then Bishop of Vercelli. It seemed specially designed by Providence that he should be called to govern that Church, for the electors, who had never before known him, passed over, with a strange unanimity, all their own fellow-citizens, and chose Eusebius, as soon as they had seen him. He was the first Bishop in the Western Church who established an Order of Regular Clergy, to combine the active with the contemplative life. At this time the storm of Arian blasphemy and sin was sweeping far and wide over the West, and Eusebius set himself to fight against it so manfully, that his unshaken faith brought back Liberius again to life and hope. This Pope, knowing that the Spirit of God was in him, sent him with his Legates to the Emperor Constantius, [in the year 354,] to plead the cause of the Catholic Faith. His earnestness prevailed with that Prince, so that he obtained all that was asked for, and, among other things, permission for a Council to be summoned.

Fifth Lesson.

THE year following, the Council met at Milan, and Eusebius, by the invitation of the Emperor, and the desire and command of the Papal Legates, attended. Here the Arians, assembled in a perfect synagogue of Satan, and all furiously raging together against holy Athanasius, found Eusebius one of the stoutest enemies of their faction. As soon as he entered the Council, he delivered a long harangue, wherein he remarked that, of those there gathered together, some were notoriously defiled with heresy, and therefore he proposed that everyone should first of all subscribe the Nicene Creed, before proceeding to any other business. The Arians, in a violent passion, refused, whereupon he on his part refused to subscribe any proceedings against Athanasius, and even skilfully procured the withdrawal of the signature of the holy martyr Denys, then Bishop of Milan, which they had lyingly procured by practising on his simplicity. The Arians were now entirely enraged, and, after many persecutions, procured a decree of banishment against Eusebius. The Saint shook off the dust of his feet against them, and, defying alike the threats of Cæsar and the drawn swords of the soldiery, accepted the sentence as one of the dignities of his office. He was sent to Bethshan in the Holy Land, suffering hunger, thirst, stripes, and all manner of violence, but for the Faith's sake he despised this life, and feared not death, but freely delivered his body to the tormentors.

Sixth Lesson.

HE wrote a solemn letter from Bethshan, addressed to the clergy and people of Vercelli and that neighbourhood, full of constancy, devotion, and piety, describing the frightful cruelty and brazen impudence of the Arians. From this letter we know how completely they failed to scare him by their threats and their inhuman brutality, or to seduce him by their serpent-like cunning into receiving their communion. In consequence of his unshaken resolution, he was moved from Bethshan into Cappadocia, and then again, to the deserts of Upper Egypt. He suffered exile until the death of Constantius, [in 361,] after which he was allowed to return to his flock. First, however, he took care to attend the Council at Alexandria, called to heal the wounds of the Church, and, afterwards, like a skilful physician, he made a progress through all the provinces of the East, strengthening those that were weak in the Faith, and confirming them in Christian doctrine. Then, with the same healthful results, he passed through Illyricum into Italy, who, at his coming, laid aside her garments of mourning. After his return, he published an expurgated edition of Origen's Commentary on the Psalms, and likewise of the works of Eusebius of Cæsarea, both which he translated from Greek into Latin. At length, distinguished by all these great works, he passed to that crown of glory which fadeth not away, promised to them who suffer for the truth. He departed this present life at Vercelli, [in 371,] in the reign of Valentinian and Valens.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xvi. 24, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 600.)

Eighth Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast prevented him, &c., (p. 598.)

If this day be an Ember-Day, the Ninth Lesson is of that; in which case the Ninth Lesson from the Homily is either omitted or read together with the Eighth.

At Lauds a Commemoration of the Week-day.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 17th day of December, were born into the better life—

At Eleutheropolis, in Palestine, the holy martyrs Florian, Calanicus, and fifty-and-eight others, their Companions, who were slain by the Saracens for Christ's faith's sake in the time of the Emperor Heraclius.

At Marseilles, in Gaul, blessed Lazarus, [called first] Bishop [of that city,] of whom it is written in the Gospel that the Lord raised him from the dead.

At Rome, holy John de la Matha, founder of the Order of the most Holy Trinity for the redemption of captives. [He died in the year 1213.] His feast is kept upon the 8th day of February by order of Innocent XI.

In the monastery of Fulda, [in the year 779,] the holy Abbat Sturmius, [of the Order of St Benedict, and first Abbat of Fulda,] Apostle of Saxony, whose name Innocent II. enrolled with those of the saints at the second Council of Lateran.

At Bigarden, near Brussels, [in the year 1176,] the holy Virgin Vivina, whose eminent holiness is oftentimes attested by miracles. [Foundress of the Abbey of Bigarden, in the Diocese of Malines. Of the Order of St Benedict.]

At Constantinople, the holy widow Olympias, [about the year 410; born about 368.]

In the Ardennes, the blessed Widow Begga, sister of holy Gertrude. [She married Ansegise, son of St Arnoult, Bishop of Metz. She was born about 368, became a widow in 386, and died about 410.]

Upon the same day is commemorated the translation of the body of the holy martyr Ignatius, Patriarch of Antioch, who was the third to govern that church after the blessed Apostle Peter; he suffered at Rome under Trajan, but his body was brought thence to Antioch and laid in the cemetery of the church outside the gate which leadeth unto Daphne, upon the anniversary of the which ceremony holy John Chrysostom preached unto the people. In after-times the body was again brought back to Rome, where it is buried, and highly honoured in the church of St Clement along with the body of that most blessed Pope and martyr.

At Vespers a commemoration is made of the week-day.

DECEMBER 17.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the Feast of the Blessed Virgin Mary looking shortly to be delivered.[1]

Upon the same 18th day of December, were born into the better life—

At Philippi, in Macedonia, [in the year 107,] the holy martyrs Rufus and Zozimus, who were of the number of the disciples by whom the early Church was founded among the Jews and Greeks of whose happy contending holy Polycarp writeth in his Epistle unto the Philippians.

At Laodicea, in Syria, the holy martyrs Theotimus and Basilian.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Quintus Simplicius and others, who suffered in the persecution under the Emperors Decius and Valerian.

There also the holy martyr Moysetes.

Likewise in Africa also, the holy martyrs Victurus, Victor, Victorinus, Adjutor, Quartus, and thirty others.

At Mopsuestia, in Cilicia, holy Auxentius, Bishop [of that see;] he was originally a soldier under the Emperor Licinius, but chose rather to cast away his military belt than to offer grapes to Bacchus; he afterwards became a Bishop, and fell asleep in peace, famous for worthy deeds, [fourth century.]

At Tours, holy Bishop Gratian, who was ordained by holy Pope Fabian as the first Bishop of that city, and fell asleep in the Lord, famous for many miracles. [He was a disciple of the Apostles.]

DECEMBER 18.

Office in honour of the Blessed Virgin Mary looking shortly to be delivered.

Greater Double.

Whatever is not specially given here is from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633,) except that the last verse of the Hymn is not altered in honour of the Incarnation.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst will that Thy Word should, by the message of an Angel, take flesh in the womb of the Blessed Virgin Mary, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, that all we who do believe her to be in very deed the Mother of God, may be holpen by her prayers in Thy sight. Through the same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

First Antiphon. The Angel Gabriel was sent * to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph; and the virgin's name was Mary.

Second Antiphon. Hail Mary, * full of grace, the Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women. [Alleluia.]

Third Antiphon. Fear not, Mary, * thou hast found grace with the Lord: behold, thou shalt conceive, and bring forth a son. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Antiphon. The Lord shall give unto Him the throne of His father David, and of His kingdom there shall be no end.

Fifth Antiphon. Behold the handmaid of the Lord: * be it unto me according to thy word.

Hymn. Creator of the starry pole, &c., (p. 121.)

Verse. Hail, Mary, full of grace.
Answer. The Lord is with thee.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, O Mary,—fear not; thou shalt bear in thy womb the Son of God. Alleluia.

A Commemoration is made of the Week-day. Antiphon, "O, &c."

---

[1] This feast is not contained in the Calendar of the Church of Rome, and is of Spanish origin. In the Mozarabic Rite the Feast of the Annunciation is kept on December 18, and is still so kept although another Feast of the Annunciation has been added upon March 25 out of deference to the custom of the rest of Christendom. It will be observed that this feast coincides with the beginning of the Great O's, and unless December 18 should be a Sunday, the Antiphon in the Commemoration of the week-day at First Vespers is "O Wisdom."

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Hail, Mary, full of grace, * the Lord is with thee.

Hymn. Supernal Word, &c., (p. 121.)

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Behold, our Lord cometh with power, and He shall lighten the eyes of His servants. Alleluia.

Ps. viii. O Lord, our Lord, &c., (p. 4.)

Second Antiphon. [1] Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down the Righteous One: let the earth open, and let her bring forth the Saviour.

Ps. xviii. The heavens declare, &c., (p. 10.)

Third Antiphon. [2] Behold, the Name of the Lord cometh from far, and His brightness filleth the world.

Ps. xxiii. The earth is the Lord's, &c., (p. 26.)

Verse. Out of Zion, the Perfection of beauty,
Answer. Our God shall come manifestly.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Isaiah (vii. 10.)

Moreover the Lord spake again, &c., (p. 128.)

First Responsory.

The sceptre shall not depart, &c., (p. 145.)

Second Lesson.

And there shall come forth a rod, &c., (p. 128,) down to "faithfulness the girdle of His reins," in the next Lesson.

Second Responsory.

[3] There shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Man shall rise out of Israël, and shall smite through all the princes of the aliens; and all the earth shall be His possession.
Verse. Out of Jacob shall come He that shall have dominion, and shall destroy him that remaineth of the city.
Answer. And all the earth shall be His possession.

Third Lesson.

The wilderness and the solitary place, &c., (p. 144.)

Third Responsory.

The Lord shall come down like rain, &c., (p. 136.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [4] Out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

Ps. xliv. My heart is overflowing, &c., (p. 54.)

Second Antiphon. [5] Lo, this is our God, we have waited for Him, and He will save us. Alleluia.

Ps. xlv. God is our refuge, &c., (p. 55.)

Third Antiphon. The Lord cometh! go ye out to meet Him, and say: How great is His dominion, and of His kingdom there shall be no end! He is the Mighty God, the Ruler, the Prince of Peace! Alleluia.

Ps. lxxxvi. Her foundation, &c., (p. 82.)

Verse. [6] There shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse.
Answer. And a flower shall grow out of his roots.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Alonzo, Archbishop [of Toledo.] (Book on the Maidenhood of Blessed Mary.)

O MY Suzeraine and my Lady, who bearest rule over me, Mother of my Lord, handmaid of thy Son, who gavest birth to Him Who made the world, I beseech thee, I pray thee, I ask thee, that I may have the spirit of thy Lord, and the spirit of thy Son, yea, and the spirit of my Redeemer, to enable me to think what is true and worthy concerning thee, to speak what is true and worthy concerning thee, and to love whatsoever is true and worthy concerning thee. Thou hast been chosen of God, taken of God, called of God; thou art very nigh unto God, thou cleavest unto God, thou art bound unto God; thou wast visited by an Angel, saluted by an Angel, blessed by an Angel, called happy by an Angel; troubled at his saying, perplexed in thought, confounded at the salutation, wonderstruck at the words of the message.

Fourth Responsory.

Behold, the Virgin shall conceive, &c., (p. 123.)

Fifth Lesson.

THOU hearest that thou hast found grace with God, and thou art bidden not to fear; thence thou art strengthened with confidence, and art taught to know wonders, and carried forward to new tidings of unheard-of glory. The Angel doth thee to wit that thou shalt be a mother, and, with offspring in thy womb, thou remainest untouched and virgin. Then the assurance of thy maidenhood is set forth before us, and the Angel preacheth unto thee the glad tidings that that Holy Thing Which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God, and anon, the wondrous message of the power of the King that is to come. Thou askest how this shall be, thou wouldest know whence it cometh, thou enquirest as to the reason, thou seekest to understand the anomaly, thou art fain to learn the order of things. Hear then a mystery unheard hitherto, behold an operation hitherto unknown, turn thine eyes upon a thing secret, hitherto unsuspected, learn of a work hitherto unwrought. "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee."

Fifth Responsory.

Drop down, ye heavens, &c., (p. 143.)

Sixth Lesson.

ALL the Trinity is at work in thee to make thee conceive, but it is the Son of God alone Whose Person taketh Flesh in thee as thy Child. And "therefore also that Holy Thing Which shall be" conceived in thee, brought forth of thee, produced of thee, sprung of thee, "born of thee, shall be called the Son of God." For "He shall be great," He shall be the God of powers, the King of all ages, the Maker of all things. Behold, "blessed art thou among women," Virgin among mothers, Lady among damsels, Queen among sisters. Behold, for this "all generations shall call thee blessed," all the powers of heaven know thee to be blessed, all the Prophets tell that thou art blessed, all nations proclaim thee blessed. And, for us, blessed our faith calleth thee, blessed do our souls call thee, blessed doth our love call thee, blessed do our hymns call thee, and blessed shall my words call thee.

Sixth Responsory.

The Lord will teach us, &c., (p. 137.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The LORD shall give that which is good, and our Land shall yield her increase.

Ps. lxxxiv. LORD, Thou hast been favourable, &c., (p. 81.)

Second Antiphon. He that is both God and Man shall come of the house of David, and sit in David's seat. Alleluia.

Ps. lxxxvi. Her foundation, &c., (p. 82.)

Third Antiphon. Tell it out among the people, and say: Behold, God our Saviour cometh.

Ps. xcv. O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 85.)

Verse. The Lord goeth forth from His holy place.
Answer. He cometh to save His people.

If this day be Ember-Wednesday, the following Lessons are not read, but, instead, those for Wednesday on pp. 140, 141, (but the Responsories are unaltered.)

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 26.)

AT that time: The Angel Gabriel was sent from God, unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a Virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David: and the Virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

Homily by the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow.] (On Luke i., and in the Homilies for the Winter Season. Ember-Wednesday in December.)

There is sent from God unto the Virgin Mary the Angel Gabriel, which name, being interpreted, signifieth "Strong-man-of-God." For he came as the messenger of Him, Who was pleased to appear weak in order that He might prevail against the prince of the power of the air, (Eph. ii. 2,) of Him of Whom it is said by the Psalmist, "The LORD strong and mighty, the LORD mighty in battle,' (xxiii. 8,) and again, "The LORD of hosts, He is the King of glory," (10.) Therefore it was assigned to the Strong-man-of-God to announce that the Lord of hosts, mighty in battle, was coming to wage war against the powers of the air.

"And the Angel came in unto her, and said: Hail, thou that art full of grace; the Lord is with thee; blessed art thou among women."

Meetly is she styled "full of grace" who hath attained a grace gained by no other, that, namely, of conceiving and bringing forth the actual Author of grace.

Seventh Responsory.

Hail, Mary, full of grace, &c., (p. 122.)

Eighth Lesson.

"AND behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a Son, and shalt call His Name JESUS."

The name JESUS is interpreted "Saviour," or "Saving," to which meaning the Angel pointed when he said to Joseph: "Thou shalt call His name JESUS, for He shall save His people from their sins." (Matth. i. 21.) He saith not that "He shall save the people of Israel," but that "He shall save His people," that is to say, a people gathered into one faith from among both the circumcised and the uncircumcised, who being thus gathered in, there should be one fold and one Shepherd. (John x. 16.)

"He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David."

He, then, that was conceived in that virginal womb, and brought forth therefrom, was the Son of the Highest. He that in time was made of His mother (Gal. iv. 4) is God, begotten of the Father before all worlds. But if the same Person Who is Man is God, let Nestorius cease from saying that it was the Man only Who was born of the Virgin.

Eighth Responsory.

Receive, O Virgin Mary, &c., (p. 124,) with the following addition,

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. And thou shalt be called blessed among all women.

Ninth Lesson.

"THEREFORE also that Holy Thing Which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God."

JESUS alone is said to be born an Holy Thing, to distinguish such holiness from any holiness of ours. We may indeed be made holy, but we are not born holy, for we are hampered by the corrupt condition of our nature, so that every one of us may well groan and say with the Prophet, "For, behold, I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me." (Ps. l. 7.) He alone is absolutely and essentially Holy, Who to counteract the corruptible condition in nature, was conceived without fleshly coition.

"That Holy Thing Which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." What can be said to this by a Nestorian, who, by denying that the Blessed Mary was Mother of God, flieth directly in the face of this truth? Here is a distinct statement that God is to come upon her, and therefore that the Thing to be born is the Son of God. What escape therefore is there from one of two conclusions, viz., either (1) that the Son of God is not God, or (2) that she who brought forth God is rightly called Theotokos, that is, Mother-of-God?

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. The Angel Gabriel was sent * to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph; and the virgin's name was Mary.

Second Antiphon. Hail, Mary, * full of grace, the Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women.

Third Antiphon. Fear not, Mary, * thou hast found grace with the Lord: behold, thou shalt conceive, and bring forth a Son.

Fourth Antiphon. The Lord shall give unto Him the throne of His father David, and of His kingdom there shall be no end.

Fifth Antiphon. Behold the handmaid of the Lord: * be it unto me according to thy word.

Chapter. (Isa. xi. 1.)

THERE shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Flower shall grow out of his roots. And the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon Him.

Hymn. Hark a joyful voice, &c., (p. 123.)

Verse. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee.

Answer. And the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. He shall sit upon the throne of David, and of his kingdom, for ever.

A Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

PRIME.

Antiphon. The Angel Gabriel, &c., (First Antiphon at Lauds.)

In the Short Responsory is said,

Verse. Thou that art to come into the world.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 19th day of December, were born into the better life—

At Alexandria, in Egypt, the blessed martyr Nemesius. He was first brought before the judge on a false accusation that he was a thief, and was acquitted; but in the persecution under the Emperor Decius he was accused of Christianity before the judge Æmilian, by whom he was put to the double punishment and condemned to be burnt along with thieves. In the which thing he was conformed to the likeness of the Saviour, who was crucified between thieves.

At Nice, [now Isnik, in Bithynia,] the holy martyrs Darius, Zosimus, Paul, and Secundus, [in the fourth century.]

At Nicomedia, the holy martyrs Cyriacus, Paulillus, Secundus, Anastasius, Syndimius, and their Companions, [in the fourth century.]

In Morocco, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyr Timothy, the Deacon, who after a terrible imprisonment was cast into the fire for Christ's faith's sake, and so finished his testimony.

At Gaza, in Palestine, [in the third century,] the holy martyrs Meuris and Thea.

At Auxerre, the holy Confessor Gregory, [looked on as 12th] Bishop [of that see, successor of St Theodore, in the year 530.]

At Orleans, the holy Abbat Adjutus, famous for the spirit of prophecy.

At Rome, holy Fausta, the mother of holy Anastasia, eminent for her rank and godliness, [at the end of the third century.]

At Avignon, the blessed Pope Urban V., who performed the highest service to the Church: he restored the Apostolic seat to Rome, he completed the union of the Greeks and the Latins, he brought the unbelievers into subjection. His very ancient veneration was ratified and confirmed by Pope Pius IX.

Chapter at the end. (Isa. xiv. 8.)

DROP down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down the Righteous One: let the earth open, and let her bring forth the Saviour. I the LORD have created Him.

TERCE.

Antiphon. Hail, Mary, &c., (Second Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter from Lauds.

Short Responsory.

[1] Thou, O Lord, shalt arise and have mercy upon Zion.

Answer. Thou, O Lord, shalt arise and have mercy upon Zion.

Verse. For the time to favour her, yea, the set time, is come.

Answer. Have mercy upon Zion.

Answer. Thou, O Lord, shalt arise and have mercy upon Zion.

Verse. Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down the Righteous One.

Answer. Let the earth open, and let her bring forth the Saviour.

SEXT.

Antiphon. Fear not, &c., (Third Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter. (Isa. vii. 14.)

BEHOLD, the virgin shall conceive and bear a Son, and His Name shall be called Emmanuel. Butter and honey shall He eat, that He may know to refuse the evil, and choose the good.

Short Responsory.

Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down the Righteous One.

Answer. Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down the Righteous One.

Verse. Let the earth open, and let her bring forth the Saviour.

Answer. Let the skies pour down the Righteous One.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down the Righteous One.

Verse. [2] Send forth the Lamb, O Lord, the Ruler of the land.

Answer. From the rock in the Wilderness unto the mount of the daughter of Zion.

NONE.

Antiphon. Behold the handmaid, &c., (Fifth Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter as at the end of Prime.

---

[1] Ps. ci. 14.

[2] Isa. xvi. 1.

Short Responsory.

Send forth the Lamb, O Lord, the Ruler of the land.

Answer. Send forth the Lamb, O Lord, the Ruler of the land.

Verse. From the rock in the wilderness unto the mount of the daughter of Zion.

Answer. The Ruler of the land.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Send forth the Lamb, O Lord, the Ruler of the land.

Verse. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee.

Same as the First, except the following:

Fifth Antiphon. Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne.

Ps. cxxxi. Lord, remember David, &c., (p. 109.)

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O maiden of maidens, how shall this be, since neither before nor henceforth hath there been, nor shall be such another? Daughters of Jerusalem, why look ye curiously upon me? What ye see is a mystery of God.

Commemoration of the Week-day Antiphon, "O, &c."

DECEMBER 19.

MARTYROLOGY.

To-morrow is the eve of the holy Apostle Thomas.

Upon the same 20th day of December, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyrs Liberatus and Bajulus.

At Alexandria, the holy soldiers Ammon, Zeno, Ptolemy, Ingenes, and Theophilus, all martyrs. They were on guard beside the judgment-seat when a certain Christian who was under the torture began to waver and was almost giving way, and they tried by signs to encourage him to hold out; for this cause all the people cried out against them, and they came forward and confessed themselves to be Christians; and Christ, who Himself had given such steadfastness unto His own, did Himself most gloriously triumph in their victory, [in the year 249.]

At Geldube, [in Thrace,] the holy martyr Julius, [fourth century.]

In Arabia, the holy martyrs Eugenius and Macarius, two Priests who blamed the ungodliness of the Emperor Julian the Apostate, and for that cause were most cruelly flogged and sent out into the great desert, where they were slain with the sword, [in the year 362.]

At Antioch, holy Philogonius, Patriarch of the see. He was an advocate when he was called by the will of God to govern that church, and first took up the contending for the Catholic faith along with holy Bishop Alexander, and his Companions, against Arius. He fell asleep in the Lord, illustrious for good works, [in the year 322.] Holy John Chrysostom preached an eloquent sermon on his feast-day.

At Brescia, the holy Confessor Dominic, Bishop [of that see, about the year 612.]

On this day is commemorated the burial in Spain of holy Dominic, Abbat of Silos, [in the diocese of Burgos, in Castille, which abbey he founded,] of the Order of St Benedict, very famous for his miracles wrought for the liberation of captives. [He died in his monastery at Silos, on December 14, 1073.]

DECEMBER 20.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 21st day of December, were born into the better life—

Upon the Coromandel coast of India, not far from Madras, the blessed Apostle Thomas. He preached the Gospel to the Parthians, Medes, Persians, and Hyrcanians, and at length came into India, and was teaching the Christian religion to those people when the king commanded him to be run through with lances, and so he died. His relics were taken first to the city of Edessa and afterwards to Ortona.

In Tuscany, the holy martyrs John and Festus.

In Lycia, the holy martyr Themistocles. Under the Emperor Decius he gave himself up for holy Dioscoros, when they were seeking after him to slay him, and was first racked, taken down and dragged about, and beaten with cudgels, gained the crown of martyrdom [in the year 249.]

At Nicomedia, the holy Priest Glycerius, who suffered many torments in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, and was at length cast in the fire, and so finished his testimony.

At Antioch, the holy martyr Anastasius, Bishop [of that see,] who was cruelly murdered by the Jews in the time of the Emperor Phocas [in the year 609.]

At Treves, the holy Confessor Severinus, Bishop [of that see, fourth century.]

Vespers are of the following.

DECEMBER 21.

St Thomas, Apostle.

Double of the Second Class.

All from the Common Office for Apostles, (p. 583,) except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Thomas, because thou hast seen Me, thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed. Alleluia.

Prayer throughout the Office.

GRANT unto us, O Lord, we beseech Thee, to glory in the solemn commemoration of Thy blessed Apostle Thomas; and, being defended by his protection, to follow always with meet godliness the pattern of his faith. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from 1 Cor. iv. 1, (p. 585.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE Apostle Thomas, called Didymus, or the Twin, was a Galilean. After the descent of the Holy Ghost, he went into many provinces to preach Christ's Gospel. He gave knowledge of the rules of Christian faith and life to the Parthians, Medes, Persians, Hyrcanians, and Bactrians. He went last to the East Indies. Here he provoked the anger of one of the idolatrous kings, because the holiness of his life and teaching, and the number of his miracles, drew many after him, and brought them to the love of Christ JESUS. He was therefore condemned, and slain with lances. He crowned the dignity of the Apostleship with the glory of martyrdom, on the Coromandel coast, not far from Madras.

Fifth Lesson.

It is written, &c., (from the Common Office, Fourth Lesson.)

Sixth Lesson.

So much power, &c., (p. 587.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xx. 24.)

AT that time: Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when JESUS came. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (26th on the Gospels.)

Dearly beloved brethren, what is it in this passage which particularly claimeth our attention? Think ye that it was by accident that this chosen Apostle was not with them when JESUS came? or, when he came, heard? or, when he heard, doubted? or, when he doubted, felt? or when he had felt, believed? All these things were not accidental, but Providential. It was a wonderful provision of Divine mercy, that this incredulous disciple, by thrusting his fingers into the bodily Wounds of his Master, should apply a remedy to the spiritual wounds of unbelief in our souls. The doubts of Thomas have done us more good than the faith of all the disciples that believed. While he feeleth his way to faith, our minds are freed from doubt, and settled in faith.

Eighth Lesson.

EVEN as the Lord before His birth willed that Mary should be espoused, and yet never lose her virginity, so, after His Resurrection, He willed that His disciple should doubt, and yet not lose his faith. For, even as the espoused husband was the keeper of the virginity of the Mother, so was the disciple who doubted and felt, the witness of the truth of the Resurrection. He felt, and cried out: "My Lord and my God. JESUS saith unto him: Thomas, because thou hast seen Me, thou hast believed." When the Apostle Paul saith (Heb. xi. 1): "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen"—he plainly meaneth that faith is the evidence of things that cannot be seen. When they are seen, there remaineth not faith, but knowledge.

Ninth Lesson.

If this day be an Ember-day this Lesson is of that, and then the following is either omitted, or read as one with the preceding.

THOMAS, then, seeth, and believeth. Why is it said to him: "Because thou hast seen Me, thou hast believed?" The truth is, he saw one thing, and so believed another. To mortal man it is not given to see God. He therefore saw only the Manhood, and yet had faith in the Godhead: "My Lord and my God." This he said, seeing and believing, seeing Perfect Man, and yet believing in Perfect God, Whom he could not see. O what a comfort are the words which follow! "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed." These words are specially meant for us, who have not seen even the Flesh, and who yet do believe. They are specially meant for us if we believe and do not, by our lives, give the lie to our belief. He only hath a saving faith, whose faith beareth fruit.

At Lauds, Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias, the same as at that at First Vespers.

A Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 22nd day of December, were born into the better life—

At Rome, between the two Laurels upon the Lavican Way, thirty holy martyrs, who were all crowned in one day in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

There likewise the holy Flavian, the ex-Prefect [of Rome], who for Christ's sake was first branded and then banished under the Emperor Julian the Apostate. He was sent to Bagni di Ferrata,[1] [near Civita Vecchia,] where he gave up his soul to God in prayer, [in the year 362.]

At Ostia, the holy martyrs Demetrius, Honoratus, and Florus.

At Alexandria, the holy martyr Ischyrion. Many injuries and reproaches were cast upon him to make him sacrifice to idols, but he despised them, and was handed over to be slain by the driving of a sharp stake through the midst of his bowels, [in the year 250.]

In Egypt, [in the third century,] holy Chæremon, Bishop of Nilopolis, and many other martyrs, of whom some, scattered in flight to escape the persecution under the Emperor Decius, were killed by wild beasts as they wandered in the desert; some were destroyed by hunger, cold, and sickness; and some were murdered by savages and robbers.

At Nicomedia, the holy soldier Zeno, who made a jest upon the Emperor Diocletian as he was offering sacrifice to Ceres, and for this cause had his jaws broken, his teeth beaten out, and his head cut off.

At Vespers, Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin, the same as at First Vespers.

A Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

DECEMBER 22.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 23d day of December, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy Virgin and

[1] Formerly called from its discoverer Aquæ Tauri.

martyr Victoria [de' Tivoli.] She was espoused to one Eugenius, a heathen, and during the persecution under the Emperor Decius she would neither marry Eugenius nor offer sacrifice unto idols, but worked many miracles, whereby she gathered many virgins unto God, and the executioner stabbed her to the heart with his sword at the request of her espoused husband.

At Nicomedia, twenty holy martyrs during the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, after they had been most grievously tormented.

There likewise, in the same persecution, the holy martyrs Migdonius and Mardonius, of whom the one was burnt and the other cast into a ditch, and so died. Then also suffered the Deacon of holy Anthimus, Bishop of Nicomedia, who was bringing a letter to the martyrs when he was taken by the Gentiles and stoned to death, and so passed hence to be ever with the Lord.

In Crete, the holy martyrs Theodulus, Saturninus, Euporus, Gelasius, Eunician, Zeticus, Cleomenes, Agathopus, Basilides, and Evaristus, who suffered great cruelties in the persecution under the Emperor Decius, and were beheaded. [They are often called the Ten Martyrs of Crete.]

At Rome, blessed Servulus, concerning whom holy Gregory writeth that from his childhood even unto the end of his life he lay paralysed in a porch hard by the church of St Clement, and at the end he was called by songs of angels, and passed away into the glory of Paradise [in the year 570.] God doth very often show miracles at his grave.

DECEMBER 23.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the Eve of the birth of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Upon the same 24th day of December, were born into the better life—

At Antioch, forty holy Virgins and martyrs, who there finished their testimony by divers torments in the persecution under the Emperor Decius.

At Spoleto, the holy Priest Gregory [of Spoleto], a martyr in the time of the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian, he was beaten with knotted cudgels, laid upon a grating over fire, imprisoned, his knees hammered with iron combs, burning lamps set to his sides, and at last beheaded.

At Tripoli, the holy martyrs Lucian, Metrobius, Paul, Zenobius, Theotimus, and Drusus.

At Nicomedia, the holy martyr Euthymius, who sent many before him to martyrdom, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, and then was himself pierced through with the sword, and so followed them unto their crown.

At Bordeaux, holy Delphinus, Bishop [of that see from 380-404, when he died,] who was a burning and shining light of holiness in the time of the Emperor Theodosius.

In Poland, [in the year 1473,] the holy Confessor John of Kenty, a secular Priest, famous for his learning, his zeal for the spreading of the faith, his graces, and his miracles, whose feast we have kept upon the 22nd day of October.

At Rome, [about the year 550,] the holy Virgin Tharsilla, father's sister to holy Pope Gregory, of whom he witnesseth that at the hour of her going forth she saw Jesus coming unto her.

At Treves, the holy Virgin Irmina, daughter to King Dagobert [II. She was Abbess of the monastery of Horrein, and lived from about the year 672 to about the year 715.]

FEAST-DAYS IN JANUARY.

The earlier Feast-days in January are given in the Office of the Season.

On the earliest day not occupied by an Office with Nine Lessons, is said the Office of the Dead.

JANUARY 7.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 8th day of January, were born into the better life—

At Beauvais, in Gaul, the holy martyrs Lucian the Priest [first Bishop of that see,] Maximian, and Julian. Maximian and Julian were slain by the persecutors with the sword, but the blessed Lucian, who had come into Gaul with holy Denis, did not receive the like treatment until after great suffering, the which notwithstanding, he feared not to confess aloud the name of Christ. [He died in the year 312.]

Likewise the holy martyr Eugenian [Bishop of Autun.]

In Lybia, the holy martyrs Theophilus the Deacon, and Helladius, who were first torn and mangled with sharp potsherds, and then cast into the fire, and so gave up their souls to God.

At Venice, [in the year 1455,] the blessed Confessor Lawrence de' Giustiniani, the first Patriarch of that city; he was filled very abundantly with learning and gifts of divine wisdom from on high, and Alexander VIII. enrolled his name among those of the saints. We keep his festival upon the fifth day of September.

At Hierapolis, in Asia, holy Apollinaris, Bishop [of that see,] who was eminent for holiness and learning, in the time of the Emperor Marcus Antoninus Verus.

At Naples, in Campania, holy Severinus, Bishop [of that see,] brother of the blessed martyr Victorinus; he wrought many good works, and fell asleep full of holiness, [in the year 540.]

At Pavia, the holy Confessor Maximus, Bishop [of that see, successor to St Epiphanius. He took part in the 4th and 6th Councils of Rome, held by Pope Symmachus against the Antipope Lawrence at the beginning of the sixth century.]

At Ratisbon, holy Bishop Erhard.

At Metz, holy Patient, Bishop [of that see, in the second century.]

On the same day, [in the year 482,] in Bavaria, the holy Abbat Severinus, who spread the Gospel among that people, and is called the Apostle of the [Austrians and] Bavarians. His body was, by the will of God, brought to Monte-feltro, near Naples, and thence it hath been since taken to the monastery of St Severino.

JANUARY 8.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 9th day of January, were born into the better life—

At Antioch, in the persecution

under the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian, the holy martyr Julian, along with whom is commemorated the holy Virgin Basilissa, his wife, who kept her virginity with her husband and ended her life in peace. A multitude of priests and ministers of the Church of Christ had taken refuge with them because of the fury of the persecution. They were burnt with fire, and Julian, by command of the President Marcian, was thereafter made to suffer many torments and was then beheaded. Along with him there suffered also the Priest Anthony and Anastasius, whom Julian had raised from the dead and made a partaker of the grace of Christ, and the lad Celsus, together with his mother, Marcionilla, and seven brethren, and many others.

In Morocco, [in the fourth century,] the holy Virgin and martyr Marciana, who was thrown to wild beasts and so finished her testimony.

At Smyrna, the holy martyrs Vitalis (probably a Bishop, and the others were most likely Deacons), Revocatus, and Fortunatus.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Epictetus, Jucundus, Secundus, Vitalis, Felix, and seven others, [in the year 205.]

At Sebaste, in Armenia, [in the year 392,] holy Peter, Bishop [of that see,] brother of holy Basil the Great [also of St Gregory of Nyssa. His father was St Basil the Elder, his mother St Emmelia, and his grandmother St Macrina. He was made head of his convent in the year 362, when St Basil was made bishop, St Basil having before been Abbat thereof.]

At Ancona, holy Marcellinus, Bishop of that city, the which, as holy Gregory writeth, he did through the power of God deliver from burning. [He succeeded St Traso in the Bishopric about the year 550, and was followed by St Thomas about the year 569. He is secondary Patron of Ancona.]

JANUARY 9.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 10th day of January, were born into the better life—

In Cyprus, the blessed Nicanor, one of the seven first Deacons, who was wondrous for the grace of faith and power, and received a most glorious crown [in the year 35 or 76.]

At Rome, the holy Pope Agatho, who was eminent for holiness and learning, and fell asleep in peace, [in the year 682.]

At Bourges, in Aquitaine, [in the year 1209,] the holy Confessor William, Archbishop [of that see,] famous for signs and works of power, whose name Honorius III. enrolled with those of the saints.

At Milan, the holy Confessor John, surnamed the Good, Archbishop of that city, [in the year 659.]

In the Thebaïd, blessed Paul, the first Hermit, who from the sixteenth even unto the hundred and thirteenth year of his age dwelt alone in the desert, [in the year 342,] holy Anthony saw his soul borne heavenward by angels between the choirs of the Apostles and of the Prophets. We keep his feast upon the 15th day of this present month of January.

At Constantinople, the holy Priest Marcian, [about the year 489.]

In the monastery of Cusan, [in the diocese of Perpignan,] the holy Confessor Peter Urseoli, who was sometime Doge of Venice, and then became a monk of the Order of St Benedict, and was famous for godliness and works of power, [in the year 997.]

JANUARY 10.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 11th day of January, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy Pope Hyginus, who achieved martyrdom gloriously in the persecution under the Emperor Antonine.

In Africa, [about the year 142,] the blessed martyr Salvius, upon whose feast-day holy Austin preached to the people of Carthage.

At Alexandria, the holy martyrs Peter, Severus, and Leucius.

At Fermo, in Picenum, the holy martyr Alexander, Bishop [of that see.]

At Amiens, the holy martyr Salvius, Bishop of that see, [in the beginning of the seventh century.]

At Brindisi, the holy Confessor Leucius, Bishop of that see, [in the end of the second century.]

At Marissa, in Cappadocia, the holy Abbat Theodosius, [head of all the monasteries of Palestine,] who suffered many things for the Catholic faith, but at length fell asleep in peace, [in the year 529.]

In the Thebaïd, [about the year 330,] the holy Abbat Palæmon, the teacher of holy Pachom.

At Castel-Saint-Elie, [about the year 577,] hard by Mount Soracte, the holy monk Anastasius and his Companions, whom the Lord called to pass away unto Him.

At Pavia, the holy virgin Honorata, [in the year 500.]

At Vespers is made a Commemoration of St Hyginus,[1] Pope and martyr, all from the Common Office, p. 594.

Prayer, "Mercifully consider of our weakness," &c. (p. 599.)

JANUARY 11.

At Lauds is made a Commemoration of St Hyginus, Pope and martyr, all from the Common Office, p. 599.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 12th day of January, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyr Tatiana, in the persecution under the Emperor Alexander. She was lacerated with hooks and combs, thrown to wild beasts, and cast into the fire, but as she remained unhurt, was at length beheaded, and so passed away to heaven.

In the Peloponnesos, the holy martyr Satyrus. As he was passing before a certain idol he breathed upon it, and signed himself with the sign of the cross upon his own forehead, whereupon the idol straightway fell down, and for this cause Satyrus was beheaded, [in the year 267.]

Upon the same day, [in Morocco, in the year 259] the holy martyr Arcadius, eminent for his rank and his miracles.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Zoticus, Rogatus, Modestus, Castulus, and a crown of forty soldiers.

---

[1] Elected Pope in the year 139. Died 142.

At Constantinople, the holy martyrs Tigrius the Priest and Eutropius the Reader, who suffered in the time of the Emperor Arcadius.

At Tivoli, [in the year 126,] the holy martyr Zoticus.

At Ephesus, forty-two holy monks, who were most cruelly tortured and suffered martyrdom under the Emperor Constantine Copronymus for the honouring of holy images.

At Ravenna, the holy Confessor John, Archbishop of that see, [about the year 489.]

At Verona, holy Probus, Bishop of that see, [about the year 236.]

In England, [in the year 690,] the holy Confessor Benedict Biscop, founder, and Abbat of the monastery of Jarrow-upon-Tyne, whose feast we keep upon the 12th day of February.

JANUARY 12.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the Octave of the Epiphany of the Lord.

Upon the same 13th day of January, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Lavican Way, forty holy soldiers who earned crowns of martyrdom for confessing the true faith under the Emperor Gallienus.

In Sardinia, the holy martyr Potitus, who suffered many things under the Emperor Antoninus and the President Gelasius, and at last was martyred with the sword.

At Semenden, in Upper Mysia, the holy martyrs Hermylus and Stratonicus, who were cruelly tortured under the Emperor Licinius, and then drowned in the Danube.

At Cordova, [in the year 852,] the holy martyrs Gumesindus the Priest and Servant-of-God the monk.

At Poitiers, in Gaul, the holy Confessor Hilary, Bishop of that see. He was a stalwart champion of the Catholic faith, for the which cause he was banished for four years into Phrygia. Among other miracles which he wrought he raised a dead man to life, [about the year 369.] The Supreme Pontiff Pius IX. confirmed and published his title of Doctor of the Universal Church. We keep his feast upon the morrow.

At Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, holy Leontius, Bishop of that see, who contended manfully against the Gentiles under the Emperor Licinius, and against the Arians under the Emperor Constantine.

At Treves, [in the year 335,] holy Agritius, Bishop of that see.

In the monastery of Vergy, the holy Confessor Viventius, [about the year 400.]

At Amasea, [in the year 324,] in Pontus, the holy Virgin Glaphyra.

[In the year 1497,] in the monastery of St Martha, at Milan, the blessed Virgin Veronica of Binasco, of the Order of St Austin.

JANUARY 13.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Hilary, Bishop of Poitiers, and Doctor of the Church, who passed away to heaven upon this present day.

Upon the same 14th day of January, were born into the better life—

At Nola, in Campania, the holy Priest Felix. Holy Paulinus, Bishop of the same city, writeth that after the persecutors had put Felix to the torture they committed him to prison, where they laid him in chains, upon shells and potsherds, but in the night an angel loosed him and led him forth. In after-times, when the persecution was over and he had turned many to Christ by his example and teaching, he fell asleep, famous for miracles, [about the year 256.]

In Judea, the holy Prophet Malachi, [415 B.C.]

Upon Mount Sinai, thirty-eight holy monks, who were massacred by the Saracens for Christ's faith's sake, [in the year 373.]

Prayer as on p. 201.

Commemoration of St Felix, Priest and Martyr, from the Common Office for one Martyr, (p. 594,) with the following.

Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that the example of Thy Saints may continually stir us up to amend our sinful lives, that as we do solemnly commemorate them, we may also sincerely strive to imitate them. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Hilary was born of a noble family in Acquitaine, and is distinguished as a divine and an orator. He was married in his earlier life, but even then lived the life of a monk: and on account of his remarkable holiness, was ultimately made Bishop of Poitiers, [about the year 353,] in which office he did his duty so as to gain the universal praise of the faithful. At that time the Emperor Constantius was persecuting the Catholics by threats, by the plundering of their goods, by exile, and at length, by every species of cruelty, in order to force them to yield to the Arian heresy. Against the Arians Hilary set himself up as a brazen wall, and turned upon himself the fierceness of their anger. They assailed him by many artifices, and at last Saturnine, Bishop of Arles, at the Council of Beziers, [in 356,] procured his banishment to Phrygia. During this exile he raised a dead man to life, and wrote a work in twelve books on the Trinity, against the Arians.

Fifth Lesson.

IN [the year 359,] the fourth of his exile, took place the Council of Seleucia in Isauria, at which Hilary was obliged to be present, but afterwards withdrew to Constantinople. Here he realised more sharply the awful nature of this crisis in the history of Christianity, published three pamphlets in the form of letters to the Emperor, and demanded from that Prince leave to hold a public disputation in his presence. The Arian Bishops Ursacius and Valens, whom Hilary had already confuted in writing, were afraid to meet him in debate, and therefore induced Constantius, under pretence of pardon, to send him back to his Bishoprick, [in 360.] His mother, the Church of Gaul, to use the language of Jerome, received him with open arms on his return from the battle with the heretics. He was followed to Poitiers by Martin, afterwards Bishop of Tours, whose after holiness was a fruit of his teaching.

Sixth Lesson.

HENCEFORTH he ruled the Church of Poitiers in great peace. By his exertions the Church of Gaul was led to denounce the Arian blasphemy. His wonderful learning is seen in his numerous works, of which Jerome writeth to Læta that he deemeth them quite faultless. "One can follow Hilary in his books," saith he, "without tripping once." He passed from earth to heaven upon the thirteenth day of January, in the year of our Lord 369, in the reign of the Emperors Valentinian and Valens. He had already been called an illustrious Doctor of the Church, by many Fathers and Councils, and was so styled in the Liturgy in some Diœceses, when at length, [in the year 1850,] Pope Pius IX., at the prayer of the Synod of Bordeaux, and in accordance with a resolution of the Sacred Congregation of Rites, proclaimed and confirmed the title, and commanded that the Mass and Office of his Feast should be everywhere said as those of a Doctor.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Gospel, Matth. v. 13, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 631,) with the second section thereof, beginning, "This thing, therefore, thus made to serve, &c.,"—read together as one.

Eighth Lesson.

Continuation of the same Homily,—"But the nature of salt, &c."

Eighth Responsory.

In the midst of the congregation, &c., (p. 625.)

Ninth Lesson.

(For St Felix, Priest and Martyr.)

FELIX was a Priest of Nola, who, on account of his fiery zeal against idolatry, suffered much persecution from the heathens, and was cast into prison. From thence an angel delivered him by night, and bade him go to Maximian, Bishop of Nola. This Bishop, enfeebled by old age, had at length despaired of power to withstand the torments of the persecutors, and had hidden himself in a wood. Thither came Felix, by the will of God, and found the holy bishop lying half-dead upon the ground. He succoured him, and carried him upon his shoulders to the house of an holy widow. On another occasion, Felix, having again provoked the anger of the devil-worshippers, became an object of their pursuit, from which he hid himself in a narrow place between two walls. Hardly had he entered, when some spiders wove their webs across the entrance, which the enemy perceiving, concluded that no man had entered, and passed by. After leaving this hiding-place, Felix lay for three months in the house of an holy woman. After the Lord gave peace to His Church, the Saint returned to Nola, where he turned many to Christ by his life, his preaching, and his miracles. He steadily refused to accept the Bishoprick, fell asleep in the Lord,[1] and was buried at Nola in the place called "The Pines."

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of holy Paul, the first hermit, who was borne to his place among the blessed upon the 10th day of this present month of January.

In the country of Angers, the blessed Maurus, [founder and] Abbat [of Glanfeuil,] a disciple of St Benedict, by whom he was trained from his childhood, and made such headway that in obedience to him he walked upon water, a thing new and almost unheard of since the time of the Apostle Peter. Benedict sent him into Gaul, where he built a famous monastery, whereof he was Abbat for forty years, and fell asleep in peace, illustrious for miracles, [in the year 584.]

In Judea, the holy prophets Habakkuk and Michah, [606 years before Christ,] whose bodies were found by revelation from God in the time of the Emperor Theodosius the elder, [between the years of Our Lord 346 and 395.]

At Anagni, the holy Virgin and martyr Secundina, who suffered under the Emperor Decius.

At Cagliari, in Sardinia, the holy martyr Ephisius, who under the judge

Flavian, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, was strengthened by God to overcome many torments, but in the end was beheaded, and so rose to heaven a conqueror.

At Nola, in Campania, [about the year 252,] holy Maximus, Bishop of that see.

In Auvergne, in Gaul, [in the year 710,] the holy Confessor Bonitus, Bishop of that see.

In Egypt, the holy Macarius, [in the year 391,] Abbat [of Scittir,] a disciple of blessed Anthony, and very famous for his life and miracles.

Likewise [in Egypt, in the year 391,] blessed Isidore, famous for the holiness of his life, his faith, and his miracles.

At Rome, holy John, called the hidden, who lived unknown to his kinsfolk for a while in a corner of his father's house, and then in a hut upon an island in the Tiber, where he was recognised at the time of his death, and, famous for miracles, was buried in the same place, where afterward a church was built in his name, [in the year 450.]

Vespers of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

JANUARY 15.

St Paul, the First Hermit, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor, (p. 621,) except what is otherwise given here.

Prayer throughout the Office. O God, Who year by year dost gladden us, &c. (p. 599.)

The First Vespers, as regards St Paul, begin with the Chapter.

A Commemoration is made of the preceding:

Antiphon. O right excellent, &c.

Verse. The Lord hath chosen him for a Priest unto Himself.

Answer. To offer up unto Him the sacrifice of praise.

Prayer from the Common Office as during the day.

Also a Commemoration of St Maurus, Abbat. Antiphon. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, &c." Verse. "The Lord guided the just, &c.," and the Answer—all as if from Lauds, and the Prayer, "O Lord, we beseech Thee that the prayers, &c."

Note. Even if the Feast of St Paul be suppressed, these Commemorations, Antiphons, Verses, Answers, and Prayers remain as above.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

The Lessons are taken from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

PAUL the first hermit, and model of all others, was a native of the lower Thebaïd in Egypt. At the age of fifteen years he lost both his parents. In order to escape from the persecution of Decius and Valerian, and to serve God in quietness, he betook himself to a cave in the desert. Here there was a palm-tree, on the fruit of which he lived, and of whose leaves he made his raiment until he attained the age of 113 years. At that time[1] Anthony, being now himself aged 90 years, received a command from God to go and see him. They met without knowing one another's names, and saluted one another, after which they fell straightway into a long discourse concerning the kingdom of God. Now it so happened that a raven had of a long time brought Paul every day half a loaf, but on this day while they spake together he brought a whole one.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN the raven had flown away —"Well," quoth Paul, "the Lord hath sent us our dinner. Truly He is gracious; truly He is merciful. It is now sixty years that I have had half a loaf of bread every day, but now that thou art come, Christ giveth His soldiers double rations." Then they asked a blessing, and ate together, sitting by a spring. When they were refreshed, they returned thanks, as is the custom, and afterwards spent the whole night praising God. At break of day Paul felt the approach of death, and desired Anthony to bring the cloak which Athanasius had given him, to use for his winding-sheet. While Anthony was on his way back from this journey, he saw in a vision the soul of Paul ascending to heaven, surrounded by choirs of angels, and accompanied by the Prophets and Apostles.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN Anthony reached the cell of Paul, he found the dead body of the Saint in a kneeling posture, with the head thrown up and the hands stretched out towards heaven. He immediately began to chant the psalms and hymns ordained by Christian tradition, while he wrapped the body in the cloak of Athanasius. He had no spade to dig a grave, but two lions came racing from the desert, as though to attend the burying, and scratched a hole big enough to hold a man's body, with their paws, showing meanwhile such signs of grief as their nature alloweth. When they were gone away, Anthony put the holy body in this hole, covered it with earth, and arranged it like a Christian's grave. He took away for himself Paul's tunic, which he had woven out of the palm-leaves somewhat after the manner of basket-work, and this tunic Anthony was in the habit of wearing on the great days of the Passover and Pentecost as long as he lived.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xi. 25, with the Homily of St Austin, (p. 629.) The Third is either omitted or read as one with the Second, in order to make room for

Ninth Lesson.

(For St Maurus, Abbat.)

MAURUS was born of a noble Roman family, and while he was yet a child was offered to God by his father Eutychius, in the order and under the personal teaching of St Benedict.[1] In a short while he made such progress in the life of grace that he became a wonder to his master, who often held him up to his other disciples as a pattern of regular observance and all virtues. While he was yet very young, Pope St Gregory telleth a wonderful instance of his obedience. Placid the monk having fallen into a lake where he was being swept away by the current, the holy Patriarch called Maurus and bade him run to the rescue, which he did, walking on the water till he reached Placid, whom he took by the hair of the head and dragged to the shore. He was sent by St Benedict into France, where he founded the celebrated monastery [of Glanfeuil, now called St Maur-sur-Loire,] which he governed for forty years. He was a zealous and successful propagator of monastic discipline. He passed to heaven, famous for holiness and miracles, when he was more than seventy years of age, in the year of Salvation 565.

LAUDS.

A Commemoration is made of St Maurus. Antiphon. "I will liken him, &c." Verse. "The Lord loved him, &c." Answer. "He clothed him, &c." Prayer. "O Lord, we beseech Thee that the prayers, &c." (p. 629) — all as if from First Vespers.

Note. This Commemoration does not change even if the Feast of S. Paul be suppressed.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 16th day of January, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Salarian Way, the holy martyr Pope Marcellus [I.], who for his confession of the Catholic faith was first cudgelled by order of the tyrant Maxentius and then sent to take care of the beasts which were fed at the public cost, in the which service he died, clad in sack-cloth, [in the year 309-310.]

At Morocco, in Africa, [in the year 1220,] the holy martyrs Berard [de Carbis], Peter, Accursius, Adjutus, and Otho, of the Order of Friars Minors.

At Arles, [in the year 429,] the holy Confessor Honoratus, Bishop of that see, whose life was rendered famous by his teaching and miracles.

At Moerzo, the holy Confessor Titian, Bishop of that see.

At Al-Arish, in Egypt, holy Melas, Bishop of that see, [in the fifth century,] who was exiled under the Emperor Valens and suffered other hardships for the Catholic faith's sake, but at length fell asleep in peace.

At Fondi, in Campania, [in the sixth century,] the holy Abbat Honoratus, [who was set over the monastery of Fondi ;] of whom mention is made by blessed Pope Gregory.

In the monastery of Perouse, the holy Confessor Fursey, [Abbat of Lagny, in the year 650.]

At Rome, holy Priscilla, who gave up herself and all that she had to the service of the martyrs.

At Second Vespers the first verse of the Hymn is altered.

Commemoration of the following, from the Common Office, with Prayer from Lauds.

JANUARY 16.

St Marcellus, Pope and Martyr.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, except what is otherwise given here.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Marcellus was a Roman, and held the supreme Pontificate from [the year of our Lord 304,[2] in] the reign of Constantius and Galerius, till [310, in] that of Maxentius. It was through his persuasion that the Roman lady Lucina left the whole of her property to the Church of God. As the believers increased, he instituted new titles in the City, which he divided after the manner of dioceses for their convenience, and for the baptism and penance of heathens converted to Christianity, and for the burial of the martyrs. These proceedings excited the wrath of Maxentius, who threatened Marcellus with the heaviest punishment, unless he would lay down the Popedom and sacrifice to idols.

Fifth Lesson.

THE servant of God treated with contempt the mad cries of this man, who accordingly took him and sent him to a menagerie, to take care of the beasts which were fed at the public cost. Marcellus remained at this place for nine months, which he spent in continual fasting and prayer, and, as he could not visit the parishes in person, he wrote letters to them. Some clerks rescued him, and the blessed Lucina hospitably received him into her house, in which he dedicated a Church, which is now called St Marcellus'. Here the Christians met to pray, and the blessed Marcellus himself preached.

Sixth Lesson.

THESE proceedings came to the knowledge of Maxentius, who thereupon had the wild beasts brought from the menagerie and located in the church, where Marcellus was made to feed them. The noisomeness of the place and the filthiness of his occupation broke down a constitution already enfeebled by many ailments, and he fell asleep in the Lord. The blessed Lucina buried his body in the cemetery of Priscilla, on the Salarian Way, on the 16th of January. He sat on the throne of Peter for five years, one month, and twenty-five days. He wrote an epistle to the Bishops of the Patriarchate of Antioch on the primacy of the Roman Church, wherein he proveth the right of the same Church to be called the head of all the Churches. In this letter he likewise saith that no Council can be lawfully gathered together except by the authority of the Roman Pontiff. He ordained at Rome in the month of December twenty-five Priests, two Deacons, and twenty-one Bishops for divers Sees.

---

[1] This custom of offering little children was permitted by St Benedict, but is now forbidden. St Maurus was dedicated at twelve years of age, in the year 522.

[2] Alban Butler says rather 308, as Marcellus did not actually enter into occupation.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xvi. 24, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 600.)

Eighth Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast prevented him, &c., (p. 598.)

Prayer throughout the Office.

O LORD, we pray Thee, mercifully give ear unto the prayers of Thy people who rejoice at the memory of the victory through suffering of Thy blessed Martyr and Bishop Marcellus, and for his sake succour us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 17th day of January, were born into the better life—

In the Thebaïd, [in the year 356,] the holy Abbat Anthony, father of many monks, very illustrious for his life and miracles. Holy Athanasius hath chronicled his acts in a famous book. His sacred body was found by the revelation of God in the time of the Emperor Justinian and brought to Alexandria, where it is buried in the Church of St John the Baptist.

At Langres, the holy triplets Speusippus, Eleusippus, and Meleusippus, who were crowned with martyrdom in the time of the Emperor Marcus Aurelius, along with their grandmother Leonilla.

At Rome is commemorated the finding of the bodies of the holy martyrs Diodorus the Priest, Marian the Deacon, and their Companions, who were keeping the feasts of the martyrs in the Catacombs in the time of holy Pope Stephen, [in the year 257,] when the persecutors closed up the entrance of the Catacomb and buried it up, so that they also died as martyrs.

On the same day were also born into the better life—

At Bourges, [in the year 644,] holy Sulpicius, Bishop of that see, surnamed the Pious, whose life and precious death are rendered famous by glorious miracles.

In the monastery of St Andrew at Rome, [in the sixth century,] the blessed monks Anthony, Merulus, and John, of whom writeth holy Pope Gregory.

Vespers of the following.

JANUARY 17.

St Anthony, Abbat.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Abbats, (p. 629,) except what is otherwise given here.

Prayer throughout the Office. O Lord, we beseech Thee, that the prayers, &c.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Marcellus, with Prayer as above.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ANTHONY was an Egyptian, the child of noble and Christian parents, whom he lost while yet very young. On one occasion he entered a Church, and heard these words of the Gospel, (Matth. xix. 21,) "If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor." He took these words as if they were addressed to himself personally, for this was the obedience which he thought every word of the Lord Christ should meet with. He therefore sold his whole possessions, and gave the price to the poor. Being thus delivered from worldly entanglements, he set himself to lead on earth the life of an angel. Finding himself, as it were, about to enter the field of battle against Satan, he thought it wisest to add to the shield of faith, which he already possessed, all the rest of the armour of God, wherefore he observed all those who were eminent for any grace, and strove to copy them.

Fifth Lesson.

HE was excelled by none in watchfulness and self-restraint. He surpassed all in long-suffering, meekness, tenderness, lowliness, perseverance, and continual study of the Holy Scriptures. He had such a loathing of the company and conversation of heretics and schismatics, especially Arians, that he used to say that a faithful Christian ought as far as possible never to come near any such. He took the sleep which was needful for the body lying on the ground. Such was his devotion to fasting, that he took nothing with his bread but salt, and drank only water; he never ate or drank before sunset; he often abstained from food altogether for two days at a time; and very often passed whole nights in prayer. Being so valiant a soldier of God, Anthony was attacked by the devil with divers temptations, but he overcame them all by prayer and fasting. Nevertheless, these frequent triumphs over Satan did not lull Anthony into security, for he was well aware of the numberless arts of assault possessed by the evil one.

Sixth Lesson.

THEN he betook himself into the vast deserts of Africa that lie near Egypt. Day by day he advanced on the path to perfection. Day by day the attacks of the fiends became more violent, but day by day his strength grew greater to strive against them. At length he came to mock at the powerlessness of the devils, against whom he stirred up his disciples to fight, teaching them with what arms to combat. "Believe me, my brethren," he used to say, "Satan is afraid of good men's watchings, and prayers, and fasts, and voluntary poverty, and mercifulness, and lowliness, but above all, of their warm love for Christ our Lord, the mere sign of Whose most holy Cross is enough to undo him and put him to flight." He became such an object of dread to the devils, that many persons throughout Egypt who were tormented by them, were delivered by calling on his name: moreover the fame of his holiness was so spread abroad, that Constantine the Great and his sons wrote to him to commend themselves to his prayers. In the hundred and fifth year of his age, and the fulness of his reputation for piety and miracles, having roused up great numbers to follow his example, he gathered his monks around him, and when he had exhorted them to strive after Christian perfection, he passed to heaven on the 17th day of January, [in the year of our Lord 356.]

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the Feast of the See of the holy Apostle Peter wherein he first sat at Rome.

Upon the same 18th day of January, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy Virgin and martyr Prisca, who after suffering many torments was crowned with martyrdom under the Emperor Claudius.

In Pontus, the holy soldiers Moseus and Ammonius, who were first condemned to penal servitude in the mines and then burnt, [under the Emperor Decius.]

Likewise in Pontus, [probably in the year 196,] the holy martyr Athenogenes the Old, called the Theologian, who, when he was about to suffer martyrdom by fire, joyfully sang an hymn, which also he left unto his disciples in writing.

At Tours, in Gaul, [in the year 498,] holy Volusian, Bishop of that see, who was taken prisoner by the Goths, and while still in exile gave up his soul to God.

There also, [in the year 593,] the holy hermit [of Tourance,] Leobard, who was a bright light of self-denial and lowliness.

In Brittany, holy Deicola, Abbat [of Lure,] [in the year 625,] a disciple of blessed Columbanus.

At Como, [in the year 581,] the holy virgin Liberata.

Vespers of the following.

JANUARY 18.

St Peter's See at Rome.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

Hymn.[1]

PETER, whatever thou shalt bind on earth,
 The same is bound above the starry sky;
What here thy delegated power doth loose,
 Is loosed in heaven's supremest court on high:
 To Judgment shalt thou come when the world's end is nigh.

Praise to the Father through all ages be!
 The same to Thee, O Co-eternal Son!
And Holy Ghost, One Glorious Trinity!
 To Whom all majesty and might belong:
 So sing we now, and such be our eternal song. Amen.

Verse. Thou art Peter.

Answer. And upon this rock I will build My Church.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Thou art the shepherd of the sheep, and the Prince of the Apostles, and unto thee are given the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Prayer and Commemoration of St Paul from Lauds; then a Commemoration of St Anthony, and lastly of St Prisca, Virgin and Martyr, from the Common Office for Virgins and Martyrs, with the following.

Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, unto all Thy servants who do here keep the birthday of Thy blessed Virgin and Martyr Prisca, and do year by year rejoice at her solemn commemoration, that they may have grace to follow after the pattern of her great faith. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Thou art the Shepherd of the sheep, and the Prince of the Apostles: * and unto thee hath God given the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Hymn from First Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the First Epistle of the [2] Blessed Apostle Peter (i. 1.)

PETER, an Apostle of JESUS Christ, to the strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia, elect, according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, unto the sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience, and sprinkling of the Blood of JESUS Christ: Grace unto you, and peace, be multiplied. Blessed be God and the Father of our Lord JESUS Christ, Which, according to His abundant mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the Resurrection of JESUS Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time.

First Responsory.

Simon Peter, before I called thee out of the ship, I knew thee, and appointed thee for a captain over My people. And I have given unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. Whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven.

Answer. And I have given unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

---

[1] Part of the mediæval hymn Felix per omnes, &c., much altered; author unknown; translation by the Rev. E. Caswall.

[2] Abp. Kenrick says: "The period when this letter was written cannot be fixed with certainty. Hug assigns it to the eleventh year of Nero." (If so, three years before the martyrdom of the Apostle.) "The common opinion is that it was written from Rome, which is understood to have been designated by the name of Babylon (v. 13) as in the Apocalypse; but the critic just mentioned . . . . supposes that it was written from Babylon in Asia."

Second Lesson.

WHEREIN ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness, through manifold temptations; that the trial of your faith, being much more precious than gold (which is tried with fire,) may be found unto praise, and glory, and honour at the appearing of JESUS Christ: Whom, having not seen, ye love; in Whom, though now ye see Him not, yet ye believe; and believing, rejoice, with joy unspeakable and full of glory; receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls.

Second Responsory.

[1] Simon Peter, if thou lovest Me, feed My sheep. Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee: I will lay down my life for Thy sake.

Verse. [2] If I should die with Thee, I will not deny Thee.

Answer. I will lay down my life for Thy sake.

Third Lesson.

OF which salvation, the Prophets have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you, searching what or what time the Spirit of Christ Which was in them did signify, when It testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow. Unto whom it was revealed that, not unto themselves, but unto you, they did minister the things which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the Gospel unto you, with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, on Whom the angels desire to look.

Third Responsory.

Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My Church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. Whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven.

Answer. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Leo [the Great.] (First Sermon on the Holy Apostles Peter and Paul, before the middle.)

WHEN the twelve holy Apostles had received from the Holy Ghost the power to speak all languages, they divided the whole world into districts, which they severally allotted to themselves as fields for their Gospel labours. Then was Peter, the Prince of the Apostles, sent to the capital city of the Roman Empire, that he might cause the light to shine thence throughout the whole body of the civilized nations. At that time what nation was there that had no representative in Rome? When Rome had learnt, what people that did not learn too?

Fourth Responsory.

Thou art the Shepherd of the sheep, and the Prince of the Apostles, and unto thee hath God given all the kingdoms of the world. Therefore unto thee hath He given the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. Whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

Answer. Therefore unto thee hath He given the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Fifth Lesson.

IN Rome were the dreams of an unbelieving philosophy to be destroyed, in Rome were the empty utterances of earthly wisdom to be confuted, in Rome was idolatry to be overcome, in Rome profanity to be put down, even in Rome, where the activity of superstition had gathered together from the whole earth every error which it could find. O most blessed Apostle Peter! this was the city to which thou didst not shrink to come. The Apostle Paul, thy comrade in glory, was yet occupied in founding the Churches, and thou didst enter alone into that forest of wild beasts roaring furiously; thou didst commit thyself to that stormy ocean, more boldly than when thou walkest upon the waters to come to JESUS.

Fifth Responsory.

[3] Peter, I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not; and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren.

Verse. Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father Which is in heaven.

Answer. And when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren.

Sixth Lesson.

THOU hadst already taught them of the circumcision who were converted; thou hadst founded the Church of Antioch, the first that bore the noble name of Christian; thou hadst published the law of the Gospel throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia; and thou didst not fear for the hardness of thy work, nor turn back because of thine old age, but didst boldly set up the trophy of the cross of Christ upon those Roman walls, where the Providence of God had appointed the throne of thine honour, and the glorious scene of thy passion.

Sixth Responsory.

Peter, lovest thou Me? Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee. Feed My sheep.

Verse. Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me more than these? Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee.

Answer. Feed My sheep.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Feed My sheep.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xvi. 13.)

AT that time: JESUS came into the coasts of Cæsarea Philippi, and He asked His disciples, saying: Who do men say that I, the Son of Man, am? And so on.

---

[1] John xxi. 16; xiii. 37.

[2] Mark xiv. 31.

[3] Luke xxii. 32.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.] (Commentary on Matthew xvi.)

The Lord asketh His disciples who men say that He is, and He addeth, "He, the Son of Man." Let us ever remember to hold fast this truth of our profession, namely, that the Son of God is the Son of Man also. Were He one and not the other, then were He no Saviour for us. The Lord then, having heard the various opinions of men, asketh, "But Who say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said: Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Peter had weighed the questions. The Lord had asked, "Who do men say that I, the Son of Man, am?" That He was Son of Man was sufficiently evident to all who looked upon His Body. But when He spake of His whole Self, and asked, "Who do ye say that I am?" He showed that the mind had something to grasp beyond That Which was seen, for Son of Man He was manifestly. What judgment did He wish them to give? I think it was not that which He had owned concerning Himself. That something more, which He wished them to own, was a hidden thing, whereunto the faith of them that believed in Him was to reach.

Seventh Responsory.

JESUS asked His disciples, saying: Who do men say that I, the Son of Man, am? Peter answered, and said: Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And I say unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My Church.

Verse. Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father Which is in heaven.

Answer. And I say unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My Church.

Sometimes, as, for instance, where this or St Prisca is the Patronal Feast, a Ninth Lesson of this Homily is required, and in that case the Lesson which follows is divided into two, at the place marked.

Eighth Lesson.

PETER'S confession was followed by a proper reward for having seen the Son of God in the Son of Man. Blessed is this holy Apostle, in whose praise it is said that he saw with more than human eyes That Which was unseen, who gazed upon Flesh and Blood, and by the secret revelation of the Heavenly Father recognised the Eternal Son of God; who was the first thought worthy to acknowledge the Divinity of Christ. (Here, if necessary, the Lesson is divided.) God bless thee, O Peter, thou who by uttering for the first time the title of Divine honour, didst lay the goodly foundation of the Church! God bless thee, thou worthy rock whereon she is built, for ever triumphant over the infernal powers, the gates of hell, and the bands of death! God bless thee, happy door-keeper of heaven, to whose keeping are given the keys of the everlasting mansions, whose sentences on earth are already confirmed in heaven—so that whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

Eighth Responsory.

The Lord hath chosen thee for a priest unto Himself, to offer up unto Him the sacrifice of praise.

Verse. [1] Offer unto God thanksgiving, and pay thy vows unto the Most High.

Answer. The sacrifice of praise.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. The sacrifice of praise.

Ninth Lesson.

For St Prisca, Virgin and Martyr.

PRISCA was a noble Roman maiden, who at thirteen years of age was accused of Christianity before the Emperor Claudius. By his command she was taken to the temple of Apollo to sacrifice there, and when she refused, was buffeted and sent to prison. She was taken out from thence again, but as she still held steadfastly to the faith, they flogged her, poured boiling tallow upon her, and sent her back a second time. She was at last thrown to a lion in the amphitheatre, but it quietly lay down at her feet. She was starved for three days in a slaves' prison house, and then tortured upon the rack. Pieces of flesh were next torn from her body with iron hooks, and she was thrown on a burning pile. She marvellously still remained alive, and was accordingly beheaded outside the city. Thus she added the crown of martyrdom to the palm of virginity. The Christians buried her body at the tenth milestone on the road from Rome to Ostia on the eighteenth of January.[2]

LAUDS.

Hymn.[3]

PETER, blest Shepherd! hearken to our cry,
And with a word unloose our guilty chain;
Thou! who hast power to ope the gates on high
To men below, and power to shut them fast again.

Praise, blessing, majesty, through endless days,
Be to the Trinity immortal given;
Who in pure Unity profoundly sways
Eternally alike all things in earth and heaven. Amen.

Verse. [4] Let them exalt Him in the congregation of the people.

Answer. And praise Him in the assembly of the elders.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Thus saith the Lord unto Simon Peter: Whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who hast given unto Thy Blessed Apostle Peter the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and the power to bind and to loose, loose us, we beseech Thee, at his mighty intercession, from all the bands of our sins. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

[1] Ps. xlix. 14.

[2] About A.D. 275.

[3] A part, much altered, of the hymn Aurea Luce, composed probably near the end of the fifth century by Elpis, first wife of the learned Bœthius, minister of Theodoric; translation by the Rev. E. Caswall.

[4] Ps. cvi. 32.

Then the following Commemoration of St Paul.

Antiphon. O Holy Apostle Paul, Preacher of the truth, and Teacher of the Gentiles, pray for us to God Who hath chosen thee.

Verse. O Holy Apostle Paul, thou art a chosen vessel unto God.

Answer. To preach the Gospel throughout the whole world.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who, through the preaching of the Blessed Apostle Paul, hast caused the light of the Gospel to shine throughout the world, grant, we beseech Thee, that we, who do keep his memorial, may continually be holpen by his intercession with Thee.

Then a Commemoration is made of St Prisca. (Prayer from Vespers.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 19th day of January, were born into the better life—

At Worcester, in England, [in the year 1095,] the holy Confessor Wolstan, Bishop of that see, famous for his worthy and wondrous works, whose name was enrolled among those of the saints by Innocent III.

At Rome, [in the year 270,] upon the Cornelian Way, the holy martyrs Maris, and Martha, his wife, and their sons Audifax and Abachum. These were noble Persians, who came to Rome for prayer's sake in the time of the Emperor Claudius. They were cudgelled, racked, burnt, torn with iron hooks, and had their hands cut off. At length Martha was drowned and the others beheaded, and their bodies cast into the fire.

At Smyrna, in the time of the Emperors Marcus Antoninus and Lucius Aurelius, the blessed martyr Germanicus; he was a very beautiful youth, but by the power of God's grace he laid aside all the weakness of bodily fear, and of his own accord provoked the beast by which he had been condemned by the judge to be killed; and so being ground through its teeth, and so dying for the Lord Jesus Christ, he earned to be made one body with Him who is Himself the very Bread which came down from heaven.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Paul, Gerontius, Januarius, Saturninus, Successus, Julius, Catus, Pia, and Germana, [and others to the number in all of 600.]

At Spoleto, in the time of the Emperor Antonine, the holy martyr Pontian. Fabian, the judge, caused him to be first most grievously beaten with rods and then to walk barefoot upon live coals; by these he was unhurt, and was therefore racked, lacerated with iron hooks, and cast into prison, where he was comforted by a visitation of angels. Lastly he was thrown to the lions, had molten lead poured over him, and was then beheaded.

At Lodi, [about the year 413,] the holy Confessor Bassian, Bishop of that see, who fought manfully along with holy Ambrose against the heretics.

SECOND VESPERS.

Hymn from First Vespers.

Verse. The Lord hath chosen thee for a Priest unto Himself.

Answer. To offer up unto Him the sacrifice of praise.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Being made the Chief Bishop, &c., (p. 618.)

Prayer and Commemoration of St Paul as before; then of the following, Prayer from his Office; then of St Maris and his Companions, Martyrs.

Antiphon and Verse and Answer from the First Vespers of the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 602.)

Prayer.

GRACIOUSLY hear, O Lord, the prayers of Thy people who draw near unto Thee under the protection of Thy blessed Saints, granting us in this world Thy peace, and in that which is to come life everlasting. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

JANUARY 19.

St Wolstan, Bishop [of Worcester,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout. (Taken from the Salisbury Missal.)

POUR into our hearts, O Lord, the Spirit of Thy love, that we, being holpen by the prayers of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Wolstan, may worthily taste Thy sweetness in everlasting blessedness. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Same Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From the Life by William of Malmesbury. Anglia Sacra, ii. 241.)

THIS Wolstan gained a great fame for holiness while he was a priest. He afterwards became a monk at Worcester, and in a short while was set to govern that Church. As regarded earthly learning he was almost entirely uneducated, and gave himself up wholly to ghostly lore. As an English speaker he was deemed very eloquent, and it is a remarkable proof of this, that, by constant preaching, he brought the citizens of Bristol to their right minds, after both the Royal and the Papal authority had failed to make them give up their infamous slave-trade.

Fifth Lesson.

AS a Bishop, he was unwearied in doing the work of the Good Shepherd. He made constant visitations throughout his Diocese, held Ordinations, consecrated Churches, rebuked sinners, and both by word and ensample, stirred up the souls committed to his charge to yearn after life eternal. It often was so that he remained without food from sunrise to dark, confirming the children who were brought to him from all quarters, to the number of two or three thousand at a time. The gentleness and the tender love of souls which he displayed in hearing confessions were so great, that penitents flowed to him from well-nigh all England, and converted sinners under his warnings brought forth fruits meet for repentance.

Sixth Lesson.

HIS watchfulness for the salvation of others did not cause him to neglect his own. He said Mass often, was constant in prayer, never ate meat, and served God in abundant almsgiving to the poor. The lowlier he was regarding himself, the more did others speak of him, and not only Englishmen and Normans, but foreign Kings and Princes also, commended themselves to his prayers. He died very old, in the year of our Lord 1095, and is buried in his own Church at Worcester.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lesson from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619.) The last is omitted or read with the Eighth, to make room for that of SS. Maris, &c.

At Lauds, Commemoration of the Holy Martyrs.

Vespers are of SS. Fabian and Sebastian, from the Chapter, inclusive, with a Commemoration of St Wolstan.

Ninth Lesson.

(For St Maris, and his Companions, Martyrs.)

MARIS was a Persian of high rank, who came to Rome in the reign of the Emperor Claudius, with his wife Martha, who was equally noble, and their two sons Audifax and Abachum, to pray at the graves of the Martyrs. Here they comforted the Christians who were in prison, and whom they relieved by their ministrations and alms, and buried the bodies of the Saints. For these acts they were all arrested, but no threats or terrors could move them to sacrifice to idols. They were accordingly mangled with clubs, and drawn with ropes, after which they were burnt by applying plates of red-hot metal to their bodies, and their flesh partly torn off with metal hooks. Lastly their hands were all cut off, and they were fastened together by the neck, in which state they were driven through the city to the thirteenth mile-stone on the Cornelian Way, a place now called Santa Ninfa, where they were to die. Martha addressed a moving exhortation to her husband and sons to hold out bravely to the last, for the love of JESUS Christ; and was then herself drowned. The other three martyrs were next beheaded in the same sand-pit. Their bodies were thrown into a fire. The lady Felicity of Rome collected the half-burnt remains, and caused them to be buried at her own farm.[1]

Prayer throughout the Office as at Vespers.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Maris and his Companions. Prayer as before.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 20th day of January, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy Pope Fabian, who suffered in the time of the Emperor Decius, and was buried in the cemetery of Callistus.

There also, at the Catacombs, the holy martyr Sebastian, commander of the first cohort under the Emperor Diocletian. Being convicted of Christianity, he was tied up in the midst of a field and shot at by the soldiers, but in the end he was beaten to death with cudgels.

At Nice, in Bithynia, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyr Neophitus, who in the fifteenth year of his age was flogged, cast into a furnace, and thrown to wild beasts, and for as much as he remained unhurt and constantly professed the faith of Christ, he was at length beheaded.

At Cæsena, [in the tenth century,] holy Maurus, Bishop of that see, famous for graces and miracles.

In Palestine, [in the year 473,] holy Euthymius, [surnamed the Great,] Abbat [near Jerusalem,] who flourished in the Church in the time of the Emperor Marcian, filled with zeal for catholic discipline, and marked by the power of working miracles.

Vespers are the First of the following from the Chapter inclusive.

JANUARY 20.

SS. Fabian and Sebastian, Martyrs.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, except what is otherwise given here.

Prayer throughout.

MERCIFULLY consider our weakness, O Almighty God, and whereas by the burden of our sins we are sore let and hindered, grant that we may be relieved by the prayers of Thy blessed and glorious Martyrs Fabian and Sebastian. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

First Vespers, as regards SS. Fabian and Sebastian, begin with the Chapter.

A Commemoration is made of St Wolstan. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

The Lessons are taken from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

FABIAN was a Roman, and sat as Pope from [the year of our Lord 236, in] the reign of the Emperor Maximin till [250, in] that of Decius. He appointed a Deacon to each of the seven districts of Rome to look after the poor. He likewise appointed the same number of Subdeacons to collect the acts of the Martyrs from the records kept by the seven district notaries. It was by him that it was ordained that every Maundy Thursday the old Chrism should be burnt and new consecrated. He was crowned with martyrdom upon the 20th of January, in the persecution of Decius, and buried in the cemetery of St Kallistus on the Appian Way, having sat in the throne of Peter fifteen years and four days. He held five Advent ordinations, in which he ordained twenty-two Priests, seven Deacons, and eleven Bishops for divers Sees.

[1] A.D. 270.

Fifth Lesson.

THE father of Sebastian was of Narbonne, and his mother a Milanese. He was a great favourite of the Emperor Diocletian, both on account of his noble birth and his personal bravery, and was by him appointed captain of the first company of the Prætorian Guards. He was in secret a Christian, and often supported the others both by good offices and money. When some showed signs of yielding under persecution, he so successfully exhorted them, that, for JESUS Christ's sake, many offered themselves to the tormentors. Among these were the brothers Mark and Marcellian who were imprisoned at Rome in the house of Nicostratus. The wife of Nicostratus himself, named Zoë, had lost her voice, but it was restored to her at the prayer of Sebastian. These facts becoming known to Diocletian, he sent for Sebastian, and after violently rebuking him, used every means to turn him from his faith in Christ. But as neither promises nor threats availed, he ordered him to be tied to a post and shot to death with arrows.

Sixth Lesson.

SEBASTIAN was treated accordingly, and left for dead, but in the night the holy widow Irene sent for the body in order to bury it, and then found that he was still alive, and nursed him in her own house. As soon as his health was restored, he went out to meet Diocletian, and boldly rebuked him for his wickedness. The Emperor was first thunderstruck at the sight of a man whom he believed to have been some time dead, but afterwards, frenzied with rage at the reproaches of Sebastian, ordered him to be beaten to death with rods, under which torment the martyr yielded his blessed soul to God, [upon the 20th day of January, in the year of our Lord 288.] His body was thrown into a sewer, but he appeared in sleep to Lucina, and made known to her where it was, and where he would have it buried. She accordingly found it and laid it in those Catacombs, over which a famous Church hath since been built, called St Sebastian's-without-the-Walls.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke vi. 17, with the Homily of St Ambrose, (p. 609.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 21st day of January, were born into the better life—

At Rome, under Symphronius, Prefect of the city, the holy Virgin and martyr Agnes. She was cast into the fire, but the fire died out at her prayer, and then she was smitten with the sword, [in the year 304.] Blessed Jerome writeth concerning her. The life of Agnes hath been praised in the writings and in the tongues of all nations, and most chiefly in the churches. She overcame not only the tyrant but also the weakness of her own age, and hallowed by martyrdom the title of virgin.

At Athens, [in the second century,] the holy Bishop Publius, who ruled illustriously over the Church of Athens in succession to holy Denis the Areopagite; he was famous for graces and eminent for teaching, and was gloriously crowned with the martyrdom of Christ.

At Tarragona, in Spain, the holy martyrs Fructuosus, Bishop of that see, and the Deacons Augurius and Eulogius. In [the year 259, in] the time of the Emperor Gallienus, they were first imprisoned and then cast into the fire, and when their bonds had been burnt they stretched forth their hands in the form of a cross, and so in prayer finished their martyrdom. Holy Augustin preached to the people upon their feast-day.

At Troyes, [in Champagne,] the holy martyr Patroclus, who gained the crown of martyrdom under the Emperor Aurelian.

In the Monastery of Eu, in Gaul, the holy hermit Meinard, who was murdered by thieves, [in the year 861. Founder of Nôtre Dame des Ermites.]

At Pavia, the holy Confessor Epiphanius, Bishop of that see.

Second Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

JANUARY 21.

St Agnes, Virgin and Martyr.

Double.

All from the Office for one Virgin and Martyr, (p. 641,) except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

Should these Vespers be of St Agnes from the beginning, the Antiphons are taken from Lauds, and the Psalms are those of Sunday Vespers, except the last, which is Psalm cxvi., "O praise the LORD, all ye nations, &c.," (p. 105.)

Chapter and Prayer from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The blessed Agnes stood in the midst of the fire, and stretched forth her hands, and prayed, saying: O Father! Who Alone art Almighty! Who Alone art to be adored! Who Alone art to be worshipped! Who Alone art to be feared! I thank Thee because that through Thy Holy Son Thou hast delivered me from the threatenings of the godless tyrant, and hast made me to walk with clean feet over the filthy slough of fleshly sin: and now, behold, I come unto Thee, unto Thee Whom I have loved, Whom I have sought, Whom I have ever desired.

A Commemoration is made of SS. Fabian and Sebastian, Martyrs. Prayer from their Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. I will none of thee, prey of death, for I am prevented by another Lover.

Ps. i. Blessed is the man, &c., (p. 2.)

Second Antiphon. My right hand and my neck hath He clasped with precious stones, and put pearls beyond price in mine ears.

Ps. ii. Why do the heathen, &c., (p. 3.)

Third Antiphon. He hath sealed me in my forehead that I may let in no other lover but Him.

Ps. iii. LORD, how are they increased, &c., (p. 3.)

Lessons from Ecclus. li. 1, (p. 646.)

First Responsory.

Let us keep with joy and gladness the feast of this most saintly maiden, let us call to mind the holy passion of the blessed Agnes: in her thirteenth year she conquered, losing death and finding life, because she loved the Only Giver of Life.

Verse. Reckoned but a child in this world, she understood more than the ancients.

Answer. Because she loved the Only Giver of Life.

Second Responsory.

My right hand and my neck hath He clasped with precious stones, and put pearls beyond price in mine ears, and hath crowned me with the bright blossoms of the eternal spring-time.

Verse. He hath sealed me in my forehead, that I may let in no other lover but Him.

Answer. And hath crowned me with the bright blossoms of the eternal spring-time.

Third Responsory.

Christ is my Lover, and I am entering with Him into the marriage-chamber. His Mother is a Virgin, and His Father knoweth not a woman. The instruments of His music sound sweetly together in my ears. If I love Him I shall be chaste, if I touch Him I shall be clean, if I embrace Him I shall be a virgin indeed.

Verse. He hath espoused me with a betrothal ring, and adorned me with a necklace of great price.

Answer. If I love Him I shall be chaste, if I touch Him I shall be clean, if I embrace Him I shall be a virgin indeed.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. If I love Him, I shall be chaste, if I touch Him I shall be clean, if I embrace Him I shall be a virgin indeed.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The Lord hath clothed me with a vesture of wrought gold, and adorned me with a necklace of great price.

Ps. iv. When I called, &c., (p. 116.)

Second Antiphon. I have sucked honey and milk out of His Mouth, and His Blood is red on my cheeks.

Ps. v. Give ear to my words, O LORD, &c., (p. 49.)

Third Antiphon. I keep my troth to Him alone, and commit me altogether to Him.

Ps. viii. O LORD, our Ruler, &c., (p. 4.)

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan,] on Virgins. (Bk. i. Chap. 2.)

THIS is a virgin's birthday; let us then follow the example of her chastity. It is a Martyr's birthday; let us then offer sacrifices. It is the birthday of the holy Agnes; let men then be filled with wonder, little ones with hope, married women with awe, and the unmarried with emulation. But how shall I set forth the glory of her whose very name is an utterance of praise? It seemeth to me that this being, holy beyond her years, and strong beyond human nature, received the name of Agnes, not as an earthly designation, but as a revelation from God of what she was to be. For this name Agnes is from the Greek, and being interpreted, signifieth Pure. So that this saintly maiden is known by the very title of Chastity: and when I have added thereto the word Martyr, I have said enough. She needeth not the praise which we could utter, but do not. None is more praiseworthy than she for whose praise all mouths are fitted. As many as name her, so many praise her, by the noble title of martyr.

Fourth Responsory.

[1] The LORD hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, and hath covered me with the robe of joyfulness, and hath set on my head a crown as the crown of a bride.

Verse. He hath put pearls beyond price in mine ears, and hath crowned me with the bright blossoms of the eternal spring-time.

Answer. And hath set on my head a crown as the crown of a bride.

Fifth Lesson.

WE learn by tradition that this holy martyr testified in the thirteenth year of her age. We will pass by the foul cruelty which did not spare her tender years, to contemplate the great power of her faith, whereby she overcame the weakness of childhood, and witnessed a good confession. Her little body was hardly big enough to give play to the instruments of their cruelty, but if they could scarce sheathe their swords in her slight frame, they found in her that which laughed the power of the sword to scorn. She had no fear when she found herself grasped by the bloody hands of the executioners. She was unmoved when they dragged her with clanging chains. Hardly entered on life, she stood fully prepared to die. She quailed not when the weapons of the angry soldiery were pointed at her breast. If they forced her against her will to approach the altars of devils, she could stretch forth her hands to Christ amid the very flames which consumed the idolatrous offerings, and mark on the heathen shrine the victorious Cross of the Lord. She was ready to submit her neck and hands to the iron shackles, but they were too big to clasp her slender limbs. Behold a strange martyr! She is not grown of stature to fight the battle, but she is ripe for the triumph; too weak to run in the race, and yet clearly entitled to the prize; unable from her age to be aught but a learner, she is found a teacher.

[1] Isa. lxi. 10.

Fifth Responsory.

I have sucked honey and milk out of His Mouth, and His Blood is red on my cheeks.

Verse. He hath shown me countless treasure, and hath sworn to endow me therewith.

Answer. And His Blood is red on my cheeks.

Sixth Lesson.

SHE went to the place of execution a virgin, with more willing and joyful footsteps than she would have gone with to the nuptial chamber as a bride. The spectators were all in tears, and she alone did not weep. They beheld her with wonder, laying down that life of which she had hardly begun to taste the sweets, as freely as though she had drained it to the dregs and was weary of its burden. All men were amazed when they saw her whose years had not made her her own mistress, arise as a witness for the Deity. Consider how many threats her murderer used to excite her fears, how many arguments to shake her resolution, how many promises to bribe her to accept his offers of marriage. But she answered him: "It is an insult to Him Whom I have wedded to expect me to comply. He That first chose me, His will I be. Headsman, why waitest thou? Perish the body which draweth the admiration of eyes from which I would turn away." She stood, prayed, and then bent her neck for the stroke. Now mightest thou have seen the murderer trembling as though he himself were the criminal, the executioner's hand shake, and the faces of them that stood by turn white at the sight of her position, and all the while herself remain without fear. This one victim brought God a double offering, that of her purity, and that of her faith. She preserved virginity and achieved martyrdom.

Sixth Responsory.

His Body and mine are already joined together, and His Blood is red on my cheeks. His Mother is a virgin, and His Father knoweth not a woman.

Verse. I am wedded to the Lord of Angels, at Whose beauty the sun and the moon do wonder.

Answer. His Mother is a virgin, and His Father knoweth not a woman.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. His Mother is a virgin, and His Father knoweth not a woman.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. I keep my troth to Him Alone, at Whose beauty the sun and the moon do wonder.

Ps. xiv. LORD, who shall abide, &c., (p. 6.)

Second Antiphon. Christ hath crowned me with the bright and priceless blossoms of the eternal spring-time.

Ps. xliv. My heart is overflowing, &c., (p. 54.)

Third Antiphon. I am wedded to the Lord of Angels, at Whose beauty the sun and the moon do wonder.

Ps. xlv. God is our refuge, &c., (p. 55.)

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 1, with the Homily of Pope St Gregory (p. 644,) and the following Responsories.

Seventh Responsory.

I am wedded to the Lord of Angels, at Whose beauty the sun and the moon do wonder. I keep my troth to Him alone, and commit me altogether to Him.

Verse. My right hand and my neck hath He clasped with precious stones, and put pearls beyond price in mine ears.

Answer. I keep my troth to Him alone, and commit me altogether to Him.

Eighth Responsory.

O Thou Who Alone art Almighty! Who Alone art to be adored! Who Alone art to be worshipped! Who Alone art to be feared! I bless Thee, because that through Thine Only-begotten Son Thou hast delivered me from the threatenings of wicked men, and hast made me to walk with clean feet through the filthy haunts of devils.

Verse. My lips praise Thee, my heart and all that is within me do long after Thee.

Answer. Because that through Thine Only-begotten Son Thou hast delivered me from the threatenings of wicked men, and hast made me to walk with clean feet through the filthy haunts of devils.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Because that through Thine Only-begotten Son Thou hast delivered me from the threatenings of wicked men, and hast made me to walk with clean feet through the filthy haunts of devils.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Agnes entered * the place of shame, and found the Angel of the Lord ready.

Second Antiphon. For I have with me * an Angel of the Lord to keep my body.

Third Antiphon. My Lord JESUS Christ hath espoused me with His ring, * and hath set on my head a crown as the crown of a bride.

Fourth Antiphon. I bless Thee, O Father of my Lord JESUS Christ, because through Thy Son the fire is quenched around me.

Fifth Antiphon. Rejoice with me * and make merry, because I also have received a throne in light among all these.

Chapter. (Ecclus. li. 1.)

I WILL thank Thee, O Lord and King, and praise Thee, O God my Saviour. I will give praise unto Thy Name, for Thou hast been my Helper and Defender, and hast preserved my body from destruction.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Behold, now I see that which I have desired; now I possess that for which I have hoped: now am I united in heaven to Him Whom I loved with my whole heart upon earth.

Prayer throughout.

O ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, Who hast chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty, mercifully grant unto us that we who keep the solemn feast of Thy blessed Virgin and Martyr Agnes, may feel the power of her intercession with Thee. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 22nd day of January, were born into the better life—

At Valentia, in Spain, the holy Levite and martyr Vincent. Under the wicked President Dacian he suffered imprisonment, starvation, racking, twisting of his limbs, red-hot plates, and bed of red-hot iron, and other kinds of torments, and passed away to heaven to receive there a martyr's reward, [in the year 304.] The glorious triumph of his passion hath been set forth by Prudentius in noble poetry, and the blessed Augustine and the holy Pope Leo have praised him in the highest language.

In Persia,[1] the holy monk Anastasius, who, after enduring many torments of imprisonment, stripes, and bonds at Cæsarea, in Palestine, suffered much again under Chosroes, King of the Persians, and was at length beheaded, when he had sent before him seventy companions who suffered martyrdom by drowning, [in the year 628.] His head and his venerable image[2] were afterwards brought to Rome, and the acts of the Second Council of Nice bear witness that at the sight of them devils fly and diseases are healed.

At Embrun, in Gaul, the holy martyrs Vincent, Orontius, and Victor, who were crowned with martyrdom in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Novara, the holy Confessor Gaudentius, Bishop of that see, [in the fifth century.]

At Sora, [in the year 1031,] the holy Abbat Dominic, famous for miracles.

Chapter at the end. (Ecclus. li. 8.)

MY soul shall praise the Lord, even unto death, for Thou, O Lord our God, deliverest such as wait for Thee, and savest them out of trouble.

TERCE.

Antiphon. For I have, &c., (Second Antiphon at Lauds.)
Chapter as at Lauds.

SEXT.

Antiphon. My Lord JESUS Christ, &c., (Third Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter. (Ecclus. li. 3.)

THOU hast delivered me according to the multitude of the mercies of Thy Name from them that roared against me, and that were ready to devour me, out of the hands of such as sought after my life, and from the gates of trouble that were open all around me.

NONE.

Antiphon. Rejoice with me, * &c., (Fifth Antiphon at Lauds.)
Chapter as at the end of Prime.

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphons and Chapter from Lauds. Psalms as on Sundays, except the last, which is Psalm cxlvii., "Praise the LORD, O Jerusalem, &c.," (p. 114.)

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The blessed Agnes stood in the midst of the fire, and stretched forth her hands unto the Lord, and prayed, saying: O Thou Who Alone art Almighty! Who Alone art to be adored! Who Alone art to be worshipped! Who Alone art to be feared! I bless Thee, and glorify Thy Name for ever and ever!

A Commemoration is made of the following, by the Antiphon, Verse and Answer from the First Vespers of the Common Office for Many Martyrs, and the following

Prayer.

LET Thy merciful ears, O Lord, be open unto our prayers, and whereas we do feel ourselves burdened by the guilt of our sins, do Thou graciously relieve us at the petition of Thy blessed Martyrs, Vincent and Anastasius. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

JANUARY 22.

The Holy Martyrs Vincent and Anastasius.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 602,) except what is otherwise given here.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

VINCENT was born at Huesca in Granada in Spain. He was early turned to study, and learned sacred letters from Valerius, Bishop of Saragossa. He was accustomed to deliver discourses for this Prelate, who, owing to an impediment in his speech, was not able to preach himself. This coming to the ears of Dacian, Prefect of the province under Diocletian and Maximian, he caused Vincent to be arrested at Saragossa, and brought before him at Valencia in bonds. The saint was scourged, and afterwards tormented on the rack, in presence of numerous spectators, but neither torture, threats, nor fair words could bend his resolution. He was then laid on a grating over hot coals, his flesh mangled with iron hooks, and white-hot plates of metal applied to the wounds. The still breathing remains were taken back to a prison, and laid on broken potsherds, that the agony of his naked body might prevent his sleeping from exhaustion.

---

[1] The Martyrology saith at Rome, at the Aqua Salvia—that is, at the monastery called after him and St Vincent,—but it is clear from the statement of the Lessons that he suffered among his own countrymen, and that the word natalis, or birthday, is therefore here only to be understood in the sense of holiday keeping, and the translator has thought it better to preserve it in its usual meaning by giving the name of the place of death.

[2] An icon, or painting.

Fifth Lesson.

AS he lay in his dark cell, a glorious light suddenly filled the prison, to the astonishment of all who saw it. The gaoler informed Dacian, who caused the martyr to be brought out and cared for in a soft bed, hoping that though he had failed to move him by cruelty, he might seduce him by pretended kindness.[1] But the indomitable soul of Vincent, armed with faith and hope in Christ JESUS, remained unconquered even to the end, and triumphing over the fire, the steel, and the cruelty of the tormentors, passed away to receive the victorious crown of martyrdom in heaven, on the 22nd day of January, [in the year of our Lord 304.] His body was thrown out unburied. A raven perched upon it and kept off with his beak, claws, and wings both the other birds and a wolf, which came to prey on it. Dacian then had it thrown into the sea, but by the will of God it was washed up again, and the Christians took and buried it.

Sixth Lesson.

ANASTASIUS was a Persian monk who made a pilgrimage to the Holy Places at Jerusalem in the reign of the Emperor Heraclius, during which journey he endured bonds and stripes on account of his confession of Christ at [Banias, then called] Cæsarea, in Palestine. Soon after his return, he was arrested by the Persians for the same cause, and, after enduring divers torments, he and seventy other Christians were beheaded by order of King Chosroes. [He testified upon the 22nd day of January in the year of our Lord 628.] His reliques were first carried to Jerusalem, to the monastery in which he had made his monastic profession, and afterwards to Rome, where they were laid in the monastery of Saints Vincent and Anastasius.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xxi. 9, "When ye shall hear of wars, &c.," with the Homily of St Gregory upon the same, (p. 606.)

Prayer throughout the day as at the Commemoration the evening before.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the Espousal of the Blessed Virgin Mary to holy Joseph.

The holy Confessor Raymond of Peñafuerte, of the Order of Friars Preachers, famous for his holiness and teaching, of whom mention has been made upon the 7th day of this present month of January.

Upon the same 23rd day of January, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy Virgin and martyr Emerentiana, who while as yet she was making her ready to be baptized, was stoned to death by the Gentiles while she was praying at the grave of her holy foster-sister Agnes.

At Philippi, in Macedonia, holy Parmenas, one of the first seven Deacons. He yielded himself wholly to the grace of God, discharged in the fulness of faith the office of preaching which had been laid upon him by the brethren, and obtained the glory of martyrdom under the Emperor Trajan.

At Cæsarea, in Morocco, of the holy martyrs Severian and Aquila, his wife, who were burnt.

At Antinoe, in Egypt, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyr Aselas, who after suffering divers torments was cast into the Nile, and rendered up his precious soul to God.

At Ancyra, in Galatia, [in the fourth century,] holy Clement, Bishop of that see, who had often been put to the torture, but at length achieved martyrdom in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

There likewise, [in the fourth century,] upon the same day, and under the President Lucius, the holy martyr Agathangelus.

At Alexandria, [in the year 619,] holy John, surnamed the Almoner, Pope of that city, very famous for his pity toward the poor.

At Toledo, holy Ildefonsus, Archbishop of that city, who on account of the singular purity of his life, and the defence of the virginity of the Mother of God against the heretics who impugned it which he took up, was first gifted by the same most Blessed Virgin with a chasuble of the purest white, and afterwards called away to heaven, famous for holiness, [in the year 669.]

In the province of Valeria, [in the sixth century,] the holy monk Martyrius, of whom the blessed Pope Gregory maketh mention.

Vespers of the following.

JANUARY 23.

Espousal of the Blessed Virgin Mary to St Joseph.

Greater Double.

Whatever is not specially given here is taken from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633.)

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Verse and Answer, and Prayer from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Let us tell again of the right worthy espousal of the glorious Virgin Mary, who gained the honour of Motherhood without losing the guilelessness of a Maid.

The following Commemoration of St Joseph, where permitted, is made, before any other.

Antiphon. Joseph, being raised from sleep, did as the Angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife.

Verse. He made him lord of his house.

Answer. And ruler of all his substance.

Let us pray.

Prayer.

Help us, we beseech Thee, O Lord, for the sake of the Husband of Thy most holy Mother, that what we cannot for ourselves obtain, Thou mayest grant us at his petition: Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy

---

[1] In the following sentence there are in the original three puns upon the name of the Saint (which is derived from the verb vinco, I conquer;) viz., invictus, vicit, victor.

Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Then are made Commemorations of [the Second Vespers of] SS. Vincent and Anastasius, Prayer from the evening of Jan. 21, and of [the First Vespers of] St Emerentiana, all from the Common Office for a Virgin and Martyr, (p. 641.)

Prayer, "Lord, we pray Thee, &c.," (p. 645.)

At Compline the last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Let us keep the Bridal-Feast of the Virgin Mary. * Let us worship Christ, her Son, and her Lord and ours.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Song of Songs, (i. 1.)

[THE Bride.] Let him kiss me with kisses of his mouth—for better than wine are thine embraces, redolent of the best perfumes! Thy name is as ointment poured forth, therefore do the virgins love thee. Draw me! We will run after thee on the scent of thy perfume. The king hath brought me into his chambers. We will be glad and rejoice in thee. We will think of thine embraces more than of wine. The upright love thee. I am black, but comely, O ye daughters of Jerusalem,—as the tents of Kedar, as the curtains of Solomon.

First Responsory.

This day was the Blessed Virgin Mary betrothed of the lineage of David. The same is she through whom the salvation of the world hath been manifested before the eyes of all believers. This is she whose glorious life hath given light to the world.

Verse. Let us keep with rejoicing the Bridal-Feast of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Answer. The same is she through whom the salvation of the world hath been manifested before the eyes of all believers. This is she whose glorious life hath given light to the world.

Second Lesson.

[THE Bride.] Look not upon me because I am black, because the sun hath tanned me. My mother's children were angry with me; they made me the keeper of the vineyards; mine own vineyard have I not kept. Tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest thy flock, where thou layest thee down at noon, lest I begin to turn aside after the flocks of thy companions.

[The Bridegroom.] If thou know not, O thou fairest among women, go thy way forth by the footsteps of the flock, and feed thy kids beside the shepherd's tents. I have compared thee, O my love, to my horses in Pharaoh's chariot. Thy cheeks are comely like a dove's, thy neck like strings of jewels.[1]

Second Responsory.

Let us keep right heartily the Bridal-Feast of the Most Blessed Virgin Mary, that she may pray for us to our Lord JESUS Christ.

Verse. Let us keep with right hearty rejoicing the betrothal of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Answer. That she may pray for us to our Lord JESUS Christ.

Third Lesson.

NECKLACES of gold will we make for thee, with inlaid work of silver.

[The Bride.] While the king sat on his couch, my spikenard sent forth the smell thereof. A bundle of myrrh is my well-beloved unto me. He shall lie betwixt my breasts. My beloved is unto me as a bunch of cypress in the vineyards of Engaddi.

[The Bridegroom.] Behold, thou art fair, my love, behold, thou art fair; thou hast doves' eyes.

[The Bride.] Behold, thou art fair, my beloved, yea, comely.

[Both.] Our bed is of flowers, the beams of our house are of cedar, our rafters of cypress.

Third Responsory.

Let us tell again of the right worthy espousal of the Blessed Virgin Mary. The same is she whose lowliness the Lord regarded, she who by the message of an Angel conceived the Saviour of the world.

Verse. Let us keep right earnestly the Bridal-Feast of the most Blessed Virgin Mary.

Answer. The same is she whose lowliness the Lord regarded, she who by the message of an Angel conceived the Saviour of the world.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. The same is she whose lowliness the Lord regarded, she who by the message of an Angel conceived the Saviour of the world.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (2nd on Luke i. 26.)

THE secret course of the counsel of God was for awhile to be hidden from the prince of this world. Not that God had any need to fear hindrance from him, if He had chosen to work openly, but because He Who doth all things wisely as well as mightily, is wont to observe in all His works certain meetnesses both of things and of times: and so in this, the glorious work of our redemption, He was pleased to show His wisdom as well as His power.

Fourth Responsory.

This day was betrothed the glorious Virgin Mary, a child of the seed of Abraham, a daughter of the tribe of Judah, a Princess of the lineage of David. This is she whose famous life still sheddeth lustre upon all the Churches.

Verse. This day was the Blessed Virgin Mary betrothed of the lineage of David.

Answer. This is she whose famous life still sheddeth lustre upon all the Churches.

Fifth Lesson.

IT was meet therefore, that He Who was about to cast down the troubler, should sweetly order all things in heaven and in earth, to establish the reign of peace; and that

---

[1] Or "Thy cheeks are comely with strings, or plaits, and thy neck with rows of jewels."

He Who was about to prevail against the envier, should first give us the sorely-needed example of His Own lowliness and meekness; that so, by the marvellous disposition of His wisdom He might appear at once gentle to His own, and awful to His foe.

Fifth Responsory.

Let us keep with rejoicing the Bridal-Feast of the Blessed Mary, that she may pray for us to our Lord JESUS Christ.

Verse. With all our heart and with all our soul let us sing praise to Christ on this the solemn Feast-day of Mary the mighty Mother of God.

Answer. That she may pray for us to our Lord JESUS Christ.

Sixth Lesson.

FOR what would it have profited for God to crush the devil, if we were to remain proud? For this end therefore did it behove that Mary should be espoused to Joseph, namely, that the holy thing might be kept from the dogs, that an husband might attest her maidenhood, that the modesty of the virgin might be spared, and her good fame saved. Than this, what could be wiser, what more worthy of God's counsels? By this device the heavenly secret was at the same time provided with its witness and protected from its foeman; and the good name of the Maiden Mother preserved.

Sixth Responsory.

Thy betrothal, O Virgin Mother of God, was a message of joy to the whole world, for out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness, even Christ our God, Who hath taken away the curse and brought a blessing, confounded death, and given unto us everlasting life.

Verse. Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the Fruit of thy womb.

Answer. For out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness, even Christ our God.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Who hath taken away the curse and brought a blessing, confounded death, and given unto us everlasting life.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons the same as on Christmas-Eve, (p. 150.) The Third is read as one with the Second, to leave room for the Ninth Lesson, which is of St Emerentiana.

Seventh Responsory.

All generations shall call me blessed, for the Lord That is Mighty hath done to me great things, and holy is His name.

Verse. And His mercy is on them that fear Him from generation to generation.

Answer. For the Lord That is Mighty hath done to me great things, and holy is His name.

Eighth Responsory.

O holy Virgin Mary, happy indeed art thou, and right worthy of all praise, for out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness, even Christ our God.

Verse. Pray for the people, plead for the clergy, make intercession for all women vowed to God. May all that keep thine holy Bridal-Feast feel the might of thine assistance.

Answer. For out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Even Christ our God.

Commemoration of St Joseph.

Antiphon. Jesus Himself began to be about thirty years of age, being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph.

Verse. The mouth of the virtuous speaketh wisdom.

Answer. And his tongue talketh judgment.

Prayer as at First Vespers, then of St Emerentiana. All from the Common Office.

Ninth Lesson.

For St Emerentiana.

EMERENTIANA was a Roman maiden, and the foster-sister of the blessed Agnes. While she was still a Catechumen she was inspired by her faith and love to rebuke the fury of the idol-worshippers against the Christians, whereupon a mob assembled, and stoned her so severely that she was only able to drag herself to the grave of holy Agnes, where, while she prayed, she gave up her soul to God, being baptized, not in water, but in her own blood, so freely shed for Christ.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. This day was betrothed the glorious Virgin Mary, * a child of the seed of Abraham, a daughter of the tribe of Judah, a Princess of the lineage of David.

Second Antiphon. This day is the Bridal-Feast of the holy Virgin Mary, * whose famous life still sheddeth lustre upon all the Churches.

Third Antiphon. Mary was a maiden of illustrious birth, * the daughter of a Kingly race. We earnestly intreat her to help our minds and souls by her prayers.

Fourth Antiphon. With all our heart and with all our soul let us sing praise to Christ * on this the solemn Feast-day of Mary, the mighty Mother of God.

Fifth Antiphon. Let us keep with rejoicing the Bridal-Feast of the Blessed Virgin Mary, * that she may pray for us to our Lord JESUS Christ.

Verse. This day is the Bridal-Feast of the holy Virgin Mary.

Answer. Whose famous life still sheddeth lustre upon all the Churches.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Let us this day keep solemnly the Bridal-Feast of Mary, Mother but still Maiden, her Bridal, a step toward the loftiness of her throne. Alleluia.

Prayer throughout the Office.

GRANT unto us Thy servants, we beseech Thee, O Lord, the gift of Thy heavenly grace, unto whom Thou didst give the first sight of a Saviour as the offspring of a Blessed Virgin, and grant that this Feast, which they keep in honour of the same Virgin, may avail them unto the increase of peace. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

If permitted, Commemoration of St Joseph, from his Office, (p. 783.) Then of St Emerentiana.

The Antiphons at Prime, Terce, Sext, and None, are the First, Second, Third, and Fifth from Lauds respectively.

The last verses of all the Hymns are altered in honour of the Incarnation.

Verse at Prime. "Thou that wast born of the Virgin Mary."

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 24th day of January, were born into the better life—

Holy Timothy, the disciple of the blessed Apostle Paul, by whom he was ordained Bishop of Ephesus. After many contendings for Christ, because he rebuked them that were offering sacrifice to Diana, they stoned him, and a short while thereafter he fell asleep in the Lord, [in the year 97.]

At Antioch, [in the year 250,] holy Babilas, Patriarch of that city. After he had oftentimes glorified God by the sufferings and torments which he bore, and in the persecution under the Emperor Decius, he ended his glorious life in iron fetters, which he commanded should be buried with him. It is recorded also that there suffered with him three children—Urban, Prilidian, and Epolonius—whom he had instructed in the faith of Christ.

At Neo-Cæsarea, the holy martyrs Mardonius, Musonius, Eugenius, and Metellus, these all were burnt and their ashes thrown into the river.

At Foligno, holy Felician, who was ordained by Pope Victor Bishop of that city, and after many labours was crowned with martyrdom in extreme old age, in the persecution under the Emperor Decius.

Likewise the holy martyrs Thyrsus, [third century,] and Projectus, [Bishop of Clermont, in the year 674.]

At Bologna, [in the third century,] holy Zama, the first Bishop of that city, who was ordained by the holy Roman Pontiff Denis, and there wonderfully spread the Christian faith.

Likewise [in the sixth century,] the blessed Abbat Suran, who flourished in holiness in the time of the Lombards.

SECOND VESPERS.

All as the First, except the following.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Thy betrothal, O Virgin Mother of God, was a message of joy to the whole world, for out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness, even Christ our God, Who hath taken away the curse and brought a blessing, confounded death, and given unto us everlasting life.

Commemoration of St Joseph.

Antiphon. Behold a faithful and wise servant, whom his Lord hath made ruler over his household.

Verse. Glory and riches shall be in his house.

Answer. And his righteousness endureth for ever.

Prayer as at First Vespers; then of St Timothy from the Common Office, (p. 594,) with the Prayer, "Mercifully consider, &c.," (p. 599.)

Where permitted, Commemoration of St Joseph, from his Office, (p. 784.) Then of [the First Vespers of] St Timothy.

At Compline the last Verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

JANUARY 24.

St Timothy, Bishop [of Ephesus,] Martyr.

Double.

MATTINS.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 594,) except what is otherwise given here.

Prayer throughout the Office, "Mercifully consider our weakness, &c.," (p. 599.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

TIMOTHY was a native of Lystra in Lycaonia, born of a Gentile father and a Jewish mother. He embraced the Christian religion when the Apostle Paul came into those parts. The holy Apostle was so struck with the fame of Timothy's sanctity, that he chose him to be the companion of his journeys, and caused him to be circumcised, in order to remove a stumbling-block from the way of those Jews who felt drawn to Christianity. When they came together to Ephesus, the Apostle consecrated him Bishop of that Church.

Fifth Lesson.

TWO of the Apostle Paul's Epistles are addressed to this Saint, of which one was written from Laodicea, and the other from Rome. These sacred writings so stirred him up to the zealous discharge of his duties as a spiritual shepherd, that he strove to prevent the people of Ephesus from sacrificing to Artemis on her feast-day, knowing that sacrifice is due to God alone. The heathens thereupon stoned him till he was well-nigh dead, and although he was rescued by the Christians, and carried to a mountain near the city, he then fell asleep in the Lord, on the 24th day of January.

Sixth Lesson.

The illustrious day, &c., (p. 596.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xiv. 26, with the Homily of St Gregory (p. 597.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we commemorate the conversion of the holy Apostle Paul, which took place in the second year after our Lord's ascension.

Upon the same 25th day of January, were born into the better life—

At Damascus, holy Ananias, who baptized the aforesaid apostle. He preached the Gospel at Damascus and at other places, and was first scourged and rent with thongs, and then stoned to death under the judge Licinius.

At Antioch, the holy martyrs Juventinus and Maximus, who were crowned with martyrdom under the Emperor Julian the Apostate, and on whose feast-day holy John Chrysostom preached unto the people.

At Auvergne, [in the year 674,] the holy martyrs Projectus, Bishop of that see, and Marinus the man of God, who suffered under the chief men of that city.

Likewise the holy martyrs Donatus, Sabinus, and Agapis.

At Tomis, in Scythia, holy Bretannion, Bishop [of that see], who flourished in the Church in wonderful holiness and zeal for the Catholic faith under the Arian Emperor Valens, whom he withstood stoutly.

At Arras, in Gaul, holy Poppo, Abbat [of Stavelotz,] famous for miracles, [in the year 1048; also his mother, blessed Adelviva.]

Vespers of the following.

JANUARY 25.

Conversion of St Paul the Apostle.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for Apostles, (p. 576,) except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, Verse and Answer, and Prayer from Lauds.

Psalms as on Sunday, except the last, which is Psalm cxvi., "O praise the LORD, all ye nations, &c.," (p. 105.)

Hymn.[1]

LEAD us, great teacher Paul, in wisdom's ways,
And lift our hearts with thine to Heaven's high throne;
Till Faith beholds the clear meridian blaze,
And, sun-like, in the soul reigns Charity alone.

Praise, blessing, majesty, through endless days,
Be to the Trinity Eternal given;
Who in Pure Unity profoundly sways
Eternally all things alike in earth and heaven. Amen.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Ananias, go thy way, and seek Saul: for, behold, he prayeth: for he is a chosen vessel unto Me, to bear My name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israël.

A Commemoration is made of St Peter, which is taken from Lauds.

Then a Commemoration of St Timothy.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. For the conversion of the Teacher of the Gentiles, * let us praise our God.

Hymn. "Lead us, &c.," as at First Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [2] He That wrought effectually in Peter to the Apostleship, the Same was mighty in me toward the Gentiles, and they perceived the grace that was given unto me of the Lord Christ.

Second Antiphon. [3] I know Whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day, as a righteous Judge.

Third Antiphon. [4] To me to live is Christ, and to die is gain: God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord JESUS Christ.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Acts of the Apostles (ix. 1.)

SAUL, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest, and desired of him letters to Damascus to the synagogues; that, if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem. And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus, and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven. And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him: Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me? And he said: Who art Thou, Lord? And the Lord said: I am JESUS, Whom thou persecutest; it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

First Responsory.

He That wrought effectually in Peter to the Apostleship, the Same was mighty in me toward the Gentiles, and they perceived the grace that was given unto me of the Lord Christ.

Verse. [5] The grace of God which was bestowed upon me was not in vain, but His grace abideth ever in me.

Answer. And they perceived the grace that was given unto me of the Lord Christ.

Second Lesson.

AND he trembling and astonished, said: Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him: Arise, and go into the city, and it shall there be told thee what thou must do. And the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice but seeing no man. And Saul arose from the earth, and when his eyes were opened, he saw nothing. But they led him by the hand and brought him into Damascus. And he was there three days without sight, and neither did eat nor drink.

Second Responsory.

[6] I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness.

Verse. I know Whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day.

Answer. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness.

Third Lesson.

AND there was a certain disciple at Damascus, named Ananias; and to him said the Lord in a vision: Ananias. And he said: Behold, I am here, Lord. And the Lord said unto him: Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight, and inquire in the house of Judas for one called Saul, of Tarsus; for, behold, he prayeth; and hath seen a man named Ananias coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his sight. Then Ananias answered: Lord, I have heard by many of this man, how much evil he hath done to Thy saints at Jerusalem: and here he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all that call on Thy name. But the Lord said unto him: Go thy way, for he is a chosen vessel unto Me, to bear My name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israël. For I will show him how great things he must suffer for My name's sake.

[4] Phil. i. 21; Gal. vi. 14.

[5] 1 Cor. xv. 10.

[6] 2 Tim. iv. 7, 8; i. 12.

Third Responsory.

[1] There is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day.

Verse. I know Whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day.

Answer. Which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. O Holy Apostle Paul, thou art a chosen vessel unto God, to preach the Gospel throughout the whole world.

Second Antiphon. Paul is made one of the chiefest among the Saints, and a chosen vessel; verily he is worthy to be glorified, for he was made worthy to sit upon one of the twelve thrones.

Third Antiphon. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (24th on the Saints, 279.)

WE have this day heard read out of the Acts of the Apostles how that the Apostle Paul, from being a persecutor of the Christians, was changed into a preacher of Christ. Christ laid low the persecutor, that He might raise him up a teacher of His Church. He smote and healed him, slew him and made him alive again. For the Lord Christ is that Lamb That was Himself slain by the wolves, and That now turneth the wolves into lambs. Now was fulfilled in Paul that which was clearly spoken in prophecy by the Patriarch Jacob, when he blessed his children, laying hands indeed on them which then were, but looking forward to the things which were yet for to come. Paul beareth witness of himself that he was of the tribe of Benjamin, (Rom. xi. 1,) and when Jacob blessed his sons, and came to bless Benjamin, he said: "Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf." (Gen. xlix. 27.)

Fourth Responsory.

O Holy Apostle Paul, thou art a chosen vessel unto God, to preach the Gospel throughout the whole world; through whom all nations have known the grace of God.

Verse. Pray for us to God Who hath chosen thee.

Answer. Through whom all nations have known the grace of God.

Fifth Lesson.

WHAT then? Is Benjamin a wolf that shall ravin for ever? God forbid. "In the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil." This is exactly what was fulfilled in the Apostle Paul. If it please you, we will now consider how in the morning he devoured the prey, and at night divided the spoil. Here morning and evening are put for the beginning and the end. So we may read, "In the beginning he shall devour the prey, and at the end he shall divide the spoil." First, then, in the beginning, he devoured the prey. So it is written that he received letters from the chief priests and went forth, that wheresoever he should find any Christians, he might bring them bound unto the priests, that they might be punished.

Fifth Responsory.

[2] By the grace of God I am what I am. And His grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain, but abideth ever in me.

Verse. He That wrought effectually in Peter to the Apostleship, the Same was mighty in me toward the Gentiles.

Answer. And His grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain, but abideth ever in me.

Sixth Lesson.

HE went breathing out threatenings and slaughter, yea, truly, devouring the prey. When also they stoned Stephen, the first Martyr that laid down his life for Christ's name's sake, Saul was consenting unto his death, and, as though it contented him not to stone him, he kept the clothes of all them that did it, urging them on more than if he had joined them. So in the morning he devoured the prey. How in the evening did he divide the spoil? Struck down by the voice of Christ from heaven, ravining no more, he falleth upon his face, cast down to be raised up, smitten to be healed.

Sixth Responsory.

[3] Saul, who also is called Paul, was made a great preacher; and being of God increased the more in strength he confounded the Jews.

Verse. Proving that This is very Christ, the Son of God.

Answer. And being of God increased the more in strength he confounded the Jews.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And being of God increased the more in strength he confounded the Jews.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Saul, who also is called Paul, was made a great preacher; and being of God increased the more in strength he confounded the Jews.

Second Antiphon. [4] Lest I should be exalted above measure through the greatness of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan, to buffet me: for this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me; and the Lord said unto me: Paul, My grace is sufficient for thee.

Third Antiphon. There is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day.

Seventh Responsory.

O Holy Apostle Paul, Preacher of the truth, and teacher of the Gentiles, pray for us to God, Who hath chosen thee, that we may be made worthy of the grace of God.

Verse. O Holy Apostle Paul, thou art a chosen vessel unto God, and a Preacher of the truth.

Answer. Pray for us to God Who hath chosen thee, that we may be made worthy of the grace of God.

Eighth Responsory.

[1] In Damascus the governor under Aretas the king was desirous to apprehend me, and by the brethren in a basket was I let down by the wall, and so escaped I his hands, in the name of the Lord.

Verse. The God and Father of our Lord JESUS Christ knoweth that I lie not.

Answer. And by the brethren in a basket was I let down by the wall.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And so escaped I his hands, in the name of the Lord.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. [2] I have planted, * Apollos watered, but God gave the increase. Alleluia.

After Septuagesima omit Alleluia.

Second Antiphon. [3] Most gladly therefore will I rather glory * in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me.

Third Antiphon. The grace of God which was bestowed upon me was not in vain, * but His grace abideth ever in me.

Fourth Antiphon. In Damascus the governor under Aretas the king was desirous to apprehend me; by the brethren in a basket was I let down by the wall, and so escaped I his hands, in the name of the Lord.

Fifth Antiphon. [4] Thrice was I beaten with rods, * once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, for Christ's name's sake.

Chapter. (Acts ix. 1.)

SAUL, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest, and desired of him letters to Damascus, to the synagogues, that, if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem.

Verse. O Holy Apostle Paul, thou art a chosen vessel unto God.

Answer. To preach the Gospel throughout the whole world.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Thus saith the Lord: Ye, which have followed Me, shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who, through the teaching of the Blessed Apostle Paul, hast caused the light of the Gospel to shine throughout the world, grant, we beseech Thee, that we, having his wonderful conversion (as on this day) in remembrance, may show forth our thankfulness unto Thee for the same, by following the holy example which he hath set. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Then the following Commemoration of St Peter.

Antiphon. Thou art the Shepherd of the sheep, and the Prince of the Apostles, and unto thee hath God given the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. Thou art Peter.

Answer. And upon this rock I will build My Church.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who hast given unto Thy Blessed Apostle Peter the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and the power to bind and to loose, loose us, we beseech Thee, at his mighty intercession, from all the bands of our sins. Who liveth and reigneth with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 26th day of January, were born into the better life—

At Smyrna, holy Polycarp, a disciple of the blessed Apostle John, and by him ordained Bishop of that city, having the charge of all Asia. In the reign of Mark Antony, and Lucius Aurelius Commodus, as the Pro-consul was sitting in the amphitheatre all the people cried out against Polycarp, and to please them he was cast into the fire, but forasmuch as it burned him not he was pierced with the sword, and so received the crown of martyrdom, [in the year 166.] With him there suffered also twelve others that were come from Philadelphia unto the city aforesaid.

At Hippo, in Africa, the holy martyrs Theogenes, Bishop of that city, and thirty-six others, who in the persecution under the Emperor Valerian reckoned cheaply death here in time, and received the crown of life eternal, [about the year 260.]

At Bethlehem of Judah, the holy widow Paula, mother of Eustochium, the virgin of Christ. She was of a very noble senatorial family, that gave up the world and distributed all her goods to feed the poor and betook herself to the manger of the Lord, and thence passed away into the kingdom of heaven endowed with many graces and crowned with a long martyrdom, [in the year 404.] Jerome hath written of her life, full of graces.

In the country of Paris, [in the year 685,] holy Bathildes, Queen [of France,] illustrious for her holiness and the glory of her miracles.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book on Ecclesiastical Writers, composed by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.]

POLYCARP was a disciple of the Apostle John, and was consecrated by him Bishop of Smyrna. He was reckoned the chief of all the Christians of Asia, because he had been taught by several of the Apostles, and other persons who had seen the Lord. During the reign of the Emperor Antoninus Pius, and while Anicetus presided over the Church of Rome, Polycarp came thither to discuss some questions regarding the time for observing Easter. He found some heretics at Rome, who had been led astray by the doctrine of Marcion and Valentine, and brought back many of them to the faith. One day Marcion met him by accident, and said to him: Do you recognise me? whereto he replied: I recognise the devil's eldest son. Some time after, in the reign of Mark Antonine and Lucius Aurelius Commodus, during the fourth persecution since Nero, when the Pro-consul was ruling in Smyrna, the whole population being assembled in the theatre, clamoured against Polycarp, and to please them he was burnt. He wrote an extremely useful Epistle to the Philippians, which is publicly read in the Churches of Asia even to this day.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. x. 26, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 601.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of holy John, Patriarch of Constantinople, [in the years 398-407,] surnamed Chrysostom—that is to say, golden mouth—on account of the golden stream of his eloquence, whose word and example much profited the Church, but after many toils he ended his life in exile. Mention is made of him upon the 14th day of September, but the 27th of January is the day whereon his sacred body was brought to Constantinople under the Emperor Theodosius the younger, whence it was afterward brought to Rome, and lyeth buried in the Basilica of the Prince of the Apostles.

At Sora, the holy martyr Julian. He was arrested in the persecution under the Emperor Antonine, and while he was being tortured, the temple of the idols fell down, whereupon he was beheaded, and so received the crown of martyrdom.

In Africa, [in the third century,] the holy martyr Avitus.

Likewise in Africa, the holy martyrs Datius, Reater, and their companions, who suffered in the persecution under the Vandals.

Likewise in Africa, the holy martyrs Dativus, Julian, Vincent, and twenty-seven others.

At Rome, [in the year 671,] holy Pope Vitalian.

At Mans, [in the year 117,] holy Julian, the first Bishop of that city, whom holy Peter sent thither to preach the Gospel.

At the monastery of La Val-Benois, the holy Maurus, Abbat of Val-Benois.

At Brescia, [in the year 1540,] the holy Virgin Angela Merici, Foundress of the Society of Nuns of St Ursula, whose first duty is to lead young maidens into the paths of the Lord. We keep her festival upon the last day of May, in accordance with an ordinance of Pius VII.

Vespers of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

JANUARY 27.

St John Chrysostom, Patriarch of [Constantinople,] Confessor, and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office for one Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O right excellent Teacher, &c., (p. 612.)

Prayer throughout the Office.

MERCIFUL Lord, we beseech Thee continually to increase by Thy heavenly grace, Thy holy Church, which Thou hast vouchsafed to enlighten by the glorious labours and teaching of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop John Chrysostom. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Polycarp. Prayer as in his Office.

MATTINS.

The first verse of the hymn is altered.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JOHN of Antioch, who, on account of the golden stream of his eloquence, is called by the Greeks Chrysostomos, or, "the golden-mouthed," was a lawyer and man of the world of much eminence, before he turned his great intellect and wonderful industry to the study of things sacred. He took orders, and was ordained a priest of the Church of Antioch, [in the year of our Lord 386,] and after the death of Nectarius, was forced by the Emperor Arcadius to accept, though sorely against his own will, the Archbishopric of Constantinople. Having received the burden of a shepherd's office, [upon the 26th day of February,] in the year 398, he set himself zealously to do his duty, struggling against the degradation of public morality and the loose lives of the nobility, and thereby drew upon himself the ill-will of many enemies, especially the Empress Eudoxia, whom he had rebuked on account of the money of the widow Callitropa, and the land of another widow.

Fifth Lesson.

SOME Bishops being assembled in a Council at Chalcedon, [in 403,] which Council the Saint held to be neither lawful, nor public, although he was commanded to go there, he refused. Whereupon Eudoxia, striving earnestly against him, caused him to be sent into exile. Soon after, however, the people of the city rose, and demanded his recall, and he was then brought back again amid great public rejoicings. Nevertheless he ceased not to war against vice, and absolutely forbade the celebration of public games round the silver statue of Eudoxia in the square outside the Church of the Eternal Wisdom. Upon this, a party of Bishops, who were enemies to him, banded together, and obtained that he should be banished again, which was done accordingly, [on the 20th day of June, 404,] amid the lamentations of widows and the poor, who felt as if they were being deprived of a common father. During this exile, it almost passeth belief how much Chrysostom suffered, and how many souls he turned to the faith which is in Christ JESUS.

Sixth Lesson.

AT this time a Council was assembled at Rome, wherein Chrysostom's restoration to his See was decreed by Pope Innocent I., but meanwhile, he was suffering great hardships and cruelties on his journey at the hands of the soldiers who had him in charge. As he passed through Armenia he prayed in the Church of the holy martyr Basiliscus, and the same night that blessed conqueror appeared to him in a vision and said: "Brother John, to-morrow thou shalt be with me." On the next day, therefore, he received the Sacrament of the Eucharist, and, arming himself with the sign of the cross, resigned his soul to God, it being the 14th of September, [in the year of salvation, 407.] As soon as he was dead a furious hailstorm took place at Constantinople, and after four days the Empress died. The Emperor Theodosius, the son of Arcadius, brought the body of John Chrysostom to Constantinople with great state, and numerously attended, and on the 27th of January, [438,] laid it with magnificent honours in the grave, beside which he prayed for the forgiveness of his own father and mother. The holy body was afterwards taken to Rome, and is now buried in the Vatican Basilica. The number, devoutness, and brilliance of St John Chrysostom's sermons and other writings, his acuteness in exposition, and the close aptness of his explanations of Holy Scripture, have been and are the object of universal wonder and admiration, and often seem not unworthy to have been dictated to him by the Apostle Paul, for whom he entertained a wonderful devotion.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. v. 13, with the Homily of St John Chrysostom, (p. 632.)

Eighth Responsory.

In the midst of the congregation, &c., (p. 625.)

MARTYROLOGY.

At Rome, the second Feast of holy Agnes.

Upon the same 28th day of January, were born into the better life—

At Rome likewise, the holy martyr Flavian, who suffered in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Apollonia, the holy martyrs Thyrsus, Leucius, Callinicus. In the time of the Emperor Decius they were tortured in divers ways. Whereafter, Thyrsus and Callinicus were beheaded, and a voice from heaven called away Leucius, and he gave up the ghost, [in the year 250.]

In the Thebaïd, the holy martyrs Leonides and his companions, who secured the palm of martyrdom in the time of the Emperor Diocletian.

At Alexandria, a multitude of holy martyrs, who upon this day were gathered together in a church at Communion, when they were massacred in divers ways by the followers of the Arian Duke Syrianus, [in the year 376.]

Likewise at Alexandria, the holy Confessor Cyril, Pope of that city; a most eminent champion of the Catholic faith, and illustrious for his teaching and holiness, who fell asleep in peace, [in the year 444.] Whose feast we keep upon the 9th day of February.

At Zaragoza, [in the year 315,] holy Valerius, Bishop of that city.

At Cuenca, in Spain, holy Julian, Bishop of that city, who gave the goods of his Church to the poor, and sought his food by working with his own hands after the manner of the Apostles, and fell asleep in peace, famous for miracles, [in the year 1207.]

In the monastery of Rheims, [in the year 545,] the holy Priest John, a man of God.

In Palestine, [in the sixth century,] the holy Hermit James, who having fallen away hid himself for a long time in a sepulchre to do penance, and passed away hence to be ever with the Lord, famous for miracles.

SECOND VESPERS.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O right excellent Teacher, &c., (p. 627.)

A Commemoration is made of the following, viz.: St Raymond of Peñafuerte from the Common Office, p. 621, and Prayer from his own Office.

Then the following Commemoration of St Agnes.

Antiphon. Christ hath hallowed His Bride and Witness unto Himself, standing at her right hand in the shape of a Lamb[1] whiter than snow.

Verse. In thy comeliness and thy beauty.

Answer. Go forward, fare prosperously, and reign.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who year by year dost gladden Thy people by the solemn feast of Thy blessed Virgin and Martyr Agnes, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, not only devoutly to observe the same, but also to follow after the pattern of her godly conversation. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

JANUARY 28.

Note. When on account of the early incidence of Easter, Septuagesima Sunday falls on the Second Sunday after Epiphany, January 28 is set apart for the Feast of the Most Holy Name of Jesus, which else is kept on the Second Sunday after Epiphany. In this case the Office of the Most Holy Name is precisely the same as that given at the Second Sunday after Epiphany, (p. 204,) omitting only "Alleluia," wherever it occurs, the Commemoration of the Octave of Epiphany at First Vespers, and of the Sunday at both Vespers and Lauds. With these exceptions, First Vespers of the transferred Feast will be as on the Saturday evening preceding the Second Sunday after Epiphany. The Ninth Lesson will be that of St Agnes's Second Feast which is commemorated at Lauds only. The Short Responsories at Terce, Sext, and None will be as follows:

AT TERCE.

Blessed be the name of the LORD.

Answer. Blessed be the name of the LORD.

Verse. From henceforth, now, and for ever.

Answer. The name of the LORD.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Blessed be the name of the LORD.

Verse. Give unto the LORD glory and honour.

Answer. Give unto the LORD the glory due unto His Name.

AT SEXT.

Give unto the LORD glory and honour.

Answer. Give unto the LORD glory and honour.

Verse. Give unto the LORD the glory due unto His Name.

Answer. Glory and honour.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Give unto the LORD glory and honour.

Verse. O magnify the LORD with me.

Answer. And let us exalt His Name together.

AT NONE.

O magnify the LORD with me.

Answer. O magnify the LORD with me.

Verse. And let us exalt His Name together.

Answer. With me.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. O magnify the LORD with me.

Verse. Our help is in the Name of the LORD.

Answer. Who made heaven and earth.

At Second Vespers of the Holy Name there will be Commemorations of St Francis de Sales, and of St Raymond.

The Feast of St Raymond of Peñafuerte—now ousted from his original day, 23*rd January—is, for convenience, printed here.*

St Raymond of Peñafuerte, Confessor.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor, (p. 855,) except what is otherwise given here.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst choose the blessed Raymond to be an eminent minister of the Sacrament of Penance, and in a wonderful manner didst make him to pass over the waves of the sea, grant unto us, at his petition, the grace to bring forth fruits worthy of repentance, and in the end to attain unto the harbour of eternal salvation. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

---

[1] Probably some play on the Latin word "Agnus."

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE blessed Raymond was born at Barcelona, [in the year of our Lord 1175,] and was of the noble family of the De Peñafuerte. He was early instructed in the Christian religion, and even while he was still a little child, he showed such excellence of mind and body, as filled his friends with strong hopes of his future greatness. As a young man he taught letters in his native place. He afterwards went to Bologna, where he applied himself to works of godliness, and to the study of the Ecclesiastical and Civil Law. He took the degree of Doctor, and lectured with great applause upon the Canon Law. He attained so much celebrity that Berengar, Bishop of Barcelona, on his way from Rome to his own See, turned aside to visit the Saint at Bologna, and at length persuaded him after many entreaties to return with him to Spain. He was appointed to a Canonry and the Archdeaconry in the Church of Barcelona, in which offices he set both clergy and people a brilliant example of uprightness, modesty, learning, and meekness, and more especially strove, as far as in him lay, to increase the honour and reverence paid to the Virgin Mother of God, whom he venerated with an affection singularly devoted.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN he was about forty-five years of age he solemnly professed in the Order of Friars Preachers, and strove, as a new recruit, to perfect himself in all the duties of his calling, particularly in charity to the poor, and above all to those unhappy Christians who were slaves to the unbelievers. He was the Confessor of St Peter Nolasco and of James I., King of Aragon, and by his advice St Peter Nolasco gave up his whole worldly possessions to ransom as many as possible of the wretched captives. At this moment the most blessed Virgin appeared simultaneously to St Raymond, St Peter Nolasco, and King James, and revealed to them the pleasure of her Only-begotten Son and herself, that they should establish in her honour an order of Religious persons whose work should be the redemption of Christian slaves from bondage among unbelievers. The three took counsel together, and then founded the Order of the Blessed Mary of Ransom, for the Redemption of Captives. The blessed Raymond himself composed a most appropriate code of rules for the new institution, for which he after some years obtained the express sanction of Pope Gregory IX., and himself [on the 10th day of August, in the year 1223,] with his own hands clothed St Peter Nolasco in the habit, and constituted him the first Master General of the Order.

Sixth Lesson.

HE was summoned to Rome by Gregory IX., [in the year 1230,] and appointed by him his Chaplain, Penitentiary, and Confessor, and by his orders collected into one volume of the Decretals the ordinances of the Roman Pontiffs, which up to that time were only to be found scattered among the records of divers Councils and Churches. He firmly refused the Archbishopric of Tarascon, which was offered him by the Pope himself, and, having been chosen Master General of the whole order of Friars Preachers, he discharged the duties of that office in holiness for two years, and then resigned it. It was by his advice that James, King of Aragon, established the Office of the Holy Inquisition in his dominions. He was distinguished by many miracles, of which the chief which is narrated of him is that on one occasion being in the island of Majorca and wishing to go to Barcelona, he spread his cloak upon the sea, and passed over the waters on it, accomplishing the whole distance of sixty leagues in six hours, and finally entering his convent through the closed doors.[1] He attained the age of nearly an hundred years, and fell asleep in the Lord [on the 6th day of January,] in the year of salvation 1275. His name was enrolled by Clement VIII. among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 37, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.) The Ninth Lesson ("And ye yourselves, &c.") is either omitted or read as one with the Eighth in order to leave room for

Ninth Lesson. (For St Agnes.)

ONE night when the parents of the blessed Agnes were watching at her grave, she appeared to them in company with a band of virgins, and said to them: Father and Mother, weep not for me as though I were dead; for now these virgins and I live together in Him Whose love was my whole life upon earth. Some years afterwards, Constance, the daughter of the Emperor Constantine, being sick of an incurable ulcer, betook herself to the said grave, although she was not yet a Christian, and as she lay by it and slept, she seemed to hear the voice of Agnes, saying to her: Constance, be of good courage: believe in JESUS Christ the Son of God, and He will make thee whole. The Princess, being healed, was baptized, along with many others of the Emperor's family and household, and afterwards built over the grave of the blessed Agnes a Church named in her honour.

At Lauds is made a Commemoration of St Agnes.

Antiphon. Behold, now I see that which I have desired; now I possess that for which I have hoped; now am I united in Heaven to Him Whom I loved with my whole heart upon earth.

Verse. Grace is poured into Thy lips.

Answer. Therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

Prayer as at First Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Francis de Sales, Bishop of Geneva, [in the year 1622,] of whom mention is made upon the 28th day of December.

Upon the same 29th day of January, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Nomentan Way, the holy soldiers Papias and Maurus, martyrs in the time of the Emperor Diocletian [fourth century.] At their first confession of Christ, Laodicius, the Prefect of the city, ordered their mouths to be bruised with stones and committed them to prison; where they were afterwards cudgelled and then lashed to death with scourges loaded with lead.

At Perugia, the holy martyrs Constantius, Bishop of that see, and his companions, who were crowned [about the year 178] for defending the faith in the persecution under the Emperor Marcus Aurelius.

At Edessa, in Syria, the holy martyrs Sarbelius and his sister, Barbea, who were baptized by blessed Barsimœus, Bishop of that city; and were crowned with martyrdom under the President Lysias, in the persecution under the Emperor Trajan, [in the second century.]

In the country of Trois, the holy martyr Sabinian, who was beheaded for Christ's faith's sake, [in the year 275,] by order of the Emperor Aurelian.

At Milan, the holy Priest Aquilinus, who was crowned with martyrdom, [in the eighth century,] by being run through the neck with a sword by the Arians.

At Treves, holy Valerius, Bishop of that see, [in the first century,] a disciple of the holy Apostle Peter.

At Bourges, holy Sulpicius Severus, [in the year 591,] Bishop of that see, famous for his graces and learning.

Vespers of the following.

JANUARY 29.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

FRANCIS was born of godly and noble parents, in the town of Sales, from which his family take their name of "de Sales," [upon the 21st day of August, in the year of our Lord 1567.] In his childish years his staid and godly demeanour gave promise of his future sanctity. He received a liberal education as he grew up, and afterwards studied Philosophy and Theology at Paris. In order to the complete furnishing of his mind, he took the degree of Doctor of Laws, both Civil and Ecclesiastical, at Padua, with much distinction. He had already bound himself with a vow of perpetual virginity at Paris, and he renewed the same in the Holy House of Loreto. From this path of virtue, neither the temptations of the devil nor the allurements of the world ever induced him to swerve.

Fifth Lesson.

HE refused to be made Counsellor of the Parliament of Chambery, for which his family had obtained for him patents from the Duke of Savoy, and determined to become a clergyman. He was appointed to the Provostship of the Church of Geneva, and, being shortly afterwards ordained Priest, discharged so admirably the duties of his position, that he was sent by Granier, his Bishop, to preach the word of God in Chablais, and other places in the outskirts of the diocese, where the inhabitants had embraced the heresy of Calvin. He joyfully undertook this mission, in which he suffered much, being often hunted by the Protestants to murder him, and assailed by many calumnies and plots. Amid all these dangers and struggles his constancy remained invincible, and under the blessing and care of God he is said to have recalled seventy-two thousand of these heretics to the Faith of Christ's Universal Church, among whom were many distinguished by rank and learning.

Sixth Lesson.

AFTER the death of Bishop Granier, who had procured his appointment as Coadjutor, he was consecrated Bishop, [upon the 3rd day of December, 1602.] In that office he was truly a burning and a shining light, showing all around a bright example of godliness, zeal for the discipline of the Church, ardent love of peace, tenderness to the poor, and, indeed, of all graces. For the greater ornament of God's worship he established a new Order of Nuns, which is named from the Visitation of the Blessed Virgin. These nuns follow the Rule of St Austin, but Francis added thereto several additional constitutions distinguished by wisdom, prudence, and tenderness. He enlightened the Church by writings full of heavenly teaching, and pointing out a safe and simple road to Christian perfection. In the 55th year of his age, while on his way from France to Annecy, after saying mass at Lyons on the Feast of St John the Evangelist, he was seized with fatal illness, and on the next day passed from earth to heaven, in the year of our Lord 1622. His body was carried to Annecy and honourably buried in the Church of the nuns of the Visitation, where it soon began to be distinguished for miracles. The truth of these having been proved, the Supreme Pontiff, Alexander VII., enrolled his name among those of the Saints, and appointed for his Feast-day the 29th of January. And the Supreme Pontiff, Pius IX., on the advice of the Congregation of Sacred Rites, declared him a Doctor of the Universal Church.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy virgin and Martyr Martina, [third century,] of whom mention is made upon the 1st day of January.

Upon the same 30th day of January, were born into a better life—

At Antioch, the blessed martyr Hippolytus, [third century.] He was a Priest who had been led astray into the Novatian schism, but by the operation of the grace of Christ had corrected himself, and had returned into the unity of the Church, for which and within which he afterwards achieved a noble martyrdom. When he was asked by his people which were the true Body, he denied the doctrine of Novatus, and declared that the faith which men ought to keep is the faith which the See of Peter keepeth, and so offered his neck to the executioner.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Felician, Philappian, and 124 others.

At Edessa, in Syria, the holy martyr Barsimœus, Bishop of that city, who converted many Gentiles to the faith, and sent them before him to the crown, but himself followed them with the palm of martyrdom under the Emperor Trajan, [second century.]

Likewise, at Edessa, holy Barsen, Bishop of that See, who was famous for the grace of healing, but who on account of his Catholic belief was banished to the uttermost parts of that country by the Arian Emperor Valens, and there finished his earthly life, [in the year 379.]

Likewise the blessed Alexander. He was arrested in the persecution under the Emperor Decius, and died under the torture, [in the year 251,] venerable for his grey hairs and illustrious for his repeated confession.

At Jerusalem, holy Matthias, Patriarch of that place, [in the second century,] of whom are narrated wondrous acts of faith. He suffered much for Christ's sake under the Emperor Hadrian, but at length fell asleep in peace.

At Rome, holy Pope Felix [IV., Pope in 526, died in 530,] who laboured much for the Catholic faith.

At Pavia, the holy Confessor Armentarius, Bishop of that See, [in the year 730.]

In the monastery of Maubeuge, in Hainault, in the time of King Dagobert, the holy Virgin Aldegundis, [about the year 689.]

At Milan, holy Savina, a devout woman, who fell asleep in the Lord, [in the year 311,] while she was praying at the graves of the holy martyrs Nabor and Felix.

At Viterbo, the holy Virgin Hyacinth de' Mariscotti, [in the year 1640,] a nun of the Third Order of St Francis, eminent for penitence and for love. Whose name Pope Pius VII. enrolled with those of the saints.

At Second Vespers; Antiphon, "O right excellent, &c.;" a Commemoration is made of the following, from the Common Office for one Virgin and Martyr, (p. 641.) Prayer, "O God, Who amidst the wondrous, &c.," (p. 645.)

JANUARY 30.

St Martina, Virgin and Martyr.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for one Virgin and Martyr, (p. 641,) except what is otherwise given here. Prayer throughout the Office, "O God, Who amidst the wondrous, &c."

Note. Should this Feast be observed as a Double, or otherwise have First Vespers, the Hymn at that Service is composed of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and 7th verses of the Hymn hereafter given for Mattins, and in this case the Hymn at Mattins begins at the 4th verse, (the 7th being used at both Vespers and Mattins.)

MATTINS.

Hymn.[1]

1.

Hear thou with joy, O Rome, Martina's name,
Her praises celebrate with glad accord;
Martina, high in merit, virgin blest,
And martyr of the Lord.

2.

Beauty and youth, the joys of happy home,
Ancestral palaces, and noble birth;
All these were hers, all these for Jesu's sake
She counted nothing worth.

3.

Her wealth she shared among the poor of Christ,
Content with seeking better wealth above:
Herself she gave to her immortal King,
Too happy in His love.

4.

The agonising hooks, the rending scourge,
Shook not the dauntless spirit in her breast;
With torments rack'd, Angels her fainting flesh
Recruit with heavenly feast.

5.

In vain they cast her to the ravening beasts;
Calm at her feet the lion crouches down:
Till smitten by the sword at length she goes
To her immortal crown.

6.

Now with the Saints Martina reigns in bliss;
And, where Idolatry sate throned of yore,
From her victorious altar praise and prayer
With odorous incense soar.

7.

Expel false worldly joys; and fill us, Lord,
With thine enlightening beam divine;
Who with Thy suffering martyrs present art,
The Godhead, One and Trine. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

MARTINA was a maiden of a most illustrious Roman family, daughter of a Consul. She lost her parents while still very young, and, being inflamed with Christian zeal, she distributed her wealth, whereof she had abundance, with great profusion among the poor. Under the Emperor Alexander, she was commanded to sacrifice to the imaginary gods, and refused with much boldness to commit this great wickedness. Upon this she was again and again scourged, and mangled with iron prongs and hooks, and pieces of broken pottery. Her limbs were cut off piece by piece with sharp swords, and boiling tallow poured upon the living trunk. Lastly she was sent to be eaten publicly by the wild beasts in the amphitheatre, but by the will of God they would not touch her, and she was then thrown upon a burning pile, but still remained alive.

---

[1] Translation by the late Rev. E. Caswall. (Died while the above was in proof, Jan. 2, 1878. R.I.P.)

Fifth Lesson.

SOME of her tormentors were so moved by the spectacle, that they repented, and, by the grace of God confessing the faith of Christ, through which she remained constant, were themselves tortured and beheaded. Martina herself lay praying, with a brightness on her face, while a matter like milk oozed from her body along with the blood, emitting a soft, sweet smell. She was as it were unconscious of an earthquake and most violent thunderstorm which arose and was raging, and while the lightning struck temples, and melted statues, she seemed in spirit rather to be seated above on a queenly throne, praising God in heaven among the Blessed.

Sixth Lesson.

THE judge being infuriated at what had taken place, and chiefly at her unbending firmness, ordered the head of the martyr to be cut off. At the moment this was done, a peal which shook the city was heard, like a voice calling her home, and so great was the consternation, that it was made the means of conversion to many idolaters. The holy body of Martina wherein she had suffered in the Pontificate of Urban I. was discovered in the time of Urban VIII.,[1] in the very old Church called after her, situated at the foot of the Capitoline Hill, near the Mamertine Prison, along with the bodies of the holy martyrs Concordius, Epiphanius, and others. The Church was then altered and restored and handsomely decorated, and then the body was replaced in it, amid public rejoicings, with a solemn ceremony and procession.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 1, with the Homily of Pope St Gregory, (p. 644.)

LAUDS.

Hymn.

PLEAD, maiden, for thy native land,
Plead for thy Mother Church of Rome,
Plead for each Christian State that shields
The brightness of the Christian home.

From them let warfare roll to where
Justice and vengeance have a work—
Let war, with all its horrors rife,
Crush the foul empire of the Turk.

Their fellow-Christians to set free
Let all men Christian draw the sword—
However divers, one in this,
The love of Christ, their common Lord.

Rome calls upon thee that the prayers,
Not rising from one shore alone,
May from thine odour-phial float
Toward the Everlasting Throne.

Borne on the eternal breeze of praise
That from the Blessed myriads swells
To Him Who, circled by the Saints,
In holiness unuttered dwells. Amen.

Prayer throughout the day. O God, Who amidst the wondrous, &c., (p. 645.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Peter Nolasco, founder of the Order of Blessed Mary of Ransom, for the redemption of captives, who fell asleep in the Lord upon Christmas Eve.

Upon the same 31st day of January, were born into a better life—

At Rome, upon the way to Porto, the holy martyrs Cyrus and John, who suffered many torments for confessing Christ, and were beheaded, [in the fourth century.]

At Alexandria, the holy martyr Metranus. In the time of the Emperor Decius he refused to utter unlawful words at the command of the Pagans. Wherefore they bruised his whole body with cudgels, pierced his face and eyes with sharp reeds, and continued to torture him while they cast him out of the city, where they stoned him to death, [in the year 249.]

There, likewise, the holy martyrs Saturninus, Thyrsus, and Victor.

In the same city, the holy martyrs Tharsicius, Zoticus, Cyriacus, and their Companions.

At Cyzicus, on the Hellespont, the holy martyr Triphenes, who overcame divers torments, and then gained the palm of martyrdom by being killed by a bull.

At Modena, holy Geminian, [after the year 390,] Bishop of that see, famous for miracles.

In the province of Milan, in the time of the Emperor Theodosius, [fifth century,] the holy Confessor Julius the Priest.

At Rome, [in the year 410,] the holy widow Marcella, whose excellences have been written by blessed Jerome.

At Rome, likewise, the blessed widow Louisa Albertoni, [in the year 1530,] of the 3rd Order of St Francis, illustrious for her graces.

Upon the same day is commemorated the translation of the holy Evangelist Mark, when [in the year 831] his sacred body was taken from Alexandria, in Egypt, already occupied by the Mohammedans, and brought to Venice, where it is honourably buried in the great cathedral church consecrated in his name.

Vespers are of the following from the Chapter inclusive.

JANUARY 31.

St Peter Nolasco, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except what is otherwise given here.

---

[1] Both the hymns in this Office are by him.

FIRST VESPERS.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who hast commended Thy love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Thou didst die for us, that Thou mightest redeem us from the hand of the enemy; and Who didst raise up Thy holy servant Peter (in imitation of that Thy so great love for their souls) to redeem the bodies also of Thy servants from the hand of the enemies of Thy Cross, and to that end, didst choose him for a mean whereby Thou hast given unto Thy Church a new family of sons; mercifully grant unto us, at his petition, that we may be delivered from the bondage of our sins, and may one day together with him rejoice in perfect liberty in our very Fatherland, which is in heaven: Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Martina. Prayer as in her Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

PETER Nolasco was born of noble parents at Recaudun near Carcassonne in France [about the year 1189,] and is chiefly distinguished for his great love toward his neighbour. It was considered a foreshadowing of this virtue, that when he was a little child in his cradle, a swarm of bees settled on his right hand, and began to make an honey-comb there. He lost his parents while still young, and in consequence of his horror of the Albigensian heresy, with which France was then plagued, he sold his property there and emigrated to Spain. Here he first discharged a vow which he had made at the sanctuary of the Blessed Virgin of Monserrat, and afterwards went to Barcelona. Here he was so affected by the miserable state of the Christians who were in slavery to the Moors, that he expended his whole fortune in ransoming as many of them as possible, and used to say that he wished he could be sold himself to ransom more, or could himself change places with them.

Fifth Lesson.

IT came to pass that God showed how agreeable to Him was the charitable zeal of Peter. One night when he was praying, and his mind was much exercised on the means of succouring the enslaved Christians, the Blessed Virgin appeared to him in a vision, and gave him to understand that it would be most pleasing to her Son and herself, if he would found in her honour an order of religious men, whose chief duty it should be to effect the redemption of Christian bondsmen out of the hand of the unbelievers. In conformity to this revelation, which had likewise on the same night been made to St Raymond de Pegnafort and King James I. of Aragon, he founded the Religious Order of the Blessed Mary of Ransom, for the redemption of captives. The members of this order add a fourth vow to the three essential ones of Poverty, Chastity, and Obedience, namely, that they will be ready if need be to remain as hostages in the hand of the unbelievers for the liberation of others.

Sixth Lesson.

AFTER he took the vow of virginity he remained with his purity quite unsullied all his life, and was at the same time a bright pattern of long-suffering, lowliness, temperance, and other virtues. God was pleased to adorn him with the gift of Prophecy, whereby he foretold things to come. Among others, he prophesied to King James that he would take the city of Valencia from the Moors, which he afterwards did. He was refreshed by frequent apparitions of his Guardian Angel and of the Virgin Mother of God. He had lived to a great age, when being quite worn out, and falling into a grievous sickness, he perceived that his end was at hand. He then received the holy Sacraments, and, gathering his brethren around him, exhorted them for the last time to show pity to slaves. After this he began to repeat with great emotion the cx. Psalm, "I will praise Thee, O LORD, with my whole heart," and when he had uttered the words "He sent redemption unto His people," he resigned his soul to God. This happened at midnight between the 23rd and 24th of December, 1256. Alexander VII. ordered that his feast should be celebrated on the 31st of January.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 32, with the Homily of the Venerable Bede, (p. 628.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 1st day of February, were born into the better life—

The holy martyr Ignatius, who ruled the church of Antioch as the third Bishop of that see in succession to the blessed Apostle Peter. In the persecution under the Emperor Trajan he was condemned to be killed by wild beasts, and was sent to Rome in chains by command of the emperor. There, in the presence of the Senate, he was first put to most grievous torments and then thrown to lions, the which throttled him with their teeth, and so he was made Christ's offering, [in the year 107.]

At Smyrna, the holy martyr Pionius. He was a Priest who had written much controversial matter on behalf of the Christian faith. After suffering a foul imprisonment, during the which he strengthened many brethren by his exhortations to the enduring of martyrdom, he was put to many tortures and nailed upon a pyre, where he obtained a blessed end by being burnt for Christ's sake. And with him suffered fifteen others, [in the year 251.]

At Ravenna, holy Severus, [in the year 389,] Bishop of that city, to the which place he was chosen, on account of his extraordinary merits, through a miraculous sign in the form of a dove.

At Tron, in Gaul, [in the fifth century,] holy Paul, Bishop of that see, whose life shone with grace, and the preciousness of whose death is attested by miracles.

Upon the same day, holy Ephrem, Deacon of the church of Edessa, who after much work for the faith of Christ fell asleep in the Lord, eminent for holiness and teaching, in the time of the Emperor Valens, [in the year 378.]

In Ireland, [in the year 523,] the holy Virgin Brigid. At the moment that she bowed down her head to receive the hallowed veil, she chanced to touch the wooden steps of the altar with her hand, and in witness to her virginity the dry wood at once became green.

At Florence, in Tuscany, the blessed Virgin Veridiana, recluse, of the Order of Vallombrosa, [Castel Florentin, 1242.]

Second Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter, inclusive. Prayer, "Mercifully consider our weakness," &c., (p. 599.) A Commemoration is made of the preceding.

FEAST DAYS IN FEBRUARY.

Upon the first day not occupied by an Office of Nine Lessons, is said the Office of the Dead.

FEBRUARY 1.

St Ignatius, Bishop [of Antioch,] Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for one Martyr, (p. 594,) except what is otherwise given here.

Prayer throughout the Office, "Mercifully consider our weakness," &c., (p. 599.)

First Vespers as regards St Ignatius begin with the Chapter. A Commemoration is made of the preceding Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book on Ecclesiastical Writers, composed by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.]

IGNATIUS was the third Bishop of Antioch after the Apostle Peter. When Trajan stirred up his persecution, he was condemned to be devoured by wild beasts, and sent to Rome in chains. When on his journey thither he arrived at Smyrna, where Polycarp, the disciple of John, was Bishop, he wrote an Epistle to the Ephesians, another to the Magnesians, a third to the Trallians, and a fourth to the Romans: and after leaving Smyrna, he addressed a further Epistle to the Philadelphians, and another to the Smyrnians, along with a private Epistle to Polycarp, to whose care he commended the Church of Antioch. In this last he quoteth a passage regarding the Person of Christ from the Gospel, which I have recently translated.

Fifth Lesson.

IT is fitting that, as we have made mention of a man of so much importance, we should also note briefly the Epistle which he addressed to the Romans. "I am on my way," saith he, "from Syria to Rome, and am already fighting with beasts on sea and on land all the way. I may say I am chained day and night to ten leopards, for indeed the soldiers, who have charge of me, are no better. The more courteous I am to them, the worse they use me. But still their wickedness is good schooling for me, though I know that my mere sufferings cannot in themselves gain me justification. I earnestly wish for the beasts which are to devour me; at any rate, I pray they may put me out of pain quickly, and fly on me willingly, that I be not like some other Martyrs, whose bodies the animals have refused to touch. If I find that they will not come on, I will run at them as quick as I can, to make them devour me. Let me be, my little children: I know what is good for me."

Sixth Lesson.

"I FEEL now that I am beginning to be Christ's disciple; I desire none of those things which are seen, if so be I may find Christ JESUS. I care not that there come upon me fire, or cross, or wild beasts, or breaking of my bones, or sundering of my members, or destruction of my whole body, yea, or all the torments of the devil, if only so be I may win Christ." When he was brought condemned to the theatre, and heard the roaring of the beasts which were to devour him, he felt so strong an eagerness to suffer, that he cried out: "I am Christ's wheat, and so let the beasts' teeth be my mill, that I may be ground, and be found to make good bread." He suffered in the eleventh year of Trajan. What was left of his body lieth at Antioch, in the graveyard outside the gate which leadeth toward Daphne.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xii. 24.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Amen, Amen, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Tract 51 on John.)

The Lord JESUS was Himself a corn of wheat that was to die and bring forth much fruit; to die by the unbelief of the Jews, and to bring forth much fruit in the faith of the Gentiles. He, exhorting men to follow His steps, saith: "He that loveth his life shall lose it." Now, these words may be understood in two ways. First: "he that loveth his life shall lose it," that is, "If thou love life, thou wilt lose it; if thou wilt live for ever in Christ, refuse not to die for Christ."

Or secondly: "he that loveth his life shall lose it; love not then that which thou shalt lose; love not this present life, so that thou be thereby in jeopardy of losing life eternal."

Eighth Lesson.

THAT this second interpretation is the meaning of the Gospel, appeareth most probably from the words which follow: "And he that hateth his life in this world, shall keep it unto life eternal." From which we may suppose the sense of the first words to be: "He that loveth his life in this world shall lose it unto life eternal." This is a great and marvellous saying, showing how a man may so love life as to lose life, and so hate life as to keep life. If thou love it too well, then dost thou hate it: if thou hate it with an holy hatred, then dost thou love it. Blessed are they that, lest they should so love it as to lose it, so hate it as to keep it.

Ninth Lesson.

BEWARE lest thou take these words—"He that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal"—as some do, for an approval of suicide. Some evil and perverse men, bloody and guilty murderers of themselves, do indeed throw themselves into the fire, drown themselves in water, and cast themselves down precipices, and so perish. This is not the teaching of Christ, Who, when the devil would have Him cast Himself down from an high place, answered: "Get thee behind Me, Satan. It is written, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God." (Matth. iv. 5-7.) Who also said to Peter, signifying by what death he should glorify God: "When thou wast young thou girdedst thyself and walkedst whither thou wouldest; but when thou shalt be old, another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not." (John xxi. 18.) From which it is evident that he that would follow Christ's footsteps, must be slain, not by himself, but by another.

Prayer throughout the day as at First Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the feast of the Purification of the Blessed Virgin Mary, which by the Greeks is called the Hypapante—that is, the Presentation of the Lord.

Upon the same 2nd day of February, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Salarian Way, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyr Apronian. He was a notary, who, while he was a Gentile, was leading the holy Licinius out of prison to present him before the Prefect Laodicius, when he heard a voice from heaven saying, "Come, ye blessed of My Father, inherit the kingdom which is prepared for you from the foundation of the world," whereupon he believed, and was baptized, and was afterwards put to death confessing the Lord.

Likewise at Rome, the holy martyrs Fortunatus, Felician, Firmus, and Candidus.

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, [in the first century,] the holy centurion Cornelius, who was baptized by the holy Apostle St Peter, and by him also raised to be Bishop in that city.

At Orleans, holy Flosculus, [about the year 500], Bishop of that see.

At Canterbury, in England, holy Laurence, [in the year 619,] Archbishop of that see, which he governed in succession to holy Augustin, and converted king Ethelbert himself to the faith. We keep his feast upon the morrow after.

At Prato, in Tuscany, the holy Florentine Virgin Katherine di Ricci, of the Order of Friars Preachers, eminent for the abundance of her gifts from heaven, whose name the Supreme Pontiff Bendict XIV. enrolled among those of holy virgins.

Vespers of the following.

FEBRUARY 2.

Candlemas Day.

Purification of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Double of the Second Class.

Note. Should the 2nd February be a privileged Sunday, the Office for Candlemas Day is transferred to the Monday, any other Feast of less or equal rank being transferred. Should there be a double of the First Class on the Monday, the Candlemas Office is transferred on.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633,) except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons from the Lauds of New Year's Day, (p. 177.)
Chapter and Prayer from Lauds.

Verse. It was revealed unto Simeon by the Holy Ghost.

Answer. That he should not see death before he had seen the Lord's Christ.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The old man held his Lord in his arms in the form of a little child, but the Child was the old man's King: even that Child whom a virgin bore, and remained a virgin as before: the fruit of her womb, and the God of her soul.

A Commemoration is made of the preceding.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Behold, the Lord the Ruler cometh unto His holy temple: * Rejoice and be glad, O Zion! go forth to meet thy God!

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Exodus (xiii. 1.)

THE LORD spake unto Moses, saying, Sanctify unto Me all the first-born; whatsoever openeth the womb among the children of Israël, both of man and of beast: it is Mine. And Moses said unto the people: (11) It shall be when the LORD shall bring thee into the land of the Chanaanites, as He sware unto thee and to thy fathers, and shall give it thee, that thou shalt set apart unto the LORD all that openeth the matrix, and every firstling that cometh of a beast which thou hast; the males shall be the LORD'S. The firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a lamb: and if thou wilt not redeem it, then thou shalt break his neck. And all the first-born of man among thy children shalt thou redeem.

First Responsory.

Make ready thy chamber, O Zion, to receive Christ thy King, even that Child Whom a Virgin bore, and remained a Virgin as before: the fruit of her womb and the God of her soul.

Verse. Simeon took the Child up in his arms, and blessed God.

Answer. Even that Child Whom a Virgin bore, and remained a Virgin as before: the fruit of her womb and the God of her soul.

Second Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Leviticus (xii. 1.)

THE LORD spake unto Moses, saying: Speak unto the children of Israël, saying: If a woman hath conceived seed and borne a man child, then she shall be unclean seven days, according to the days of the separation for her infirmity shall she be unclean. And the eighth day shall the child be circumcised: and she shall then continue in the blood of her purifying three and thirty days. She shall touch no hallowed thing, nor come into the Sanctuary, until the days of her purifying be fulfilled. But if she bear a maid child, then she shall be unclean two weeks, as in her separation, and she shall continue in the blood of her purifying three score and six days.

Second Responsory.

When the days of Mary's purification according to the law of Moses were accomplished, they brought JESUS to Jerusalem to present Him to the Lord; as it is written in the law of the Lord: Every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy unto the Lord.

Verse. They offered for Him unto the Lord a pair of turtle-doves or two young pigeons.

Answer. As it is written in the law of the Lord: Every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy unto the Lord.

Third Lesson.

AND when the days of her purification are fulfilled, for a son or for a daughter, she shall bring a lamb of the first year for a burnt-offering, and a young pigeon or a turtle-dove for a sin-offering, unto the door of the tabernacle of the testimony, unto the priest, who shall offer it before the LORD, and make an atonement for her, and she shall be cleansed from the issue of her blood. This is the law for her that hath borne a male or a female. And if her hand find it not, or she be not able to bring a lamb, she shall take two turtles, or two young pigeons, the one for the burnt-offering, and the other for a sin-offering; and the priest shall make an atonement for her, and she shall be clean.

Third Responsory.

They offered for Him unto the Lord a pair of turtle-doves, or two young pigeons; as it is written in the law of the Lord.

Verse. And when the days of Mary's purification according to the law of Moses were accomplished, they brought Him to Jerusalem, to present Him to the Lord.

Answer. As it is written in the law of the Lord.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. As it is written in the law of the Lord.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (13*th on the Season.*)

OF old time it was written: "And of Zion shall it not be said: This and that man was born in her, and the Highest Himself shall establish her?" Blessed be the omnipotence of Him That was born! Blessed the glory of Him That came from heaven to earth! While yet He was borne in His Mother's womb, He was saluted by John the Baptist; He was presented in the temple, and recognised by that famous, antient, and glorious worthy, the old man Simeon. As soon as he knew Him he worshipped Him, and said: "Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace—for mine eyes have seen Thy Salvation."

Fourth Responsory.

Simeon was just and devout, waiting for the redemption of Israël; and the Holy Ghost was upon him.

Verse. It was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death, before he had seen the Lord's Christ.

Answer. And the Holy Ghost was upon him.

Fifth Lesson.

HE lingered in the world to see the birth of Him Who made the world. The old man knew the Child, and in that Child became a child himself, for in the love wherewith he regarded the Father of all, he felt his own years to be but as of yesterday. The old man Simeon bore the new-born Christ, and all the while, Christ was the old man's Lord. It had been told him by the Lord that he should not taste of death before he had seen the birth of the Lord's Christ. Now Christ is born, and all the old man's wishes on earth are fulfilled. He That came to a decrepit world came to an old man.

Fifth Responsory.

It was revealed unto Simeon by the Holy Ghost that he should not see death before he had seen the Lord's Christ; and he blessed God, and said: Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen Thy salvation.

Verse. When His parents brought in the Child JESUS, to do for Him after the custom of the law: then took he Him up in his arms.

Answer. And blessed God, and said: Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen Thy salvation.

Sixth Lesson.

HE wished not to remain long in the world, but he longed to see Christ in the world, singing with the Prophet, and saying: "Shew us Thy mercy, O LORD, and grant us

Thy salvation." (Ps. lxxxiv. 8.) And now at last, that ye may know that the cause of his joy was that this prayer was granted, he saith: "Now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen Thy salvation." The Prophets have sung that the Maker of heaven and earth would converse on earth with men: an angel hath declared that the Creator of flesh and spirit would come in the flesh: the unborn John, yet in the womb, hath saluted the unborn Saviour yet in the womb. The old man Simeon hath seen God a little Child.

Sixth Responsory.

When His parents brought the Child JESUS into the temple, to do for Him after the custom of the law, Simeon took Him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said: Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace.

Verse. Simeon took up the Child in his arms, and cried out, and said:

Answer. Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (ii. 22.)

AT that time: When the days of Mary's purification, according to the law of Moses, were accomplished, they brought JESUS to Jerusalem, to present Him to the Lord, as it is written in the law of the Lord. And so on.

Homily on this passage by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. 2, Comm. on Luke ii.)

"And, behold, there was a man in Jerusalem, whose name was Simeon, and the same man was just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israël." The birth of the Lord is attested not only by Angels and Prophets, and shepherds, but also by elders and just men. Every age, and both sexes, as well as the miracles of the events themselves, are here to strengthen our faith. A virgin conceiveth, a barren woman beareth, a dumb man speaketh, Elizabeth prophesieth, the wise man worshippeth, the unborn child leapeth, the widow praiseth, and the just man waiteth.

Seventh Responsory.

Simeon took JESUS up in his arms, and cried out, and said: Verily Thou art a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the Glory of Thy people Israël.

Verse. When His parents brought in the Child JESUS, then took he Him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said:

Answer. Verily Thou art a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the Glory of Thy people Israël.

Eighth Lesson.

WELL is he called just, who looked not for favour for himself, but for consolation for his people. He desired to be set free from the bondage of this frail body, but he waited to see the Promised One—for he knew that blessed are the eyes that see Him. "Then took he Him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said: Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace, according to Thy word." Behold a just man, confined in the weary prison of the body, desiring to be dissolved and to begin to be with Christ. For to be dissolved and to be with Christ is much better. (Phil. i. 23.)

Eighth Responsory.

The old man bore the Child, but the Child was the old man's King; even that Child Whom a virgin bore, and remained a virgin as before; and when that virgin had brought Him into the world, she fell down and worshipped Him.

Verse. Simeon took the Child up in his arms, and gave thanks, and blessed the Lord.

Answer. Even that Child Whom a virgin bore, and remained a virgin as before; and when that virgin had brought Him into the world, she fell down and worshipped Him.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Even that Child Whom a virgin bore, and remained a virgin as before; and when that virgin had brought Him into the world, she fell down and worshipped Him.

Ninth Lesson.

WHOSOEVER will be dissolved and be with Christ, let him come into the Temple, let him come to Jerusalem, let him wait for the Lord's Christ, let him take hold on the Word of God, let him embrace it with good works, as it were with arms of faith: and then let him depart in peace, for he shall not see death, who hath seen life. Behold how the Lord's Birth doth overflow with abounding grace for all, and prophecy is not denied to the just, but to the unbelieving. Behold, Simeon prophesieth that the Lord JESUS Christ is come for the fall and rising again of many: yea, He shall separate the just from the unjust by their deserts, and according as our work shall be, so shall the true and righteous Judge command us to be punished or rewarded.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Simeon was just * and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israël, and the Holy Ghost was upon him.

Second Antiphon. It was revealed unto Simeon * by the Holy Ghost that he should not see death before he had seen the Lord.

Third Antiphon. Simeon took * the Child up in his arms, and gave thanks, and blessed the Lord.

Fourth Antiphon. A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of Thy people Israël.

Fifth Antiphon. They offered for Him * unto the Lord, a pair of turtle doves, or two young pigeons.

Chapter. (Mal. iii. 1.)

BEHOLD, I send My Angel, and he shall prepare the way before Me. And the LORD, Whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to His holy temple, even the Angel of the Covenant Whom ye delight in.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. When His parents brought in the Child JESUS, then took Simeon Him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said: Now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace.

Prayer throughout the Office.

ALMIGHTY and everliving God, we humbly beseech Thy Majesty, that as Thy Only-begotten Son was this day presented in the temple in substance of our flesh, so we may be presented unto Thee with pure and clean hearts. Through the same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep in England the feast of the holy Confessor Laurence, Archbishop of Canterbury, who governed that church in succession to holy Augustin, and who converted King Ethelbert himself to the faith, of whom mention is made as upon this day.

Upon the same 3rd day of February, were born into the better life—

At Sebaste, in Armenia, the holy martyr Blase, [about the year 316,] Bishop of that city, and the worker of many miracles. Under the President Agricolaus he was long flogged, then hung to a beam, where his flesh was rent with iron combs, then he suffered a foul imprisonment, after which he was cast into the lake, and, forasmuch as he came out thence unhurt, he was beheaded, by order of the same judge, along with two lads. Before him seven women, who were collecting the drops of his blood as they fell during the torture, were arrested for being Christians, and after being grievously tormented were put to the sword.

In Africa, the holy Deacon Celerinus, who was kept nineteen days in prison, and was a glorious confessor of Christ under the lash, and in iron chains and other sufferings, and while he overcame the adversary of his contending by his invincible firmness, he led the way for victories for others, [in the year 280.]

Likewise the holy martyrs Laurentinus, [these martyrs mentioned by Cyprian, Letter 34,] and Ignatius, his father's and mother's brothers, and Celerina his grandmother, who had before him been crowned with martyrdom, to the glorious praises of all whom there remaineth to witness an epistle of blessed Cyprian.

Likewise in Africa, the holy martyrs Felix, Symphronius, Hippolytus, and their Companions, [in the year 270.]

In the town of Gap, [in the second century,] the holy Bishops Tigides and Remedius.

At Lyons, [about the year 486,] holy Lupicinus and Felix, Bishops of that see.

On the same day, [in the year 865,] holy Anschar, Bishop of Bremen, who brought the Swedes and the Danes to believe in Christ.

Chapter at the end. (Mal. iii. 4.)

THEN shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the LORD, as in the days of old, and as in former years, saith the Lord Almighty.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lesson from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Laurence was a Roman, and a disciple of St Gregory the Great, by whom he was sent into England, along with blessed Augustin, to preach the Gospel. Along with Augustin he gave himself to prayer and preaching, and by the holiness of his life and manner, and by his miracles, he converted to Christ King Ethelbert and a great part of his people. After Augustin was made Archbishop of Canterbury he sent Laurence to Rome to give blessed Gregory news as to the state of the new-born Church of England, and to obtain fresh supplies from him. He returned in a short space, bringing with him the answers of the Supreme Pontiff to the questions of Blessed Augustin, holy vessels, books, vestments, relics of the holy Apostles and martyrs, and divers fellow-workers and ministers of the Word, among whom the first and chief were those men of eminent holiness, Mellitus, Justus, Paulinus, and Rufinian, of whom Mellitus was afterwards made first Bishop of London, Justus of Rochester, Paulinus of York, and Rufinian Abbot of the Monastery of the holy Apostles Peter and Paul outside the walls of Canterbury.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN the blessed Augustine found himself drawing nigh to the kingdom of Heaven he ordained Laurence as his successor, lest upon his death the church in her tender state should suffer if she were left without the care of a shepherd. As soon as Laurence entered upon the Archbishoprick he made it his care to strengthen with all his power the foundations of the church which he saw so nobly laid, and by frequent exhortation and constant ensample of godly labour to carry on the structure to the height behoven. He bore not the care only of the new church which had been formed out of the English, but was heedful to extend his watchfulness as a shepherd to the nations of the old inhabitants of Britain and of the Scots who dwelt in Ireland, to bring them to the due and canonical observance of the feast of Easter, and to conformity of life and manners with the church rules in all other matters.

Sixth Lesson.

AFTER the death of holy king Ethelbert, his son and successor, Eadbald, not only refused to embrace the Christian faith, but also contracted an incestuous marriage with his own stepmother, and many thence took occasion either to renounce the faith which they had already received or to become unstable therein. Laurence took council with his fellow-bishops and thought to abandon England, but the blessed Prince of the Apostles appeared to him in a dream and corrected him ; and he so took to heart his words and stripes that he not only remained at his own church, but also brought the king to the faith, and to a life meet for the faith. From that time forward Laurence enjoyed great peace, and after he had ministered to the church of Canterbury for about fifteen years, he entered the kingdom of heaven in the year 619, upon the 2nd day of February, upon the which day mention is made of him in the Roman Martyrology. He was buried beside his predecessor, in the porch of the church of the Monastery of the holy Apostles Peter and Paul, and Mellitus succeeded to him.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619.) The last lesson is read along with the Eighth in order to make room for the

Ninth Lesson. (For St Blase.)

THIS Blase was chosen Bishop of the city of Sebaste in Armenia, in which place he enjoyed a great reputation for virtue. When Diocletian began to make the Christians the objects of his insatiable cruelty, the Saint hid himself in a cave on Mount Argæus, where he lay till he was found by some of the soldiers of Agricolaus the President, who were out hunting. He was brought before the President, who commanded him to be thrown into irons. While he was in prison, Blase healed many of the sick, who were brought to him on account of his reputation of saintliness, and among others a boy who had been despaired of by the physicians, and who was at the point of death, from a thorn which had become fixed in his throat. Blase appeared twice before the President, but neither cajolements nor threats could induce him to sacrifice to the gods. He was first beaten with rods, and afterwards put on the rack, where his flesh was mangled with iron combs. At last his head was cut off, whereby he finished a noble testimony to the faith which is in Christ our Lord. He bore witness on the 3rd day of February, [in the year of salvation 316.]

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Blase from the Common Office, (p. 598,) with the Prayer, "O God, Who year by year, &c.," (p. 599.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Andrew Corsini, [from 1360 to 1373,] Bishop of Fiesole, of whom mention is made upon the 6th day of January.

Upon the same 4th day of February, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyr Eutychius, who gained an illustrious martyrdom and is buried in the cemetery of Callistus. Holy Pope Damasus adorned his grave with some verses.

At Fossambrono, the holy martyrs Aquilinus, Geminus, Gelasius, Magnus, and Donatus.

At Thmuis, in Egypt, [about the year 308,] the blessed martyr Philæas, Bishop of that city, and Philoromus, Tribune of the troops, who in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian could not be persuaded by their kinsfolk and friends to have pity on themselves, but stretched forth their necks and won palm branches of victory from the Lord's hand ; and a countless multitude of the faithful of the same city, following after the ensample of their shepherd, were likewise crowned with martyrdom.

On the same day, [in the year 888,] holy Rembert, Bishop of Bremen.

At Troyes, the holy Confessor Aventinus, [about the year 538.]

At Pelusium, in Egypt, the holy monk Isidore, [monk in desert of Lychnos, about the year 449,] eminent for his merits and teaching.

On the same day, the holy Confessor Gilbert, [in the year 1190,] founder of the Order of Sempringham, whose feast we keep upon the 11th day of this present month of February.

In the town of Amatrice, in the diocese of Reate, [in the year 1612,] the holy Confessor Joseph of Leonissa, of the Order of Friars Minors Capuchins, who suffered much from the Mohammedans for his preaching of the faith, and was famous for his apostolic labours and his miracles ; whose name the Supreme Pontiff Benedict XIV. enrolled among those of the holy confessors.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

FEBRUARY 4.

St Andrew Corsini, Bishop [of Fiesole,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for one Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who dost continually raise up in Thy Church new ensamples of godly living, grant unto Thy people so to follow in the steps of Thy blessed Bishop and Confessor Andrew, that at the last they may together with him attain unto Thine eternal reward. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

First Vespers as regards St Andrew begin with the Chapter. A Commemoration is made of St Lawrence from the Common Office, (p. 618 and 617), with the Prayer, "Hear, O Lord, &c." If it be Lent a Commemoration must be made of the Week-day, which rule is to be invariably observed throughout that Season.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. If it be in Lent, then they are from the Common Office, ("This is a true saying, &c," p. 612,) which rule is to be invariably observed when neither the Week-day nor the Feast has proper Lessons from Scripture.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Andrew was born at Florence, of the noble family of Corsini, [upon the 30th day of November, in the year 1302.] His birth was a special answer to prayer, and his parents vowed him to the Blessed Virgin.[1] God fore-showed even before his birth what he was to be. While his mother was great with child she dreamt that she brought forth a wolf, which ran to the Carmelite Church and was changed into a lamb as soon as it reached the porch. The lad was brought up in godliness and learning becoming his rank, but turned to bad courses; wherefore his mother often rebuked him. Nevertheless, when he knew how his parents had vowed him to the Maiden Mother of God, the love of God touched his heart, and the vision of his mother moving him, he betook himself to the Institute of the Carmelites. In that place the devil exercised him with many and divers temptations, but could not break him off from his determination to profess as a friar. He was soon after sent to Paris, where he finished his studies at the University, and took his degree; after which he returned to his own country, and was set over the houses of his order in Tuscany.

Fifth Lesson.

THE Bishop of Fiesole being dead, the Church in that place chose Andrew Corsini for his successor. He held himself altogether unworthy of that office, and for a long time lay hidden and unknown, till he was betrayed by the voice of a child marvellously speaking, and found outside the city. Then, lest he should seem to resist the Will of God, he took the Bishoprick, [in the year 1360.] Being dignified with this office, he set himself to a more perfect exercise of the virtue of lowliness, whereof he was already a diligent practiser. He was eminent in watchfulness over the flock committed to his charge, joining thereto great tenderness and liberality towards the poor. He continued instant in prayer and watching. Thus was he so adorned with these and many other virtues, and even with the gift of prophecy, that the fame of his holy life was in the mouths of all men.

Sixth Lesson.

URBAN V., moved by the fame of his godly conversation, sent him as his Legate to quiet disturbances at Bologna. He endured much in the discharge of this duty, calming with great wisdom the angry passions of the citizens, who had broken out into civil war, and when peace was restored, he returned home. Shortly after, he received from the Blessed Virgin a warning of his approaching death, and being worn out with his unceasing toil, and the rigour of his voluntary mortifications, he passed to the kingdom of heaven, [upon the 6th day of January,] in the year of our Lord 1373, and the 71st of his own age. His name became illustrious for many and great miracles, and Urban VIII. enrolled him in the number of the Saints. His body resteth at Florence in the Church of his Order, and is looked on with great reverence by the citizens, to whom, even in these days, he hath more than once shown himself a protector.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, "A man travelling, &c.," with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

If it is in Lent the Ninth Lesson ("And so he that had received five talents, &c,") is either omitted or read as one with the Eighth, and the Ninth Lesson is of the Gospel of the Week-day, with the Commentary upon the same, being either the first of the three Lessons of the Week-day, or the whole three read as one. This rule is invariably to be observed when the Week-day has a proper Gospel.

Prayer throughout the day as at First Vespers, and at Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Week-day if it be in Lent, which rule is invariably to be observed.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 5th day of February, were born into the better life—

At Catania, in Sicily, [in the year 251,] the holy Virgin and martyr Agatha. In the time of the Emperor Decius, under the Judge Quinctian, she endured buffeting and imprisonment, racking and torments. Her breasts were cut off, and she was rolled upon potsherds and coals, and at last died in prison, in prayer to God.

[1] Perhaps to wear white for his first seven years, in honour of her purity. Such is not an uncommon vow in some Catholic countries.

In Pontus, are commemorated very many holy martyrs in the persecution under the Emperor Maximian, [fourth century.] Some had molten lead poured upon them, some were tortured by having sharp reeds thrust under their nails, and were tormented with many most grievous sufferings, which were renewed again and again, and so by their illustrious passion earned palms and crowns from the Lord.

At Alexandria, the holy martyr Isidore, who in the persecution under the Emperor Decius was beheaded by Numerian, chief of the army, for Christ's faith's sake.

In the empire of Japan, [in the year 1597,] twenty-six holy martyrs, [some Franciscans, some their pupils, and three Jesuits — killed at Naugazaki,] who were crucified, and then died gloriously, transfixed with spears, while they were praising God and proclaiming His Gospel, whose names were enrolled among those of the saints by the supreme Pontiff Pius IX.

At Vienne, [in Dauphiny,] the blessed Confessor Avitus, [in the year 525,] Bishop of that see, by whose faith, labour, and wonderful teaching Gaul was shielded against the Arian heresy.

At Brixen, holy Genuinus, [or Ingenuinus, in the year 640,] Bishop [of Siben, in the Tyrol,] and Albinus, [in the year 1015,] Bishop [of Brixen,] whose lives were rendered glorious by miracles.

Vespers are from the Chapter (inclusive) of the following.

FEBRUARY 5.

St Agatha, Virgin and Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Virgin and Martyr, (p. 641,) except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

These Vespers are of St Andrew Corsini, up to the Chapter exclusive, but if they should be all of St Agatha (as for instance, in her own Church,) the Antiphons are taken from Lauds, and the Psalms are as on Sundays, except the last, which is Ps. cxvi., "O praise the LORD, &c.," (p. 105.)

Chapter and Prayer from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The blessed Agatha stood in the midst of the prison, and stretched forth her hands, and prayed unto the Lord, saying: O Lord JESUS Christ, my Good Master, I thank Thee because Thou hast made me to overcome the cruelty of the executioners: and now, O Lord, may it please Thee that I should happily attain unto Thy glory, which fadeth not away.

A Commemoration is made of St Andrew Corsini. Prayer as at his First Vespers.

MATTINS.

Psalms as in the Common Office for one Martyr (p. 594.)

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. I am well born, and of a respectable family, as all my relations testify.

Second Antiphon. The best of my birth is, that I was born the slave of Christ.

Third Antiphon. I look like a slave, because I am one—the slave of Christ.

Lessons from Ecclus. li. 1, (p. 646.)

First Responsory.

While the blessed Agatha was being grievously tortured in the breasts, she said to the judge: Thou foul, cruel, and bloody tyrant, art thou not ashamed to do this to me, having thyself sucked at a mother's breast?

Verse. I have breasts within, which have been the Lord's from my childhood, and them thou canst not mangle.

Answer. Thou foul, cruel, and bloody tyrant, art thou not ashamed to do this to me, having thyself sucked at a mother's breast?

Second Responsory.

Agatha went to prison with great joy and exultation, like a guest to a banquet, and recommended her struggle to the Lord in prayer.

Verse. She, the daughter of a most noble race, rejoiced when a vile person haled her to prison.

Answer. She went like a guest to a banquet, and recommended her struggle to the Lord in prayer.

Third Responsory.

Who art thou, who comest to heal my wounds? I am an Apostle of Christ: have no fear of me, my daughter: He hath sent me to thee Whom thy soul and thy pure heart love.

Verse. For I am His Apostle, and I bid thee know that thou art healed in the Name of Him.

Answer. Whom thy soul and thy pure heart love.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Whom thy soul and thy pure heart love.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The holy Agatha said: Dost thou promise me beasts? When they hear Christ's name they grow tame.

Second Antiphon. If thou put the fire to me, Angels will bring me a saving dew from heaven.

Third Antiphon. Agatha went to prison with great joy and exultation, like a guest to a banquet, and recommended her struggle to the Lord in prayer.

Fourth Lesson.

THE Maiden Agatha was a Sicilian of noble birth. The citizens of Palermo and Catania dispute as to which city had the honour of being her birthplace. It was at Catania that, during the persecution under the Emperor Decius, she won the crown of a glorious martyrdom. She was equally celebrated for her beauty and her chastity, and Quintianus, Prætor of Sicily, conceived a passion for her. He tried every sort of device to overcome her modesty, and when he found it impossible to make her consent to his wishes, he caused her to be arrested on a charge of Christian superstition, and handed over to a woman named Aphrodisia to be corrupted. The company, however, of this woman had no effect in shaking her constancy in the Christian worship, nor her settled determination to preserve her purity. Aphrodisia therefore reported to Quintianus that she was only throwing away her pains on Agatha. He ordered her to be brought before him. "Thou," said he, "art the daughter of a noble family—dost thou feel no shame in living the degraded and slavish life of a Christian?" Agatha answered him, "The lowliness and bondage of a Christian are far nobler than the estate and pride of a king."

Fourth Responsory.

But by the Lord's help I will continue to acknowledge Him Who hath saved me, and strengthened me.

Verse. I thank Thee, O my Lord JESUS Christ, because Thou hast sent Thine Apostle unto me to heal my wounds.

Answer. And strengthened me.

Fifth Lesson.

THEN the Prætor, being incensed against her, gave her the alternative of either sacrificing to the gods, or being submitted to the torture; and as she remained firm in the faith, she was buffeted and sent back to prison. The next day she was brought forth, and, because her resolution was still unshaken, she was stretched on the rack and tortured with pieces of white-hot metal. Then her breasts were cut off. When Agatha received this injury she cried out to Quintianus, "Cruel tyrant, art thou not ashamed to do this to me, having thyself sucked at a mother's breast?" She was remanded again to prison and put in irons. That night an old man, who called himself an Apostle of Christ, came to her, and healed her wounds. The following day she was brought for the last time before the Prætor. Her constancy was unmoved, and she was rolled on sharp potsherds and live embers.

Fifth Responsory.

He hath cured me Who hath sent His Apostle Peter to the prison to strengthen me, after I was ordered to be put on the rack. Because of my chastity, help me, O Lord my God, for they are torturing my breasts.

Verse. He hath vouchsafed to heal me of all my wounds, and to put new paps on my breasts.

Answer. Because of my chastity, help me, O Lord my God, for they are torturing my breasts.

Sixth Lesson.

AT that time the whole city was shaken with a great earthquake, and two of the Prætor's dearest friends, Silvinus and Falconius, were killed by falling walls. The townspeople were in an uproar, and Quintianus, in fear of a riot, ordered Agatha, who was half dead, to be carried back to prison quietly. Then she made the following prayer: "O Lord, Who hast been my Keeper from my childhood, Who hast taken from me all love for this present world, Who hast strengthened me so that I am more than conqueror over the cruelty of the executioners, receive my spirit," and with these words she passed to heaven. She finished her testimony on the 5th day of February, [in the year of our Lord 251.] Her body was buried by the Christians.

Sixth Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast seen and known how I have fought, and how I have run in the race; but, because I would not obey the magistrates, they ordered me to be tortured in the breasts.

Verse. Because of truth, and meekness, and righteousness,

Answer. They ordered me to be tortured in the breasts.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. They ordered me to be tortured in the breasts.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Unless thou make the executioners to handle my body vigorously, my soul will not be able to enter into the Lord's paradise with the palm of martyrdom.

Second Antiphon. O Lord, Thou hast seen how I have fought, and how I have run in the race; but, because I would not obey the magistrates, they ordered me to be tortured in the breasts.

Third Antiphon. Because of my chastity they ordered me to be stretched upon the rack: help me, O Lord my God, for they are torturing my breasts.

Ps. xv. Preserve me, O Lord, &c., (p. 7.)

Lessons from Matth. xix. 3, with the Homily of St John Chrysostom, (p. 647.)

Seventh Responsory.

When the blessed Agatha came into the prison, she stretched forth her hands to God, and said: O Lord, Who hast made me to overcome the cruelty of the executioners, may it please Thee that I should attain unto Thy mercy.

Verse. O Lord, Who hast made me, Who hast taken from me all love for this present world, and Who hast saved my body from pollution,

Answer. May it please Thee that I should attain unto Thy mercy.

Eighth Responsory.

I have used no earthly medicine for my body, but I have for a Master, Christ JESUS, by Whose Word alone all things are made.

Verse. He hath vouchsafed to heal me of all my wounds, and to put new paps on my breasts, and upon Him will I call, even upon the Living God.

Answer. By Whose Word alone all things are made.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. By Whose Word alone all things are made.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Who art thou * who comest to heal my wounds? I am an Apostle of Christ: have no fear of me, my daughter.

Second Antiphon. I have used no earthly medicine * for my body, but I have for a Master Christ Jesus, by Whose Word alone all things were made.

Third Antiphon. O my Lord Jesus Christ, I thank Thee,* because Thou hast been mindful of me, and hast sent unto me Thine Apostle, to heal my wounds.

Fourth Antiphon. I bless Thee, O Father of my Lord Jesus Christ, because by Thine Apostle Thou hast put new paps on my breasts.

Fifth Antiphon. Upon Him Who hath vouchsafed* to heal me of all my wounds, and to put new paps on my breasts, upon Him will I call, even upon the Living God.

Chapter (Ecclus. li. 1) from the Common Office for an Holy Woman, Martyr but not Virgin, (p. 651.)

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. The heathen multitude made haste, and came to the grave of the virgin, and took therefrom her veil wherewith to stem the fire;[1] that the Lord might show Himself to be a Deliverer from the burning, for the sake of Agatha, His blessed Martyr.

Prayer. O God, Who amidst the wondrous, &c., (p. 645.)

At Prime, Terce, Sext, and None, the Antiphons are taken from Lauds; viz., at Prime the first, at Terce the second, at Sext the third, and at None the fifth. The rest is from the Common Office for an Holy Woman, Martyr but not Virgin, (p. 649,) and the Prayer at Terce, Sext, and None is—"O God, Who midst wondrous, &c.," as at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Titus, Archbishop of Gortyna, in Crete, of whom mention is made upon the 4th day of January.

Upon the same 6th day of February, were born into the better life—

At Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, the holy Virgin and martyr Dorothy, who under Sapricius, President of that province, was first racked, then long scourged with palm-branches, and at length put to death [in the year 304.] At the sight of her sufferings a certain student, named Theophilus, was converted to Christ, and forthwith grievously racked, and at length beheaded.

On the same day the holy martyrs Saturninus, Theophilus, and Revocata.

At Emessa, in Phœnicia, the holy Bishop Silvan, who, when he had been forty years in rule over that church, was cast to wild beasts along with two others, under the Emperor Maximian, and, torn to pieces, received the palm of martyrdom, [in the year 312.]

At [Clermont,] Auvergne, in Gaul, the holy martyr Antholian, [about the year 265.]

On the same day, [in the year 540,] holy Bishop Vedastus, and [in the year 684,] holy Bishop Amandus, the first of whom ruled over the Church of Arras, the second the Church of Maestricht, whose lives and deaths were rendered glorious by divers miracles.

At Bologna, [in the year 1159,] holy Guarinus, Cardinal Bishop of Palestrina, eminent for the holiness of his life.

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Psalms as on Sundays, except the last, which is Ps. cxlvii., "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem, &c.," (p. 114.)

From the Chapter, the Office is of St Titus, Bishop and Confessor. All from the Common, (p. 612.) The first verse of the Hymn is altered. Prayer, "O God, Who didst glorify, &c.," as below.

A Commemoration is made of St Agatha. Antiphon, "The blessed Agatha stood in the midst, &c.," (p. 740.) Then of the holy Virgin Martyr Dorothy. Antiphon, Verse and Answer from the Common Office, (p. 641,) and Prayer, "O Lord, we pray Thee, &c.," (p. 645.)

FEBRUARY 6.

St Titus, Archbishop [of Gortyna in Crete,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst glorify Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Titus with the graces of an Apostle, grant unto us for his sake and at his prayers, that we may so live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world, that hereafter we may worthily attain unto the Fatherland which is in heaven. Through our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Seasons, or, in Lent, from the Common Office.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE Apostle Paul had no sooner by his preaching gathered the Cretans to the Sacraments and doctrines of the Christian Faith, than he made Titus their Bishop. It is agreed that the holiness of Titus shone with so bright a light before the infant Church, that he earned fellowship with the disciples of the Teacher of the Gentiles. Being taken to share in the work of preaching, he so endeared himself to Paul by his faithfulness and zeal in declaring the Gospel, that the Apostle saith: "When I came to Troas to preach Christ's Gospel, and a door was opened unto me of the Lord, I had no rest in my spirit, because I found not Titus my brother: but taking my leave of them, I went from thence into Macedonia." (2 Cor. ii. 12, 13.) And again he saith: "When we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on every side; without were fightings, within were fears. Nevertheless, God, that comforteth those that are cast down, comforted us by the coming of Titus." (vii. 5, 6.)

---

[1] Viz., an eruption of Mount Etna. The same veil is still carried up the mountain on similar occasions for the same purpose.

Fifth Lesson.

IT was this affection of Paul toward Titus, which had induced him to send him to Corinth upon a Mission which mainly concerned the collection of alms from the charity of the faithful for the relief of the poor Hebrew Saints at Jerusalem. This mission Titus discharged with such wisdom and gentleness, that he not only strengthened the Corinthians in the faith, but also stirred up in them an earnest desire, a mourning, a fervent mind toward Paul, their earliest teacher. (vii. 7.) Many were the other journeys by land and sea which Titus undertook in order to sow the seed of God's word among men of divers nations, tongues, and countries. Filled with bold loyalty to the banner of the Cross, he went with Paul to the island of Crete. Of the Church of Crete the Apostle himself made him the first Bishop; and we may not doubt that, as such, he was what his Teacher bade him be, "in all things showing himself a pattern of good works, in doctrine, in uncorruptness, in gravity." (Tit. ii. 7.)

Sixth Lesson.

LIKE a candle, he gave forth the light of faith in the midst of men sitting in the darkness of idolatry and falsehood, as in the shadow of death. He is said to have sweated mightily to unfurl the banner of the Cross among the Dalmatians. He was full of days and good works, when, upon a 4th of January, in the 94th year of his age, he died one of those deaths which are precious in the sight of the Lord. He was buried in the Church of which the Apostle had made him the minister. His praises have been mostly written by St John Chrysostom and St Jerome. The 4th of January is the day upon which his name is read in the Roman Martyrology, but Pope Pius IX. assigned for his Festival, to be kept with an Office and Mass by the clergy secular and regular throughout the Catholic world, the first free day afterwards.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke x. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 593.) The last part is omitted, or read as one with the Eighth, to make room in Lent for the Homily of the week-day, and out of Lent.

Ninth Lesson. (For St Dorothy.)

THE maiden Dorothy, of Cæsarea in Cappadocia, was betrayed to Apricius the President by her two sisters, Chrysta and Callista, who had denied the faith, in the hope that he would induce her to do likewise. She was arrested, but it came not to pass as they hoped. On the contrary, she brought them back to the Christian worship, and they received martyrdom. She was long tormented upon the rack, and scourged with palm-branches, and in the end was beheaded, receiving the double palm of virginity and martyrdom.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Dorothy. All from the Common. Prayer, "O Lord, we pray Thee, &c.," (p. 645.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Abbat Romuald, [buried at Fabriano in Piceno, in the year 1027,] father of the monks of the Camaldolese Institute, of whom mention is made upon the 19th day of June.

Upon the same 7th day of February, were born into the better life—

In London, [in the fourth century,] the blessed Augulus, Bishop of that city, who ended his life by martyrdom, and so secured the everlasting prize.[1]

In Phrygia, the holy martyr Adaucus. He was an Italian of noble birth, and had been honoured by the emperors with dignities of almost every rank, and was still quæstor when he gained the crown of martyrdom in defence of the faith, [in the year 304, at Andandros, a town of Phrygia.]

Likewise many other holy martyrs, citizens of the same city, [including the Prefect of the Treasury, the Military Prefect, and the Senate,] who followed with Adaucus. They were all Christians and remained steadfast in the confession of the faith, and the Emperor Galerius Maximian caused them all to be burned with fire.

At Heraclea, the holy martyr Theodore. He was a trainer of the soldiery, and in the reign of the Emperor Licinius was beheaded after suffering many torments, and so passed away a conqueror to heaven, [in the year 319.]

In Egypt, holy Moses, the venerable Bishop of [the Saracens in Arabia.] He first lived as a hermit in the desert, but afterwards was made Bishop at the desire of Mauvia, Queen of the Saracens, converted many of that fierce people to the faith, and at length fell asleep in peace, glorious for worthy works.

At Lucca, in Tuscany, [in the year 722,] holy Richard, Prince of the West Saxons in England, and father of holy Winibald, Willibald, and Walburg.

At Bologna, [in the year 430,] the holy widow Juliana.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

FEBRUARY 7.

St Romuald, Abbat.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

Prayer. O Lord, we beseech Thee, &c., (p. 629.)

A Commemoration is made of St Titus. Prayer as in his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. If it be in Lent they are from the Common Office, viz. Ecclus. xxxi. 8, "Blessed is the man, &c.," and the two which follow, (p. 627.)

---

[1] The subject is obscure, and Alban Butler inclines to think that he was one of the victims of the Diocletian persecution; if so, he was a Roman or Romano-British bishop, and it is to be remarked that in the text London is called by its Roman name of Augusta.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE holy Abbat Romuald was the son of one Sergius, of a noble family of Ravenna. While he was still very young, he went to a neighbouring monastery at Classis to do penance. While he was there he heard a discourse by a monk, which stirred him up strongly to aim at godliness of living; and he had afterwards in the Church by night two visions in which the blessed servant of God Apollinaris foretold to him that he should become a monk himself. He accordingly did so; and soon afterwards betook himself to one Marinus, whose holy life and strict discipline were then much noised about in all the coasts of the Venetians, that he might by his teaching and guidance attain towards the hard and lofty point of perfection.

Fifth Lesson.

THE more he was assailed by the wiles of Satan and the unkindness of men, the more did he exercise himself in lowliness, with continual fasting and prayer, and rejoice in thinking of heavenly things, with abundance of tears. And all the while he bore so bright a face as gladdened all who looked on him. He was held in great honour by princes and kings, and his counsel moved many to leave the blandishments of the world and withdraw to the desert. He had such a burning desire to obtain the crown of martyrdom that he set out for Pannonia on purpose to seek it, but, falling into sickness whenever he went forward though growing strong again whenever he drew back, he behoved to return home.

Sixth Lesson.

GOD worked miracles by him both during his life and after his death, and likewise gave him the gift of prophecy. Like the Patriarch Jacob, he saw a ladder reaching from earth to heaven, and men in white garments ascending and descending upon it, in whom he marvellously knew were represented the monks of the Camaldolese Institute, of which he was the founder. At the age of 120 years, of which he had spent 100 in serving God in great hardness, he passed into His Presence, in the year of Salvation 1027. Five years after his death his body was found incorrupt, and laid in a magnificent grave in the Church of his order at Fabriano.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xix. 27, with the Homily of the Ven. Bede, (p. 629.)

Prayer throughout the day as at First Vespers.

The Second Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor John de la Mata, founder of the Order of the Most Holy Trinity for the Redemption of Captives, of whom mention is made upon the 17th day of December, upon the which day he fell asleep in the Lord, [in the year 1213.]

Upon the same 8th day of February, were born into the better life—

The holy Confessor Jerome Miani, founder of the Congregation of Somascha, whose name was enrolled among those of the saints by Clement XIII., and whose feast we keep upon the 20th day of July.

At Rome, the holy martyrs Paul, Lucius, and Cyriacus.

In the Lesser Armenia, the holy martyrs Denis, Æmilian, and Sebastian.

At Alexandria, under the Emperor Decius, the holy martyr Cointhe. The heathen took her and led her before the idols to make her worship them, and when she would not, they tied her feet with chains and dragged her through the streets of the city until she was mangled to death, [in the year 249.]

At Constantinople, the martyr monks of the monastery of Dirn, who were slain in defence of the Catholic faith, [in the year 485,] for that they brought the letter of holy Pope Felix against the [Patriarch] Acacius.

In Persia are commemorated those holy martyrs who were put to death in divers ways, [in the sixth century,] for the Christian faith's sake, under Cabades, King of Persia.

At Pavia, holy Juventius, Bishop of that see, who laboured earnestly in the Gospel, [in the second century.]

At Milan, [in the year 620,] the holy Confessor Honoratus, Bishop of that see.

At Verdun, in Gaul, [in the year 649,] holy Paul, Bishop of that see, famous for the glory of his miracles.

At Muret, in the country of Limoges, [in the year 1124,] the holy Abbat Stephen, founder of the Order of Grandmont, famous for his graces and miracles.

In the monastery of Vallombrosa, [in the year 1089,] blessed Peter, Cardinal-Bishop of Albano, of the congregation of Vallombrosa, of the Order of St Benedict. He was surnamed the Fireproof because he passed unhurt through fire.

FEBRUARY 8.

St John de la Mata, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

These Vespers are of St Romuald, up to the Chapter, exclusive.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who by a sign from heaven didst choose Thy holy servant John to be the founder of the Order of the Most Holy Trinity for the Ransom of Prisoners held in the power of the Saracens, mercifully grant unto us for his sake that we may be delivered by Thine Almighty power from all bonds and chains of sin whether in our bodies or in our souls. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, One God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Romuald. Prayer as at his First Vespers.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. In Lent, the same as yesterday.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JOHN de la Mata, the founder of the Order of the Most Holy Trinity for the Ransom of Prisoners, was born at Faucon, in Provence, [upon Midsummer's Day, in the year 1169,] and was the child of parents equally distinguished for their rank and their godly life. He went for his education first to Aix and then to Paris. At the University of Paris, where he went through the course of Divinity and took the degree of Doctor, he became eminent for learning and virtue. For this reason the Bishop of Paris ordained him Priest, an honour from which his lowliness caused him to shrink, in the hope that he should induce him to remain at Paris, and be a bright example of wisdom and manners to the students who resorted thither. He offered up the Holy Sacrifice to God for the first time in the private Chapel of the Bishop, and in the presence of that Prelate and divers other persons. In the midst of the ceremony, a vision from God appeared to John. There appeared to him an angel, clad in raiment white and glistering; having sewn on his breast a cross of red and blue. His arms were crossed before him, and his hands were upon the heads of two slaves, one a Christian and the other a Moor. And immediately the man of God was in the spirit, and knew that he was called to the work of ransoming bondsmen from the power of the unbelievers.

Fifth Lesson.

THAT he might set himself with due forethought to the carrying out of his work, he withdrew into a certain desert, and there, by the will of God, he found Felix de Valois, who had already spent many years in that place. With him he joined company, and they passed three years together in continual prayer, meditation, and all spiritual exercises. It came to pass, one day, when they were sitting on the bank of a spring, that there came to them a stag having between his horns a cross of red and blue. Felix cried out in wonder at that sight, and John then told him of the vision that had appeared to him when he was saying his first Mass. Thenceforth they gave themselves with redoubled fervour to prayer, and, being three times warned in sleep, they determined to go to Rome, and pray the Pope to institute an Order for the ransom of prisoners. They arrived at the time of the election of Innocent III., who received them courteously, and entertained in his mind their petition. While he was in consideration, he went to the Lateran Cathedral, on the second Feast of St Agnes, and there, while Mass was being solemnly sung, at the moment of the elevation of the Sacred Host, there appeared to him an angel, clad in raiment white and glistering, having sewn on his breast a cross of red and blue, and making as though he would free prisoners. Thereupon the Pope founded the Order, commanding that it should be called the Order of the Most Holy Trinity for the Ransom of prisoners, and that they who professed in it should be clad in white raiment, having sewn on their breasts a cross of red and blue.

Sixth Lesson.

THE Order being thus established, the holy Founders returned into France, and built their first Convent at Cerfroid, in the diocese of Meaux. Felix remained in charge of this house, and John went back to Rome with several companions. To them Innocent gave the house, Church, and hospital of St Thomas de Formis on the Cœlian Mount, with great endowments and property. Moreover he gave them a letter of introduction to Miramolin, King of Morocco, and they began with bright hopes the work of ransoming prisoners. John next betook himself to Spain, great part of which was then in the hands of the Saracens, and stirred up the hearts of the kings, princes, and all the faithful to have pity on slaves and the poor. He built Convents, founded Hospitals, and ransomed many bondsmen, to the great gain of souls. At last he returned to Rome, still busied in good works, but worn out by unceasing toil, and weakened by sickness. As he drew near the end of his earthly pilgrimage, his burning love for God and for his neighbour suffered no diminution. He called together his brethren, and earnestly exhorted them to go on with that work of ransom which had been pointed out to them from heaven, and then fell asleep in the Lord, on the 21st day of December, 1213. His body was buried with due honour in the Church of St Thomas de Formis.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Cyril, Pope of Alexandria, a most eminent champion of the Catholic faith, and illustrious for his teaching and holiness, of whom mention is made upon the 28th day of January, on the which day he fell asleep in peace.

Upon the same 9th day of February, were born into the better life—

At Alexandria, [in the year 249,] the holy Virgin Apollonia. The persecutors under the Emperor Decius first beat out all her teeth, then they built and kindled a funeral fire and threatened to burn her alive upon it unless she would join them in uttering sinful words. She thought a little while within herself, and then the fire of the Holy Ghost flaming up within her she tore herself suddenly out of the hands of those wicked men and leapt of her own accord into the fire which they had made ready, so that the very actors in this cruelty were awestruck to find a woman more ready to die than were they to kill her.

At Rome, the holy martyrs Alexander, and thirty-eight others who were crowned at the same time.

At Solis, in Cyprus, the holy martyrs Ammonius and Alexander.

At Antioch, [in the year 260,] the holy martyr Nicephorus, who received his crown by being beheaded, under the Emperor Valerian.

In Africa, in the castle of Lémêlé, the holy Deacons Primus and Donatus, who suffered martyrdom in defending the altar in the church against the Donatists, [sixth century.]

In the monastery of Fontanelle, holy Ausbert, Bishop of Rouen, [in the year 695.]

At Canosa, in Apulia, the holy Confessor Sabinus, Bishop of that see, [in the year 566.]

Vespers of the following from the Chapter inclusive.

At Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following: Antiphon, Verse and Answer, from the Common Office for a Virgin and Martyr, and Prayer, "O God, Who amidst the wondrous, &c.," (p. 645.)

FEBRUARY 9.

St Cyril, Pope of Alexandria, Confessor and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst make Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Cyril to be an unconquered teacher that the most blessed Virgin Mary is Mother of God, grant unto us that through his prayers we who believe her to be Mother of God in very deed may find safety under her motherly protection. Through the same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

First Vespers as regards St Cyril begin with the Chapter. Antiphon at Song of the Blessed Virgin, "O right excellent, &c." A Commemoration is made of St John de la Mata, Prayer from his Office, then in Lent of the Week-day; and lastly of the holy Virgin and martyr Apollonia. From the Common Office for a Virgin and Martyr, (p. 641,) and the Prayer, "O God, Who amidst the wondrous, &c.," (p. 645.)

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture, according to the Season. In Lent from Ecclus. xxxix., (p. 630.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE praises of Cyril of Alexandria have been celebrated not only by one writer or another, but have even been registered in the acts of the Œcumenical Councils of Ephesus and Chalcedon. He was born of distinguished parents, and was the nephew of Theophilus, Pope of Alexandria. While he was still young he displayed marks of his excellent understanding. After giving a deep study to letters and science he betook himself to John, Bishop of Jerusalem, to be perfected in the Christian faith. After his return to Alexandria, and the death of Theophilus, he was raised to that see. In this office he kept ever before his eyes the type of the Shepherd of souls as it had been laid down by the Apostle; and by ever adhering thereto deservedly earned the glory of an holy Bishop.

Fifth Lesson.

ZEAL for the salvation of souls was kindled in him, and he undertook all cares to keep in the faith and in soundness of life the flock unto him committed, and to preserve them from the poisonous pastures of infidelity and heresy; hence, in accordance with the laws, he caused the followers of Novatus to be expelled from the city, and those Jews to be punished who had been induced by rage to plan a massacre of the Christians. His eminent care for the preservation of the Catholic faith pure and undefiled shone forth especially in his controversy against Nestorius, Patriarch of Constantinople, who asserted that JESUS Christ had been born of the Virgin Mary as man only and not as God, and that the Godhead had been bestowed upon Him because of His merits. Cyril first attempted to convert Nestorius, but when he found this hopeless he denounced him to the Supreme Pontiff the holy Celestine.

Sixth Lesson.

AS delegate of Pope Celestine, Cyril presided at the Council of Ephesus where the Nestorian heresy was condemned; Nestorius deprived of his see; and the Catholic doctrine as to the unity of Person in Christ and the divine Motherhood of the glorious Virgin Mary was laid down amid the rejoicings of all the people, who escorted the bishops to their lodgings with a torch-light procession. For this reason Nestorius and his followers made Cyril the object of slanders, insults, and persecutions which he bore with profound patience, having all his care for the purity of the faith, and taking no heed to what the heretics might say or try against him. At length he died a holy death, in the year of salvation 444 and of his own papacy the 32nd. After vast work for the Church of God, and leaving behind him divers writings directed either against heathens and heretics or to the exposition of the holy Scriptures and of Catholic doctrine, the Supreme Pontiff Leo XIII. extended to the Universal Church the Office and Mass of this most eminent champion of the Catholic faith, and light of the Eastern Church.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lesson from Matth. v. 13, with the Homily of St Austin, (p. 631.) The last Lesson is omitted to make room in Lent for the Homily of the Week-day, or out of Lent for the

Ninth Lesson. (For St Apollonia, &c.)

APOLLONIA was an aged virgin of Alexandria, who, [in the year of salvation 249,] in the reign of the Emperor Decius, was brought before the idols to worship them, but refused, declaring that Christ JESUS is True God, and that to Him worship is due. The cruel executioners beat and pulled out all her teeth, and threatened to burn her alive if she would not deny Christ. To whom she answered, that for Christ JESUS' sake she was ready to die. Being taken to the place of execution she stood for a few moments as if in doubt, and then, the fire of the Holy Ghost burning up in her heart, she broke from those that held her, and leapt of her own accord into the flames.[1] Her body was quickly consumed, and her soul departed pure to obtain the eternal crown of martyrdom.

At Lauds in Lent a Commemoration is made of the Week-day; then in any case of St Apollonia, from the Common Office, with the Prayer, "O God, Who amidst the wondrous, &c.," (p. 645.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 10th day of February were born into the better life—

At Monte Cassino, [in the year 543,] the holy Virgin Scholastica, sister of the holy Abbat Benedict, who saw her soul leave her body and soar heavenward in a bodily shape, like a dove.

At Rome, the holy martyrs Zoticus, Irenæus, Hyacinth, and Amantius, [all in the year 304.]

At Rome likewise, [under Decius,] upon the Lavican Way, ten holy martyrs, all soldiers.

Also at Rome, [in the year 304,] upon the Appian Way, the holy Virgin and martyr Soteres, who, as holy Ambrose writeth, was born of a noble family, but for Christ's sake despised the consular and prefectural dignities of her race. When she was commanded to offer sacrifice and would not, she was long and heavily buffeted, and when she had overcome other punishments also, she was smitten with the sword and so departed joyfully hence, to be ever with Christ the Bridegroom.

In Campania, the holy Confessor Silvan, Bishop of [Terracine, in the fourth or fifth century.]

At Mala-Vallis, in the country of Sienna, [in the year 1157,] the holy hermit William.

At Rouen, [in the year 704,] the holy Virgin Austre-berta, famous for miracles.

Vespers are of the following from the Chapter inclusive.

FEBRUARY 10.

St Scholastica, Virgin.[2]

Double.

All from the Common Office for Virgins, (p. 641,) except what is otherwise given here.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who, to show the way of the undefiled, wast pleased that the soul of Thy blessed Virgin Scholastica should fly to heaven in a bodily shape, like a dove, mercifully grant unto us Thy servants, for her sake, and at her petition, worthily to attain unto Thine everlasting joy. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

In Lent a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture, according to the Season. In Lent from 1 Cor. vii. 25, (p. 642.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of the Dialogues of Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Ch. 33.)

THE worshipful Scholastica, the sister of our Father Benedict, was hallowed unto the Lord Almighty from a child. Her custom was to come to see her brother once every year. And when she came, the man of God went down unto her, not far from the gate, but, as it were, within the borders of his monastery. And there was a day when she came, as her custom was, and her worshipful brother went down to her, and his disciples with him. Then they passed the whole day together, praising God, and speaking one to the other of spiritual things. And when the night came, they brake bread together. And while they were yet at table, and conversed together on spiritual things, the hour was late. Then the holy woman his sister besought him, saying: "Leave me not, I pray thee, this night, but let us speak even until morning of the gladness of the eternal life." He answered her: "What is it that thou sayest, my sister? I can by no means remain out of my cell." Now the firmament was so clear that there were no clouds in the sky. Then the holy nun, when she had heard the words of her brother, that he would not abide with her, clasped her hands on the table, and laid her face on her hands, and besought the Lord Almighty. And it came to pass that when she lifted up her head from the table, there were great thunderings and lightnings, and a flood of rain, insomuch that neither the worshipful Benedict nor the brethren that were with him could move as much as a foot over the threshold of the place where they sat.

Fifth Lesson.

NOW when the holy woman laid her head in her hands upon the table, she wept bitterly, and as she wept, the clearness of the sky was turned to a tempest. As she prayed, immediately the flood followed. And the time was so, that she lifted up her head when it thundered, and when she had lifted up her head, the rain came. When the man of God saw that he could not return to his monastery, because of the lightnings, and thunderings, and the great rain, he was sorrowful and grieved, saying: "Almighty God forgive thee, my sister; what is this that thou hast done?" She answered him: "Behold, I besought thee, and thou wouldest not hear; I besought my God, and He hath heard me; if, therefore, thou wilt, go forth, leave me alone, and go thy way to thy monastery." But he could not, and so he tarried in the same place, not willingly, but of necessity. And so it came to pass that they slept not all that night, but fed one another with discourse on spiritual things.

Sixth Lesson.

AND when the morning was come, the worshipful woman arose, and went unto her own cell, and the man of God went back to his monastery. And, behold, after three days he was sitting in his cell, and he lifted up his eyes to heaven, and saw the soul of his sister, delivered from the body, fly to heaven in a bodily shape like a dove. Wherefore he rejoiced because of the glory that was revealed in her, and gave thanks to Almighty God in hymns and praises, and made known to the brethren that she was dead. He commanded them also to go and take up her body, and bring it to his monastery, and lay it in the grave which he had made ready for himself. Whereby it came to pass that they twain who had ever been of one mind in the Lord, even in death were not divided.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 644.)

In Lent the last is omitted to leave room for the Homily of the Week-day, of which also a Commemoration is made at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Gilbert, founder of the Order of Sempringham, of whom mention hath been made upon the 4th day of this present month of February.

Upon the same 11th day of February, were born into the better life—

In Africa, [in the year 304,] the holy martyrs the Priest Saturninus, Dativus, Felix, Ampelius, and their Companions, who were taken by the soldiers in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian when they came together in one, as the use is, to hold the Lord's Supper, and suffered under the proconsul Anolinus.

In Numidia are commemorated many holy martyrs who were arrested, [in the year 303 or 304,] in the persecution aforesaid, and for as much as they would not obey the edict of the Emperor to give up the Scriptures of God, they were put to grievous torments and slain.

At Adrianople, the holy martyrs Lucius, Bishop [of Adrianople,] and his Companions. He suffered much from the Arians under the Emperor Constantius, and finished his testimony in chains, [in the year 348.] The others were some of the nobler of the citizens who were condemned to death by Count Philagrius because they refused to receive the Arians who had been then condemned in the Council of Sardica.

At Lyons, [in the year 608,] the holy martyr Desiderius, Bishop of Vienne, [in Gaul.]

At Ravenna, [about the year 170,] the holy Confessor Calocerus, Bishop of that see.

At Milan, [in the year 449,] the holy Lazarus, Bishop of that see.

At Capua, [in the year 450,] holy Castrensis, Bishop of that see.

At the village of Landon, [in the year 507,] holy Severinus, Abbot of the monastery of St Maurice, at whose prayers the servant of God, King Clovis, was healed of a long malady.

In Egypt, [about the middle of the fourth century,] the holy monk Jonah, renowned for his graces.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following from the Common Office, (p. 619,) with the Prayer, "O Lord, mercifully hear, &c.," (p. 626.) Then in Lent of the Week-day.

FEBRUARY 11.

St Gilbert, Confessor.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following. Prayer throughout, "O Lord, mercifully hear, &c.," (p. 626.)

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. In Lent from Ecclus. xxxi. 8, (p. 627.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

GILBERT was born of a noble family at Sempringham, in Lincolnshire. In his youth he gave himself to the study of letters, but afterwards entirely to works of godliness, especially under a chaste discipline, and with great fruit, to the teaching of little boys and girls in the faith and in the fear and love of God. His father was patron of the parishes of Sempringham and Terington, and in the exercise of that right presented him to them. By the efficacy of his words and the power of his example, he so stirred up his parishioners to seek after Christian perfection, that many of them lived in the world the lives of monks, and their careful exercise of all virtues made it everywhere manifest to whose flock they belonged. After he was ordained priest by Alexander, Bishop of Lincoln, the light of Gilbert's holiness shed its rays wider and wider. He shrank from riches and honours, refused the Archdeaconry of the Church of Lincoln, and was fain to be a doorkeeper in the house of his Lord.

Fifth Lesson.

AMONG other works of charity, that which most chiefly occupied him was to separate virgins from the world and to consecrate them to the love of God, especially if they were poor and in danger; for these he built a dwelling hard by the church of Sempringham, and thus laid the first foundations of his order. Many persons of both sexes afterwards came to him, and under the approbation of blessed Eugene III. and of other Supreme Pontiffs he spread his order marvellously, and built monasteries throughout all England. To the men he gave the rule of St Austin, and to the women that of St Benedict, with the addition of some constitutions to meet their special vocation. The man of God endured many calumnies and persecutions, partly from his own, and partly from outsiders; but God gave him the victory, and he conquered everywhere and always. His whole order was in the greatest jeopardy in the reign of Henry II., when this holy man was accused of sending subsidies to holy Thomas of Canterbury while the said Thomas was in exile. The judges were willing to let him and his go free if only they would declare themselves not guilty, but the man of God was willing to suffer rather than describe as a crime a thing which he had indeed not done, but which to his thinking would have been rather a duty and a good work; but God softened the mind of the king, and Gilbert was delivered.

Sixth Lesson.

HE practised great self-control and hardness of living. He never ate meat unless he were seriously ill, and in Lent he abstained from fish also. He always wore haircloth. He never slept in a bed. He gave a great part of the night to prayer, and to meditation upon things of God. He never willingly either heard or said anything which did not tend to procure glory for God and salvation for souls. He was an hundred years of age when he was recalled from exile to our fatherland, which is in heaven, upon the 3rd day of February, in the year of salvation 1190. At that time the order which he had instituted counted seven hundred monks, and fifteen hundred sacred virgins in the different monasteries. Gilbert worked many wonders, both in his life and after his death, upon the due proof of which the Supreme Pontiff Innocent III. solemnly enrolled his name among those of the saints in the year 1202.

Lesson from Luke xii. 32, with the Homily of the Venerable Bede, (p. 628.) In Lent the Ninth Lesson is read with the Eighth to make room for the Homily of the Week-day, which is also commemorated at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep in England the feast of the holy Confessor Benedict Biscop, founder and Abbat of the monastery of Jarrow-upon-Tyne, of whom mention hath been made upon the 12th day of January.

Upon the same 12th day of February, were born into the better life—

At Barcelona, in Spain, the holy Virgin Eulalia, who received a glorious crown in the time of the Emperor Diocletian. She suffered racking, tearing with hooks, and scorching with fire, and was finally crucified, [in the year 304.]

In Africa, the holy soldier and martyr Damian.

At Carthage, the holy martyrs Modestus and Julian.

At Benevento, the holy martyr Modestus the Levite.

At Alexandria, the holy children Modestus and Ammonius.

At Constantinople, [in the year 381,] holy Meletius, Patriarch of Antioch, who passed away to be ever with the Lord, when he was in exile, which he oftentimes suffered for the Catholic faith's sake. Holy John Chrysostom and Gregory of Nyssa have greatly praised him.

At Constantinople, [in the year 895,] in the time of the Emperor Leo VI., holy Anthony, Bishop [of Constantinople.]

At Verona, the holy Confessor Gaudentius, Bishop of that see.

Vespers of the following.

FEBRUARY 12.

St Benedict Biscop, Abbat.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, by the gift of Whose grace the blessed Abbat Benedict, in order that he might be perfect, left all things. Grant unto all them which enter upon the path of Gospel perfection that they may neither look behind them nor stand still by the way, but may run on unto Thee without stumbling, and from Thee receive life eternal. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of the preceding.

All from the Common Office, (p. 627,) with the Prayer, "O Lord, mercifully hear, &c.," (p. 626,) and in Lent of the Week-day.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. In Lent from Wisdom iv. 7, (p. 621.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE surname of this Benedict was Biscop; he was of noble birth, and was a servant of Osway, King of the Northumbrians. When he was about twenty-five years of age he went to Rome, and visited the shrines of the blessed Apostles. After his return home he ceased not to preach, as well as to love and to honour the models of the ecclesiastical life. He returned again to Rome in the time of holy Pope Vitelian, and after some months left it again and went to the island of Lerius. There he received the tonsure and took the monastic vows, but after two years the love of the prince of the Apostles drew him again to visit the city which is hallowed by his grave. At that time the Roman Pontiff had chosen holy Theodore to be sent as Archbishop to rule the Church of Canterbury, and knowing Benedict to be wise, hard working, and devout, he ordained him and sent him with him.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN they came to Canterbury Theodore ascended the archiepiscopal throne, and Benedict received the government of the monastery of St Peter. After a while Hadrian was made Abbat, and in two years Benedict undertook another journey to Rome, and brought back books of theology which he had either bought or received as gifts. On his return home he betook himself to Egfrid, King of the Northumbrians, who made him an ample gift of ground at Wearmouth, and desired him there to build a monastery. After founding this monastery, Benedict obtained masons from Gaul to build him a stone church, and glass-workers such as had been until then unknown in England to glaze the windows. Some things which he could not obtain in Gaul he again went to Rome and brought back with him. Pope Agatho commanded John, precentor of the Church of St Peter, to go with him in order to teach singing after the Roman manner. Benedict carried with him countless gifts with which he had been enriched, a great number of books and images and relics of the Saints.

Sixth Lesson.

ON his return home Benedict, by another benefaction of the same King Egfrid, founded another monastery at Jarrow-upon-Tyne. This monastery was placed under the invocation of the holy Apostle Paul, and the monks were fain to have Benedict for Abbat. Not long afterwards he lost his health, and suffered for three years. During this time he oftentimes impressed upon the brethren who came to see him the necessity of keeping the rule which he had laid down. He commanded that the excellent and abundant library which he had brought from Rome as a needful equipment for his church should be carefully kept together and not permitted through carelessness to be either damaged or scattered. But what he repeated most often to the monks was that in electing an Abbat they should look less to birth than to soundness of life and teaching. He fell asleep in the Lord upon the 12th day of January in the year of Christ 690, and the 16th since the foundation of his monastery. He was buried in the church of the blessed Apostle Peter, that as he had loved him in life so he might not be parted from his altar in death. Benedict is mentioned in the Roman Martyrology upon the 12th day of January, being that of his death.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from the Common of Abbats, (p. 629,) with the Homily of St Jerome on Matt. xix. 27, (p. 588.) In Lent the last is omitted or read along with the Eighth to leave room for the Homily of the Week-day, which is also commemorated at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the Seven holy Founders of the Order of Servants of the Blessed Virgin Mary, who after great hardship of life, famous for works and wonders, died a death precious in the sight of the Lord, upon Monte Senario, in Tuscany. The same spirit of brotherhood had made them one in life, the veneration of the people had not divided them in death, and Leo XIII. enrolled their names together among those of the Saints.

Upon the same 13th day of February, were born into the better life—

At Antioch, the holy prophet Agabus, [first century,] of whom blessed Luke writeth in the Acts of the Apostles.

At Ravenna, the holy women the Virgin Fusca, and Maura[1] her foster-mother, who after suffering many things under the President Quinctian, by order of the Emperor Decius, were run through with the sword, and so finished their testimony, [third century.]

At Melitina, in Armenia, the holy martyr Polyeuctus, who suffered many things in the persecution under the Emperor Decius, and received the crown of martyrdom, [in the year 259.]

At Lyons, the holy martyr Julian.

At Todi, [under Diocletian,] the holy martyr Benignus.

At Rome, [in the year 731,] the holy Pope Gregory II.; who sharply withstood the ungodliness of the Emperor Leo the Isaurian, and who sent holy Boniface into Germany to preach the Gospel there.

At Angers, holy Lucinius, Bishop of that city, a man of reverend holiness.

At Lyons, [about the year 512,] the holy Confessor Stephen, Bishop of that see.

At Riete, [sixth century,] the holy Abbat Stephen, a man of wonderful patience, at whose passing away the presence of the holy angels, as is stated by blessed Pope Gregory, was visible.

At Prati, in Tuscany, Catharine de Ricci, a Virgin of Florence, of the Order of Preachers, illustrious in the number of her heavenly gifts, whom Pope Benedict XIV. added to the roll of Holy Virgins. She died full of graces and merit on the 2nd of February, but her Feast is celebrated to-day.

Vespers of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

FEBRUARY 13.

The Seven holy Founders of the Servite Order.

Double.

All from the Common Office of a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

LORD JESUS CHRIST, Who, that Thou mightest recall to mind the woes of Thy most holy Mother, didst through the Seven blessed Fathers make Thy Church herself the mother of a new household of her servants, Grant unto us in mercy that we may so share their tears as to share their blessedness also. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards the Seven Founders, begin with the Chapter (1 Peter iv. 13), "Dearly beloved brethren, rejoice, inasmuch as you are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when His glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy."

Hymn.[2]

WHEN war was raging, and the town
Was red with blood of brother bands,
Our Virgin Mother bowed her down
With bounteous hands.

Seven faithful sons she bid to share
Her dolours, all the shame and loss,
Which Jesus suffered and she bare
Beneath His Cross.

Soon as their Lady called, as nought
They deemed their palaces and wealth,
The mountains, desert places, sought
Far off, by stealth.

For others' sins the scourge they plied
As they the way of penance trod,
By prayers and tears they turned aside
The wrath of God.

Token of love the Mother's hand
Gave to her sons their garb of woe,
Sanctioned the pious work they planned
With wondrous show.

[1] These two names, which might be translated mulatta and negress, are so very singular as to inspire the conjecture that they are not proper names but descriptive epithets of two sufferers whose names have been lost.

[2] Translation by Mr C. Kegan Paul, extracted from the Hymnal of the Servite Church in London.

The vine to spread their honours wide
  Her shoots in winter greenly flung;
"See, those are Mary's servants," cried
  The infant tongue.

Now to the Father thanks and praise;
  To Thee, O Son, the same we send;
To Thee, O Spirit, through all days,
  World without end. Amen.

Verse. These were merciful men whose righteousness hath not been forgotten.

Answer. Their seed and their glory shall not be blotted out.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O Virgin Mary, thy praise shall not depart from the mouths of men which shall remember the power of the Lord for ever, because thou hast not spared thy life.

Commemoration of the preceding, from the Common, Prayer from his Office, and in Lent of the week-day.

MATTINS.

Hymn.[1]

THE Fathers lived a life in shade,
  Yet seemed to Peter's vision seven
White glistening lilies, for the Maid,
  The Queen of Heaven.

Through city street, o'er hills and plains,
  Upborne by Love Divine, they trod,
To fix in men the Mother's pains,
  The swords of God.

This was the power in which they spoke
  Till each wild passion owned their sway:
They cheered the sad, from sinners broke
  Their chains away.

Till at the last the Virgin Queen
  Led them to mansions in the sky,
Mansions where garlands aye are green,
  And never die.

May they hear cries of all who pray,
  And see how hard our earthly strife;
Aiding us onward to the day
  When all is life.

Now to the Father thanks and praise;
  To Thee, O Son, the same we send;
To Thee, Great Spirit, through all days,
  World without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. In Lent from Ecclus. xliv. 1, (p. 620.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

IN the thirteenth century, when the more cultured parts of Italy were rent by the dread dissension of the Emperor Frederick the Second and by bloody civil wars, the mercy of God set forth divers men eminent for holiness, and among others raised up seven nobles of Florence, who were bound one to another in charity and gave an illustrious example of brotherly love. Their names were Bonfiglio Monaldi, Bonajuncta Manetti, Manetto Antalli, Amadeo de' Amidei, Uguccio de' Ugguccioni, Sosteneo de' Sostenei, and Alexis de' Falconieri. Upon the holiday of the Assumption of the Virgin into heaven in the year 1233 they were praying in the oratory of a guild called the Guild of Praise, when the same Mother of God appeared to each one of them, and bade them embrace a life of greater holiness and perfection. These seven men discussed the matter with the Bishop of Florence, and then, considering neither the nobility of their birth nor their wealth, and clad in haircloth under vile and worn-out garments, withdrew into a little house in the country upon the 8th day of September, that they might begin their holier life upon the same day whereon the Mother of God herself had by her birth begun her life of holiness upon earth.

Fifth Lesson.

GOD showed by a miracle how acceptable in His sight should be their manner of life, for a short while after, when these seven men were begging alms from door to door through the city of Florence, it came to pass that some children, among whom was holy Philip Benizi, who had then scarcely entered the fifth month of his age, called them blessed Mary's servants, by the which name they were called ever after. To avoid meeting people, and in the desire to be alone, they all withdrew together to the solitude of Monte Senario, and there began a kind of heavenly life. They lived in caves and upon herbs and water only, while they wore out their bodies with watching and other hardships, while they contemplated unweariedly the sufferings of Christ and the woes of His most sorrowful Mother. One Good Friday, when their thoughts were fixed thereon more than ever, the Blessed Virgin appeared to them twice, and showed them her garments of mourning as those wherein they should clothe themselves. She bade them know that she would take it right well that they should raise up in the Church a new order to recall the memory of the sorrows which she bore beneath the Cross of the Lord. Holy Peter, the illustrious martyr of the Order of Friars Preachers, learnt this not only from his familiar converse with these holy men, but also from a special vision of the Mother of God, and it was on his incitement that they founded the regular Order called that of the Servites, or servants of the blessed Virgin, the which Order was afterward approved by the Supreme Pontiff Innocent IV. These holy men, when they had gathered to themselves some companions, began to go through the cities and towns of Italy, and especially of Tuscany, everywhere preaching Christ crucified, stilling contests among the citizens, and calling back almost countless backsliders into the path of grace. Neither did they make Italy only the field of their Gospel labours, but also France, Germany, and Poland. They passed away to be ever with the Lord when they had spread far and wide a sweet savour of Christ, and were famous also for the glory of signs and wonders. As one love of brotherhood and of the monastic life had joined them together upon earth, so one grave held their dead bodies, and one honour was paid them by the people. For this reason the Supreme Pontiffs Clement XI. and Benedict XIII. confirmed the honour which had for centuries been paid to them individually, and Leo XIII., after proof of their miracles which had been wrought by God on the common invocation of these saints, after their veneration had been sanctioned in the jubilee year of his priesthood, decreed to them the honours paid to Saints, and ordered that their memory should every year be kept throughout the universal Church with an office and Mass.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xix. 27, with the Homily of St Jerome, (p. 588.) In Lent the last is omitted to make room for the Homily of the Week-day. Lauds, Chapter from First Vespers.

Hymn.

BY Mary's inspiration led,
  A sevenfold offspring comes to light;
At Mary's call away they sped
  To Mount Senario's rugged height.

What fruits of grace the earth shall bear
  When they have sown their seed divine!
Christ's vine shall bud with clusters rare,
  Empurpled with the ruddy wine.

A holy death to heaven speeds
  The souls with virtue's glory crowned;
When Mary for her servants pleads,
  Heaven's blessed portals they have found.

O happy souls who now obtain
  The Kingdom, and the sceptre bear,
Look down on us who still remain
  Where Satan spreads his subtle snare.

Therefore on bended knee we pray,
  For sake of Mary's bitter grief;
Chase darkness from our mind away,
  And give our troubled hearts relief.

And Thou, O Trinity Divine!
  Confirm us in Thy Holy Grace!
That as we may our hearts incline
  To walk in these thy servants' ways. Amen.

Verse. May their memory be blessed.

Answer. And let their bones flourish again out of their place.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 14th day of February, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Flaminian Way, the blessed martyr Valentine, a Priest, who after much healing and teaching was cudgelled and beheaded under Claudius Cæsar, [in the year 268.]

Likewise at Rome, the holy martyrs Vitalis, Felicula, and Zeno.

At Teramo, [in Umbria, in the year 273,] the holy martyr Valentine, Bishop of that see. He was heavily flogged and committed to jail, but as he would not yield he was thrown out of the prison in the silence of midnight and beheaded by command of Placidus, Prefect of the city.

There likewise, [in the year 273,] the holy martyrs Proculus, Ephebus, and Apollonius, who were watching by the body of holy Valentine when they were apprehended by order of Leontius, the consular, and slain with the sword.

At Alexandria, the holy martyrs Bassus, Anthony, and Protolicus, who were drowned in the sea.

Likewise at Alexandria, the Priest Cyrion, Bassian the Reader, Agatho the Exorcist, and Moses, who were all burnt with fire and passed away to heaven.

Also likewise at Alexandria, the holy martyrs Denis and Ammonius, who were beheaded.

At Ravenna, the holy Confessor Eleuchadius, Bishop of that see.

In Bithynia, [in the year 470,] the holy Abbat Auxentius.

At Sorrento, the holy Abbat Antonino. He was in the monastery of Monte Cassino when it was destroyed by the Lombards, and he went thence to a solitude hard by the city of Sorrento, and there [in the year 830,] fell asleep in the Lord, famed for holiness. His body is daily remarkable for many miracles, most chiefly in the delivery of them that are vexed by evil spirits.

Chapter at Terce, as at First Vespers. Second Vespers the same as the First, except the Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin, Ecclus. xlvi. 15. Their name endureth for ever, enduring unto their sons, the glory of holy men.

In Lent a Commemoration is made of the Week-day, then in any case a Commemoration is made of the following from the Common Office, (p. 594,) with the Prayer from his Office.

FEBRUARY 14.

St Valentine, Priest and Martyr.

Simple.

In Lent this Office is not observed, but a Commemoration only is made of Vespers and Lauds without the last Lesson at Mattins.

All from the Common Office for Simple Feasts of One Martyr, (p. 601,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that we who keep the birthday of Thy blessed Martyr Valentine may be delivered by his prayers from all the ills that hang over us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

The First and Second Lessons are from Scripture according to the Season, the Third being omitted, or read as one with the Second. The Third Lesson is from the Sermons of St Austin, "The illustrious day, &c.," (p. 596.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 15th day of February, were born into the better life—

At Brescia, the holy martyrs Faustinus and Jovita, who under the Emperor Hadrian, after many glorious contendings for Christ's faith, received by martyrdom a crown of victory, [about the year 122.]

At Rome, the holy martyr Crato, [the Orator,] who was baptized by blessed Valentine, Bishop [of Terni, in Umbria,] along with his wife and his whole house; and no long while after, he and they together attained unto martyrdom, [in the year 273.]

At Terni, [in the year 270,] the holy Virgin and martyr Agapis.

Also the holy martyrs Saturninus, Castulus, Magnus, and Lucius.

At Vaison, in Gaul, holy Quinidius, Bishop of that see, whose death, [in the year 578,] how precious it was in the sight of the Lord miracles do oftentimes witness.

At Capua, [in the year 695,] the holy Confessor Decorosus, Bishop of that city.

In the province of Valeria, [in the sixth century,] the holy Priest Severus, of whom blessed Gregory writeth that by his tears he recalled a dead man to life.

At Antioch, the holy Deacon Joseph.

In Auvergne, [in the sixth century,] the holy Virgin Georgia.

FEBRUARY 15.

The Holy Martyrs, Faustinus and Jovita.

Simple.

In Lent this Office is not observed, but a Commemoration only is made at Vespers and Lauds without the last Lesson at Mattins.

All from the Common Office for Simple Feasts of Many Martyrs, (p. 611,) except what is otherwise given here.

Prayer throughout the Office. O God, Who year by year, &c., (p. 608.)

MATTINS.

The First and Second Lessons are from Scripture according to the Season, the Third being omitted, or read as one with the Second.

Second Responsory.

Theirs is a brotherhood indeed, &c., (p. 607.)

Third Lesson.

FAUSTINUS and Jovita were brothers, born of a noble family at Brescia. While Trajan's persecution was raging, they were taken about in chains from one city of Italy to another, and exhibited in torture in each. This cruelty utterly failed to silence their confession of Christ, Whom they preached by their sufferings in every place where they were shown. They were afterwards kept for a long time at Brescia, where they were exhibited with wild beasts, and tormented with fire. Being both still alive, they were brought to Milan, without their chains having ever been taken off. At Milan they were tortured again with every invention of cruelty that could be devised. Nevertheless the great power of their faith made them more than conquerors, shining even as gold tried in the furnace. From Milan they were brought to Rome, where they were confirmed by Pope Evaristus, and where they were put to the torture again with extreme barbarity. They were afterwards shown in public at Naples, where the tormentors displayed their skill in divers ways upon them. Here they were thrown chained into the sea, but the angels delivered them. Their stations of suffering, by their God-like patience, and the wonderful Power displayed in them, had now turned many souls to JESUS. In the end they were carried back to Brescia, and, when Hadrian took the empire, they were put to death by the axe at that place.[1] The crown of martyrdom which they won is glorious.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 16th day of February, were born into the better life—

Blessed Onesimus, of whom the holy Apostle Paul writeth unto Philemon; and whom also he ordained Bishop of Ephesus after holy Timothy, and committed unto him the preaching of the word. In the end he was brought to Rome in chains, and there stoned to death for Christ's faith's sake. His body was first buried there, but was thence taken to the place where he had been ordained bishop.

On the same day is commemorated at Camæ in Campania the translation of the holy Virgin and martyr Juliana. At Nicomedia, under the Emperor Maximian, she was cruelly beaten by her own father Africanus, then put to divers torments by the Prefect Evilasius, whom she refused to marry, and afterwards cast into prison, where she fought visibly with the devil: she overcame fire and boiling water, and at length finished her martyrdom by being beheaded, [in the year 299.]

On the same day, were also born into the better life—

In Egypt, the holy martyr Julian, and five thousand others, [in the year 309.]

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, the holy Egyptian martyrs Elijah, Jeremiah, Isaiah, Samuel, and Daniel. They went of their own accord to Cilicia to minister to the Confessors who had been condemned to penal servitude in the mines; when they were returning thence, they were apprehended, and most cruelly tortured by the President Firmilian under the Emperor Galerius Maximian, and in the end were beheaded, [in the year 309.]

After whom holy Porphyry, the servant of the martyr Pamphilus, and holy Seleucus the Cappadocian, who had oftentimes contended and always been conquerors, were put to the torture again, and [in the year 309] received their crowns—Porphyry by fire, and Seleucus by the sword.

At Arezzo, in Tuscany, [in the year 1276,] the blessed Pope Gregory X.; he was a man of Piacenza, and was raised to the Supreme Pontificate from the arch-deaconry [of Liége.] He held the Second Council of Lyons, received the Greeks into the unity of the faith, healed the dissensions of Christendom, set forward the recovery of the Holy Land, and governed the Church in holiness.

At Brescia, [in the year 350,] the holy Confessor Faustinus, Bishop of that see.

FEBRUARY 16.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 17th day of February, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyr Faustinus, and forty-four others, who followed him to his crown.

In Persia, [in the year 251,] holy Polychronius, Bishop of Babylon, who in the persecution of Decius had his mouth broken with stones, and then with his hands stretched out and his eyes lifted up to heaven, gave up the ghost.

At Concordia, [in the year 303,] the holy martyrs Donatus, Secundianus, and Romulus, together with eighty-six others, who were partakers in their crown.

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, [in the year 309,] holy Theodulus the Elder, of the household of the President Firmilian. He was stirred up by the example of the martyrs steadfastly to confess Christ, and being himself crucified gained by a noble victory the palm of martyrdom.

There also the holy martyr Julian the Cappadocian. He kissed the bodies of the slaughtered martyrs, and was therefore accused of Christianity, brought before the President, and burnt on a slow fire.

In the country of Tervan, holy Silvin, Bishop of Toulouse.

In Ireland, [in the middle of the sixth century,] the holy Priest and Confessor Fintan, [of the race of whom was Brigid; he was Abbat of Cluain-ed-nech in Leinster, and was called chief head of the monks of Ireland.]

[1] About A.D. 121.

At Florence, [at the end of the thirteenth century,] the blessed Confessor Alexis de' Falconieri, one of the seven founders of the Order of Servants of the blessed Virgin Mary. He died a blessed death in the hundred and tenth year of his life, strengthened by the presence of Christ Jesus and of the angels.

FEBRUARY 17.

Upon the 18th day of February, were born into the better life—

At Jerusalem, the blessed martyr Simeon, Bishop of that holy city [from the year 46 to the year 107.] This is he of whom it is recorded that he was the son of Cleophas and the kinsman of the Saviour according to the flesh. He was ordained Bishop of Jerusalem next after James, the brother of the Lord. In the persecution under Trajan he was put to many torments and suffered martyrdom, and the judge and all men marvelled to see with how great boldness and firmness he endured the grievous torment of the cross at his great age, for he was an hundred and twenty years old.

At Ostia, the holy brethren Maximus and Claudius, and Præperdigna, the wife of Claudius, and their two sons, Alexander and Cutias, all martyrs, [in the year 295.] They were a very noble race, and by command of the Emperor Diocletian they were arrested and sent into exile, then they were consumed with fire, and so offered a sacrifice of sweet savour unto God himself. Their relics were cast into the river, but the Christians sought for them and buried them hard by the city.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Lucius, Sylvan, Rutulus, Classicus, Secundinus, Fructulus, and Maximus.

At Constantinople, [in the year 449,] holy Flavian, Bishop of that see, who, because he defended the Catholic faith at Ephesus, was assailed by the followers of the wicked Dioscorus with cuffs and kicks, and sent into exile, where he died after three days.

At Toledo, [in the year 631,] the holy Confessor Helladius, Bishop of that see.

FEBRUARY 18.

St Simeon, Bishop [of Jerusalem,] Martyr.

Simple.

In Lent this Office is not observed, but a Commemoration only is made at Vespers and Lauds without the last Lesson at Mattins.

All from the Common Office for Simple Feasts of a Bishop and Martyr, (p. 601,) except what is otherwise given here.

Prayer throughout. Mercifully consider our weakness, &c., (p. 599.)

MATTINS.

The First and Second Lessons are from Scripture according to the Season, the Third being omitted, or read as one with the Second.

Third Lesson.

SIMEON, the son of Cleophas, (Matth. xiii. 55,) was [chosen] the second Bishop of Jerusalem, [in the year 62,] being the first after James. Under the Emperor Trajan he was accused before the Pro-Consul Atticus, as being both a Christian, and a relation of Christ, this being the time when all were arrested that were of the lineage of David. He underwent with great suffering the same things that were inflicted on our Saviour, and all men marvelled to see with how great boldness and firmness he endured the grievous torment of the cross, at his great age, for he was an hundred and twenty years old.[1]

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 19th day of February, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the year 296,] the holy martyr Gavin, a Priest who was the brother of the blessed Pope Caius, and who was long kept in prison and chains by the Emperor Diocletian, and gained the gladness of heaven through a death precious in the sight of the Lord.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Publius, Julian, Marcellus, and others.

In Palestine are commemorated the holy monks and other martyrs who [about the year 508] were cruelly slain for Christ's faith's sake by the Saracens under Al Mundar, their general.

At Jerusalem, [in the year 304,] holy Zambdas, [counted thirty-ninth] Bishop of that holy city.

At Soli, [in Cyprus, in the year 102,] holy Auxibius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Beneventum, [in the year 682,] holy Barbatus, Bishop of that see, famous for his holiness, who brought the Lombards and their leader to Christ.

At Milan, [about the year 700,] the holy Confessor Mansuetus, Bishop of that see.

FEBRUARY 19.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 20th day of February are commemorated the blessed martyrs of Tyre, in Phœnicia, whose number is known only to God. They were slain by Veturius, military instructor under the Emperor Diocletian, with a great number and variety of torments. They were first lacerated with stripes, then given to divers kinds of beasts; but as these, through the power of God, would not hurt them, they were savagely tortured anew with fire and iron and put to death. This glorious multitude were cheered on to victory by the Bishops Tyrannio, Silvan, Peleus, and Nilus, and the Priest Zenobius, who by a happy contention, along with them, gained the same palm of martyrdom together with them.

On the same 20th day of February, were also born into the better life—

In the island of Cyprus, the holy martyrs Pothamius and Nemesius.

At Constantinople, [in the year 490,] the holy martyr Eleutherius, [eighth] Patriarch of that city. [He had replaced Acacius, who favoured the Eutychians.]

In Persia, [in the year 342,] holy Sadoth, [Arch]bishop [of Seleucia and Ctesephon, in Persia, successor to St Simeon,] and an hundred and twenty-eight others who refused to worship the sun, under Sapor, King of the Persians, and by cruel deaths gained glorious crowns.

---

[1] A.D. 107 or 116.

At Catania, in Sicily, [in the eighth century,] holy Leo, Bishop of that see, who shone with graces and miracles.

On the same day, [in the year 738,] holy Eucherius, Bishop of Orleans, who shone with more miracles the more he was belied by his enemies.

At Tournay, in Gaul, [in the year 531,] the holy Confessor Eleutherius, Bishop of that see.

FEBRUARY 20.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 21st day of February, were born into the better life—

In Sicily, under the Emperor Diocletian, [fourth century,] seventy-nine holy martyrs, who through divers torments won the crown of their confession.

At Adrumetum, [Susa ?] in Africa, [in fourth century,] the holy martyrs Verulus, Secundinus, Syricius, Felix, Servulus, Saturninus, Fortunatus, and sixteen others, who were crowned with martyrdom for their confession of the Catholic faith in the persecution under the Vandals.

At Bethgan, [about 452,] the holy martyr Severian, Bishop of that see.

At Damascus, [in the year 743,] holy Peter Mavimeno. Some Arabs came to see him while he was ill, and to them he said, "Whoever does not embrace the Catholic Christian religion will be damned, as your false prophet Mohammed is," whereupon they killed him.

At Ravenna, [in the year 556,] the holy Confessor Maximian.

At Metz, [about the year 500,] holy Felix, Bishop of that see.

At Brescia, [in the seventh century,] holy Paterius, [twenty-third] Bishop of that see.

FEBRUARY 21.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the See of the holy Apostle Peter, wherein he first sat at Antioch. In the which city the disciples were first called Christians.

At Hierapolis, in Phrygia, holy Papias, Bishop of that city, who was the hearer of the holy elder John, and the companion of Polycarp.

At Salamis, in Cyprus, holy Aristion, who, as the said Papias doth testify, was one of the seventy-two disciples of Christ.

In Arabia are commemorated many holy martyrs who were cruelly slain under the Emperor Galerius Maximian.

At Alexandria, holy Abilius, Pope of that see, who was the second who held it after the blessed Evangelist Mark, and administered his office with an eminent manifestation of grace.

At Vienne, holy Paschasius, Bishop of that see, very famous for his learning and the holiness of his life.

At Cortona, in Tuscany, [in the year 1297,] holy Margaret, of the third order of St Francis, whose body hath marvellously remained incorrupt for more than four hundred years, breathing a sweet savour, and famous for many miracles, and is there deeply honoured.

Vespers are of the following.

FEBRUARY 22.

St Peter's See at Antioch.

Greater Double.

All the same as on the Feast of St Peter's Chair at Rome, (p. 709,) except what is otherwise given here.

MATTINS.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (15*th on the Saints.*)

THE solemn Feast of to-day received from our forefathers the name of that of St Peter's Chair at Antioch, because there is a tradition that it was on this day that Peter, first of the Apostles, was enthroned in a Bishop's Chair. Rightly, therefore, do the Churches observe the first day of that Chair, the right to which the Apostle received for the salvation of the Churches from the Lord of the Churches Himself, with the words: "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My Church."

Fifth Lesson.

IT was the Lord Himself Who called Peter the foundation of the Church, and therefore it is right that the Church should reverence this foundation whereon her mighty structure riseth. Justly is it written in the Psalm which we have just heard: "Let them exalt him in the congregation of the people, and praise him in the assembly of the elders." Blessed be God, Who hath commanded that the Blessed Apostle Peter should be exalted in the congregation! Worthy to be honoured by the Church is that foundation from which her goodly towers rise, pointing to heaven!

Sixth Lesson.

IN the honour which is this day paid to the inauguration of the first Bishop's throne, an honour is paid to the office of all Bishops. The Churches testify one to another, that, the greater the Church's dignity, the greater the reverence due to her priests. While I confess how rightly godly custom hath exalted this Feast in the estimation of all the Churches, the more do I wonder at the growth of that unhealthy error which at this day causeth some unbelievers to lay food and wine upon the graves of the dead,[1] as if souls once rid of the body had any longer any need of bodily refreshment.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xvi. 13.)

AT that time: JESUS came into the coasts of Cæsarea Philippi, and He asked His disciples, saying: Who do men say that I, the Son of Man, am? And so on.

Homily by Pope St Leo [the Great.] (3*rd on the Anniversary of his own election.*)

The Lord asked His disciples Who men said that He was, and their answers were human as long as they were the answers of human reason, unilluminated by Divine light. At last, when the glimmerings of earthly conjecture were spoken, he whose Apostleship is the first in dignity, was the first to confess his Lord. "And Simon Peter answered and said: Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And JESUS answered and said unto him: Blessed art thou, Simon Bårjona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father Which is in heaven." That is to say, "For this cause art thou blessed, because My Father Himself hath taught thee; the opinions of men have not beguiled thee, the voices of angels have not taught thee, not flesh and blood, but He, Whose Only-begotten Son I am, hath revealed Me unto thee."

---

[1] Perhaps alluding to some practice, in celebration of festivals, which had grown out of the agapæ or love-feasts, and had become an abuse.

Eighth Lesson.

THUS saith the Lord unto Simon Peter: "And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter." That is to say, "Even as My Father hath revealed unto thee concerning Me that I am God, even so now will I also reveal unto thee that thou art Peter; I am the sure Rock of defence, the Corner Stone, Who make both one, (Eph. ii. 20, 15,) I am the Foundation, beside Which other can no man lay, (1 Cor. iii. 11,) and thou also art a rock, in My Strength made hard, and those things whereof I by right am Lord, into thy hand do I give them, that thou mayst bear rule over them, for Me, and with Me." "And upon this rock I will build My Church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." "Upon this strength of thine, whereof I am the Strength, I will build My eternal temple, and upon the truth of thy confession of Me I will make to rise that My glorious Church whose spires shall pierce to heaven."

Ninth Lesson.

Note. If this Feast fall on a Saturday before Lent, or be transferred to a Monday, and it be not Leap Year, then the Ninth Lesson will be the Homily for St Matthias' Eve, of which a Commemoration will also be made at Lauds, after that of St Paul. If moreover this Feast fall in Lent, then the Ninth Lesson will be the Homily of the Week-day, of which also a Commemoration will be made at Lauds. In Lent no notice of St Matthias' Eve is taken in the Office.

AGAINST this confession the gates of hell shall never prevail, neither shall the bands of death take hold upon it. Thus saith He That is faithful and true. And as this confession hath power to lift up to heaven them that make it, so is it able to thrust down to hell them that gainsay it. Wherefore it is said unto the most blessed Peter: "And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven." This power passed indeed to the other Apostles also; this the Lord's will had effect in them; but it is not in vain that it is written that that was given to one which passed from him to all. To Peter alone were the keys given, and Peter is set as the pattern for all them that bear rule in the Church to follow. There remaineth therefore the right of Peter, wheresoever his judgment decreeth justice. Neither is there anything too hard, or too lax, where there is nothing bound and nothing loosed, save when Peter bindeth or looseth.

In Lent a Commemoration of the Week-day is made at First Vespers.

SECOND VESPERS.

A Commemoration is made of the following. Antiphon, "O right excellent Teacher, &c.," (p. 612,) Verse, "The Lord loved him, &c.," and Answer, (p. 612,) and the following Prayer.

GRANT unto us, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, so to profit by the teaching and example of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Peter, that like him we may lightly esteem the things which are seen and temporal, and finally attain unto those good things which are unseen and eternal. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the eve of the holy Apostle Matthias.

But in Leap year the above words must be omitted.

Upon the 23rd day of February, were born into the better life—

At Faenza, the holy Peter Damian, [988-1072,] Cardinal Bishop of Ostia, famous for his teaching and holiness, whom Pope Leo XII. declared to be a Doctor of the Universal Church.

At Sirmium, [in the year 307,] the blessed martyr Sirenus; a monk who was apprehended by order of the Emperor Maximian, and when he confessed himself to be a Christian was beheaded.

There likewise, seventy-two holy martyrs, who finished the combat of martyrdom in that city, and received kingdoms which fade not away, eternal in the heavens.

At Rome, [in the fourth century,] the holy Priest Polycarp, who, along with the blessed Sebastian, brought many to believe in Christ, and by his exhortations led them to the glory of martyrdom.

In the city of Astorga, [in the year 252,] the holy Virgin Martha, martyred under the Emperor Decius and the Proconsul Paternus.

At Constantinople, [about the year 860,] the holy monk Lazarus. Because he painted holy images, the Emperor Theophilus, the Iconoclast, put him to grievous tortures, and burnt his hands with a white-hot iron; but he was healed by the power of God, restored the painting upon the holy images that had been defaced, and at length fell asleep in peace.

At Brescia, [about 652,] holy Felix, Bishop of that see.

At Seville, in Spain, [in the year 485,] the holy Confessor Florence.

At Todi, [in 324,] the holy Virgin Romana, who was baptized by holy Pope Sylvester, led a heavenly life in dens and caves of the earth, and shone with the glory of miracles.

In England, [in the seventh century,] the holy Virgin Milburga, daughter of the king of the Mercians, [sister of St Mildred, and Abbess of Wenlock, Shropshire.]

FEBRUARY 23.

St Peter Damian, [Cardinal] Bishop [of Ostia,] Confessor and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except what is otherwise given here.

In Lent a Commemoration of the Week-day is made at First Vespers.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. In Lent from 1 Tim. iii. 1, (p. 612.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE holy Doctor Peter Damian was born of respectable parents at Ravenna, [about the year of our Lord 988.] While he was still a suckling, his mother, overcome with the care of many children, cast him out to perish, but one of the women servants saved him when he was nigh to death, and fed him until natural affection appeared again in his mother, to whom she then gave him back. After the death of both his parents he lived with a brother who treated him like the lowest slave, and in whose house he underwent a hard bondage. Even while he was in this condition he gave a wonderful proof of his faith toward God, and his dutiful love toward his father. It chanced that one day he found a considerable sum of money, but instead of using it to relieve his own poverty, he gave it all to a priest to offer God's sacrifice for the forgiveness of his father's sins. He had happily another brother called Damian, the same from whom he seemeth afterwards to have taken his surname. By him he was affectionately adopted, and put in the way of being educated. He made such progress in learning as astonished his teachers, and when he had won an eminent name in letters, he began to teach on his own accord with general applause. Meanwhile, lest his body should get the better of his mind, he constantly wore a hair-shirt under his softer clothes, and exercised himself in fasting, watching, and prayer. In the spring-time of his age he was grievously tormented by the stings of the flesh; and sometimes, when the rebellions of lust seemed about to get the mastery over him at night, he threw himself into a freezing stream to check them. After this he would go about visiting consecrated places, and repeat the whole book of Psalms. He was most careful in relieving the poor, on whom he would wait with his own hands.

Fifth Lesson.

DESIRING to attain to perfection of life he betook himself to the convent of Font-Avellano, in the diocese of Gubbio, in Umbria, a house founded by the blessed Ludolph, the disciple of St Romuald, for the monks of the Holy Cross. He dwelt there not long before he was sent by his Abbat, first to the Abbey of Pomposia, and, secondly, to that of St Vincent at Pietra Pertusa, both which brotherhoods he greatly profited by his godly exhortations, discreet rules, and grave manners. After his return home, and the death of his Superior, he was chosen to rule the brethren of Avellano. Here he founded divers new hermitages, and made the community so to flourish under his saintly direction, that he is esteemed the second Father and chief ornament of that Order. This healthful care of Peter was made a blessing to convents of other Rules than his own, to houses of Canons, and to the people. He was many ways profitable to the diocese of Urbino. He sat with Theuzo the Bishop of that See to judge of a most weighty matter, and led him by his counsel and assistance rightly to administer his Bishoprick. He was foremost in contemplation of the things of God, in severity toward his own body, and in other things whereby to set a bright example of godliness. In consideration of these things the Supreme Pontiff Stephen IX., [in the year 1057,] created him, in spite of his own unwillingness and objections, a Cardinal of the Holy Roman Church, and appointed him Bishop of Ostia. This dignity Peter bore with the highest reputation for piety, and adorned with works meet for a Bishop.

Sixth Lesson.

AT the most anxious times he greatly sustained the Church of Rome and the Supreme Pontiffs by his teaching, by missions which he discharged, and by divers other labours which he undertook on their behalf. He strove manfully even unto death against the heresies of the Nicolaïtans and the Simoniacs, by putting down which evils he reconciled the Church of Milan to that of Rome. He was one of the stoutest opponents of the false Popes Benedict and Cadalous. He deterred Henry IV., King of Germany, from his wicked scheme for putting away his wife. He recalled the people of Ravenna to their bounden duty to the Bishop of Rome, and restored them to the communion of the Church. He reformed the Canons of Velletri, and brought them to lead more godly lives. There were hardly any Cathedral Churches, especially in the province of Urbino, of which he did not deserve well. In Gubbio, of which he had at one time the management, he abolished many things unseemly. He brought about improvements in many and divers places, as if each were his special charge. [In 1062] he gave up his dignities of Cardinal and Bishop, but he allowed his love toward his neighbours to know no diminution. He was particularly zealous in spreading abroad four devout practices: 1st, To fast every Friday in honour of the Holy Cross of JESUS Christ; 2nd, To recite the Hours of the Blessed Mother of God, called also her Little Office; 3rd, To sanctify Saturday in her honour; and 4th, and especially, to scourge oneself in punishment for sin committed. At length he departed to be with Christ, at Faenza, on his way back from his mission to Ravenna, on the 22nd of February, [in the year 1072,] at the height of his reputation for holiness, learning, miracles, and good works. His body is buried in the house of the Cistercians at Faenza, where the people resort often to his grave with great reverence. The citizens of Faenza, to whom he hath been found good at need even to this day, have chosen him for their Patron in the presence of God. The supreme Pontiff Leo XII., finding that an Office and Mass in memory of him, as a Confessor and Bishop, was in use in some dioceses, and in the Camaldolese Order, by advice of the Sacred Congregation of Rites, added the title of Doctor, and extended the use of the said Office and Mass to the whole Church.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. v. 13, with the Homily of St Austin, (p. 631.)

Eighth Responsory.

In the midst, &c., (p. 625.)

If it be neither Lent nor Leap Year the Ninth Lesson will be the Homily for St Matthias' Eve. Then the Third Lesson of the Homily on Matth. v. 13 is omitted, or read as one with the Second, and the First Lesson only of the Homily of the Eve is read, or else the three as one. In Lent no notice is taken of St Matthias' Eve, and the Ninth Lesson is the Homily for the Week-day, either the first part or all three in one, and the Commemoration of the Week-day is made at Lauds.

Prayer thoughout the day as at the Commemoration the preceding evening.

In Leap Year St Matthias' Eve is kept on February 24.

In Lent it is omitted.

All from the Common Office for Apostles' Eves, (p. 575.)

In Leap Year the following is the

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the eve of the holy Apostle Matthias.

Upon the same 24th day of February, were born into the better life many holy martyrs and confessors and holy virgins.

But the following is the ordinary Martyrology which is read in Leap Year upon St Matthias' Eve.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 24th (or 25th) day of February, were born into the better life—

In Judea, the holy Apostle Matthias, who was chosen by the Apostles right after the Ascension of the Lord to take the place of the traitor Judas, and who suffered martyrdom for preaching the Gospel.

At Rome, the holy martyr Primitiva.

At Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, [in the year 304,] the holy martyr Sergius, whose acts are held most famous.

In Africa, [in the year 259,] the holy martyrs Montanus, Lucius, Julian, Victoricus, Flavian, and their Companions, who were disciples of holy Cyprian, and finished their testimony under the Emperor Valerian.

At Rouen, [in the year 588,] the holy martyr Pretextatus, Bishop of that see.

At Triere, [about the year 499,] the holy Confessor Modestus, Bishop of that see.

In England, [in the year 616,] holy Ethelbert, King of Kent, whom holy Augustin, first Archbishop of Canterbury, converted to the faith of Christ, and whose feast we keep upon the 26th (27th) day of this present month of February.

At Jerusalem is commemorated the first finding, [in the fourth century,] of the Head of the Lord's forerunner.

FEBRUARY 24, OR IN LEAP YEAR FEB. 25.

St Matthias, Apostle.

Double of the Second Class.

All from the Common Office for the Feasts of Apostles, (p. 583,) except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst choose Thy blessed servant Matthias to be of the number of the twelve Apostles, grant, we beseech Thee, that Thy Church, being upholden by his prayers, may ever feel about her the arms[1] of Thy most mighty protection. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

In Lent a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

If this be the evening of February 23rd, then a Commemoration is made of St Peter Damian. Antiphon, "O right excellent Teacher, &c.," (p. 612.) Verse, "The Lord guided, &c.," and Answer, (p. 617,) and the Prayer of St Peter Damian as throughout the day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Acts of the Apostles (i. 15.)

IN those days Peter stood up in the midst of the brethren, and said: (the number of the men together was about an hundred and twenty) Men and brethren, this Scripture must needs be fulfilled, which the Holy Ghost by the mouth of David spake before concerning Judas, which was guide to them that took JESUS: for he was numbered with us, and had obtained part of this ministry. Now this man purchased a field with the reward of iniquity; wherein also he hanged himself, and bursting asunder in the midst, all his bowels gushed out.

Second Lesson.

AND it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem, insomuch as that field is called in their proper tongue "Haceldama," that is to say, "The field of blood." For it is written in the book of Psalms: "Let his habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein, and his Bishoprick let another take." (cviii. 8.) Wherefore, of these men which have companied with us all the time that the Lord JESUS went in and out among us, beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that He was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be a witness with us of His resurrection.

Third Lesson.

AND they appointed two, Joseph called Barsabas, which was surnamed the Just, and Matthias. And they prayed, and said: Thou, Lord, Which knowest the hearts of all men, show whether of these two Thou hast chosen, that he may take part of this ministry and Apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place. And they gave forth their lots, and the lot fell upon Matthias, and he was numbered with the eleven Apostles.

---

[1] Literally, "about her the bowels of Thy mercy."

SECOND NOCTURN.

Lessons from St Austin's Exposition of Psalm lxxxvi. (p. 591.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xi. 25, with the Homily of St Austin, p. 629. In Lent the Third Lesson of St Austin's Homily is omitted or read as one with the Second, and the Ninth Lesson is the Homily on the Gospel for the Week-day.

In Lent a Commemoration is made of the Week-day at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 25th (26th) day of February, were born into the better life—

In Egypt, [in the third century,] under the Emperor Numerian, the holy martyrs Victorinus, Victor, Nicephorus, Claudian, Dioscorus, Serapion, and Papias. Victorinus and Victor steadfastly bore grievous tortures on account of their confession of the faith, and were beheaded. Nicephorus was laid upon a hot iron bed, and when he had overcome the fire was cut joint from joint. Claudian and Dioscorus were burnt. Serapion and Papias were slain with the sword.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Donatus, Justus, Herenas, and their Companions.

At Rome, [in the year 492,] the holy Pope Felix III., who was the great-grandfather of holy Gregory the Great, who saith of him that he appeared unto his holy niece Tharsilla, and called her unto the kingdom of heaven.

At Constantinople, [in the year 806,] holy Tharasius, Patriarch of that see, famous for his learning and godliness. There remaineth an epistle addressed unto him by Pope Adrian I. in defence of holy images.

At Nazianzum, [in 369,] holy Cæsarius, brother of blessed Gregory the Theologian, whom the said Gregory doth testify that he saw among the multitude of the blessed.

FEBRUARY 25 (26).

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep in England the feast of holy Ethelbert, King of Kent, whom holy Augustin, first Archbishop of Canterbury, converted to the faith of Christ, and of whom mention hath been made upon the 24th (25th) day of this present month of February.

Upon the same 26th (27th) day of February, were born into the better life—

At Perga, in Pamphylia, [in the year 251,] blessed Nestor, Bishop [of Magydensis.] During the persecution under Decius he was instant in prayer by day and by night that Christ's flock might be kept safe. When he was arrested he confessed the name of the Lord with wonderful freedom and readiness. By command of the President Pollio he was most cruelly racked, and as he steadfastly declared that he would alway cleave unto Christ, he was at last crucified, and from the cross passed to heaven a conqueror.

At Perga likewise, [in 251,] the holy martyrs Papias, Diodorus, Conon, and Claudian, who suffered before holy Nestor.

Also the holy martyrs Fortunatus, Felix, and twenty-seven others.

At Alexandria, [in the year 326,] the glorious Elder, holy Alexander, Pope of that see, wherein he succeeded blessed Peter. He it was who cast his priest Arius out of the church when he became perverted with wicked heresy, and reprobate from the truth of God, and he was afterward one of the three hundred and eighteen fathers who condemned him in the Council of Nice.

At Bologna, [in the fourth century,] the holy Bishop [of that see,] Faustinian, who by the preaching of the word of God strengthened and increased that Church when it had been troubled in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Gaza, in Palestine, [in the year 420,] holy Porphyry, Bishop of that see, who in the time of the Emperor Arcadius cast down the idol Marna and its temple, and after many sufferings fell asleep in the Lord.

At Florence, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Andrew, Bishop of that city, [who succeeded St Zenobius.]

In the country of Arctoi, [Vitre, in Champaign, in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Victor, [Victor of Plancy, Priest and Hermit,] whose praises have been written by holy Bernard.

Vespers of the following.

FEBRUARY 26 (27).

St Ethelbert, King of Kent, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who hast crowned the blessed King Ethelbert, Thy Confessor, with a crown of eternal glory, cause us, we beseech Thee, so to honour him upon earth that we may reign with him in heaven.

At First Vespers in Lent a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. In Lent from Ecclus., (p. 627.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ETHELBERT, King of Kent, was the most powerful of the princes in England, and exercised a suzerainty over them as far north as the Humber. He was born a heathen, but took to wife that most earnest Christian, Bertha, daughter of the King of the Franks. By her example and the example of the holy Lindhard, who was her chaplain, the King and many of his chief men were brought to admire the Christian life. When, therefore, there came Augustine with his companions sent by holy Gregory, and Ethelbert had heard the teaching and had seen the miracles of the servants of God, he believed and received the sacrament of the faith. After him many began to come together every day to hear the word of God, to give up their pagan rites, and to join in faith the holy Church of Christ. Their belief and conversion caused the King much joy, nevertheless he would not force any to make themselves Christians, but only embraced with a warmer love them that believed as being co-heirs with himself of the kingdom of heaven.

Fifth Lesson.

BORN again in baptism, Ethelbert, as a new man, gave himself wholly to the spreading of the faith in his own dominion, and among the princes who were subject unto him, but above all to make the kingdom of Christ come in all its fulness in his own soul. During the twenty years which he lived as a Christian he never wavered in that holy design. He passed most wise laws for the good of his people; he set up churches, and at the exhortation of holy Gregory he pulled down the temples of the idols; among others he founded the metropolitical Church of the Saviour at Canterbury, the monastery of SS. Peter and Paul hard by the city, the cathedral Church of St Paul in London, and the cathedral Church of St Andrew at Rochester, upon all which with a bounty truly royal he bestowed lands and possessions.

Sixth Lesson.

AT length the holy King, after gloriously holding an earthly kingdom for fifty-six years, and after having held the faith for twenty-one years, passed to the everlasting joys of a heavenly kingdom in the year of our Lord 616, upon the 24th day of the month of February, upon the which day mention is made of him in the Roman martyrology. He was buried in the porch of St Martin, within the Church of the blessed Apostles Peter and Paul, where also had been buried the Queen Bertha.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.) In Lent the last is read along with the Eighth in order to leave room for the Homily of the Week-day, of which a Commemoration is also made at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 27th (28th) day of February, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyrs Alexander, Abundius, Antigonus, and Fortunatus.

At Alexandria, [in the year 250,] the holy martyr Julian. He was so crippled by the gout that he could neither walk nor stand, and was carried before the judge in a chair by two servants. Of these two servants one denied the faith; the other, whose name was Eunus, persisted in confessing Christ along with Julian. They were both placed upon camels and led about the whole city, lashed, and at length publicly burnt upon a pyre.

There also the holy soldier Besas. He rebuked some who were jeering at the martyrs aforenamed, for which cause he was accused before the judge, and as he stood firm in the faith he was beheaded.

At Seville, in Spain, [in the year 596,] holy Leander, Bishop of that city, by whose preaching and labours, assisted by Reccared, King of the Visigoths, that nation were converted from the Arian misbelief to the Catholic faith.

At Constantinople, [in 750,] the holy Confessors Basil and Procopius, who in the time of the Emperor Leo the Isaurian, contended valiantly for the honouring of holy images.

At Lyons, [about the year 660,] holy Baldomer, [locksmith and subdeacon,] the man of God whose grave is famous on account of the miracles which are oftentimes wrought there.

FEBRUARY 27 (28).

MARTYROLOGY.

On the 28th (29th) day of February, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyrs Macarius, Rufinus, Justus, and Theophilus.

At Alexandria, the holy martyrs Cærealis, Pupulus, Caius, and Serapion.

Likewise at Alexandria are commemorated the holy Priests, Deacons, and many others who cheerfully met death in ministering to the sick in the great plague which devastated that city, [in the third century,] in the time of the Emperor Valerian, and whom the godly reverence of the faithful hath been used to honour as martyrs.

In the Jura mountains, toward Lyons, [in 460,] the holy Abbat [of Condat,] Romanus, who was the first to live there as a hermit, and becoming famous for many graces and miracles, became also the father of many monks. [Founder of monasteries in Switzerland.]

At Pavia is commemorated the translation of the body of holy Augustine, Bishop of Hippo, which was brought [in the year 722] from the island of Sardinia by the care of Luitprand, King of the Lombards.

FEBRUARY 28 (29).

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor David, Archbishop of Cærleon upon Usk.[1]

Upon the same 1st day of March, were also born into the better life—

At Rome, two hundred and sixty holy martyrs whom for Christ's name's sake the Emperor Claudius first condemned to dig sand outside the Salarian Gate, and then to be shot to death with arrows in the amphitheatre.

Likewise the holy martyrs Leo, Donatus, Abundantius, Nicephorus and nine others.

At Marseilles, [in the year 290,] the holy martyrs Hermes and Hadrian.

At Heliopolis, [in 114,] the holy martyr Eudocia [of Samaria, now Balbek in Turkey-in-Asia,] during the persecution under the Emperor Trajan. She was baptized by Theodotus, Bishop of [Heliopolis,] and, armed for the battle, the President Vincentius ordered her to be smitten with the sword, and thus she received the crown of martyrdom.

---

[1] This is a purely local addition. The name of St David does not occur in the Roman martyrology, nor in that of any religious order with which the writer is acquainted.

Upon the same day, the holy martyr Antonina. During the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian she laughed at the gods of the Gentiles, for the which cause she was diversly tortured, shut up in a barrel, and drowned in the marsh at the city of Cea.

At Werdt, [in the year 713,] holy Swibert, Bishop of that city, [Apostle of the Frisians,] who in the time of Pope Sergius preached the gospel to the Frieslanders, Hollanders, and other peoples of Lower Germany.

At Angers, [in the year 550,] the holy Confessor Albinus, Bishop of that see, a man of eminent graces and holiness.

At Mans, [in the year 687,] the holy Siviard, Abbat [of Saint Calais.]

At Perugia is commemorated the translation [in the year 547] of the holy martyr Herculanus, Bishop of that see, of whom mention is made upon the 7th day of November. He was beheaded by order of Totila, King of the Goths, and it is written by holy Pope Gregory that, forty days after his head was cut off, head and body were found united again, as though the iron had never touched him.

Vespers of the following, with in Lent a Commemoration of the Week-day.

FEASTS-DAYS IN MARCH.

On the day next before Lent on which Nine Lessons are not read, is said the Office of the Dead.

MARCH 1.

St David, Archbishop [of Caerleon,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that the fatherly prayers of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop David may help us, and that while we keep his solemn Feast, we may follow the example of his steadfastness in defending the Catholic Faith. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

In Lent, at First Vespers a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. In Lent from 1 Tim. iii. 1, (p. 612.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From his Life by Giraldus Cambrensis. Anglia Sacra, ii. 628.)

THIS David was born of a Princely race in Cardiganshire. After becoming a Priest he was moved by the desire of a more perfect life to betake himself to Paulinus, the disciple of St Germain, who dwelt in the Isle of Wight. Under this master he made great progress, and began, at his exhortation, to preach to the people of the neighbourhood. In progress of time he founded many monasteries, wherein his disciples, in quiet retreat from men, passed their days in working with their hands, reading, praying, and succouring the poor.

Fifth Lesson.

THE revival in Britain of the Pelagian heresy brought it about that a Council was got together in Cardiganshire, wherein David, for his zealous contending for the Catholic Faith, was unanimously chosen Archbishop of Wales, in the place of holy Dyfrug, who had resigned. The new Archbishop called together a second Council, in which all the decrees of the first were confirmed. From these decrees, approved by the authority of the Pope, all the Churches of Wales received their usage and rule.

Sixth Lesson.

IN those days the Church of God flourished exceedingly. Monasteries were set up in many places, and great multitudes of the faithful, of divers orders, were brought unto Christ, and unto all of them David was as a mirror and an ensample. Not by word alone but by his life also, he shone as a light to others; a great preacher, but a greater practiser. In an old age, and full of good works, he resigned his soul to God, upon a 1st day of March, about the year of salvation 544.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

In Lent the last Lesson is read along with the Eighth to make room for Homily of the Week-day, of which a Commemoration is also made at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 2nd day of March, were born into the better life—

In England, [about the year 672,] holy Chad, Bishop of the Mercians and of Lindisfarne, whose eminent graces are recorded by Bede. [His body was buried at Lichfield, first in the Church of Our Lady, second in the Church of St Peter, and thirdly in the Cathedral dedicated to Our Lady and St Chad. The town was named Lichfield on account of the number martyred and buried there under Maximian Hercules.]

At Rome, upon the Latin Way, [about the year 258,] under the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus, the holy martyrs Jovinus and Basileus.

Likewise at Rome, under the Emperor Alexander and the Prefect Ulpian, many holy martyrs, who were long tortured, and at length put to death.

At Porto, the holy martyrs Paul Heraclius, Secundilla, and Januaria.

At Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, the holy martyrs Lucius the Bishop, Absolom, Lorgius.

In Campania are commemorated eighty holy martyrs, who would not eat meat sacrificed unto idols, nor adore a she-goat's head, and therefore, [about the year 629,] were cruelly slain by the Lombards.

At Rome, [about the year 483,] the holy Confessor Pope Simplicius.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter, inclusive.

MARCH 2.

St Chad,[1] Bishop [of Lichfield,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout. (Taken from the Salisbury Missal.)

O ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, Who dost this day gladden us by the Feast of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Chad, we humbly beseech Thy mercy that we may be holpen toward life eternal by his fatherly prayers whom we do solemnly honour. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

First Vespers as regards St Chad begin with the Chapter.

A Commemoration is made of St David. Prayer from his Office, then in Lent of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. In Lent, I Tim. iii. I, (p. 612.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From the Venerable Bede, iii. 23, 28; ix. 2, 3.)

CHAD was Abbat of the monastery called Lestingay, [in the Wolds of Yorkshire.] He was a man holy and lowly, well read in the Scriptures, and a diligent practiser of that which he learnt therefrom. Wherefore Wini, Bishop of the West Saxons, at the desire of King Oswin, ordained him Bishop of York. Being so consecrated, he set himself to look to the orthodoxy and clean living of the clergy, to seek after lowliness, self-control, and learning, and to make a visitation of the towns, country, cottages, hamlets, and castles, to preach the Gospel therein, going always not on horseback, but on foot, after the fashion of the Apostles.

Fifth Lesson.

THEODORE, Archbishop of Canterbury, took Bishop Chad to task, as though he had not been rightly consecrated. To whom he answered: "If thou knowest that I have not rightly been made a Bishop, I willingly lay down mine office; neither did I ever deem myself fit to hold it, but when I was commanded, I took it, for obedience' sake." Theodore marvelled at his lowliness, and made him Bishop of the Mercians and of Lindisfarne, in the which office he strove to do his duty in great perfection of life, after the ensample of the old Fathers.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN the hour of his death drew near, he exhorted the brethren who stood by to keep love and peace with each other and with all the faithful, and never to relax from the strict observance of the monastic life. His sickness increasing, he made him ready to depart, by receiving the Body and Blood of the Lord, and on the seventh day his soul was set free from the toilsome prison of the body, and went away to be in gladness for ever. He died at his own See of Lichfield, upon the 2nd day of March, in the year 672.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619.)

In Lent, the last Lesson is read along with the Eighth to make room for Homily of the Week-day, of which a Commemoration is also made at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Ælred, Abbat of Rievaux, of the Cistercian[2] Order, famous for his knowledge of sacred letters, uprightness of life, self-content, wondrous long-suffering, spirit of prophecy, heavenly conversation, and great miracles, who departed this life upon the 12th day of January.

Upon the same 3rd day of March, were born into the better life—

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, in the persecution under the Emperor Valerian, the holy martyrs Marinus the soldier and Asterius the senator. Marinus was accused by his comrades of being a Christian, and when asked by the judge so declared with a loud voice, and was beheaded. Asterius took off his own garment, wrapt in it the headless body of the martyr, and took it upon his own shoulder, and for so doing himself received the honour of martyrdom.

In Spain, the holy martyrs Hemiterius, [or Madir,] and Chelidonius. They were stationed as soldiers in camp at Leon in Galicia, when the storm of persecution broke. On account of their confession of the Name of Christ they were taken to Calaxorra, where they were put to divers torments and crowned with martyrdom. [Their bodies rest in the Cathedral of Calahorra, of which they are the patrons.]

Upon the same day the holy martyrs Felix, Luciolus, Fortunatus, Marcia, and their Companions.

Likewise the holy soldiers Cleonicus, Eutropius, and Basiliscus, who won a happy triumph upon the cross under the President Asclepiades, in the persecution under the Emperor Maximian.

At Brescia, [in the year 526,] the holy Confessor Titian, Bishop of that see.

At Bamberg, holy Cunegunda, Empress of the Romans, bride of the Emperor Henry the First, with whose consent she remained always a Virgin. She fell asleep in peace, richly adorned with good works, and after her death was famous for miracles, [in the year 1040.]

At Second Vespers a Commemoration of the following, Prayer from his Office, and in Lent of the Week-day.

---

[1] Chad, or Cead, Saxon form of Gaelic Cad, or Cedd.

[2] The name of St Ælred does not occur in the Roman Martyrology, and the above is accordingly taken from the Martyrology of the Cistercians.

MARCH 3.

St Aelred, Abbat.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, Who as Thou never ceasest to chasten the children of Thy Church, so also dost never cease to help them, grant unto Thy faithful people, at the prayers of blessed Abbat Ælred, whom Thou didst give unto them to be a minister in the things of eternal Salvation, that through Thy mercy they should receive not only the knowledge of the right which they ought to do, but also the power to do it. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. In Lent from Wisd. iv. 7, (p. 621.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ÆLRED was born of the noblest blood of England and Scotland. From his earliest years he gave bright promise of his future holiness. While he lay in the cradle his face was seen surrounded with rays of light, and when he was a little child he knew things at a distance. He was trained up at the court of David I., King of Scots, along with the son of that king, and was a great favourite of the king himself. As his godliness and wisdom grew with his years he determined to bid farewell to the world. Before he received the Cistercian habit in the monastery of Reivaux, in the archdiocese of York, he instantaneously extinguished by a miracle a fire which had got enkindled in that house. As master of the novices he kept within the cloister, by another miracle, a clerk who had become shaken in his vocation.

Fifth Lesson.

HE was made Abbat first of Revesby, and afterwards of Reivaux, and showed himself a perfect example in that office. He gave himself up wholly to the contemplation of heavenly things, and to sacred reading, over which he oftentimes wept. No branch of knowledge escaped him, and in every form of writing he closely resembled Bernard, that teacher of honeyed-tongue. How he, like Bernard, received the anointing of the Holy Ghost as a teacher from heaven is attested by his published works. He refused dignities in the Church—including a bishoprick which was offered to him by David, King of Scots—in order that he might be the more free to give himself up to contemplation and preaching. He strove manfully on behalf of the true Pope, Alexander III., against the Anti-Pope and the pretended Council of Pavia. With insults he bore most patiently, and nothing lay closer to his heart than to foster peace among all men.

Sixth Lesson.

HE trained up at his monastery one hundred and forty monks and five hundred brethren. To them he was accustomed to say, My children, speak what ye will as long as there come not out of your mouth any base word, any evil against a brother, or any blasphemy against God. He worked many miracles during his life. He was ill for ten years before his death, and bore great suffering with wonderful patience. From his excessive leanness his bones were hardly covered with skin, but he set at naught the advice of the physicians and cared for no health except that of his soul. He foretold the day of his own death, in the year of salvation 1166, and of his own life the fifty-seventh. He was famous for miracles, and his name was enrolled among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lesson from the Common of Abbats, with the Homily of St Jerome on Matth. xix. 27, (p. 629.) In Lent the last is read as one with the Eighth to leave room for the Homily of the Week-day, of which also a Commemoration is made at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 4th day of March, were born into the better life—

At Wilna, in Lithuania, the blessed Casimir, [Duke of Lithuania,] son of Casimir III., King of Poland, whose name the Roman Pontiff, Leo X., numbered with those of the Saints, [in the year 1458-83.]

At Rome, upon the Appian Way, the holy martyr Pope Lucius. He was first banished in the persecution under the Emperor Valerian, but was afterwards permitted by the will of God to return to his church, and after toiling much against the Novatians, finished his testimony by being beheaded. He is highly praised by holy Cyprian.

Likewise at Rome, upon the Appian Way, nine hundred holy martyrs, [led by Aristion and Licinius, both Bishops,] who are laid in the cemetery called that of St Cecilia.

Upon the same day, the holy martyr Caius, [an officer of the Imperial Palace,] who was drowned in the sea, and twenty-seven others.

At Nicomedia, the holy martyr Hadrian, and twenty-three others, who, under the Emperor Diocletian, all had their legs broken, and were so left to die. The principal feast in memory of Hadrian is kept upon the 8th day of September, when his body was brought to Rome.

Likewise the holy martyrs Archelaus, Cyril, and Photius.

In the Crimea, the holy Bishops Basil, Eugenius, Agathodormus, Elpidius, Aetherius, Capito, Ephrem, Nestor, and Arcadius.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter, inclusive.

MARCH 4.

St Casimir, Confessor.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except what is otherwise given here.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, in the strength of Whose grace Thine holy servant Casimir did Thee leal and brave service amidst the softness of kings' palaces and the temptations of the world, grant that Thy people, being holpen by his intercession, may ever despise earthly things, and breathe after those that are heavenly. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

First Vespers as regards St Casimir begin with the Chapter.

A Commemoration is made of St Ælred. Prayer from his Office.

In Lent a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

Then of St Lucius, Pope and Martyr.[1] All from the Common Office for one Martyr, (p. 594.) Prayer, "O God, Who year by year, &c.," (p. 599.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. In Lent from Wisd. iv. 7 and v. 1, (p. 621.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Casimir was the son of Casimir III., King of Poland, by Elizabeth of Austria, his wife, [and was born upon the 5th day of October, in the year 1458.] From his childhood he was taught by the best masters, and was trained in all godliness and good learning. While he was still a boy he wore rough haircloth, and chastened himself with much fasting. He forsook the softness of his princely bed, and lay upon the hard ground, and on stormy nights he would go out secretly and prostrate himself before the doors of the churches, crying to God for mercy. He was unwearied in contemplating the Passion of Christ, and when he was present at Mass, so profound was his recollection, that he seemed to be altogether beside himself.

Fifth Lesson.

HE made the propagation of the Catholic faith one of the chief works of his life, and strove hard against the schism in Ruthenia. He persuaded his father to forbid by law that the schismatics should build any new churches, or repair the existing ones when they fell into decay. So great was his liberality and tenderness toward the needy and the afflicted, that he came to be called the father and guardian of the poor. From his infancy he never soiled his purity, and in his last illness, when his physicians advised him to seek for relief from his grievous sufferings by the sacrifice of his chastity, he cheerfully determined rather to die.

Sixth Lesson.

BEING made perfect in a short space, and full of piety and good works, he foretold the day of his own death, and, gathering round him a choir of priests and monks, he rendered his soul into the hands of God Whom they were praising, [upon the 4th day of March, in the year of our Lord 1482, and] the 25th of his own age. His body was carried to Wilna, where many miracles are reputed to have been wrought around it. At his grave a dead girl is said to have received her life again, blind men their sight, cripples the power of walking, and many sick folk health. Moreover, on an occasion when the Lithuanians in scanty numbers were exposed to the shock of a powerful enemy, they believed that he appeared in the air, and gave them the signal victory which they won. On the assurance of these things, Leo X. was moved to add his name to those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.) In Lent the Ninth Lesson is the Homily on the Gospel for the Week-day, in which case the Third Lesson on Luke xii. 35 is omitted or read as one with the Second, and the three Lessons for the Week-day read as one, or else the first only.

LAUDS.

A Commemoration is made of St Lucius. All from the Common Office for one Martyr, (p. 594.) Prayer, "O God, Who year by year, &c.," (p. 599.)

In Lent a Commemoration of the Week-day is made before that of St Lucius.

Prayer throughout the day as at First Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 5th day of March, were born into the better life—

At Antioch, [about the year 320,] the holy martyr Phocas. For the Redeemer's name's sake he gained the victory over many an assault of the old serpent, and that victory is still held forth before the people, with this miracle, that if any be bitten of a serpent and touch in faith the door of this martyr's church, he is forthwith healed of the poison.

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, [in the year 308,] the holy martyr Hadrian, who was crowned by command of the President Firmilian, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian. He was first thrown to a lion, but afterward slain with the sword.

On the same day, the holy martyr Eusebius, and nine others.

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, [in the year 200,] holy Theophilus, Bishop of that see, who was a great light for wisdom and good living in the time of the Emperor Severus.

Likewise in Palestine, on the bank of the Jordan, [in the year 475,] the holy hermit Gerasimus, who flourished in the time of the Emperor Zeno.

At Naples, [in the year 1734,] holy John Joseph of the Cross, barefooted Friar Minor, first Provincial of the Italian followers of holy Peter of Alcantara. He strove to tread in the footsteps of holy Francis of Assisi and Peter of Alcantara, was a bright ornament of the Seraphic Order, and was numbered among the saints by Pope Gregory XVI.

At Second Vespers in Lent a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

---

[1] The Martyrology says that "at Rome, on the Appian Way, was born into the higher life, the holy Martyr Pope Lucius. He was first banished in the persecution under Valerian, but was afterwards permitted by the will of God to return to his Church, and, after toiling much against the Novatians, finished his testimony by being beheaded. He is highly praised by St Cyprian." Succeeded Cornelius A.D. 252. Testified next year.

MARCH 5.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 6th day of March, were born into the better life—

At Nicomedia, the holy martyrs Victor and Victorinus, who were imprisoned for three years, and many ways tormented, along with Claudian and Bassa his wife, and being still recommitted to prison, died therein, [third century.]

At Tortona, the holy martyr Marcian, Bishop of that see, who was crowned under the Emperor Trajan, being slain for Christ's greater glory.

At Constantinople, holy Evagrius, who was elected Patriarch of that see by the Catholics in the time of the Emperor Valens, but was sent by the Emperor into exile, and there passed away to be ever with the Lord.

In Cyprus, the holy martyr Conon, who under the Emperor Decius had nails driven through his feet, and was then made to run in front of a chariot, under the which torment he fell upon his knees and gave up his soul in prayer to God.

Likewise, forty-two holy martyrs, who were apprehended in Amorium and brought to Syria, where they passed through a noble conflict and triumphantly grasped the palm of martyrdom, [in the year 845.]

At Bologna, holy Basil, Bishop of that city, who was ordained by holy Pope Sylvester, and both by his word and example governed in holiness the church committed unto his care, [fourth century.]

At Barcelona, in Spain, [in the year 1137,] blessed Oligarius, who was first Canon and afterward Bishop of Barcelona, and Archbishop of Taragona.

At Ghent, in Flanders, the holy Virgin Coletta, [in the year 1447,] who first professed in the Third Order of Friars Minors, and then being filled with the Holy Ghost, set up many monasteries of sisters of the Second Order under the primitive discipline. She was ennobled by the grace of God, and famous for countless miracles, and the Supreme Pontiff Pius VII. enrolled her name among those of the saints.

MARCH 6.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 7th day of March, were born into the better life—

In the monastery of Fossa Nuova, near Terracina, the holy Confessor Thomas of Aquino, [in the year 1274,] of the Order of Friars Preachers, Doctor of the Church, illustrious for the nobility of his birth, the holiness of his life, and the depth of his knowledge of theology. Leo XIII. declared him the patron in heaven of all Catholic schools.

At Tuburbe, in Morocco, under the Emperor Severus, the holy martyrs Perpetua and Felicitas. Felicitas was with child, and therefore was respited, in accordance with the law, until after she was delivered. Holy Augustine saith that when she was in travail she had sorrow, but when she was set before the wild beasts she rejoiced. There suffered along with them Revocatus, Saturninus, and Secundolus, of whom the last died in prison, but the others were all killed by beasts.

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, the holy martyr Eubulus. He was a Companion of holy Hadrian, and two days after him was mangled by the lions and then despatched with the sword, being the last of all those who received the crown of martyrdom in that city, [in the year 308.]

At Nicomedia, holy Theophilus, Bishop of that see, who for his honouring of holy images was sent into exile and there died, [in the year 845.]

At Pelusium, in Egypt, holy Paul, Bishop of that see, who likewise died in exile for the same cause.

At Brescia, [in the year 445,] the holy Confessor Gaudiosus, Bishop of that see.

In the Thebaid, [in the fourth century,] holy Paul, surnamed the Simple.

MARCH 7.

St Thomas of Aquino, Confessor and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O right excellent Teacher, &c., (p. 621.)

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who dost enlighten Thy Church by the wonderful learning of Thy blessed Confessor Thomas, and quickenest her through his godly labours, grant unto Thy people, we humbly beseech Thee, ever to apprehend by their understanding what he teacheth, and in their life faithfully to practise the same. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

In Lent a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

Then of the Martyrs Perpetua and Felicitas,[1] which is done whether it be Lent or not.

Antiphon. For their's is the kingdom of heaven, who loved not their life in this world, and have attained unto the reward of the kingdom, and have washed their robes in the Blood of the Lamb.

Verse. Thou hast crowned them with glory and honour, O Lord.

Answer. And madest them to have dominion over the works of Thy hands.

Prayer.

GRANT unto us, we beseech Thee, O Lord our God, that we may ever call to mind, with all worship and thanksgiving, the victory of Thy holy Martyrs Perpetua and Felicitas, and although we know that our mind cannot comprehend Thee Who art this day their exceeding great reward, give us always the grace humbly to worship Thee. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

---

[1] These two holy women, along with three men named Revocatus, Saturninus, and Secundolus, suffered in the amphitheatre at Carthage, with circumstances of great cruelty, in A.D. 203. See the article of Alban Butler, which is very interesting.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ecclus. xxxix. 1, (p. 630.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THAT splendid adornment of the Christian world and light of the Church, blessed Thomas of Aquino, was the son of Landulph, Earl of Aquino, and Theodora of Naples, his wife, being nobly descended on both sides. [He was born in the year of salvation 1226,] and even as an infant gave token of the love which he afterwards bore to the Mother of God. He found a little bit of paper upon which was written the Angelic Salutation, and held it firm in his hand in spite of the efforts of his wet-nurse; his mother took it away by force, but he cried and stretched out for it, and when she gave it back to him, he swallowed it. When he was only four years old, he was given into the keeping of the Benedictine monks of Monte Cassino. He was thence sent to Naples to study, and there, while very young, entered the Order of Friars Preachers. This displeased his mother and brothers, and he left Naples for Paris. When he was on his journey his brothers met him, and carried him off by force to the castle of Monte San Giovanni, where they imprisoned him in the keep. Here they used every means to break him of his intention, and at last brought a woman into his room to try to overcome his purity. The lad drove her out with a fire-brand. When he was alone he knelt down before the figure of the Cross, and there he fell asleep. As he slept, it seemed to him that angels came and girded his loins: and from this time he never felt the least sexual inclination. His sisters came to the castle to beseech him to give up his purpose of leaving the world, but he so worked on them by his godly exhortations, that both of them ever after set no value on earthly things, and busied themselves rather with heavenly.

Fifth Lesson.

BEING let down from a window, Thomas escaped out of the castle of Monte San Giovanni, and returned to Naples. Thence he went first to Rome, and then to Paris, in company of Brother John the German, then Master-General of the Friars Preachers. At Paris he studied Philosophy and Theology under Albert the Great Doctor. At the age of twenty-five years he took the degree of Master, and gave public disquisitions on the Philosophers and Theologians with great distinction. He never set himself to read or write till he had first prayed, and when he was about to take in hand a hard passage of the Holy Scriptures, he fasted also. Hence he was wont to say to Brother Reginald his comrade, that whatever he knew, he had learnt, not so much from his own labour and study, as from the inspiration of God. At Naples he was once kneeling in very earnest prayer before an image of Christ Crucified, when he heard a voice which said: "Thomas, thou hast written well of Me—what reward wilt thou that I give thee?" He answered: "Lord,—Thyself." He studied most carefully the works of the Fathers, and there was no kind of author in which he was not well read. His own writings are so wonderful, both because of their number, their variety, and the clearness of his explanations of hard things, that his rich and pure teaching, marvellously consonant with revealed truth, is an admirable antidote for the errors of all times.

Sixth Lesson.

THE Supreme Pontiff Urban IV. sent for him to Rome, and at his command he composed the Church Office for the feast of Corpus Christi. The Pope could not persuade him to accept any dignity. Pope Clement IV. also offered him the Archbishoprick of Naples, but he refused it. He did not neglect the preaching of the Word of God. Once while he was giving a course of sermons in the Basilica of St Peter, during the octave of Easter, a woman who had an issue of blood was healed by touching the hem of his garment. He was sent by blessed Gregory X. to the Council of Lyons, but fell sick on his way to the Abbey of Fossa Nuovo, and there during his illness he made an exposition of the Song of Songs. There he died on the 7th day of March, in the year of salvation 1274, aged fifty years. He was distinguished for miracles even after his death, and on proof of these Pope John XXII. added his name to those of the Saints in the year 1323. His body was afterwards carried to Toulouse by command of blessed Urban V. He has been compared to an angel, both on account of his innocency and of his intellectual power, and has hence been deservedly termed the Angelic Doctor. The use of which title as applied to him was approved by the authority of holy Pius V. Leo XIII. cheerfully agreeing to the prayers and wishes of nearly all the bishops of the Catholic world, and in conformity with a vote of the Congregation of Sacred Rites, by his Apostolic letters declared and recognised Thomas of Aquino as the patron in heaven of all Catholic schools, as an antidote to the plague of so many false systems, especially of philosophy, for the increase of scientific knowledge, and for the common good of all mankind.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. v. 13, with the Homily of St Austin, (p 631.) Eighth Responsory, "In the midst, &c." In Lent the Ninth Lesson is the Homily on the Gospel for the Week-day, in which case the Third Lesson of the Homily on Matth. v. 13 is omitted, or read as one with the Second, and the First Lesson only of the Week-day is used, or else all three as one.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of SS. Perpetua and Felicitas, the same as at the last Vespers, before which, in Lent, is made a Commemoration of the Week-day.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 8th day of March, were born into the better life—

In England, [in the year 646,] the holy Confessor Felix, Bishop of Dunwich, who converted the East Angles to the faith.

At Granada, in Spain, [in the year 1550,] holy John of God, founder of the Order of brethren Hospitallers of the Sick. Famous for his pity toward the poor, and for his lowly esteem of himself, whom the Supreme Pontiff Leo XIII. declared the patron in heaven of all the sick and those who nurse them, whose feast we keep upon the 11th day of this present month of March.

At Antinoe, in Egypt, the holy martyrs Philemon and Apolonius the Deacon. They were arrested, and brought before the judge, but as they steadfastly refused to sacrifice to idols their heels were bored through, and they were cruelly dragged about the city until at last they were dispatched with the sword.

There also the holy martyrs the President Arian, [governor of Thebes,] Theoticus, and three others whom the judge caused to be drowned in the sea, but their bodies were brought to the shore by dolphins, [in the year 287.]

At Nicomedia, the holy martyr Quinctilis, Bishop of that city.

At Carthage, holy Pontius, Deacon to blessed Bishop Cyprian, with whom he remained in exile even unto the day of his death, and hath left unto us an excellent book of his life and passion. In his own sufferings he glorified the Lord always, and hath earned the crown of life, [about the year 262.]

In Africa likewise, the holy Bishop Cyril, Rogatus, Felix, another Rogatus, Beata, Herenia, Felicitas, Urban, Silvan, and Mamillus.

At Toledo, in Spain, the blessed Confessor Julian, Bishop of that see, [and also native of the same place.] Very famous for his holiness and teaching, [in the year 690.]

Vespers of the following from the Chapter inclusive.

MARCH 8.

St Felix, Bishop [of Dunwich,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c."

The Vespers of March 7 are of St Thomas of Aquino till the Chapter, exclusive.

The Chapter and the rest are of St Felix, with a Commemoration of St Thomas. (Antiphon, "O right excellent, &c.")

And in Lent of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson (From Bede, xi. 15.)

ABOUT the year of Christ 631 came from Burgundy, where he had been born and ordained, to Honorius, Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop Felix, and, when he had shown him all his desire, he commissioned him to preach to the East Angles. And he was not disappointed of his hope. He delivered the whole of that land from their long-standing sin and sorrow, and taught them to believe rightly and to do rightly, and how to be happy for ever. He established his See in the town of Dunwich, and there, after ruling his Diocese for seventeen years, he brought his life to a peaceful end.

Fifth Lesson.

"It is idle, &c.," (p. 614,) to which may be added, "Whatsoever, therefore, &c."

Sixth Lesson.

"Whatsoever, therefore, &c.," or "It is very meet, &c."

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

In Lent the last is read along with the Eighth to make room for the Homily of the Week-day, of which also a Commemoration is made at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 9th day of March, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy widow Frances, famous for her nobleness of birth, the holiness of her life, and the grace of working miracles, [in the year 1440. Foundress of the Oblates.]

At Sebaste, in Armenia, the forty holy Cappadocian soldiers. Under the President Agricolaus, in the time of the Emperor Licinius, after undergoing bonds and a foul imprisonment, and after their faces had been bruised with stones, they were stripped naked, and exposed all night upon the surface of a frozen pool during the bitterest cold of winter, where their bodies perished by the frost, and at length by the breaking of their legs. The illustrious glory of them all hath been celebrated by holy Basil, and the other Fathers in their writings, the chief among them were named Cyrion and Candidus. We keep their feast upon the morrow after.

At Nyssa, holy Gregory [in the year 396,] Bishop of that see, brother of blessed Basil the Great. He is very famous for his life and learning; for defending the Catholic faith he was driven out of his own city by the Arian Emperor Valens.

At Barcelona, in Spain, holy Pacian, Bishop of that see, famous not only for his life but also for his words, who died in a good old age in the time of the Emperor Theodosius.

In Moravia, [in the ninth century,] the holy Cyril, Bishop [of Moravia,] and Methodius, Bishop [of Kief,] who brought to believe in Christ many of the peoples of those countries and their kings, [and whose feast we keep upon the 5th day of July.]

At Bologna, [in the year 1463,] the holy Virgin Katherine, of the Order of St Clare, famous for the holiness of her life, whose body is there reverenced with great honour.

Vespers are of St Frances, from the Chapter, inclusive, with a Commemoration of St Felix, and in Lent of the Week-day.

MARCH 9.

St Frances of Rome, Widow.

Double.

All from the Common Office for an Holy Woman who is neither Virgin nor Martyr, (p. 649,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst give unto Thy blessed hand-maid Frances many gifts of Thy heavenly grace, and, among them, to have an angel for her familiar friend; mercifully grant that we, being continually holpen through her prayers, may worthily attain unto the fellowship of angels hereafter. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of the preceding, (Prayer as at his First Vespers,) and if it be Lent of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. If it be Lent, from Prov. xxxi. 10, (p. 649.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE noble Roman matron Frances [was born in the year 1384, and] was a pattern of godliness from her earliest years. As a child she shrank from games, and set no store by the amusements of the world, but delighted to be continually alone and engaged in prayer. At the age of eleven years she desired to consecrate her virginity to God, and to enter a convent, but humbly yielded obedience to the wishes of her parents, and was married to Lawrence de' Pontiani, a young man whose rank was equal to his wealth. As a wife she persevered, as far as she lawfully could, in her determination to lead an austere life; she abstained as much as possible from going to shows, feasts, and such like amusements, dressed plainly in woollen stuffs, and spent in prayer or the service of her neighbour whatever time she did not occupy with her duties as mistress of her husband's house. She strove earnestly to wean the married women of Rome from the vanities of the world and the frivolities of dress. To this end she founded during her husband's lifetime the Sisterhood of the Oblates, under the rule of the Benedictine congregation called "of the Mount of Olives." When it pleased God, [in the year 1413,] that her husband should be banished, all her goods taken away, and her home ruined, she meekly bowed down before His holy will, often repeating the words of the blessed Job: "The LORD gave, and the LORD hath taken away; blessed be the name of the LORD." (i. 21.)

Fifth Lesson.

ON her husband's death she [in 1437] betook herself immediately to the house of the Oblates, and, with her feet bare and a rope round her neck, threw herself down on the threshold, entreating the sisters with tears to receive her into their number. When she obtained her wish, although she was the mother of them all, she would be among them only as one that served, glorying rather to be called the most degraded of women and a vessel of uncleanness. Her lowly esteem of herself was shown both by her word and example. She passed often through the city from a vineyard in the country carrying a bundle of sticks on her head, or driving an ass laden with faggots; she succoured the needy, for whom she collected large alms, and visited the sick in the hospitals, ministering to them both food for the body and exhortations healthful for their souls. She strove continually to bring her body into subjection by watchings, fastings, haircloth, the wearing of an iron girdle, and the often use of a scourge. She never ate but once a day, and then only vegetables, and she took no drink but water. These severities she however sometimes relaxed, in obedience to her confessor, on whose word and wishes she framed her customs.

Sixth Lesson.

SO great was her mental realisation of the things of God, and chiefly of the sufferings of the Lord Christ, and so abundant her tears in contemplating them, that she seemed sometimes about to sink under her grief. Often when she was engaged in prayer, and principally after she had received the Most Holy Sacrament of the Eucharist, her spirit became altogether lifted up to God, and she remained motionless, carried away by the thought of heavenly things. The enemy of man assailed her with divers reproaches and buffetings to break her off her intent, but she feared him not, and with the help of an Angel whom God gave her to be her familiar friend, she won a noble victory over the tempter. God glorified her with the gifts of healing and of prophecy, whereby she foretold things to come, and saw the secrets of the hearts of men. More than once while her thoughts were busy in God she remained unwet by streams or rain. When there was left only bread enough for three sisters, the Lord at her prayers was pleased so to multiply it, that fifteen had enough, and the basket was filled again with the fragments. In the month of January also, when the sisters were gathering sticks in the country, and were thirsty, she satisfied them abundantly with bunches of fresh grapes from a tree. She departed to be with the Lord, famous for good works and miracles, in the fifty-sixth year of her age, [upon the 9th day of March, in the year of our Lord 1440.] The Supreme Pontiff Paul V. caused her to be numbered among the saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xiii. 44, with the Homily of Pope St Gregory, (p. 651.) In Lent the Ninth Lesson is the Homily on the Gospel for the Week-day, in which case the Third Lesson of the Homily on Matth. xii. 44 is omitted, or read as one with the Second, and the First Lesson only of the Week-day is read, or else all three as one.

In Lent a Commemoration of the Week-day is made at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the forty holy martyrs who suffered at Sebaste, in Armenia.

Upon the same 10th day of March, were born into a better life—

At Apamea, in Phrygia, the holy martyrs Caius and Alexander, who were crowned with a glorious martyrdom in the persecution under the Emperors Marcus Antoninus and Lucius Verus, as is written by Apolinaris, Bishop of Hierapolis, in his book against the heretics called Cataphrygians.

In Persia, forty-two holy martyrs, [about the year 375.]

At Corinth, the holy martyrs Codratus, Denis, Cyprian, Anectus, Paul, and Crescens, who were slain with the sword under the President Jason, in the persecution under the Emperors Decius and Valerian.

In Africa, the holy martyr Victor, on whose feast day holy Augustine addressed a discourse to the people.

At Jerusalem, the holy Confessor Macarius, Patriarch of that see, at whose exhortation Constantine and Helen cleansed the holy places, and adorned them with hallowed churches, [about the year 334. There is a letter to him from Constantine preserved by Socrates.]

At Paris, [in the year 580,] holy Drostovæus, Abbat [of the monastery of St German de Prés,] the disciple of blessed German, Bishop [of Paris.]

In the monastery of Bobbio, holy Attala, Abbat [of that monastery], famous for miracles, [in the year 627].

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following; Antiphon and Verse and Answer from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 603,) and the following.

Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that we who know Thy glorious Martyrs to have been in their testimony leal and true towards Thee, may, now that they are with Thee, feel them to be in their petitions pitiful towards us.

Then the Week-day is commemorated.

MARCH 10.

The Forty Holy Martyrs at Sebaste.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 602,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons (in Lent) from Rom. viii. 12, (p. 603.) If, out of Lent, according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

WHILE Licinius was Emperor and Agricolaus President, [in the year of our Lord 320,] forty soldiers at Sebaste, a city of Armenia, gave a singular instance of faith in JESUS Christ, and bravery under suffering. After being often remanded to an horrid prison-house, bound in fetters, and their mouths bruised with stones, they were ordered out in the depth of winter, stripped naked, and put upon a frozen pool, to die of cold during the night. The prayer of them all was the same: "O Lord, forty of us have begun to run in the race, grant that all forty may receive the crown, let not one be wanting at the last. Behold, is it not an honourable number in Thy sight, Who didst bless the fast of forty days, and at the end Thy Divine Law came forth to the earth? When also Elias sought Thee, Thou, O God, didst reveal Thyself unto him when he had fasted for forty days." Even so was their petition.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN the keepers were all asleep and the watchman only was awake, he heard them praying and saw a light shining round about them, and Angels coming down from heaven, as the messengers of the King, bearing nine-and-thirty crowns, and distributing them to the soldiers. Then he said within himself: "Are not forty here? Where is the crown of the fortieth?" And as he looked he saw one of them whose courage could not bear the cold, come and leap into a warm bath that stood by; and the Saints were grievously afflicted. Nevertheless God suffered not that their prayer should return unto them void; for the watchman wondered, and called the keepers, and stripped himself of his clothes; and, when with a loud voice he had confessed himself a Christian, he joined the Martyrs. When the servants of the President knew that the watchman also was a Christian, they brake the legs of them all with staves.

Sixth Lesson.

UNDER this torment died they all, saving Melithon, who was the youngest. Now, his mother stood by, and when she saw that his legs were broken, but that he was yet alive, she cried, and said: "My son, have patience but a little longer. Behold how Christ standeth at the door to help thee." When she saw the bodies of all the others put upon carts and taken away to be burned, and that her son was left behind, because the multitude wickedly hoped that being but a lad, if he lived, he might yet be drawn to commit idolatry, the holy mother took him on her own shoulders and bravely followed behind the carts laden with the bodies of the Martyrs. In her arms Melithon gave up his soul to God, and the mother who loved him so well laid his body with her own hands upon the pile, with those of the other Martyrs, that, as they had all been one in faith and strength, in death they might not be divided, and might enter heaven together. After the burning, what remained of them was thrown into a running stream, but the ashes were all washed together into one place, and being found and rescued, they were laid in an honourable sepulchre.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke vi. 17, with the Homily of St Ambrose, (p. 609.) The Ninth Lesson is the Homily on the Gospel for the Week-day, and the Third Lesson of the Homily on Luke vi. 17 is omitted or read as one with the Second, and the First Lesson only of the Week-day is read, or else all three as one.

Prayer throughout the day as at the Commemoration last evening.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor John of God, founder of the Order of Brethren Hospitallers of the Sick. Famous for his pity toward the poor, and for his lowly esteem of himself, whom the Supreme Pontiff Leo XIII. declared the Patron in heaven of all the sick and those who nurse them, and of whom mention hath been made upon the 8th day of this present month of March.

Upon the same 11th day of March, were born into the better life—

At Carthage, the holy martyrs Heraclius and Zosimus.

At Alexandria, the holy martyrs Candidus, Piperion, and twenty others.

At Laodicea, in Syria, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, the holy martyrs Trophimus and Thalus, who after many cruel torments gained crowns of glory.

At Antioch, are commemorated many holy martyrs, of whom some were laid upon beds of red-hot iron by command of the Emperor Maximian, not until they died, but until their flesh was cooked, so as to ensure their prolonged suffering; and others were put to other most cruel torments, before they received the crown of martyrdom.

Likewise the holy martyrs Gorgonius and Firmus.

At Cordova, the holy Priest Eulogius, who deserved a place among the martyrs of the said city, in the persecution under the Saracens, by striving by his writings to rival their contendings for the faith, [in the year 859.]

At Sardis, holy Euthymius, Bishop of that see, who for his honouring of holy images was banished by the Iconoclast Emperor Michael, and martyred under Theophilus.

At Jerusalem, holy Sophronius, Bishop of that see, [about the year 638.]

At Milan, holy Benedict, Bishop of that see, [about the year 725.]

In the neighbourhood of Amiens, the holy Abbat Firmin.

At Carthage, the holy Confessor Constantine.

At Bauco, the holy Confessor Peter, eminent for the fame of his miracles. [A Spanish soldier who lived as a hermit in Italy.]

Vespers are of the following from the Chapter inclusive.

MARCH 11.

St John of God, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst so enkindle in Thy servant John the fire of Thy Divine love, that when he walked in the midst of earthly fire the flame thereof had on his body no power, and Who didst choose him for a mean whereby Thou hast given unto Thy Church a new family of sons, mercifully grant unto us, for his sake, that the fire of Thy love may burn up in us all things that displease Thee, and make us meet for Thy heavenly kingdom. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

First Vespers are of St John.

A Commemoration is made of the Forty Martyrs. Prayer as in their Office, and then of the Week-day.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ecclus. xxxi. 8, (p. 627.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JOHN of God was born of Catholic and godly parents in the town of Montemor in Portugal, [in the year 1495.] The lot to which God had elected him was foreshown at his birth by a light shining over the house, and by the ringing of a bell untouched by human hands. He fell at one time into a loose habit of life, but was recalled by the grace of God, and began to show tokens of true reformation. By hearing the Word of God, he so felt himself stirred up to strive after nobler things, that he considered not that to which he had already attained, and yearned to be perfect, as our Father in heaven is perfect. He gave away all his property to the poor and prisoners, and became a gazing-stock to all that knew him, by the strength of his repentance, and the depth of his self-contempt. On this account he was commonly supposed to be mad, and was once shut up in a lunatic asylum. He was only the more filled with schemes of charity, and collected, by begging, funds sufficient to build a large double Hospital in the town of Granada. Here he founded the new Order of Hospital Brethren with which he enriched the Church. These Brethren are now spread throughout all parts of the world, and engaged in ministering to the souls and bodies of the sick.

Fifth Lesson.

HE strove to get for the sick poor, whom he sometimes brought to the Hospital on his own shoulders, whatever was needful for their souls or bodies. His charity was extended to the poor outside of his institution, and he used to supply food privately to necessitous widows, and more so to young women whose virtue was tempted on account of their poverty. He was most careful in encouraging the virtue of purity in all whom he knew. On one occasion when there was a great fire in the hospital at Granada, John bravely entered the burning house, ran from one part of it to another, carried out the sick on his shoulders, and threw the beds out of the windows, and finally, after passing half-an-hour in the midst of the flames, which were now raging with great violence, by the mercy of God left the building uninjured, to the great wonder of all the citizens; thereby to teach all them that love God that the fire which burnt in his heart gave him strength to risk the fire which threatened him from without.

Sixth Lesson.

HE was a marked example of every kind of austerity, of the most lowly obedience, of the deepest voluntary poverty, of the most constant prayer, of ghostly contemplation, and of love towards the blessed Virgin. He was distinguished for the gift of tears. Being at last seized by deadly sickness, he duly received, with saintly affection, all the Sacraments of the Church. After all strength seemed to have left him, he got out of his bed, put on his own clothes, and knelt down before an image of the Lord Christ hanging on the Cross. Round it he threw his arms and pressed it against his heart, and in this position, as it were in the kiss of the Lord, he died, on the 8th day of March 1550. After his death his body did not leave its grip of the crucifix until it was forcibly taken away, six hours after. During these six hours all the inhabitants of the city came to see it, and noticed a savour of strange sweetness proceeding from it. His name was illustrious as a worker of miracles both before and after his death, and the Supreme Pontiff Alexander VIII. added it to those of the Saints, and Leo XIII., at the desire of the Bishops of the Catholic world, and in accordance with a vote of the Congregation of Rites, declared him the patron in heaven of all the sick and those who nurse them, wheresoever dwelling, and ordered that his name should be called upon in the Litany for the dying.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxii. 35.)

At that time: The Pharisees came unto JESUS, and one of them, which was a lawyer, asked Him a question, tempting Him, saying: Master, which is the great commandment in the Law? And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] 72nd on Matthew.

When the Pharisees had heard that Christ had put the Sadducees to silence, they gathered themselves together for a fresh attack; just when it behoved them to be quiet, they willed to contend; and so they put forward one of themselves, who professed skill in the law, not wishing to learn, but to lay a snare. This person therefore proposed the question: "Which is the great commandment in the law?" The first and great commandment is: "Thou shalt love the LORD thy God," but they expected that He would make some exception or addition to this in His Own case, since He made Himself God. (John x. 33.) With this expectation they asked Him the question: But what said Christ? To show that they had adopted this course, because they were loveless, and sick with envy, He answered: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it: Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."

Eighth Lesson.

WHY is this second commandment like unto the first? Because the first is the second's source and sanction. "For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light." (John. iii. 20.) And again: "The fool hath said in his heart: There is no God"—and there followeth: "They are corrupt, and become abominable in their works." (Ps. xiii. 1.) And yet again: "The love of money is the root of all evil; which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith." (1 Tim. vi. 10.) And yet once more: "If ye love Me, keep My commandments." (John xiv. 15,)—of which commandments the head and root is: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God; and thy neighbour as thyself."

Ninth Lesson.

IF, therefore, to love God is to love our neighbour also, (as it appeareth where it is written: "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me? And he said unto Him: Lord, Thou knowest all things; Thou knowest that I love Thee. JESUS saith unto him: Feed My sheep," John xxi. 17,)—and if "love is the fulfilling of the law," (Rom. xiii. 10,) justly doth the Lord say that "on these two commandments hang all the law and the Prophets." And even as when, before this, (23-32,) being interrogated about the Resurrection, He answered them more than they asked, so, now, being interrogated concerning the first and great commandment, He answereth them, of His own accord, touching that second one also, which is little lower than the first, for "the second is like unto it." Herein He would have them understand that it was hatred stirred them up to question Him. "For Charity," saith the Apostle, "envieth not." (1 Cor. xiii. 4.)

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily on the Gospel for the Week-day. The Third Lesson of the Homily on Matth. xxii. 35, is omitted or read as one with the Second, and the First Lesson only of the Week-day is read, or else all three as one.

In Lent a Commemoration of the Week-day is made at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 12th day of March, were born into the better life—

At Rome, holy Pope Gregory [I.,] an eminent Doctor of the Church, who, on account of his illustrious acts and his doings to bring the English to believe in Christ, is surnamed the Great, and called the Apostle of England, [in the year 604.]

Likewise at Rome, the holy martyr Mamilian, [in the year 295.]

At Nicomedia, the blessed martyr Peter. He was a chamberlain to the Emperor Diocletian, and because he bewailed the fearful slaughter of martyrs, the Emperor commanded him to be brought forth, hung up, and lashed for a long time. After which he was covered with vinegar and salt, and at length roasted upon a grating upon a slow fire, and thus is he worthy to be reckoned a true inheritor of Peter's faith, as well as Peter's name.

There likewise the holy martyrs Egdunus the Priest, and seven others, of whom one was strangled every day in order to terrify the others, [about the year 303.]

At Constantinople, holy Theophanes. He was originally a very rich man, but became a monk. The wicked Emperor Leo, the Armenian, kept him for two years in prison for honouring holy images, and then banished him to Samo-Thrace, where he sank under his sufferings and gave up the ghost, [about the year 818.] He is famous for many miracles.

At Capua, the holy Confessor Bernard, Bishop of Calenum, [in the year 1109.]

Vespers of the following.

The Second Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter, inclusive.

MARCH 12.

St Gregory [the Great,] Pope of Rome, Confessor, Doctor of the Church, and Apostle of England.

Double of the Second Class.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O right excellent Teacher, &c., (p. 612.)

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, who hast blessed the soul of Thy servant Gregory with an everlasting blessing, mercifully grant that we, who groan under the burden of our sins, may by his prayers be relieved. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St John of God, with Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ecclus. xxxix. 1, as in the Common Office, (p. 630.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

GREGORY the Great was a Roman, the son of Gordian the Senator, [and was born about the year of our Lord 540.] As a young man he studied philosophy, and afterwards discharged the office of Prætor. After his father's death he built six monasteries in Sicily, and a seventh in honour of St Andrew, in his own house at Rome, hard by the Church of Saints John and Paul at the ascent of the hill Scaurus. In this monastery of St Andrew, he and his masters, Hilarion and Maximian, professed themselves monks, and Gregory was afterwards Abbat. Later on, he was created a Cardinal Deacon, and sent to Constantinople as legate from Pope Pelagius to the Emperor Tiberius Constantine. Before the Emperor he so successfully disputed against the Patriarch Eutychius, who had denied that our bodies shall verily and indeed rise again, that the Prince threw the book of the said Patriarch into the fire. Eutychius himself also soon after fell sick, and when he felt death coming on him, he took hold of the skin of his own hand and said in the hearing of many that stood by: "I acknowledge that we shall all rise again in this flesh."

Fifth Lesson.

GREGORY returned to Rome, and, Pelagius being dead of a plague, he was unanimously chosen Pope. This honour he refused as long as he could. He disguised himself and took refuge in a cave, but was betrayed by a fiery pillar. Being discovered and overruled, he was consecrated at the grave of St Peter, [upon the 3rd day of September, in the year 590.] He left behind him many ensamples of doctrine and holiness to them that have followed him in the Popedom. Every day he brought pilgrims to his table, and among them he entertained not an Angel only, but the very Lord of Angels in the guise of a pilgrim. He tenderly cared for the poor, of whom he kept a list, as well without as within the city. He restored the Catholic faith in many places where it had been overthrown. He fought successfully against the Donatists in Africa and the Arians in Spain. He cleansed Alexandria of the Agnoites. He refused to give the Pall to Syagrius, Bishop of Autun, unless he would expel the Neophyte heretics from Gaul. He caused the Goths to abandon the Arian heresy. He sent into Britain Augustine and divers other learned and holy monks, who brought the inhabitants of that island to believe in JESUS Christ. Hence Gregory is justly called by Bede, the Priest of Jarrow, "the Apostle of England." He rebuked the presumption of John, Patriarch of Constantinople, who had taken to himself the title of Bishop of the Universal Church, and he dissuaded the Emperor Maurice from forbidding soldiers to become monks.

Sixth Lesson.

GREGORY adorned the Church with holy customs and laws. He called together a Synod in the Church of St Peter, and therein ordained many things; among others, the ninefold repetition of the words "Kyrie eleison" in the Mass, the saying of the word "Alleluia" in the Church service except between Septuagesima inclusive and Easter exclusive, and the addition to the Canon of the Mass of the words "Do Thou order all our days in Thy peace." He increased the Litanies, the number of the Churches where is held the observance called a Station, and the length of the Church Service. He would that the four Councils of Nice, Constantinople, Ephesus, and Chalcedon should be honoured like four Gospels. He released the Sicilian Bishops from visiting Rome every three years, willing them to come instead once every five years. He was the author of many books, and Peter the Deacon declareth that he often saw the Holy Ghost on his head in the form of a dove when he was dictating them. It is a marvel how much he spoke, did, wrote, and legislated, suffering all the while from a weak and sickly body. He worked many miracles. At last God called him away to be blessed for ever in heaven, in the thirteenth year, sixth month, and tenth day of his Pontificate, being the 12th day of March, [in the year of salvation 604.] This day is observed by the Greeks, as well as by us, as a festival, on account of the eminent wisdom and holiness of this Pope. His body was buried in the Church of St Peter, hard by the Private Chapel.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (v. 12.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Ye are the salt of the earth. But if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Hom. 17 on Luke x.)

We have to consider that he who is not able by one exhortation to exhort all at once, must strive according to his ability to instruct each in private and edify each by personal conversation. We must always hold in mind that which was said to the holy Apostles, and, through the Apostles, to us: "Ye are the salt of the earth. If we are therefore salt, we ought to season the minds of the faithful. Ye then that are shepherds, remember that ye feed the flock of God, even that flock of which the Psalmist saith to God: "Thy creatures shall dwell therein" (Ps. lxvii. 11.) We often see pieces of rock-salt given to animals, which they lick, and the seasoning of the salt is good for them. As these pieces of rock-salt to cattle, so ought Priests to be to their people. A Priest should be prudent in what he saith, and what warning he giveth to each; and each one when he meeteth his Priest, should draw from him a savour unto life eternal.

Eighth Lesson.

WE are not the salt of the earth, if we season not the hearts of them that hear us. He that faileth not in preaching, imparteth this seasoning to his neighbour. And we do not truly preach to others unless by our own works and example we show them what we preach. Dearly beloved brethren, I think that God is not so much wronged by any as He is by Priests, whom He hath ordained to keep others straight, and then seeth setting an ill example; when we, who ought to be the enemies of sin, work sin, seek not the good of souls, take leisure to enjoy our own pursuits, seek worldly things, and set our minds to gain human respect. And, above all, when we who, as Prelates, are raised above the others, and are so far freer to do what we like, prostitute our ministry of blessing, wherewith we are blessed, to compass the ends of worldly vanity, abandon God's work, occupy ourselves with earthly affairs, take in sooth an holy place, and then involve ourselves in deeds and thoughts of the world.

Eighth Responsory.

In the midst, &c., (p. 625.)

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily for the Week-day, either the first part or all three as one.

At Lauds and Vespers a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 13th day of March, were born into the better life—

At Nicomedia, the holy martyrs Macedonius, Patricia his wife, and Modesta their daughter, [in the year 303.]

At Nice, the holy martyrs Theusetas and Horres his son, Theodora, Nymphodora, Mark, and Arabia, who were all delivered over to the flames for Christ's sake.

At Eshman, in Egypt, the holy martyr Sabinus, who after suffering many things, was at length drowned in the Nile, [in the year 287. He is said to have been denounced by a beggar he maintained by his alms.]

In Persia, the holy Virgin and martyr Christina.

At Cordova, the holy martyrs Roderick the Priest and Salomon, [in the year 857.]

At Constantinople, holy Nicephorus, Bishop of that see. He was a zealous upholder of the traditions of the Fathers, and for the honouring of holy images constantly withstood the Iconoclast Emperor Leo the Armenian, by whom he was sent into exile, where he suffered a lingering martyrdom for fourteen years, and then passed away to be ever with the Lord, [in the year 828.]

At Camerino, the holy Confessor Ansovinus, Bishop of that see, [in the year 840.]

In the Thebaid, the holy Virgin Euphrasia, [in the year 412.]

Note. If any of the Feasts which follow fall in Holy Week or Easter Week, they are transferred till after Low Sunday, with the changes in that case necessary, if they are capable of being transferred according to the general rubrics; but if not, they are simply commemorated at both Vespers and Lauds without having the Ninth Lesson at Mattins.

MARCH 13.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 14th day of March, were born into the better life—

At Rome, in the Veranian field, the holy martyr Leo, Bishop.

Likewise at Rome, forty-seven holy martyrs, who were all baptised by the blessed Apostle Peter during the nine months during which he and his fellow-Apostle Paul were imprisoned in the Mamertine prison, and who, all for the loyal confession of their faith, were slain by the sword, under the Emperor Nero.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Peter and Aphrodisius, who received their crown in the persecution under the Vandals.

At Haran, in Mesopotamia, the holy martyrs Eutychius the Patrician and his companions, who were slain by Evelid, King of the Arabs, for confessing their faith, [in the year 741.]

In the province of Valeria, two holy monks, whom the Lombards hung upon a tree, whereon after they were dead their very enemies heard them singing. In the same persecution, a Deacon of the church of Maruvium, [now called that of Pescina,] was beheaded for confessing the faith.

At Halberstadt, in Germany, the blessed Matilda, Queen of the Romans, Mother of the Emperor Otho I., who fell asleep in peace, illustrious for her lowliness and long suffering, [in the year 968.]

MARCH 14.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 15th day of March, were born into the better life—

At Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, the holy martyr Longinus, who is said to have been the soldier who pierced the Lord's side with a spear.

Upon the same day, holy Aristobulus, the disciple of the Apostles, who when the work of his preaching was done suffered martyrdom.

At Thessalonica, holy Matrona. She was a slave, belonging to a certain Jewess. She was a Christian in secret, and went to the church every day for private prayer. Her mistress found this. She afflicted her in many ways, and at last caused her to be cudgelled, until, still confessing Christ, she gave up her pure spirit to God, [probably about the year 800.]

On the same day, the holy martyr Menignus, a fuller, who suffered under the Emperor Decius.

In Egypt, the holy martyr Nicander, who would make careful search for the relics of holy martyrs, and earned to become a martyr himself under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Cordova, the holy Virgin and martyr Leocritia, [in the year 880.]

At Rome, holy Pope Zachary, who governed the Church of God with all watchfulness, and fell asleep in peace, famous for good works, [in the year 752.]

At Riete, holy Probus, Bishop of that see, at whose death, [in the year 570,] the martyrs Juvenal and Eleutherius were present.

At Rome, [in the sixth century,] the holy [Benedictine] monk, [at Terracina,] Speciosus, whose soul his brother saw being borne heavenward.

MARCH 15.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 16th day of March, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy deacon Cyriacus. After long suffering in prison, he was covered with pitch, stretched upon a block, racked, and cudgelled, and at last beheaded along with Largus Smaragdus and twenty others, by command of the Emperor Maximian. Their feast is kept upon the 8th day of August, upon the which day blessed Pope Marcellus exhumed their bodies and buried them again with honour.

At Aquileia, the blessed martyrs Hilary, Bishop of that see, and the Deacon Tatian, who after suffering the rack and other torments were martyred, along with Felix, Largus, and Denis, under the President Beronius, in the persecution under the Emperor Numerian.

In Lycaonia, the holy martyr Papas, who for Christ's faith's sake was hided, torn with iron hooks, and made to walk in shoes with nails through them, and then tied up to a barren tree, which became fruitful when he passed away to be with the Lord, [fourth century.]

At Anazarba, in Cilicia, the holy martyr Julian, who suffered a long course of torture under the President Martian, and was at length put into a sack along with serpents and drowned in the sea, [probably under Diocletian.]

At Ravenna, the holy Confessor Agapitus, Bishop of that see, [in the year 341.]

At Cologne, holy Heribert, Bishop of that see, famous for his holiness, [in the year 1021.]

In Auvergne, holy Bishop Patrick.[1]

In Syria, the holy hermit Abraham, [in the year 370,] whose acts have been written by the blessed Deacon Ephrem.

MARCH 16.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 17th day of March, were born into the better life—

In Ireland, the holy Confessor Patrick, Bishop [of Armagh,] the first who there preached the Gospel of Christ, and who was famous for great miracles and works of power, [in the year 464.]

At Jerusalem, holy Joseph of Arimathea, the honourable councillor, the disciple of the Lord, who took down His Body from the cross and laid it in his own new tomb.

At Rome, the holy martyrs Alexander and Theodore.

At Alexandria are commemorated many holy martyrs, who were seized by the worshippers of Serapis, and because they would not worship that idol were cruelly murdered by them, in the time of the Emperor Theodosius, who presently afterward sent a rescript to destroy the temple of Serapis.

At Constantinople, the holy martyr Paul, who was burnt under the Emperor Constantine Copronymus for defending the honouring of holy images.

At Chalons [-sur-Saone,] in Gaul, holy Agricola, Bishop of that see, [in the year 580.]

At Nivelle, in Brabant, the holy Virgin Gertrude, the daughter of an illustrious race, who despised this world, and busied herself all her life in holy deeds, so that she won to be espoused to Christ in heaven, [in the year 659.]

Vespers of the following.

MARCH 17.

St Patrick, Archbishop [of Armagh,] Confessor.

Greater double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst send forth Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Patrick to preach Thy glory among the Gentiles, mercifully grant unto us, for his sake and at his petition, whatsoever Thou commandest us to do, to have grace and power faithfully to fulfil the same. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from I Tim. iii. 1, (p. 612.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

PATRICK, called the Apostle of Ireland, was born in Great Britain. The name of his father was Calphurnius, and that of his mother Conchessa. She is said to have been a relation of St Martin, Bishop of Tours. When Patrick was a lad, he was several times taken prisoner by savages, and while being in their hands he was employed as a shepherd, he already showed marks of his saintliness to come. His spirit was filled with faith, and love, and fear of God, so that he would rise before the light, in snow, and frost, and rain, to make his prayers to God, being accustomed to address God in prayer an hundred times every day, and an hundred times every night. After being rescued from his third captivity, he was placed among the clergy, and for a long time exercised himself in sacred learning. To this end he travelled with much labour, through Gaul, Italy, and the islands of the Tyrrhenian Sea, but at last being called of God to work for the salvation of the Irish, and, having received from the Blessed Pope Celestine a commission to preach the gospel, and likewise being consecrated a Bishop, he betook himself to Ireland.

---

[1] This personage is generally supposed to be Palladius Patricius, and it has been suggested that Arvernis is really a corruption for in Hibernia.

Fifth Lesson.

IN the discharge of his calling it is a marvel with how many evils, with how many sufferings and labours, and with how many adversaries the Apostolic Patrick had to bear. Nevertheless, by the goodness of God, that island, which had up to that time been given over to the serving of idols, was, through the preaching of Patrick, so wrought on that she soon brought forth the fruit which won her the name of the Island of Saints. Patrick caused many of her people to be born again by the washing of regeneration; he ordained many Bishops and clerks; he decreed rules for virgins and widows living in continency. By the authority of the Bishop of Rome he established the See of Armagh as the Primatial See of all Ireland, and enriched the Church with reliques of the Saints brought from Rome. Patrick, moreover, was so eminently adorned with heavenly visions, with the gift of prophecy, and with great signs and wonders from God, that the fame of him spread itself abroad more and more, day by day.

Sixth Lesson.

BESIDES that which came upon him daily, the care of all the Churches of Ireland, he never suffered his spirit to weary in constant prayer. They say that it was his custom to repeat every day the whole Book of Psalms, together with Songs and Hymns, and two hundred Prayers; that he bent his knees to God in worship three hundred times every day, and that he made on himself the sign of the Cross an hundred times at each of the Seven Hours of the Church Service. He divided the night into three portions; during the first he repeated the first hundred Psalms, and bent his knees two hundred times; during the second he remained plunged in cold water, with heart, eyes, and hands lifted up to heaven, and in that state repeated the remaining fifty Psalms; during the third he took his short rest, lying upon a bare stone. He was a great practiser of lowliness, and, after the pattern of the Apostle, he always continued to work with his own hands. At last he fell asleep in the Lord in extreme old age, refreshed with the Divine Mysteries, worn out with unceasing care for the Churches, and glorious both in word and work. His body is buried in Down in Ulster. He passed away in the fifth century after the giving of salvation by Christ.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.) The Third is either omitted or read as one with the Second, and the Ninth Lesson is either the first part or the whole of the Homily for the Week-day.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Archangel Gabriel,[1] who announced to the Blessed Virgin Mary the mystery of the Incarnation of the Lord.

At Jerusalem, holy Confessor Cyril, Bishop of that see, and Doctor of the Church, who suffered many things from the Arians for the faith's sake. He was several times driven from his see, but at length fell asleep in peace, [in the year 386,] illustrious for the glory of holiness. The Œcumenical Council [of Constantinople,] in writing to Pope Damasus, gave a noble witness to the purity of his faith. We keep his feast upon the 22nd day of this present month of March.

Upon the same 18th day of March, were born into the better life—

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, the blessed martyr Alexander, Bishop [of Jerusalem.] He came to Jerusalem from his own city, in Cappadocia, whereof he was Bishop, in order to visit the holy places. Narcissus, who was already very old, was then ruling the Church of Jerusalem, and Alexander by the revelation of God received the government thereof, afterward, and when he himself was in the venerable glory of grey hairs he was brought to Cæsarea in the persecution under the Emperor Decius, and was put in prison, and finished his testimony confessing Christ.

At Augsburg, the holy martyrs Narcissus, Bishop of Augsburg, and the Deacon Felix. Narcissus was the first who preached the gospel in Rhætia; he afterwards went into Spain, and after he had brought many to believe in Christ at Girona he there received the palm of martyrdom, along with the Deacon Felix, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Nicomedia, the ten thousand holy martyrs who were slain with the sword for confessing Christ.

Also the holy martyrs Trophimus and Eucarpius, [fourth century.]

In England, holy Edward II., King of the English, who was murdered through a plot of his stepmother, and hath been famous for many miracles, [962-978.]

At Lucca, in Tuscany, holy Finnan, Bishop of that see, [in the sixth century,] famous for the power of working miracles, but whose principal feast is kept upon the 18th day of November, which is that of the translation of his body.

At Mantua, the holy Confessor Anselm, Bishop of the see, [in the year 1086.]

Vespers of the following.

---

[1] The Archangel Gabriel has no place in the Roman Martyrology, and this entry is accordingly given as found in the martyrologies of several of the Religious Orders.

MARCH 18.

St Gabriel, Archangel.

Greater Double.

If this Feast be observed in Lent, the Week-day is commemorated at Vespers and Lauds, and has the Ninth Lesson at Mattins. If it be transferred into Paschal-time, the word "Alleluia" is added wherever it is given in [ ], and all three Psalms of each Nocturn are said under the First Antiphon.

All as on Sundays except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Last Psalm.

Ps. cxvi. O praise the LORD, &c., (p. 105.)

Hymn, and Verse and Answer as at Lauds on May 8.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The Angel Gabriel came in unto the Virgin Mary, and said: Hail, thou that art full of grace; the Lord is with thee; blessed art thou among women. [Alleluia.]

A Commemoration is made of the Second Vespers of St Patrick, and of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Lord, He is the King of the Archangels, * O come, let us worship Him. [Alleluia.]

Hymn as at Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [1] The Angel Gabriel said unto Daniel: Understand, O son of man; for at the time of the end shall the vision be fulfilled. [Alleluia.]

Ps. viii. O LORD, our Ruler, &c., (p. 4.)

Second Antiphon. Behold the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision [at the beginning,] being caused to fly swiftly, touched me about the time of the evening oblation; and he informed me.

Ps. x. In the LORD put I my trust, &c., (p. 5.)

Third Antiphon. [1] When Gabriel was about speaking unto me, I fell upon my face toward the ground; but he touched me, and set me upright.

Ps. xiv. LORD, who shall abide, &c., (p. 6.)

Verse. An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple. [Alleluia.]

Answer. Having a golden censer in his hand. [Alleluia.]

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Daniel (ix. 20.)

WHILES I, Daniel, was speaking and praying, and confessing my sins, and the sins of my people Israël, and presenting my supplication before my God for the holy mountain of my God, whiles yet I was speaking in prayer, behold, the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, being caused to fly swiftly, touched me about the time of the evening oblation. And he informed me, and talked with me, and said: O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding. At the beginning of thy supplications the commandment came forth; and I am come to show thee, for thou art greatly beloved; therefore consider the matter, and understand the vision.

First Responsory.

Whiles Daniel was praying, and confessing his sins, and the sins of his people, behold, the Archangel Gabriel, being caused to fly swiftly, touched him about the time of the evening oblation. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Whiles he was presenting his supplication before his God—

Answer. Behold, the Archangel Gabriel, being caused to fly swiftly, touched him about the time of the evening oblation. [Alleluia.]

Second Lesson.

SEVENTY weeks are determined upon thy people, and upon thine holy city, to finish the transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the Most Holy. Know, therefore, and understand, that from the going forth of the commandment to build up again Jerusalem, unto the Prince, the Anointed, shall be seven weeks, and three-score-and-two weeks. The street shall be built again, and the walls, even in troublous times.

Second Responsory.

And Gabriel talked with Daniel, and said: At the beginning of thy supplications the commandment came forth; and I am come to show thee, for thou art greatly beloved. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Therefore consider the matter and understand the vision.

Answer. And I am come to show thee, for thou art greatly beloved. [Alleluia.]

Third Lesson.

AND after three-score-and-two weeks shall Christ be cut off—and they shall not be His own people that shall deny Him. And a people, with a Prince that shall come, shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be desolation, and after the end of the war desolation is appointed. But he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week; and in the midst of the week the sacrifice and the oblation shall cease; and in the temple shall be the abomination of desolation; and even until the consummation and the end shall endure the desolation.

Third Responsory.

Behold, the man Gabriel, whom I had seen [in the vision at the beginning,] being caused to fly swiftly, touched me about the time of the evening oblation; and he informed me, [and talked with me,] and said: O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding. [Alleluia.]

Verse. O Gabriel, make me to understand the vision. So he came near where I stood. And he said unto me:—

Answer. O Daniel, I am now

---

[1] Dan. viii. 17, 18.

come forth to give thee skill and understanding. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding. [Alleluia.]

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [1] The Angel Gabriel appeared unto Zacharias, and said unto him: Thy wife Elizabeth shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John. [Alleluia.]

Ps. xviii. The heavens declare, &c., (p. 10.)

Second Antiphon. And Zacharias said unto the Angel: Whereby shall I know this? for I am an old man, and my wife well stricken in years.

Ps. xxiii. The earth is the LORD'S, &c., (p. 26.)

Third Antiphon. And the Angel, answering, said unto him: I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God, and am sent to speak unto thee, and to show thee these glad tidings.

Ps. xxxiii. I will bless the LORD, &c., (p. 44.)

Verse. The smoke of the incense ascended up before the Lord—[Alleluia.]

Answer. Out of the Angel's hand. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (On Luke i. 26.)

"THE Angel Gabriel was sent from God."

I opine that this Angel is not one of those lesser ones who are often sent to earth with messages upon one occasion and another. This may well be understood from his name, which signifieth "the strong-man-of-God," and because it is especially said that he was sent, not by some spirit haply more excellent than he, but from God Himself. It is said "from God"—lest it should be imagined that God had revealed His counsel to any of the blessed spirits before revealing it to the Virgin, except to the Archangel Gabriel, who is thus discovered to possess such an excellency in the heavenly host as becomes at once his name and his message.

Fourth Responsory.

It came to pass that while Zacharias executed the Priest's office before God, in the order of his course, there appeared unto him the Angel Gabriel, standing on the right side of the Altar of incense. [Alleluia.]

Verse. When he went into the temple of the Lord to burn incense, according to the custom of the Priest's office.

Answer. There appeared unto him the Angel Gabriel, standing on the right side of the Altar of incense. [Alleluia.]

Fifth Lesson.

NEITHER do his name and his message disagree, for whom did it more beseem to be the herald of "Christ, the Power of God," (1 Cor. i. 24,) than him who was honoured by bearing a like name? For power and strength are much the same. Neither doth it appear unmeet or unseemly that the Lord and His messenger should have a like title, when we consider that that title differeth in meaning in each. Christ is called the Power or Strength of God in a sense very different to that in which the like appellation is given to the Angel. In the Angel it is a bestowed title; in Christ, an essential description.

Fifth Responsory.

The Angel Gabriel came down unto Zacharias, and said unto him: Fear not; for thy prayer is heard; and thy wife Elizabeth shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John. [Alleluia.]

Verse. And when Zacharias saw him, he was troubled, and fear fell upon him; but the Angel said unto him:—

Answer. Fear not; for thy prayer is heard; and thy wife Elizabeth shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John. [Alleluia.]

Sixth Lesson.

CHRIST is called, and absolutely is, "the Power of God." When the strong man armed kept his palace, and all his goods were in peace, Christ came upon him as One stronger than he, and overcame him by the strength of His Own arm, and took from him all his armour wherein he trusted, and divided his spoils. (Luke xi. 21, 22.) But the Angel is called the "strong-man-of-God," either because this title was his right as the herald of the Power of God, or because it was his mission to comfort the Virgin, naturally fearful, simple, and shame-faced, lest she should be beside herself with terror at the newness of the miracle, which office indeed he discharged when he said: "Fear not, Mary; for thou hast found grace with God." Meetly therefore was Gabriel chosen for this work, or rather, meetly was his name given him since he had been so chosen.

Sixth Responsory.

I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God; and am sent to speak unto thee, and to show thee these glad tidings. Behold, thou shalt be dumb, and not able to speak, until the day that these things shall be performed. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Because thou believest not my words, which shall be fulfilled in their season.

Answer. Behold, thou shalt be dumb, and not able to speak, until the day that these things shall be performed. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Behold, thou shalt be dumb, and not able to speak, until the day that these things shall be performed. [Alleluia.]

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The Angel Gabriel was sent to a virgin espoused to [a man whose name was] Joseph, [and the virgin's name was] Mary. [Alleluia.]

Ps. xcv. O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 85.)

Second Antiphon. The Angel Gabriel said unto Mary: Behold, thy cousin Elizabeth, she hath also conceived a son in her old age.

---

[1] Antiphons from Luke i. 11, 13, 18, 19.

Ps. xcvi. The LORD reigneth, &c., (p. 85.)

Third Antiphon. O Virgin Mary, receive the word of the Lord which is sent thee by His Angel Gabriel.

Ps. cii. Bless the LORD, O my soul, &c., (p. 91.)

Verse. Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee, O my God. [Alleluia.]
Answer. I will worship toward Thy holy Temple, and praise Thy Name. [Alleluia.]

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 26.)

AT that time: The Angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee named Nazareth, to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David: and the Virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

Homily by St Julian, Archbishop of Toledo.[1] (2nd against the Jews.)

It was from an Angel that Daniel learnt the secret of the seventy weeks until the birth of the Christ; it was by the apparition of an Angel that Zacharias heard that he was about to beget a son; and it was when an Angel foretold that the Christ should be born of her, that Mary believed and consented. These three things we see announced by an Angel, and fulfilled. Let us now then look carefully whether the Angel who appeared to Zacharias and Mary was the same who had foretold these same things to Daniel.

Seventh Responsory.

The Angel Gabriel was sent to Mary, the virgin espoused to Joseph, and the Virgin was afraid of the light. Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found grace with the Lord. Behold, thou shalt conceive and bring forth a Son, and He shall be called the Son of the Highest. [Alleluia.]
Verse. And when she heard it, she was troubled at his saying, and cast in her mind what manner of salutation this should be. And the Angel said unto her:
Answer. Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found grace with the Lord. Behold, thou shalt conceive, and bring forth a Son, and He shall be called the Son of the Highest. [Alleluia.]

Eighth Blessing.

He whose Feast-day, &c.

Eighth Lesson.

AS for Daniel, he, in the Book of his Prophecy, when he learnt from the Angel the mystery of the seventy weeks, which should mark the date of the Birth of Christ, plainly expresseth the name of the said Angel. For he saith: "Behold, the man Gabriel, whom I had seen [in the vision] at the beginning, being caused to fly swiftly, touched me [about the time of the evening oblation; and he informed me, and talked with me,] and said: O Daniel, [I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding. At the beginning of thy supplications the commandment came forth, and I am come to show thee, for thou art greatly beloved; therefore] consider the matter," and so on, as is there narrated. And so, when the time pointed at drew near, we find in the Gospel the wondrous name of this same Angel. For the Angel said unto Zacharias: "I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God; and am sent to speak unto thee, and to show thee these glad tidings." (Ninth Lesson.) And this is also the name which we read in the Gospel where the child-bearing of the Blessed Virgin Mary is spoken of, as it is written: "The Angel Gabriel was sent from God, unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary." We see then that it was the one and the same Angel Gabriel who revealed to Daniel the time prefixed for the Birth of Christ, and who announced the delivery of the Virgin when the time came. He cometh at the very time which he himself had foretold, and showeth by actual demonstration the fulfilment of his former word, faithful in the prophecy of the weeks, faithful in the revelation of the mystery.

Eighth Responsory.

Rejoice, O Mary, by whose mighty hand the Church hath victory o'er her foes achieved, since thou to Gabriel's word of quickening power in lowliness hast listened and believed—thou, still a virgin, in thy blessed womb hast God Incarnate of thy flesh conceived, and, still of heaven, of that virginity remainest after childbirth unbereaved. [Alleluia.]
Verse. Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb.
Answer. Since thou to Gabriel's word of quickening power in lowliness hast listened and believed—thou, still a virgin, in thy blessed womb hast God Incarnate of thy flesh conceived, and, still of heaven, of that virginity remainest after childbirth unbereaved. [Alleluia.]
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. Since thou to Gabriel's word of quickening power in lowliness hast listened and believed—thou, still a virgin, in thy blessed womb hast God Incarnate of thy flesh conceived, and, still of heaven, of that virginity remainest after childbirth unbereaved. [Alleluia.]

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Week-day.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. When Zacharias went into the temple of the Lord, * there appeared unto him the Angel Gabriel, standing on the right side of the Altar of incense. [Alleluia.]
Second Antiphon. But the Angel said unto him: Fear not, * Zacharias: for thy prayer is heard. [Alleluia.]
Third Antiphon. I am the Angel Gabriel, * that stand in the presence of God, and am sent to speak unto thee. [Alleluia.]
Fourth Antiphon. The Angel Gabriel spake unto Mary * and said: Behold thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a Son, and shalt call His Name JESUS. [Alleluia.]

---

[1] March 8.

Fifth Antiphon. Then said Mary unto the Angel: How shall this be, seeing I know not a man? * And the Angel Gabriel answered and said unto her: The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee. [Alleluia.]

Chapter. (Dan. ix. 21.)

BEHOLD, the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, being caused to fly swiftly, touched me about the time of the evening oblation; and he informed me, and talked with me, and said: O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding.

Hymn.[1]

O CHRIST, Redeemer of mankind,
Thy servants here protect and spare,
Who hearest with a loving mind
The Blessed Virgin's holy prayer.

May those glad hosts which see Thy Face,
The spirits of the heavenly home,
Away from us all evils chase,
Both past, and present, and to come.

Then purge away all unbelief,
From every land where Christians dwell,
That unto Thee, our Victor Chief,
Our thanks and praises we may tell.

The Father Unbegot we laud,
We praise the sole-begotten Son,
And Holy Spirit, with them God,
Now, and while endless ages run. Amen.

Verse. An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple. [Alleluia.]
Answer. Having a golden censer in his hand. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. The Angel Gabriel came down unto Zacharias, and said unto him: Thy wife shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John, and many shall rejoice at his birth; for he shall go before the face of the Lord, to prepare His ways. [Alleluia.]

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst choose the Archangel Gabriel from among all Thine other Angels, and send him to herald the mystery of Thine Incarnation, mercifully grant that we who keep his feast upon earth may feel his protection in heaven. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Last Psalm.

Ps. cxxxvii. I will praise Thee, &c., (p. 111.)

Verse. Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee, O my God. [Alleluia.]

Answer. I will worship toward Thy holy temple, and praise Thy Name. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The Archangel Gabriel said unto Mary: With God nothing shall be impossible. And Mary said: Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word. And the Angel departed from her. [Alleluia.]

MARCH 19.

St Joseph, Husband of the Blessed Virgin Mary, Confessor.

Double of the First Class. (Patronal Feast of the Universal Church.)

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.[1]

First Antiphon. And Jacob begat Joseph, the husband of Mary, of whom was born JESUS, Who is called Christ.

Second Antiphon. The Angel Gabriel was sent from God, unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David, and the virgin's name was Mary.

Third Antiphon. When as Mary, the mother of JESUS, was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child, of the Holy Ghost.

Fourth Antiphon. [Then] Joseph her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her a public example, was minded to put her away privily.

Fifth Antiphon. [But while he thought on these things, behold,] the angel of the Lord appeared unto him [in a dream,] saying: Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife; for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost: and she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call His name JESUS.

Chapter. (Prov. xxviii. 20 and xxvii. 18.)

A FAITHFUL man shall abound with blessings, and he that guardeth his Master shall be honoured.

Hymn.[2]

JOSEPH! to thee by hosts on high
And choirs of Christians, laud be paid!—
Saintly of life,—by purest tie
Joined unto her, the glorious Maid.

When thou didst doubt thy wife's repute,
And mark her great with Sacred Load,
The angel taught thee that her Fruit
Came from the Holy Ghost of God.

To clasp the Son, thy Lord, was thine,—
To share His flight to Egypt's shore,—
With tears, to seek in Salem's Shrine
Him lost,—with joy, to find once more.

Death brings to other saints their rest;
Through toil they win the victor's place;—
Thou happier, like the angels blest,
Alive, hast seen God Face to face.

Spare us, O Trinity Most High!
Grant that, with Joseph, we may gain
Thy starry realm, and ceaselessly
There raise to Thee our thankful strain.
Amen.

Verse. [3] He made him lord of His house. Alleluia.

Answer. And ruler of all His substance. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Joseph, being raised from sleep, did as the Angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife.

Prayer.

HELP us, we beseech Thee, O Lord, for the sake of the Husband of Thy most holy Mother, that what we cannot for ourselves obtain, Thou mayest grant us at his petition: Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the Sunday or Week-day.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. O come, let us worship * Christ the Son of God, Who vouchsafed to be supposed the son of Joseph.

Hymn.[4]

JOY of the Saints! who didst uphold
Our life's sure Hope, the world's one Stay,—
Joseph! as now thy praise is told,
Hearken to us in love to-day.

[1] All the Antiphons are from Matth. i. 16, 18-21, 24, except the second, from Luke i. 26, 27.

[2] Translation by the Rev. Dr Littledale.

[3] Ps. civ. 21.

[4] Translation by the Rev. Dr Littledale.

The great Creator made it thine
To be the spouse of purest Maid,
And father of the Word Divine
In name—salvation's work to aid.

Thou seest with joy in manger lie
The Saviour sung by seers of yore,
And Him, the Son of God Most High,
In lowliness thou didst adore.

The King of kings, the Lord of all,
The God Whom heaven in awe attends,
Whose nod makes trembling demons fall,
To thee in meek submission bends.

To God Most High, the Three in One,
Be praise, Who gave such grace to thee,
He make us win what thou hast won,
The joys of life eternally. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.[1]

First Antiphon. Joseph went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, to be enrolled with Mary.

Second Antiphon. The shepherds came with haste, and found Mary and Joseph, and the Babe lying in a manger.

Third Antiphon. Behold, the Angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph in a dream, saying: Arise, and take the young Child and His mother, and flee into Egypt.

Verse. [2] He made him Lord of His house.

Answer. And ruler of all His substance.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Genesis (xxxix. 1.)

So Joseph was brought down to Egypt, and Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh, captain of the guard, an Egyptian, bought him of the hands of the Ishmaelites, which had brought him down thither. And the Lord was with him, and he was a prosperous man; and he was in the house of his master; and [his master] knew well that the Lord was with him, and made all that he did to prosper in his hand. And Joseph found grace in his master's sight, and he served him; and he made him overseer over his house, and all that he had he put into his hand. And the Lord blessed the Egyptian's house for Joseph's sake.

First Responsory.

[3] The Lord was with Joseph, and gave him favour in the sight of the keeper of the prison. And the keeper of the prison committed to Joseph's hand all the prisoners that were in the prison.

Verse. And whatsoever they did there, he was the doer of it: because the Lord was with him, and that which he did, the Lord made it to prosper.

Answer. And the keeper of the prison committed to Joseph's hand all the prisoners that were in the prison.

Second Lesson. (xli. 37.)

The counsel of Joseph was good in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of all his servants, and he said unto them: Can we find such an one as this is, a man in whom the Spirit of God is? Unto Joseph therefore he said: Forasmuch as God hath showed thee all this which thou hast spoken, how shall I find any man more discreet and wise than thou art? Thou shalt be over my house, and according to thy word shall all my people be ruled: only in the throne will I be greater than thou.

Second Responsory.

[4] When all the land of Egypt was famished, the people cried to the king for bread. And the king said unto all the Egyptians: Go unto Joseph; and what he saith to you, do.

Verse. The famine was more grievous every day over all the face of the earth, and Joseph opened all the storehouses, and sold unto the Egyptians.

Answer. Go unto Joseph; and what he saith to you, do.

Third Lesson.

And Pharaoh said again unto Joseph: See, I have set thee over all the land of Egypt. And he took off his ring from his hand, and put it upon his hand; and arrayed him in a vesture of fine linen, and put a gold chain about his neck, and he made him to ride in the second chariot which he had, and an herald cried out that all men should bow the knee before him, and should know that he had been made ruler over all the land of Egypt. And Pharaoh said moreover unto Joseph: I am Pharaoh: without thee shall no man lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt.

Third Responsory.

[5] The Lord hath made me as a father to Pharaoh, and lord of all his house: fear not—for God sent me before you into Egypt, to save your lives.

Verse. Come unto me, and I will give you all the good things of Egypt, and ye shall eat the fat of the land.

Answer. For God sent me before you into Egypt, to save your lives.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. For God sent me before you into Egypt to save your lives.

SECOND NOCTURN.[6]

First Antiphon. Joseph arose, and took the young child and His mother by night, and departed into Egypt: and was there until the death of Herod.

Second Antiphon. When Herod was dead, an Angel of the Lord appeareth in a dream to Joseph in Egypt, saying: Arise, and take the young Child and His mother, and go into the land of Israël: for they are dead which sought the young Child's life.

Third Antiphon. Joseph took the young Child and His mother, and came into the land of Israël.

Verse. [7] His glory is great in Thy salvation.

Answer. Honour and great majesty shalt Thou lay upon him.

[7] Ps. xx. 6.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat of Clairvaux. (2nd on Luke i. 26.)

WHAT and what manner of man the blessed Joseph was, we may gather from that title wherewith, albeit only as a deputy, God deemed him fit to be honoured—he was both called, and supposed to be the Father of God. We may gather it from his very name, which, being interpreted, signifieth "Increase." Remember likewise that great Patriarch who was sold into Egypt, and know that the Husband of Mary not only received his name, but inherited his purity, and was likened to him in innocence and in grace.

Fourth Responsory.

[1] Joseph went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem: because he was of the house and lineage of David.

Verse. To be enrolled with Mary his espoused wife.

Answer. Because he was of the house and lineage of David.

Fifth Lesson.

IF then, that Joseph that was sold by his brethren through envy, and was brought down to Egypt, was a type of Christ sold by a disciple, and handed over to the Gentiles, the other Joseph flying from the envy of Herod carried Christ into Egypt. That first Joseph kept loyal to his master, and would not carnally know his master's wife; that second Joseph knew that the Lady, the Mother of his Lord, was a virgin, and he himself remained faithfully virgin toward her. To that first Joseph it was given to know dark things in interpreting of dreams; to the second Joseph it was given in sleep to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven.

Fifth Responsory.

[2] Arise, and take the young Child and His mother, and flee into Egypt; and be thou there until I bring thee word.

Verse. That it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the Prophet, saying: Out of Egypt have I called My Son.

Answer. And be thou there until I bring thee word.

Sixth Lesson.

THE first Joseph laid by bread, not for himself, but for all people; the second Joseph received into his keeping that Living Bread Which came down from heaven, not for him only, but for the whole world. We cannot doubt but that that Joseph was good and faithful to whom was espoused the Mother of the Saviour. Yea, I say, he was a faithful and wise servant, whom the Lord appointed to be the comfort of His own Mother, the keeper of His own Body, and the only and trusty helper in the Eternal Counsels.

Sixth Responsory.

[3] When His parents brought the Child JESUS into the temple, to do for Him after the custom of the law, Simeon took Him up in his arms, and blessed God.

Verse. And His father and mother marvelled at those things which were spoken of Him.

Answer. Simeon took Him up in his arms, and blessed God.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Simeon took Him up in his arms, and blessed God.

THIRD NOCTURN.[4]

First Antiphon. When Joseph heard that Archelaus did reign in Judea in the room of his father Herod, he was afraid to go thither.

Second Antiphon. Joseph, being warned of God in a dream, turned aside into the parts of Galilee; and he came and dwelt in a city called Nazareth, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the Prophets: He shall be called a Nazarene.

Third Antiphon. The father and mother of JESUS marvelled at those things which were spoken of Him; and Simeon blessed them.

Verse. The righteous shall grow as the lily.

Answer. Yea, he shall flourish for ever in the presence of the Lord.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (i. 18.)

WHEN as Mary, the Mother of JESUS, was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem,] (1st Bk. of Commentaries, on Matth. 1.)

Why was the Lord conceived of an espoused virgin rather than of a free? First, for the sake of the genealogy of Mary, which we have obtained by that of Joseph. Secondly, because she was thus saved from being stoned by the Jews as an adulteress. Thirdly, that Himself and His mother might have a guardian on their journey into Egypt. To these, Ignatius, the martyr of Antioch, has added a fourth reason: namely, that the birth might take place unknown to the devil; who would naturally suppose that Mary had conceived by Joseph.

Seventh Responsory.

[5] The Mother of JESUS said unto Him: Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? Behold, Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing.

Verse. And He said unto them: How is it that ye sought Me? Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?

Answer. Behold, Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing.

Eighth Lesson.

"BEFORE they came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost." She was found, that is, by Joseph, but by no one else. He had already almost an husband's privilege to know all that concerned her. "Before they came together." This doth not imply that they ever did come together: the Scripture merely showeth the absolute fact that up to this time they had not done so. "Then Joseph her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her a public example, was minded to put her away privily." If any man be joined to a fornicatress they become one body; and according to the law they that are privy to a crime are thereby guilty. How then can it be that Joseph is described as a just man, at the very time he was compounding the criminality of his espoused? It must have been that he knew her to be pure, and yet understood not the mystery of her pregnancy, but, on account of his entire trust in her, was willing to hold his peace.

Verse. He increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man.

Answer. And was subject unto them.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And was subject unto them.

The Ninth Lesson is either the first part or the whole of the Homily for the Sunday or Week-day.

LAUDS.[1]

First Antiphon. The parents of JESUS * went to Jerusalem every year, at the feast of the Passover.

Second Antiphon. When they returned * the Child JESUS tarried behind in Jerusalem, and His parents knew not of it.

Third Antiphon. When they found not JESUS, * they turned back again to Jerusalem, seeking Him; and after three days they found Him in the Temple, sitting in the midst of the Doctors, both hearing them and asking them questions.

Fourth Antiphon. His mother said unto Him: Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? Behold, Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing.

Fifth Antiphon. JESUS went down with them, * and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them.

Hymn.[2]

WORSHIPP'D throughout the Church to earth's far ends
With prayer and solemn rite,
Joseph this day triumphantly ascends
Into the realms of light.

Oh, blest beyond the lot of mortal men!
O'er whose last dying sigh,
Christ and the Virgin Mother watch'd serene,
Soothing his agony.

Loosed from his fleshly chain, gently he fleets
As in calm sleep away;
And diadem'd with light, enters the seats
Of everlasting day.

There throned in pow'r, let us his loving aid
With fervent prayers implore;
So may he gain us pardon in our need,
And peace for evermore.

Glory and praise to Thee, blest Trinity!
One only God and Lord,
Who to Thy faithful ones unfailingly
Their aureoles dost award. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 20th day of March, were born into the better life—

In England, holy Cuthbert, Bishop of Lindisfarne, who from his childhood until his death shone with holy works and miraculous signs, [in the year 687.]

In Judea, holy Joachim, father of the most blessed Virgin Mary, Mother of God. We keep his feast upon the Lord's day within the octave of the Assumption of the same blessed Virgin Mary.

In Asia, holy Archippus, the fellow-soldier of the blessed Apostle Paul, of whom the same Apostle doth make mention in his Epistles unto Philemon and unto the Colossians. [Archippus is called by St Ambrose, Bishop of the Colossians.]

In Syria, the holy martyrs Paul, Cyril, Eugene, and four others.

On the same day, the holy martyrs Photina of Samaria[4] and her sons Joseph and Victor, also Sebastian the general, Anatolius, Photius, Photis, Parasceve, and Cyriaca, sisters, who all confessed Christ and obtained martyrdom.

At Amisus, in Paphlagonia, the seven holy women, Alexandra, Claudia, Euphrasia, Matrona, Juliana, Euphemia, and Theodosia, who were slain for confessing the faith, and to whom were added afterward Derphuta and her sister, [about the year 300.]

At Apollonia, holy Nicetas, Bishop of that see, who was driven into banishment for the honouring of holy images, and there gave up the ghost, [eighth century.]

At the monastery of Fontenelle, holy Wolfran, Bishop of Sens, who resigned his see, and died famous for miracles, [in the year 720.]

At Sienna, in Tuscany, blessed Ambrose, of the Order of Friars Preachers, famous for his holiness, his preachments, and his miracles, [in the year 1286.]

Chapter at the end. (Wisdom x. 10.)

WHEN the righteous fled, Wisdom guided him in right paths, showed him the kingdom of God, and gave him knowledge of holy things, made him rich in his travails, and multiplied the fruit of his labours.

MARCH 20.

St Cuthbert, Bishop [of Lindisfarne,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout. (Taken from the Salisbury Missal.)

O GOD, Who, through the priceless gift of Thy grace, dost make Thine holy ones glorious, mercifully grant that the prayers of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Cuthbert may help us worthily there to attain, where are the spirits of just men made perfect. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

In the Second Vespers of St Joseph a Commemoration is made of St Cuthbert.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from 1 Tim. iii., &c., (p. 612.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From Bede, iv. 27, 32, and Life of St Cuthbert.)

WHILE Cuthbert was Provost, first, of Melrose, and then of Lindisfarne, he not only afforded to the monks a beautiful example of the monastic life, and admirable exhortations to the same, but would also go out of the monastery and preach to the people round about. Such was his skill in teaching, such the persuasive power of his tenderness, such the light of his face, as it had been the face of an angel, that all came to him, and openly confessed their deeds, and then by fruits meet for repentance, repaired their former iniquities.

Fifth Lesson.

IT was afterward, that, while he was living as an hermit in the isle of Farne, he was chosen Bishop of Lindisfarne. In this office he helped by unceasing prayer the people to him committed, and taught them in instructions full of soul-saving doctrine. And he did that which is the main help of a teacher—whatsoever he bade others do, he did first himself. He loved warmly, he was long-suffering and lowly, he was constant and instant in prayer. He was very courteous to all men. He thought it better than prayer to go and help a sick brother. But when he had been Bishop two years, he went back to Farne Island, to make himself readier to meet death.

Sixth Lesson.

"WHEN," saith the Priest Herefrid, who was present, "he was come very near to death, he gave some words of exhortation concerning peace and lowly-mindedness, short but sharp; and then passed the rest of the day quietly waiting for the blessedness which was coming. When night came, he still continued in prayer, without sleeping. At the usual hour for the night prayer, he received from me the life-giving Sacraments, and provisioned himself for his departure by taking the Body and Blood of the Lord. Then he turned his eyes heavenward, and stretched up his hands, and so breathed forth, to rejoice for ever in the kingdom of heaven, a soul whose whole bent was already gone home to the praise-giving above." [He fell asleep upon the 20th day of March,] in the year of salvation 687.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 21st day of March, were born to the better life—

At Monte Cassino, the holy Abbat Benedict, who restored Monasticism in the West, when it was almost fallen away, and wonderfully spread it, [in the year 543.] Blessed Pope Gregory hath written his life, which was rendered glorious by his graces and miracles.

At Alexandria, are commemorated those holy martyrs who were massacred when the Arians and Gentiles broke into the churches on Good Friday, under the Emperor Constantius and the Prefect Philagrius.

On the same day, [in the end of fourth century,] the holy martyrs Philemon and Domninus.

At Catana, holy Birillus, who was ordained Bishop of that see by the blessed Apostle Peter, and after he had converted many Gentiles to the faith fell asleep in peace in extreme old age.

At Alexandria, the blessed Hermit Serapion, Bishop of Thmuis, a man of great power, who was driven into exile by the rage of the Arians, and there passed away to be ever with the Lord.

In the country of Lyons, holy Lupicinus, Abbat [of Laucorme, in the Jura,] whose life was made illustrious by the fame of his holiness and miracles, [in the year 480.]

Vespers of the following, with a Commemoration of St Cuthbert.

A Commemoration is made of St Cuthbert. Prayer from his Office, and then of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ecclus. xliv. 1, (p. 620.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

BENEDICT was born of a noble family at Norcia, [about the year of our Lord 480,] and studied letters at Rome. Desiring to give himself altogether to Christ JESUS, he betook himself to a very deep cave at the place now called Subiaco. In this place he lay hid for three years, unknown to all except the monk[1] Romanus, by means of whom he received the necessaries of life. While he was in the cave at Subiaco, the devil one day assailed him with an extraordinary storm of impure temptation, and to get it under, he rolled himself in brambles till his whole body was lacerated, and the sting of pain drove out the sallies of lust. At last the fame of his holiness spread itself abroad from the desert, and some monks came to him for guidance, but the looseness of their lives was such that they could not bear his exhortations, and they plotted together to poison him in his drink. When they gave him the cup, he made the sign of the Cross over it, whereupon it immediately broke, and Benedict left that monastery, and retired to a desert place alone.

Fifth Lesson.

NEVERTHELESS his disciples followed him daily, and for them he built twelve monasteries, and set holy laws to govern them. Afterwards he went to Cassino, and brake the image of Apollo which was still worshipped there, overturned the altar, and burnt the groves. There, [in the year 529,] he built the Church of St Martin and the little chapel of St John; and instilled Christianity into the townspeople and inhabitants. He grew in the grace of God day by day, so that being endowed with the spirit of prophecy he foretold things to come. When Totila, King of the Goths, heard of it, and would see whether it really were so, he sent his spatharius before him, with the kingly ensigns and attendance, and feigning himself to be Totila. But as soon as Benedict saw him he said: "My son, put off that which thou wearest, for it is not thine." To Totila himself he foretold that he would go to Rome, would cross the sea, and would die after nine years.

Sixth Lesson.

SOME months before he departed this life, Benedict forewarned his disciples on what day he was to die; and he ordered his grave to be opened six days before he was carried to it. On the sixth day,

---

[1] As St Benedict invented Western monasticism, the monks spoken of in this Lesson were probably of some Eastern Order. There are still such in Italy.

[being the 21st of March, in the year 543,] he would be carried into the Church, where he received the Eucharist, and then, in the arms of his disciples, with his eyes lifted up to heaven, and wrapt in prayer, he gave up the ghost. Two monks saw his soul rising to heaven, clothed in a most precious garment, and surrounded with lights, and One of a most glorious and awful aspect standing above, Whom they heard saying: "This is the way whereby Benedict, the beloved of the Lord, goeth up to heaven."

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xix. 27, with the Homily of St Jerome, (p. 588.) In Lent the third part is omitted or read along with the second, and the Ninth Lesson is the Homily for the Week-day, of which either the first part only is read, or else all three as one.

A Commemoration of the Week-day is made at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Cyril, Bishop of Jerusalem, who suffered many things from the Arians for the faith's sake. He was several times driven from his see, but at length fell asleep in peace, illustrious for the glory of holiness. The Œcumenical Council of Constantinople, in writing to Pope Damasus, gave a noble witness to the purity of his faith. Mention hath been made of him on the 18th day of this present month of March.

Upon the same 22nd day of March, were born into the better life—

At Narbonne, in Gaul, holy Paul, Bishop of that see. A disciple of the Apostle, who is said to have been the same person as the Proconsul Sergius Paulus, baptized by the blessed Apostle Paul, and on his way into Spain left at Narbonne, where he received the dignity of Bishop, laboured much in the office of preaching, and passed away to heaven, famous for miracles.

At Terracina, holy Epaphroditus, the disciple of the Apostles, who was ordained Bishop of the said city, by the blessed Apostle Peter.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Saturninus and nine others.

On the same day, [in the year 252,] the holy martyrs Callinice and Basilissa.

At Ancyra, the holy martyr Basil, a Priest, who was put to most grievous torments under the Emperor Julian the Apostate, and gave up his soul to God.

At Carthage, the holy Archdeacon Octavian and many thousand martyrs, who were slaughtered by the Vandals for the Catholic faith's sake.

There also, holy Deogratias, Bishop of Carthage, who redeemed many captives whom the Vandals had brought from Rome, and fell asleep in the Lord, famous for holy works, [in the year 457.]

At Osimo, in Picenum, holy Benvenuto, Bishop of that see, [in the year 1276.]

In Sweden, the holy Virgin Katherine, daughter of holy Bridget, [in the year 1381.]

At Rome, the holy widow Lea, whose graces and her going hence to be with God have been recorded by Holy Jerome, [about the year 384.]

At Genoa, the holy widow Katherine, eminent for her contempt of the world and her love toward God, [in the year 1510.]

In Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin, "O right excellent, &c." Then of the Week-day.

MARCH 22.

St Cyril, Patriarch [of Jerusalem,] Confessor and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612), except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O ALMIGHTY God, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, at the prayers of Thy blessed Bishop Cyril, so to know Thee, the only true God, and JESUS Christ Whom Thou hast sent, that we may hear His Voice, and He may give unto us eternal life. Through the same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from 1 Tim. iii. &c., (p. 612.)
